The 'Dolls' sound off

It's just another show at the Hot Box nightclub on Broadway, but the chorus line is performing for its self-righteous demands to "Take Back Your Mind." The chorus lines are part of the larger show, "Guys and Dolls," which is being performed this weekend at the University Theatre by the SIU Summer Theatre. Jury count goes to eight late Thursday

By Dale Melton
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A second panel of four jurors was approved Thursday afternoon, bringing a total of eight jurors approved in the trial of three men alleged as involved in the Nov. 13 shootout with police in Carbondale.

The four jurors approved Thursday were Ellis Marie Arnett, Ania Duane Halllock and Martin Elkin, all of Carbondale and Roger W. Jackson of Elkville. Mrs. Arnett is the only black person among the eight.

The three black defendants are Milton Boyd, 21, Chicago; James K. Holley, 21, Carbondale; and Leonard Thomas, 29, Carbondale.

Each is charged with seven counts of attempted murder and aggravated assault, one count of mob action and one count of criminal damage to property. The charges stem from a gun battle with police at 401 N. Washington St.

During the fourth consecutive day of jury selection Thursday, 18 prospective jurors were questioned. Nine of those questioned were excused for cause and one juror was excused by the defense attorneys' peremptory challenge.

Since Monday's opening jury selection session, 30 prospective jurors have been questioned and 18 have been excused either for cause or peremptory challenge.

Defense and prosecuting attorneys are allowed to dismiss a limited number of jurors—based upon the number of defendants—without stating a particular reason by means of the peremptory challenge.

Prospective jurors can also be excused for cause by the presiding judge. This occurs when the prospective juror expresses an opinion which allegedly demonstrates that they would be unable to try the defendants solely on the evidence presented in court.

The prospective jurors can also be released for cause under extenuating circumstances that would keep them from serving.

During Thursday's session defendant Boyd, who has refused since Monday to recognize his appointed attorney Jeffery Haas, attempted to have a prospective juror excused for cause.

The St. Clair County Circuit Judge Everett Provencher told Boyd that only the court can excuse a prospective juror. Haas, in addition, Provencher told Boyd that his request provided further proof that the defense attorney lacks the technical knowledge necessary to defend himself.

When the question was put to him, Boyd would like asked of a juror if he or she sought a motion to excuse a prospective juror, this would have to be done through his attorney, Haas.

Unions form parking problems committee

Union members and SIU civil service employees, meeting in protest of parking problems at SIU, agreed to set up a special information committee and a planning committee.

The meeting, which was held Thursday night in the Carbondale National Guard Armory, consisted of members of the building service electricians, plumbers, carpenters and Teamsters unions, the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers and American Federation of State and County Municipal Employees unions.

Elmer Brandhorst, business representative of Building Service Employees International Union local 316, presided at the meeting.

He said the purpose of the meeting was to form a committee to represent the SIU unions as a whole on the parking sticker question.

"It is my basic belief that union members should not buy stickers or pay parking fines," Brandhorst said.

Brandhorst said the whole parking problem has been caused by bad management by the University. "They build 7,000 parking spaces and sell 14,000 decals. Then where is your parking spot?"

While much discussion was given to the willingness to pay "reasonable" fees, a member of the group asked "what is reasonable."

Edwardsville AID grant questioned by Jacobini

By Sue Rall
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

H.B. Jacobini, director of the Center for Vietnamese Studies, said Thursday he questions some of the aspects and procedures involved in setting up a program for Asian studies at the Edwardsville campus.

The Edwardsville program was approved this summer and currently is in operation.

The program, to be coordinated by Gene T. Hsu, professor of government at Edwardsville, will consist mainly of the study and teaching of Asian studies, particularly in China. Japan and Indochina, and excluding a public lecture series by visiting scholars.

During the first year the program will emphasize the role of external powers in the Indochina wars and relations between the United States and China.

The program will be funded by a grant from the Agency for International Development (AID) and the Edwardsville Academic Affairs office. This AID grant for $1 million is the same grant which partly funds the center at Carbondale. This grant, awarded to SIU two years ago will supply the Edwardsville program $47,000 for each of the next three years.

The Academic Affairs office will provide $2,000 annually.

Layer says Board to get budget soon

By Sue Rall
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Chancellor Robert G. Layer said Thursday that operating budget for the Carbondale campus was being finalized and that he hoped to "get it to the Board members in a few days."

Excluding retirement contributions, the operating appropriation for SIU is $73,328,960, according to Clifford Burger, Board fiscal officer.

This includes approximately $44 million for Carbondale, $32 million for Edwardsville and $39 million for central functions such as the SIU Foundation, Alumnae Records and others not yet decentralized.

"We are attempting to cut by function rather than by the program," Layer said.

The appropriation for SIU signed by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie leaves a $4 million deficit which must be compensated for.

Layer said that every effort was being made to respect the priorities of the individual schools and colleges.

No program has been disbanded, he said. Layer said amounts of money are being assigned to the various deans for redistribution.

Admissions individual deans have been asked to draw up budgets for their schools or colleges incorporating the 10 per cent budgetary cut. Where this was done, Layer said, few additional adjustments were needed.

He said cuts are being made on things that can be delayed such as remodeling or new equipment acquisitions.

Additional funds from the tuition raise that may be made available through appropriation by the General Assembly this fall would mainly affect the proposed faculty and staff pay raises.

Layer said 77 per cent of the income fund is used for this purpose. The appropriation of the fund would not have much affect on other items in the operating or capital budgets, he said.

Clarence Stephens, chairman of the University Administrative Council, said he did not expect the budget to be completed in time for consideration by the Board of Trustees at its meeting next Friday.

Cool, UMW officials meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top officials of the nation's coal industry and the United Mine Workers union met Thursday to discuss labor rules for contract talks covering 80,000 miners in 31 states.

No details were announced, but sources said that the negotiations will begin in earnest here after Labor Day in an effort to reach agreement before the Sept. 30 deadline. The coal negotiations usually are held in secret.

W. A. “Tony” Boyle, president of the union, has said he will seek to boost wages of between $15 per day to $20 and at least double the present $3 per bag equality on union-managed coal for the Mine Workers Welfare and Retirement Fund, plus other contract improvements.

Chinese movement costs lives

WASHINGTON (AP) - Political kidnappings and forced labor camps in Communist China have taken the lives of more than 30 million people, a study published Thursday by the Senate's Internal Security subcommittee.

The study covering the 30 years of the Chinese Communist movement was written for the subcommittee by Richard L. Walker, director of the Institute for International Studies at the University of South Carolina.

Comparing the role of Mao Tse-tung, the Chinese Communist party chairman, with that of Stalin in Russia, Walker said "there has been the same monumental subversion and the same commitment to political terror as a means of crushing the opposition."

Entitled "The Human Cost of Communism in China," the study was ordered printed by the subcommittee July 27 after President Nixon's announcement of his forthcoming "journey of peace" to Peking where he is to meet with Premier Chou En-lai.

While Walker credited the Chinese Communist leaders with having achieved remarkable progress in some areas, he said the cost has been "too high for the consequence of the world to absorb its perpetrators."

Those who wish to rationalize public assassinations, pograms of classes and groups of slave labor as a necessary expedient for China's program are returning to the same logic which justified a little and his methods for dealing with economic depression in the Third Reich," he wrote.

Walker said in his study that "there is general agreement that in our quest for peace and security we must, perhaps, deal with the Chinese Communists."

"But in doing so," he said, "it is important that we not allow a temporary tactic or a Chou En-lai to obscure our understanding that the top leaders of the Chinese Communist Party remain committed to their faith and to their past record record."

Gov. Wallace challenges government on busing

By The Associated Press

Alabama's Gov. George Wallace challenged the federal government Thursday to back up President Nixon's stand against the use of federal desegregation funds for busing and said he would "help" the administration by removing a white pupil who had been transferred to a school 22 miles from her home.

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, meanwhile, took issue with Nixon's rejection of busing to achieve integration, and some Southern school districts remained in a quandary over where to get the money for the court-ordered busing.

In Montgomery, Alabama's Gov. Wallace told newsmen he is trying to "help the President carry out his wishes" against massive busing.

Wallace said he ordered the removal of Pamela Davis, a high school girl, under the state's police power and a duty to provide the safety and welfare of all citizens.

The Alabama governor also announced he would "take some action" to prevent another integration plan which would pair the predominantly black Holston City school with a predominantly white school at nearby Oxford. He said he would have further announcements perhaps Monday about other schools.

Under the Holston-Oxford pairing plan, the first three grades would attend Holston and the 4th through 12th grades would go to Oxford.

Some of the Southern school districts face a serious financial pinch as the result of desegregation orders coupled with the administration's refusal to allocate funds for busing.

Hardest pressed are the big-city school systems which have not used a significant amount of busing before.

Parking problems committee formed

Robert Donogh, representing the teachers union, said the union should consider paying no fines.

He tried to talk with Chancellor Robert G. Layser, but got nowhere.

"We should take a firm stand and not go to the University with hat in hand to talk with them," Donogh said.

When a member of the group questioned why the Non-Academic Employees Council's representative to the parking advisory committee was not present to present information on the parking problems, Lee Hester, president of the Council, was asked to speak.

Hester said he did not have any information with him on parking because he had given the chancellor his files and he has not returned them.

The committee formed at the Thursday meeting will meet at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Carpenters Hall on Willow Street.

Eight jurors in all chosen

Prunser also told Bloyd that if he wanted to bring a personal challenge it would have to be done at his own expense.

Bloyd later made two attempts to induce a juror to bring the personal challenge and without success.

Prunser refused the jury through a court order and ruled the challenge in the name of Bloyd.

The final panel of four jurors were approved late Thursday afternoon by prosecuting State's Attorney Richard E. Buchman. However, the prospective jurors were in the process of being questioned by defense attorneys Haas and Michael Buchanan when President Bloyd received the court until 9 a.m. Friday.

The draft will make you free

By Arthur Huppe

New York, Aug. 15, 1938

The business of Wall Street and Wall Street today as middle-aged executives defiantly burned their draft cards and shouted, "We won't go!"

They were protesting legislation recently signed into law by the President, drafting 36-year-olds to serve in their country's uniform. They will serve as solders.

"Drafting kids is one thing, What've they got to lose? But me, what's going to happen to my kids with your draft act? And my family, too. I can't think of it!"

However, stirred little public sympathy, for as the President had being careful to point out in signing the bill: "Prosperous middle-class people have a greater debt than 18-year-olds from the various.

In the Senate and House, logic and precedent were on the side of the Administration.

It was the failure of the Volunteer Army plan in the early 30's that all the blood. For though Congress finally raised the pay of privates to an unheard of $77.37 a month, recruits were hard to come by. The pay was low." contacted one typical young man, "But the hours are long, the work's dull and we could get yourself shot. All in all, it's a lousy job."

So there was no recourse but to return to the draft. This Nation must have soldiers," said the President, "to insure the economic self-determination of Southeast Asia, the unimpared political independence of Northwest Africa and carry out the foreign policies of this Administration."

Thus the Nation was driven to admit the sole reason for the draft: being a private was such a rotten job that you had to force young men to take any threatening to send them to the pententiary instead.

Once the principle was acknowledged, however, it would easily established. First came the police.

By the mid-70's a policeman's lot was shear hell. He was reviled by students, stoned by radicals, shot at by snipers and bombed by revolutionaries. Across the country, policemen were quitting in droves.

"This Nation must have policemen," said the President, "to catch crooks and carry out the other domestic policies of this Administration." Thus men 26 to 40 were drafted as policemen. It seemed both necessary and fair.

The solution to The Great Garbage Crisis, then, was obvious. By 1940, the garbage had so piled up that garbage from coast to coast threw up their hands and quit.

"This Nation must have garbage men," said the President, "to carry out the garbage of this Administration." It was then, the turn of men 30 to 60 to be drafted.

Drafting those 50 to 60 became necessary as the mail service so deteriorated that the poor mailmen were jeered at, spat upon and bitten (not only by dogs, but by angry occupants) as they made their appointed rounds.

"This Nation must have mailmen," said the President, "to carry the draft notices of this Administration."

It came as no surprise, then, when the President announced tonight plans to draft stogo gentleman over 60, women of all ages and children from 10 to 15. The children will be used to pick fruit; the women will scrub floors, carry bedbolgs and do other thankless tasks; and the stogo gentlemen will perform stoop labor.

Little protest was expected. For as the President put it so well: "Let us never forget that it is the draft which keeps us American free."

How to triple your sales of chocolates

There are a lot of problems plaguing American society today, but we can't say that our men in public office aren't doing their best to solve some of them.

Take, for example, a new law stipulating that "prescriptions for amphetamines will not be refillable in pharmacies across the country within 72 hours of written prescriptions from the physician."

The law became effective Aug. 6.

Knowing, as we all do, that amphetamines do bad things to people, we should be especially grateful for a law which will make the convenient refilling of these drugs impossible.

There are several reasons why this law is a good one:

For openers, since doctors will no longer be able to renew prescriptions by telephone, they will probably insist on seeing patients each time a drug needs to be renewed. That means more visits to the physician's office and a much healthier income for the local pharmacists.

And since doctors will no longer be allowed to phone prescriptions to the pharmacist, they will invariably be using the telephone less. That should be especially beneficial for people sharing party lines with doctors.

Then there are always the paper companies, printers and pen companies who will notice a greater demand for their products. Physicians throughout the country will need more of these items than ever before—thus a boom in business for all of them.

But pharmacists, paper and pen companies and printers will not be the only ones to benefit from this new law.

Making amphetamines less readily available will mean that fewer housewives, who use such drugs to curb appetites, will be on them. Therefore, appetites will increase and Nestle's chocolates will probably triple in sales.

Since amphetamines are in great demand on the black market, and since getting a doctor's prescription will become a hassle for many people, illegal street sales are bound to increase. In fact, the harder these drugs will be to obtain legally means the higher the street prices will be. So, again, the new law will be helping someone-like organized crime.

While this new law is clearly good for the American people, it is not good enough for Illinoisans. Gov. O'Day may take it a step further. A bill awaiting O'Day's signature will stipulate that amphetamine prescriptions will have to be made in triplicate—with copies for the doctor, the pharmacy and the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI).

That means filing cabinet sales should increase in the near future, too. And so should employment in our fair state. The IBI, after all, will have to hire more personnel to keep count of the number of prescriptions coming into its office daily. Yes, we may have a lot of problems in America today. But no one can say that our men in public office aren't doing their best to solve some of them.

Not much celebrating for 10th anniversary of Berlin Wall

By Thomas Lemberger
Student Writer

There we stood, watching a divided family, on a divided street, in a divided city, in a divided country, in a divided world.

My friend Jim and I were in Berlin on an observation platform on a street called Bernauerstrasse. The Berlin Wall cuts the street in two. Families come to Bernauerstrasse to wave to one another—a husband on one side waves a birthday greeting to his wife on the other side, a mother waves to a daughter on her wedding day. It is the only way they can see each other. A few blocks away stands the Peter Fechter Memorial, a monument to a 16-year-old East Berliner who tried to make it over the wall to the West. He was machine-gunned by a fellow East Berliner and left to bleed to death between the barbed wire.

As we stood now at the memorial, we were surprised.

A sign nearby read "4,800 have died trying to escape here."

But somehow, 500 had made it the year before in 1989.

"What makes them do it? What makes them try to get through 'death strip' and over that wall?" Jim quizzed. I couldn't answer him.

We had seen the death strip, an area about a block wide that runs along the east side of the Wall. It contains enough deterrents to stop tanks, cars, trains and men on foot. Trip flares, barbed wire, police dogs, trenches, mud, mines, machineguns and anti-tank piles are encountered even before the wall is reached. The wall is a glass-studded, eight to 10 foot structure with a reveting pipe atop to help spall would-be escapees back into the East.

We marvelled at man's attempts to cross the wall. Men have tried everything from pole-vaulting to riding over on a pallet on a stretched wire.

This was our second trip to Berlin. We were there to partake of the neon go-go atmosphere of West Berlin—to have a good time. But things were about to change.

"Why don't we go into the East and talk to some people?" I said. "Maybe we can get some insight as to why they come over the wall."

Jim agreed. We made our way to Checkpoint Charlie. It was an eerie feeling. One never gets used to crossing like that, even though we'd been there before.

Now in the East, we tried to strike up conversations. "Good day," we'd say in German. Sometimes we would get a courteous "Good day" in return.

East Berlin is not a place for the self-conscious American. The stores are fixed and long.

We searched for a Gasthaus and some good German beer. It was futile. We later learned that if a man was drinking, he was not working, so—no beer. Instead, we ate ice cream in a coffee shop. It was more ice than cream and tasted somewhat like sawdust.

While strolling near Humboldt University, we came across a most unusual construction worker. A young woman about 21, pretty and petite, was breaking the concrete of a sidewalk with a sledge hammer and chisel.

"Why must you do work like this?" we asked. She explained that she was a university student in sculpture and that she had to pay her tuition by working for the school. The school had assigned her the job.

The work goes slowly in East Berlin as evidenced by the huge piles of rubble that haven't moved since the war. Old buildings, few new ones, a lack of cars, lack of shops and deserted streets also give one the idea that this is not the thriving metropolis like the Berlin across the wall.

The young sculptress commented on the dislike for the work she was doing. We asked her if she'd like to leave. She said that she and her boyfriend had already made plans to escape by way of the sea during her summer holidays.

We had talked to many people that day and one thing was clear: they all had a hunger for news outside their country. Everyone asked what was going on and what was new, etc. We couldn't help but think that they weren't being told the news of the West.

Later that day we stopped by the other Bernauerstrasse, the one in the East. We took pictures of some little children on their way home from school. When they found out we were Americans, they pried us with questions. While we were talking to them, a little girl games big eyes tugged at my coat and pointed to the concrete and barbed wire all too plainly visible from where we were.

"Warum gibt es ene Mauer?" (Why is there a wall?) she asked.

And there they were again, the families waving to one another, seeking each other the only way possible.

But there is another way Peter Fechter tried it and failed.

And perhaps the most difficult thing of all is trying to explain to a six-year-old girl with pigtailed and big curious eyes, why there is, indeed, a wall.

State grant aids volunteer projects

By Illinois Information Service

SPRINGFIELD — A statewide organization of college student volunteers has received a $25,000 grant to encourage and facilitate the development of college volunteer programs.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Josephine K. Oblinger, director of the Governor’s Committee on Voluntary Action.

The organization is the Illinois
Coalition for Volunteer Student Action (ICYSA), Inc., a non-profit corporation composed of student leaders and faculty members of public and private colleges, universities and junior colleges in Illinois.

The coalition’s first project under the grant will be to organize training workshops for all interested schools in each of five districts. Mrs. Oblinger said.

The grant, authorized in the recent session of the Illinois General Assembly, is administered by the Governor’s Committee on Voluntary Action.

Attendance of million-plus; deficit cut State Fair goals

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - The Illinois State Fair, which began Tuesday, will attract more than a million people this year and cut $800,000 from the $5.3 million budget, the old but spacious fair of "Jim for young and old" has announced.

The announcement that this year will attract more than a million people will close the gap between income and expenses for the fair for the first time in five years.

The "Exhibition of Progress," the 1871 fair will try to attract more than 200,000 of the thousands of farmers who come to parade their own animals or watch the events.

There will be the new Interational Village offering foods, drinks and amusement entertainment from foreign lands. Participating countries are India, Japan, Turkey, Nationalist China and Mexico.

In addition to the usual attractions, the "Agriculture of the Future" will be held with rubber boats of new bridles. There's the "world's largest" portable merry-go-round, the "giant new silver ferris wheel," and the "exciting zyklon coaster."

The 18th fair, running from Friday through Aug. 23, further promises the "Lincoln State" situation near the replica of New Salem's Abe Cottage, free entertainment by musical groups.

Most 18-year-olds oppose Nixon

Poll shows drug use up

By William J. Vaugh AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Results of a new survey indicate that 80 per cent of 18-year-olds plan to vote in 1972 and 55 per cent of the students want to see President Nixon defeated.

The survey of 8,000 students on 60 campuses in all areas of the nation was conducted last year. General drug use also increased.

—There are fewer female virgins but more male virgins.

—Pollution has replaced the Vietnam war as the No. 1 concern of the college student.

The survey was conducted for Playboy magazine by Richard D. Jaffe and Associates of Chicago and was carried out without telling the students who conducted or sponsored it, the magazine announced.

Only four per cent of the students said they wouldn't vote and six per cent were undecided. The poll showed that 41 per cent of the students opposed re-election, it said.

Some charges dropped in Wallace investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department is squeezeing its investigation of alleged kickbacks and campaign money irregularities by associates of Gov. George C. Wallace.

A Justice Department official said a secret report circulating among top department lawyers concludes the investigation failed to uncover enough evidence for prosecution.

At least three associates of Wallace's are scheduled to be indicted in the probe, according to a reliable source.

A Justice Department official who was not quoted said the grand jury may return a series of tax indictments, even though the current probe is being ended.

According to Justice Department sources, the broader probe into charges of kickbacks and highway kickbacks, state dock payoffs and bank payoffs for said officials has finished.

Review, now in its second term as governor, has not been directly involved in the investigation by the grand juries, but a number of several key officials in his administration have been

Campus traffic mishaps decline

Carousal backing continues to air for 25 per cent of University vehicle accidents, according to a quarterly report compiled by the University Safety Office.

The report, covering April, May and June, and University vehicle accidents declined for the second consecutive quarter for a 25 per cent drop in accidents over the past two quarters.

Student injuries totaled 925, a 20 per cent increase over the preceding quarter. The report said about one per cent of all student injuries were of a temporary disabling nature. Largely caused by student injuries, the report stated, appeared to be accidents that occurred while driving private vehicles or while participating in private recreations.

State and federal government officials met with day care center operators and representatives of migrant farm laborers Wednesday to examine methods of improving care of children of agricultural workers in Illinois.

Steve Frank, director of the day care center in Cohocton, said: "The purpose of the meeting was to mobilize and coordinate available resources for quality services for children of migrant workers."

Officials at the meeting discussed such things as the mechanics of starting a day care center, selecting teacher training, child recruitment and classroom instruction.

Frank said that this was the first meeting of its kind but future meetings will be held every three months in October and March. The reason for this is that most migrants start work in October and finish at the end of March.

Also discussed was the distribution of House Bill 1000 signed by Governor Ogilvie Wednesday. The bill appropriated $150,000 to the Department of Children and Family Services for the development of day care centers for children of migrant workers.

"We want to bring the day care centers of Illinois together," Frank said. One of the reasons for this is to follow the flow of migrants in coun-

The Cambodian high command said the bridges at Sprey Dok and Saymy in Highway 4, the main river, were still standing at last report but details of the fighting were unavailable. The U.S. Command reported 18 Americans killed in action last week, maintaining the same year-low level that has prevailed for the past month. The command said 74 Americans were wounded. Both figures were up slightly from the previous week.

The South Vietnamese command revealed that 21 South Vietnamese were killed last week, the lowest since May 3, 1968. Wounded totaled 461.

The allied commands claimed 1,006 enemy killed last week, 626 less than the week before.

Planned bill would limit luncheon cost

Springfield ill api; Sen. Egbert B. Green, R-Pekin, said Thursday he will introduce a bill in the fall session of the Illinois General Assembly to limit to $7 a meal the amounts that state agencies spend on guests, their guests, and guests of their guests. Green said he was inspired to introduce the bill in response to the study made by the Better Government Association that the Board of Higher Education has spent more than $120,000 on these luncheons and dinners in the last 17 months.

Local woman pilot tells of flying career, experiences

By John Bade

She worked her way into a job as a pilot for a Detroit-based company at the age of 18. The pay was low, but the work was exciting, and she loved it. Today, as a 30-year-old mother of two, she flies for Continental Airlines as a first officer on Boeing 737s.

If it's all a part of a night's work for a woman pilot, then it's certainly part of the work of a woman pilot, but it's also part of the work of a woman pilot.
Population problem seen in rush to cities

WASHINGTON (AP) - The major problem with the nation's countryside, as the government sees it, is how to keep what's left of the rural population out of the already crowded cities and suburbs where most Americans live.

The answer, according to the Nixon administration and Congress, is to make rural life more attractive and to give farmers and small towns Americans a greater stake in the nation's prosperity.

There's some disagreement about means. For example, part of a demonstration plan to improve rural life involves revenue-sharing proposals that some congressmen oppose.

But there's little argument about the goal: stemming the migration to the cities by creating more and better jobs and services in the countryside. Increased employment for marginal farmers is a major aim.

With predictions that the population may jump by 100 million by the year 2,000, Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin says the question is whether all the growth will be in congested, broken-down cities or whether a good part can occur in the countryside and in terms of jobs or homes.

Before he left office, former Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman spoke of the "rural-urban imbalance, the anomaly of 70 percent of this nation's people crowded onto less than 2 percent of the land and per capita our running around on all the rest."

For much of the nation's history, the countryside held the population edge. Agriculture Department figures gave some idea of the switch to the cities.

-In about 1940, about 20.5 million Americans lived on farms; in 1976, 5.7 million.

-During World War II, the flight from farms averaged 1.6 percent yearly. During that same period, population growth was zero.

Jackson County changes districts

The new map of legislative districts recently filed in Springfield shows a number of changes throughout the state, including Jackson County.

On the new map, Jackson County is part of District 30. Previously, it had been part of Representative District 29 and Senatorial District 30. Other changes include new District 32, green Washington, Randolph, Monroe, the largest portion of southern St. Clair, excluding E. St. Louis and a strip of western Williamson.

The switch throws four House in combination together in District 30. This may create a contest at the polls, since state law provides for three representatives per district. Representing District 30 are Reps. G. L. Allen, William C. P. Moore, Northern Springs, and Chester, William J. Cunningham, and James D. Holloway, D. Sparta, and Sen. John G. Gilling, R. Carbondale.

The House Majority leader, Rep. Clyde Chute, D. A. Attle, no longer represents Jackson County.

The new map combines the previous representative and senatorial into the singular legislative districts. District 30 representatives don't seem overly concerned with the renumbering, Williams said that he likes the old district, but expects to do well in the new one.

McCormick expressed disappointment that the reapportionment will weight the 6th District in favor of the Democrats, but said he was glad the legislative committee was able to reach an agreement.

Waller says his party holds balance of power.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (CHS) — Alabama's Gov. George Wallace has been cited in that his third-party movement in national politics is stronger than ever and if the Nixon administration does not live up to its promises, "we'll be back."

He told an audience here: "We still have the balance of power and they are worried about it."

It's cricket to serve tea

More than just an athletic contest, the gentlemen's game of cricket is played by the Missouri Cricket Association in St. Louis Forest Park. A cricket match is an outing, a social event and a sporting contest.

In contrast to baseball, its raucous American cousin, cricket is dignified and refined. A spectator would never give a Bronx cheer to an umpire or player. Likewise, applause from the fans is limited to a mild applause.

There is usually only one inning in a match each side receiving one turn at bat. Between the halves of the inning, players retire to high tea, a light lunch in which the spectators often join them.

Each of the 11 players on a team remains at bat until he makes an out. Because of this, cricket matches often last for days. Since all players on a team have to be put out before the opposing team gets its turn, astronomical scores often result.

Not uncommon is a score of several hundred runs for each side.

All-American Antoine's position still up in air

Lionel Antoine may be the only returning All-American in the country who doesn't know where he'll line up this fall. The 6-foot-3, 225-pound, tight-end fullback may go at offensive tackle, or defensive end.

"Lionel is definitely our best football player at all four positions," said SAU coach Charles Canah, a two-year starter at that position who sat out in 1973 for disciplinary reasons. Another candidate is 238-pound Jack Rushing who spent all his previous playing time at offensive guard and linebacker. And 215-pound Butch Chambers has all the tools if he can make it academically.

"If it looks like two of those three can do the job, then Lionel probably will start at offensive tackle," Towers adds.

SIU seeks major football status by '73

By Ken Stewart
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The biggest year in SIU football history may be 1973.

That is the year the University is aiming for university division status on the gridiron.

SIU will seek permission from the NCAA to leave the college division in 1973 for competition in '74 according to Bill Brown, assistant athletic director.

Brown said the NCAA looks at several things before deciding to approve or deny the request.

The NCAA examines the school's schedule, overall sports program, stadium and home attendance among other things.

"We have a lot going for us," said Brown, but he did admit that if SIU laments McAndrew Stadium is a hangup for the big step up.

"There's no doubt about that," said Brown. But he added that by 1973 the University would have form plans for a new facility or a renovated McAndrew Stadium.

The NCAA stipulates that a University division school must have at least five or more major opponents on its schedule for a certain number of years.

The Salukis will have such a schedule in 1973 with five opponents already major and two are expected to go over by then.

The major schools that year are Northern Illinois, East Carolina, Oklahoma State, Dayton and Xavier.

Oklahoma State of the Big Eight Conference is probably the biggest prize ever to hit the Salukis.

The Salukis will face the Cowboys in Stillwater on Sept. 28, 1973.

The Cowboys have not been noted for winning teams and nation rankings lately, but anything can happen.

Drake University, who recently joined the Missouri Valley Conference football race again, is expected to appear.
