Housing pacts being revised

By Bob Niblack Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The standard contract for approved off-campus housing facilities is being revised in line with recent federal inspection procedures more clearly and to ensure that damage deposits are not misused.

"We will be ahead of existing laws as far as utilization of damage deposits is concerned," said James Osberg, supervisor of off-campus housing.

The revised contract clauses were prepared with the help of Mike Jenkins, an SIU law student working with the Student Tenant Union. Osberg said the contracts will be used beginning fall semester, he said.

That section of the contract which outlines the existence of clauses also sets guidelines for room search and inspection. The old contract stated, "Lessor shall be entitled to inspect the space rented for physical damage at reasonable hours and in the presence of the Tenant."

Osberg said, "The old contract doesn't give landlords any right to go in and do routine maintenance. The new contract clause will require that landlords give written notice 48 hours in advance if they intend to enter a room for maintenance without the presence of the resident."

"The landlord has to say what it is he is coming to fix," Osberg said.

After the SIU legal counsel checks the clauses and prepares them for the contract, they will be printed on the contract, which must be used by all approved off-campus facilities, Osberg said.

The guidelines for room inspection state the following:

Rooms may be entered when the staff person has reasonable cause to believe that an emergency situation exists involving imminent danger to life, safety, health or property.

The guidelines also state that a minimum of two staff persons and a floor president or some other elected student official from the floor must be present for the inspection.

According to guidelines from the housing office, rooms may also be entered for search when an official of the police department provides a search warrant duly executed by a judge as prescribed by law.

The revised contract will also require landlords to put damage deposits in an interest bearing accounts where the money can be kept track of. Osberg said that "if there are any disputes, the money is used there will be a record of it."

The contract will also require landlords to conduct an inspection of the rented space at the time the new tenant moves in and at the time he moves out.

A list of damages will be made at both times with agreement of the housing office and the student and one retained by the landlord, he said.

If housing damages are incurred the student must be presented with an itemized list of the damages. Osberg said. The student then has 10 days to complain about the charges to the housing office, where he may receive help in dealing with a landlord, he said.

After 10 days the student must take other action to recover the deposit such as going to small claims court, he said.

Under Illinois state law landlords are required to present tenants itemized lists of damages along with repairs if they are withholding deposits.

Saluki fan buttons up business

By Mark Kazlowski

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

As NIT fever becomes more prevalent among Saluki followers, an SIU Health Service pharmacy technician may have come up with the perfect prescription—NIT buttons.

Although the buttons will not cure the fever, they give fans a chance to help the Salukis button down a successful trip to the National Invitational Tournament.

Ken Carr, the pharmacy technician, has been swamped with requests for buttons (NIT pin on type) since Friday when he began making buttons with inscriptions about the tournament.

"I've had a million requests today for buttons," Carr, who mans a pharmacy window at the Health Service, said Wednesday afternoon.

Carr said he made one NIT button on his button making machine and wore it to work Saturday. Two nurses and a doctor then asked him to make buttons for them, he said. He made 26 NIT-related buttons during the weekend and all had been sold by Wednesday.

Carr said he will continue making the buttons. "If people keep asking me about them, I will keep making them. After we win Saturday, I will probably make some more over the weekend," he said confidently.

Carr said he has made buttons with pictures for most of the team members and gave one to basketball Coach Paul Lambert Monday. He said he would like to go to New York for the tournament, but the team isn't taking a button maker with them.

Carr said he wears at least one button every day. Carr said he and his brother went to one game and his brother was almost embarrassed to sit with him because he was wearing five buttons with pictures of SIU players on them.

This is the first time Carr has made NIT buttons, but it is not the first time he has been at SIU when the Salukis were involved in the NIT. He said he was a SIU student in 1967 when SIU lost to Southern 11-12 in its first NIT title.

The Salukis will leave for Madison at 12:30 p.m. Thursday. After a practice session at MT. Vernon, the team will fly to New York to find out how helpful the buttons have been.
Debate team captures first in state tourney

The SIU debate team of Frank Macke and Bill Hale won first place in the junior division of the Illinois Forensic Association State Tournament held at Eastern Illinois University held March 6 through 8.

The team emerged undefeated from the tournament which included teams from Bradley University, Illinois State University and Northwestern University.

Each debate lasted an hour and 50 minutes. Three judges are used in debates. The two sides are judged on the persuasiveness of their arguments, said Mark C. Kleinau, assistant professor of speech.

"It's a court of law," he said. "The judge is like a jury."

Kleinau said that Macke, a freshman from Belleville, debated while attending Belleville West High School. Hale was a high school state finalist last year. Hale is a freshman from Wellingham, Ill.

Both SIU freshmen debated Northwestern University in the finals. The topic was, "The Powers of the President Should Be Significantly Reduced."

Committee gives approval to campaign spending bill

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A bill to put limits on campaigning by candidates for state and General Assembly posts was approved Wednesday by the Senate Executive Committee.

The committee voted 10 to 6 to recommend passage of the measure by the Senate. Under the legislation sponsored by Sen. James H. Donneld, D-Breese, special campaign spending by candidates for state and General Assembly posts was approved Wednesday by the Senate Executive Committee.

Afraid of being caught, the governor, Illinois senator, secretary of state, attorney general, comptroller, treasurer, state senator and governor were all left without a choice, according to the Senate President. Cecil A. Partee, D-Chicago, who heads the committee, said the bill is to "men of wealth should not be able to win an election based on the number of dollars coming in."

Opponents said the limitations would not put into practice the idea that all candidates would keep qualified people away from politics.

The Senate and House met briefly Thursday to consider the bill. William L. Trainer, who heads the committee, said the bill "would keep qualified people away from politics."

New code spells out student rights

Editor's note: This is the third part of a series dealing with the proposed Student Conduct Code.

By Ray Uhrich
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Under the proposed Student Conduct Code, a student charged with a violation has the right to have a hearing held in his presence.

"The student is not notified of the time, place, and format of the hearing until the hearing is held sooner than five days of notification of the charged student," said public relations director of the Office of Student Affairs.

Under "exceptional" circumstances, the hearing may be requested by the student by petitioning the Dean of Student Life, but the proposed code states all disciplinary information is sent to the student's local address, as listed by the department of Admissions and Records.

According to the proposed Student Conduct Code, the student is entitled to notice of all relevant evidence.

The student then can request either an administrative hearing or a hearing by a student judicial board.

Under the present discipline policy, all judicial proceedings are closed to the public. However, the revised Student Conduct Code, if approved in its present form, would offer students the option of either an open or closed hearing.

According to the proposed Student Conduct Code, the student is then notified of the time, place, and format of the hearing by being notified within five days of notification of the charges.

"Failure to notify the University of changes of address may result in a hearing held in the presence of the student," said McVay.

During the proposed hearing, the student is entitled to the advice of counsel. This is defined in the proposed Student Conduct Code as "an individual who may be selected by the student or one chosen for the student by the student's advisor at any time during the hearing, but the student must present his own case."

The student may not appeal the decision of the committee.

The proposed code states a new right would enable him to remove one member of the hearing panel, with a replacement selected and subsequent challenges with the approval of the other members of the hearing group.

McVay said about $30,000 will be needed to implement a dental care program and between $30,000 and $50,000 will be needed annually to operate it. SIU has applied to the Illinois Department of Public Health for funding under the dental care program, which provides money for the purchase of facilities and equipment for beginning medical programs.

Moore said he is unsure if the state agency is expected to renew SIU this week, he added.

The Department of Public Health will not give money unless the proposed dental care program meets its standards, McVay said.

It could give SIU a matching grant of up to 50 percent of the cost with SIU paying the remaining 50 percent, he explained.

"Next year we could probably handle the program. The next year (1977) we probably would not hold it," McVay said.

"The cost of health care is increasing at a rate of 15 percent per year," McVay said.

"The problem is, with medical costs increasing as they are, if we allow a dental care program to increase the cost of health care," he said.

McVay said the Health Service budget for 1976-1977 was $15 million, the proposed budget for next year is $19.2 million.

Published in the Journal and Egyptian.

Funding seen as key to dental care program

Sam McVay, administrative director of the Student Health Service, said Tuesday he doubts that a dental care program will receive funding since additional funding is not available.

"If a federally sponsored health plan is adopted, McVay said, it would make a difficult budget for SIU. The trust fund is being used for health care at SIU. This would enable the University to decrease fees, re-allocate funds, and provide for more treatment."

The Health Service contracts with doctors and dentists, McVay said.

"We could handle the budget for about 5 percent of the cost, which is a $30,000 insurance policy," McVay said.
New York, somewhere on the floor of Madison Square Garden. The scene is played by Bruttus (SU head basketball coach Paul Lambert), and Cassius (who else—Joe C. and a host of other roundballers. The group has just slain Cassius the Nit, and captured the crown.

"Remember March, the Ides of March, remember," says Brutus to Cassius, after Cassius and his pals have played out Act IV, scene 3 (in which the tournament commissioner has just presented them with the trophy).

"NIT, we came to slay thee. and by d’angus, we did." Cassius replies.

Antony (played ostensibly enough by Walt "Clyde" Frazier—who couldn’t make the action on the floor) approaches the group to congratulate them on their impressive victory.

"I have not come to praise the NIT," Antony in tones, "but to bury It for another year."

"When we’ll raise it up and slay it again. And again and again, if need be," enthusiastically interrupts Cossilius (played by Mike Glenn, who has a heckuva future in this drama business!)

"Thou art a willing and most able conspirator." Antony patronizingly advises. "At any rate, I know this NIT well. I was with it in the campaign of 67, and did well by it."

"You ain’t seen nothin’ yet," Bruttus throws in gleefully.

William S. is by now probably doing jack knives in his grave, but the point is—The Salukis and their mentor are to be congratulated on their successful if at times shaky—season and NIT tournament bid. When the team begins play Saturday night at 7 p.m. (EDS) against Pittsburgh, they will know that the entire University community and area residents are pulling for them all the way.

If, and we are confident they will, but—if—the Salukis get past their first two games, (the second would be Tuesday) I think it would be a great boost to this University’s spirit de corps to begin spring vacation one day early in order to allow as many students, faculty and staff as possible the opportunity to head on out to New York and attend the tournament.

Tentative plans are now underway of providing some sort of shuttle service or plane service to and from New York, hotel accommodations included. The great problem is in planning such an affair is knowing how many persons to plan for. Florida may be nice in mid-March, but New York is a garden. Get on the horn and call the Athletic offices at the Arena, let them know you want to go see a real basketball team—the Salukis—play in the NIT.

New York can be a blustery town in March, and we hope the whirlwind blowing in Saturday stays a week and doesn’t change the plans for plane flight to Carbondale. And to the other three teams the Salukis will play: Beware the Ides of March, your doom is upon ye.

Dear President, 1. Joe Sikspak, American, take pen in hand to poke your bull by the horns. Only I don’t know where to commence starting. Like I’m down to Paddy’s Place the other night and he’s reading the paper. "Give me a Seven-high," Paddy, says I, "and kindly tell me what is new."

"Well Joe," he says, "we got inflation, recession, a couple of wars, an energy crisis and a 20-year-old kid who’s designed a nuclear bomb in his basement during his spare time."

"That’s new," says I.

"It will be on the tee-vee this Sunday night," Joe, says Paddy. "But just it shows you how government works."

"How’s that?" says I, making myself comfortable.

"Take the President’s plan to get us out of this mess, Joe," says Paddy. "Those fiendish Arabs, the President, are wrecking our holy economy by charging us 12 bucks a barrel for oil. But I will outfox them, he says by upping the price to 15 bucks."

"He’s always thinking," says I.

"While you will have to shell out 20 cents more for a gallon of gas," the President tells us, "I will give you a dollars 16 billion tax cut to pay for it."

"I got mixed feelings on that," says I.

"And the Democrats, too, Joe," says Paddy. "This hare-brained scheme," they say, "will send inflation and unemployment sky-rocketing and the country to the bow-wows. What’s more," they say, "we got a better plan."

"What’s that?" says I.

"They’re going to give us a $21 billion tax cut and up the price of gas 40 cents a gallon instead," says Paddy.

"The Democrats are the party of action," says I.

"That they are, Joe," says Paddy. "And they passed a law saying the President couldn’t raise the price of oil his way. But the President vetoed it and promises he won’t do it anyway to show them who’s boss. And could he please have a couple of hundred million more to keep the war going in Cambodia?"

"Can he?" says I.

"No," says Paddy. "A group of our fearless Congressmen visit that ravaged country for eight hours and decide he can only have enough money to keep the war going until it starts raining."

"Good thinking," says I. "But what about that kid with the bomb?"

"Don’t worry, Joe," says Paddy. "Once our Congressmen heard about it, they said they’d pass a law saying only governments could have nuclear bombs."

"How come?" says I.

"On account of Joe," says Paddy, "governments are more rational."

Anyway, President, you’ve once again pointed the way. The Mizzus has been complaining the half runner’s too short. So I told her to cut a foot off one end and stick it on the other.

But maybe you ought to let that kid have his bomb. Only isn’t there some way to make you guys in Washington get rid of the ones you got?"

Truly yours,
Joe Sikspak, American
Tuition revision needed

By Bach Seifelbier
Student Writer

Despite the annual plague of spiraling costs, out-of-state students might have an alternative to visiting their friendly neighborhood loan shark in order to pay for their education. That alternative is called change of residency and in effect makes you one of the checker students.

Although out-of-state students have tried this method before, the Daily Egyptian is discussing a proposal that would reduce residency requirements over the next few years, making it more consistent with those for voter registration.

This venture may seem truly humanitarian in such inflationary times but the initiative behind the proposal came from SIU-E. Located just outside St. Louis, Edwardsville has found it difficult to lure Missouri students to its campus due to the high tuition cost.

Although favoring this proposal no matter what the underlying reason for its creation, the matter of out-of-state tuition will still irritate the tender living of one's money belt during first semester attendance. At one time public colleges were entirely supported by state funds in an effort to upgrade the quality of that state's youth while allowing them to stay close to home. Now, however, they have a land-grant system in the 1860s.

Today, modern transportation and communication systems have opened up the door to once isolated states. The increasing flow of federal subsidies has decreased the dependence of institutions solely on state financial help.

Students attending a state university, whether they live in the state or not, are subject to the sales and income taxes within that state. Their parents support state schools with their tax money whether they attend or not. Although financial needs may vary from institution to institution, tuition should be determined by the board of trustees and not the state government.

It should be the quality of education and not its price tag that determines what college a student chooses to attend. It's still a beg, borrow or steal situation for out-of-state students, but changing residency proposal is a step in the right direction.

Lazy, thoughtless slobs

Why did Daniol resign?

To the Daily Egyptian:

After being a food service worker at Grado's Hall, I have noticed that some people have dealt with some of the most inconsiderate and immature people who happen to move through their dorm residence hall. These people mainly consist of students who refuse to put up their trays after they have left the cafeteria, leaving the chore for the student workers. Another problem that should not be overlooked, are the constant tidbits that are tossed by the "uppy" high horse riders-the student athletic teams that reside in the Brush Towers area.

I feel that I speak for all SIU food service student employees that have had the displeasure and onerous task of cleaning up after some slobs who haphazardly spilled gravy on a hot serving counter, or the person who refuses to show their meal ticket and I.D. to the checker. In addition, the student workers have to put up with the student who does not think twice in using four letter words, or asking a verbal threat when their attention is brought forth on not following food service rules.

Letters

No student worker appreciates picking up trays after some students have abandoned their table, leaving behind an checker's nightmare after a seemingly organized and slop that is organized so that some student workers refuse to carry them to the conveyor. I doubt if any of these people assume that we have to clean up after them.

It seems that some of the student athletes think that they are the soldiers of the Greek god Olympus or the studs of the love goddess Aphrodite, but they tend to fail. Times of the past few years have been as restful as not, just warriors on the football field and the basketball court. They enjoy their table and appetizers in the cafeteria.

Just the other day, I was threatened by some of the soldiers of Olympus when I demanded that he show me his meal ticket. The reason I asked for his meal ticket, was because of my intense reporting of his insolent attitude towards a checker. Who are these guys to think that they can get away on the student in situations as mentioned earlier? Have they forgotten that they are not different as the rest of us?

I am writing this letter because I am angry, but the anger of sympathy. I do not appreciate the crap that student workers have to cope with day in, day out. It is not fair that other students have to eat with those who refuse to recognize the rights of D-I students who have to share a table with such people. It does not take much to show a meal ticket or to put up a tray. Next time, show some finesse.

I am not ignorant to the point that I can say that all students and athletes are inconsiderate. That would not be fair to the latter. I would like to thank those who have cooperated with this first student service employees. Because of their cooperation, we are able to help those students who have problems regarding meal tickets or lost and found items. For those students who rather remain adamant, are hurting themselves and others.

Students, student athletes, and student workers must all realize that we all have one common standard—we are all students, supposedly with the mentality of adults. We must accept the fact that grade school and high school memories relegated into the dim past.

In conclusion, I would like to advise those students who refuse to cooperate to try a harder next time. It will make a lot easier on yourselves besides on the students who must cope with inexcusable behaviors of ludicrous amateurs. To the Sadals joke, I say, "Give it the old college try" or "Do one for the Gipper." It seems as though it is the only language that most of them understand.

Fry should learn arithmetic

To the Daily Egyptian:

This letter is directed to the students in Daniol Orescann's class who keep getting letters published in the Daily Egyptian. They keep referring to Orescann as a fine teacher and individual. Does this put him beyond the scope of wrong-doing? I wonder, didn't Orescann run the business with his actions as an administrator questioned by the Board of Trustees. Despite this, Orescann teaches in Administrative Science. Is it not also true that Orescann gets paid more than $30,000 annually—than the average Administrative Science Ph.D. Is this right?

I would like to point out that there are a lot of seemingly fine individuals in this world who are dishonest. In- vestigative reporting uncovered the Watergate scandal and put some seemingly fine individuals in prison. I believe that this type of reporting should be encouraged. Otherwise, our backs will be broken to the ground.

How many of you in Orescann's class went to his trial? Wes Smith did. Wes Sammel did. Luisen did. It is no wonder the Daily Egyptian is lucky to have him. Those three cheers for Owser.

To the Daily Egyptian:

The headline of your pub., action of Saturday, March 8, read "Each fire run costs city $290." The article pointed out that "the city manager Carrol Fry says the city spends $290 every time the fire trucks roll. He said that he arrived at this figure by dividing the total fire department budget by the number of runs made." By the same method of calculation he deduces SIU obtained a bargain as the cost per call was $664.16 for the University. I cannot follow this logic. If the wishes to reduce the cost-per-fire, he must conclusively wish for more fires, or fire runs. Actually Mr. Fry should figure the cost and consequently a greater cost per run. If there was only one fire in Carbondale during the entire fiscal year, that would be a true bargain, though not by Mr. Fry's calculations.

I hope he can be made to realize this.

Former opera star donates archives to Morris Library

Marjorie Lawrence, toast of opera audiences on three continents during the 30's and 40's, and the person for whom SIU's opera company is named, has given her archives to Morris Library. The collection includes programs and scores of operas in which she starred, scrapbooks containing an estimated 10,000 clippings, some 3,000 letters, albums, contracts and diaries.

The archives span the period of Lawrence's departure from her native Australia in 1928, when she went to study in Paris, to her career as teacher and producer of opera, first at Tulane University and then at SIU from 1960 to 1973. They document her performance with the Paris Opera and other European companies, the New York Metropolitan, and her return to opera after an attack of polio in 1941. Lawrence's wartime concert tours of military installations, the publication of her autobiography, "Interrupted Melody" and its production as an MGM motion picture are also documented in the archives.

According to Lawrence's husband, Thomas King, the archives probably are the most extensive and complete of any opera singer.

An exhibit of items from the collection will be shown at Morris Library when Lawrence and King visit SIU for the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater's production of Puccini's "La Bohème," April 11 to 15.
"Dynamic Duo" zaps audience with biting satire on society

By Martha Schofield

The dynamic duo zapped into Shreve Auditorium Tuesday night, anxious to wipe out injustice and oppression in our society.

It wasn’t Batman and Robin, but Pat and Tyler, better known as Harrison and Tyler, comically satirizing the villains of society that oppress women, with satirical humor that hits below the belt particularly if you are a male.

The only female comedy duo in the business, Harrison and Tyler come on strong in involving the audience in their crusade for humanism and feminism which makes the show more like a conscious level raising happening.

Their razor-sharp humor slices social institutions that oppress us all: sexism, racism, advertising, organized religion, politics, male domination of the media and the rock culture. And their interjection of shy quips and simulated angelic screams, "Delta Dawn," rocks the audience with biting satire.

The performance, consisting of comedy routines in the first part and a rap session in the second part of the show, makes the audience laugh and think about the world we live in today.

They call themselves “positive radical” — there is nothing wrong with being a radical. "If you didn’t have radicals, you wouldn’t have a movement," remarked Ms. Tyler.

To be a radical is to get to the root of the problem. Harrison and Tyler have a unique, shocking way of getting to the root of the problem.

It wasn’t Batman and Robin, but Pat and Tyler, better known as Harrison and Tyler, comically satirizing the villains of society that oppress women, with satirical humor that hits below the belt particularly if you are a male.

The only female comedy duo in the business, Harrison and Tyler come on strong in involving the audience in their crusade for humanism and feminism which makes the show more like a conscious level raising happening.

Their razor-sharp humor slices social institutions that oppress us all: sexism, racism, advertising, organized religion, politics, male domination of the media and the rock culture. And their interjection of shy quips and simulated angelic screams, "Delta Dawn," rocks the audience with biting satire.

The performance, consisting of comedy routines in the first part and a rap session in the second part of the show, makes the audience laugh and think about the world we live in today.

They call themselves “positive radical” — there is nothing wrong with being a radical. "If you didn’t have radicals, you wouldn’t have a movement," remarked Ms. Tyler.

To be a radical is to get to the root of the problem. Harrison and Tyler have a unique, shocking way of getting to the root of the problem.

Visiting dance director in Carbondale

Shirley Mordine, director of the Columbia College dance program and artistic director at the school's resident company, "The Dance Triangle," will be in Carbondale for a two-day residency Thursday and Friday.

Mordine, whose company is a member of the National Endowment for the Arts Dance Touring Residency Program, is Columbia's representative of the arts endowment council's teaching program. During her stay at SIU, she will be teaching several dance classes that will be open to the public for observation.

On Thursday, Mordine will teach an advanced technique dance class from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. at Perf Auditorium. From 1 to 2:30 p.m., she will teach an advanced level dance composition class also at Perf. Participation is limited to students enrolled in these classes and to members of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater Company.

Friday, Mordine will offer an improvisation workshop at Perf from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. This residency is the second in a series of four being sponsored by grants from the Illinois Arts Council and National Endowment for the Arts.

The instructors being brought here have been selected by Lenny Gordon, artistic director of the Southern Repertory Dance Theater Company, in conjunction with students involved in the dance program at SIU.

Mildred Dickenson was the first visiting artist and Carroll Russell, who will follow Mordine's stay. As yet, a fourth artist has not been chosen.

Summer casts to audition for Playhouse '75

Final auditions for Summer Playhouse '75 will be held at 1 p.m., Sunday in Perf Auditorium. Persons wishing to apply for the company should be prepared to audition with two contrasting one-minute readings and two contrasting songs.

Persons auditioning should also be prepared to take instructions in movement and dance steps. Further information and applications are available from Mary Elaine Wallace of the School of Music and Archibald McLeod, chairman of the Theater Department.

The performing company chosen will perform the casts for "Arsenic and Old Lace," "The King and I," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Sugar.

The summer session begins with a company meeting on June 14 and concludes on August 16.

Thompson Point to host Brandts

SIU President and Mrs. Warren W. Brandt will be the guests at dinner in Lentl Hall on March 19.

The Thompson Point Executive Council extended the invitation to familiarize SIU's "first family" with the Thompson Point residential unit. The Brandts will tour the living area and speak with residents following the meal.

Student Activities Handbook available for organizations

By Jon Katman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

On the cover there is a Superman-type character apparently leaping a tall building in a single bound.

The tall building, however, is a picture of the Student Center and the book is the Student Activities Handbook.

Sharon H. Justice, coordinator of student activities, said the handbook, which was prepared by the Student Activities Center, is an informational guide for campus organizations.

The handbook gives an introduction to the Student Activities Center, lists the co-curricular programs and recognized student organizations at SIU, and outlines University policies, procedures and services pertaining to student organizations.

Justice said the handbook is being sent to each recognized student organization, each adviser and fiscal officer of every student organization.

About 500 copies of the handbook have been printed. Justice said, at the cost of about $11 a copy. She said the handbook was paid for with money obtained from the state and not from student fees.

"The purpose of the book is to reduce the hassles student organizations sometimes run into," Justice said.

"If an organization wants to hire a band for an event, for example, the book gives the procedures for doing so," she said.

Organizations which have not received their copies of the handbook may pick them up at the Student Activities Center located on the third floor of the Student Center.

Survey results show Democrats want unity

Delegates to the recent Democratic National Conference have expressed a willingness to hold the party together, said John Jackson, SIU professor of political science.

Citing responses to an SIU-Great Bend University survey of delegate opinion distributed last December at the Kansas City conference, Jackson said, "It's reasonably clear there was a certain amount of willingness to compromise, a certain amount of middle of the road giving on controversial issues.

Jackson said plans to write up the data and submit manuscripts to professional political science journals. He may also write a book on the conference, he said.

Out of approximately 700 surveys sent out, 343 usable responses were returned. Jackson said. Data showed that 86 per cent of the delegates were white, 14 per cent female, 71 per cent white and 16 per cent black. Fifty-seven per cent had actively participated in the party for more than 16 years. 51 per cent identified themselves as liberal or left liberal to radical, and 41 per cent had graduated from college.

Social work program receives accreditation

SU's social work program is among the first undergraduate programs to receive accreditation from the Council on Social Work Education's Commission on Accreditation, said J.J. Auerbach, department director. Auerbach has received a telegram from the New York based commission informing him of the accreditation.

Graduate schools of social work will accept SU graduates having a bachelor's degree in social welfare since July 1, 1974, on the basis of advanced standing equal to one year of graduate school. This will make SU graduates to get a master's degree in social work in one year instead of two, the department director said.

The accreditation will not only help students to find jobs in social agencies after graduation, but will also enhance SU's ability to create its own master's program, he said.

Social work program seeks teacher award nominations

Nominations for the outstanding teacher in the College of Liberal Arts for 1975 will be accepted until March 15, 1975, announced the Committee on Liberal Arts, which is composed of faculty members of the College.

The entire student body is invited to participate in the vote, which will be held in the DIT auditorium. The winner will be announced at that time.

The recipient of the award will be invited to the Ku Klux Klan of Social Justice ceremony.

FRAT emphasizes openness

By Sue Vaysle

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

As the first non-secret fraternity on campus, Delta Upsilon fights the recent competition from other fraternities in a single word, "The University:" Delta Upsilon (DU), 706 W. Main, emphasizes that its meetings and initiation rituals are open to the public, Alan Jacobson, chapter president, said.

New members are not given the "lunchmeal" treatment (covering their heads or carrying bricks around their necks) in the past, Jacobson said. Now these stunts are denounced by the national fraternities and outdoors, Jacobson said, Jacobson said, Jacobson said.

Fair shows students' diverse activities

SIU campus clubs graphically illustrated its programs at the Tuesday evening Fair. Activity Fair Tuesday night with a fourier of suggestions for meeting, tests for high blood pressure and a miniature tornado.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 people visited the fair in the Student Center ramps of rolling, technology, campus organizations and the activities they sponsor.

The Salukis Saddle Club brought a Buckskin horse named Buckberry Finn to the 2nd floor ballrooms to demonstrate live horse-riding.

Nurses and aides from the Student Health Program were on hand to give free tests for blood pressure. Shirley Hjort, director of the Preventive and Health Maintenance Program estimated that 350 people had their blood pressure tested.

Spectators were drawn to the SIU Geography Club booth by a simulated tornado. The miniature funnel cloud was created in a glass box by drawing cold air over a pool of hot water.

The fair, which was titled, "March Grass '76," was sponsored by the Student Government Activities Council's New Student Orientation Committee. Bob Tate, chairman of the committee, said the fair was a success in spite of the rain.

The Egyptian Divers' booth came in first place and won a $20 gift certificate. Craig Dittrich, a senior in Recreation and a spokesman for the divers, said the booth was totally a group effort. He said their slide show of a diving exhibition in the Grand Cayman Islands helped to win the first place.

Dittmar said many people visited their booth to inquire about diving classes and other sport diving activities.

The Salukis Saddle Club received a $20 gift certificate for their exhibit which came in second place. The Student Health Program took a third place and a $10 certificate.

County Board to study conflict of interest case

By Pat Carmona
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board of Supervisors will get a legal opinion before acting on a possible conflict of interest charges that could result in overturning the dismissal of Lowell Heller, supervisor of assessments.

Charles Gray, R-Carbondale, told the board that former board member Cleveland Matthews worked for a liquor distributing firm while serving on the board, all his votes should be invalidated. He said he was particularly concerned with Matthews' vote not to reappoint Heller, a Republican. Matthews is a Democrat.

The board voted to have Assistant State's Atty. Gary Dillinger investigate the matter and prepare a legal opinion by March 19, the date of a public hearing Heller requested on his dismissal. In its decision not to reappoint Heller, the board voted 5 to 5.

Matthews resigned from the board Feb. 27 to become equal opportunity officer for the City of Carbondale. He does not deny working for the liquor distributors, but said the law only applies to persons holding liquor licenses and not the employees of those firms.

"I have the right to work anywhere I wish," Matthews said. "The law applies to the holding of liquor licenses and government office simultaneously."

If Matthews' vote is overturned, the resulting 6 to 5 vote could allow Heller to serve another four-year term. Heller said he had heard about the possible conflict of interest but was "sitting tight" and would let the board decide the matter.

Dillinger said the issue was new to him and he would take two or three days to look into it.

In other action, the board approved the Rev. Richard Daniels to fill Matthews' vacancy. Daniels, the Democratic majority's choice, was approved by an 8 to 6 vote. The Republicans nominated Roy Clark for the Carbondale district vacancy.

The board approved the revised Animal Control Program which brings the Jackson County plan in line with state regulations. Part of the new proposal includes the use of police officers to pick up any stray dogs judged dangerous to the community.

Ricci takes injury with surgery for first time in basketball career.

(Continued from Page 16) "We've explored what could happen," Henderson said. "He has an incomplete fracture now, but it could make it complete by playing or, at the calcium could build up in it.

"Either way would require surgery," he said. "We have to be watchful for it. "I don't blame him, though. If I were in his shoes, I'd want to play, too.

"Ricci and center Joe M. Merweaster have faced Pittsburgh two years ago when they were sophomores. That was in the Steel Bowl Tournament in Pittsburgh, where the Panthers ended a 6-43 win in the third place game. Ricci and Merweaster each had a dozen points in that contest.

Ricci and Merweaster also have one other common distinction--they share with reserve guard Rich Be byon. The three were part of Saluki coach Paul Lambert's Beg pardon.

Friday's Daily Egyptian reported that Robert "Do" Sparksman had overruled Health Service and Doctors Hospital physicians, who wanted Tim Ricci's foot placed in a cast. Sparksman merely asked the physicians to wait until team physician Dr. William Hendrickson, also of the Health Service, could see the injury when he returned from a trip Monday.

Sparksman had no further power because he is not a physician.

Ricci questionable as Salukis hit road

A guy can get pretty lonely when he's the only wrestler to represent his college in the national championships. He would probably feel a little more secure, however, to know that his family is backing him 100 percent.

That's the message Mrs. Wiesen sends to her son Mark, who will be the only Saluki wrestler competing at the NCAA Wrestling Championship at the New York Coliseum on Wednesday and Thursday. The Salukis are fourth in the nation with 107.5, while Iowa State is fifth with 105.

"He is a trip," Mrs. Wiesen said of her son Mark, who will be wrestling in the 185-pound class.

"When Mark was a senior, his coach, Mark was a senior, his coach, Paul Lambert, told him that if he wants to win a national title, he should take his foot in. He's not a wrestler, he's a 185-pound weight class, but did not go to the regional meet because he was injured and couldn't make weight. He is taking part in the national meet because he wants to compete one time in the national meet.

"I think he wants to win," Mrs. Wiesen said. "But he has had the best individual record on the Saluki team, 14-6-0." Last year at the qualifying rounds, Wiesen won his first six matches in the 185-pound weight class, but did not get to the national meet because he was injured and couldn't make weight. He is taking part in the national meet because he wants to compete one time in the national meet.
