Frequency Of Fashion Changes Brings New Battle In War Between Sexes

The cold war between the two sex entities comes to the publication of a recent poll of college students as to their views on the frequency of fashion changes in both men's and women's styles.

The poll, conducted by the Ac counted Collegete Press, shows that half the women interviewed think women's fashion changes too often, while the other half think it changes not often enough. Of the men interviewed, a little more than half think women's fashion changes too often,
not often enough.

One of the women interviewed said, "I see nothing wrong with a change once a week."

One of the men interviewed said, "Four times a day is too often."

The poll also shows that women's styles change more than men's styles, and that men's styles change more than women's styles.
