SIZZLING SUMMER—Summer came a week early to the Communications Building when a water main came apart, flooded the basement and killed the air conditioning. Mrs. Pansy Jones (right) and Denna Sackman, secretaries in the office of the dean of the School of Communications, broke out a fan to help combat the 90-degree temperature inside. There are 337 deputy sheriffs working out of the SIU Security Office. The security officers on the SIU campus have the powers of a deputy sheriff in any county where the university owns property. The Carbondale city police department's duties are confined to the city limits.

Jack Hazel, Carbondale chief of police said if the University should merge under city powers as the Public Safety Council recommends, the powers of the University would be limited. The University needs the power it has, Hazel said. Hazel can see advantages to the proposal but he believes the legal aspects would make it impossible.

The fact that city police are paid by city taxes and the University police by state taxes would present a problem, he said.

One advantage of a consolidation would be a larger force, Hazel said. At the time of the report there were eight patrolmen on the city police force. Since that time patrolmen have been added.

A larger force would provide better coverage, better traffic control and better investigation of various types of felonies, Hazel said.

"I think a central communications center would have a lot of merit," he said. "Both departments now maintain duplicate records on students."

A central communications center would probably necessitate changing communication bands, he said. The city is on state and county radio frequencies. The University has its own public safety band.

"If there is any possibility of a merger it would probably offset a lot of expense to both the city and the University," he said.

The security office is strongly against a merger, Hazel said.

The proposed merger would require a "common fountain head" of authority, Helton said. One force would have to be subordinate to the other.

The operating expenses of the SIU security force are appropriated by the state and the city has only that power which the state legislature grants. Therefore, any change would require action by the state legislature, he said.

Helton can see no advantages in either a merger of the two forces or one central communications center. He pointed out that the interests of the city and the University are not parallel.

The interests of the University lie in policing state

Cycle-Auto Registration Jump

Adds to Campus Parking Pain

If you thought it was hard to find a parking place last term, just wait until you've crept out of the parking lot behind "hunting a hole" this summer.

Those elusive parking places are even harder to find.

By August Lemarchal, supervisor of the parking section of the Office of Student Affairs, the registration of both cars and cycles is running ahead of last year's figure.

He said more graduate student and commuter stickers have been issued this year, although the increase is not too large. Summer workshops and training programs are responsible for the increase in commuter stickers, Lemarchal said.

The most significant rise in registrations is the jump from 800 motorcycles registered at this time last year to 2000 that have been registered so far this year.
'Summer and Smoke' Will Open June 30

"Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams will open the 1966 season of the SIU Summer Stock Theater June 30 in the new southern playhouse.

The company, composed of YVONE WESTBROOK actors and actresses from 18 colleges and universities in 11 states, will present four plays at the Carbondale campus before moving to New Salem State Park to produce a series of 1-tooth plays, according to Sherwin Abrams, associate professor of theater.
The other productions are "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Our American Cousin" and "The Mask and the Face."

According to Darwin Payne, assistant professor of theater and director and scenic designer for "Summer and Smoke," Williams' play treats different kinds of loneliness, as represented by the two leading characters, Alma and John.

Alma, played by Yvonne Westbrook, is a young woman in a Southern town whose warped sense of modesty and elegance frustrate her attempts to find some kind of normality and happiness in her self-made world.

John, played by John Knapp, on the other hand, is a brilliant young doctor who, although attracted to Miss Alma, seeks his identity through unusuality and self-indulgence, as represented by Nora Gonzales, a Spanish American tart played by Marilyn Hengst. The play, one of Williams', most successful, will be staged by Payne in a three-scene setting, setting the stage, a colossal statue of Eternity, supposedly in the town square.

The play will also be presented July 1 and 2. Tickets for the play or for the whole summer season are on sale at the box office in the Communications Building.

property while those of the city police officer are intact in a local citizens, he said. The University has its own records which are of little value to the city and vice versa, he said, as represented by Nora Gonzales.

According to the Carbondale chief of police, the city never sends an officer to the campus without notifying the SIU Security Office. The University extends the same courtesy to the city Police Department.

Opposition of University officials to the proposed merger will be discussed tomorrow.

Solution Is Rich Widow

Wife Is Helpmate
In Modern Marriage

By Pam Gleaton

The fiscal has won over the physical.
But it finally happened. A man has decided that the figures that should really count when a man picks a wife are the ones she can compute instantly in her head or on her pocket-sized abacus instead of the ones that makes a bikini look good.

BillDean, who writes for the Associated Press out of Omaha, says that "bright-eyed blondes with a wild and wonderful past" are not always right for modern marriage.

Even if she's a regular Mary Margaret McBride in the kitchen, the girl may not be right for a successful marriage, according to Dean.

He points out that marriage is a joining of helpmates, and wives, what with all the modern helps for cooking and housework, don't need any help. Instead it's the men who need help, and they need it most with financial matters.

He lists major marriage expenses as such things as the big beet cooler girls all call refrigerators. The big decision here is time payments (and cash, too).

The answer, according to Dean, can be worked out in an instant by the best wives.

After passing this first big test on fiscal matters, wife is ready for the really big game like acting as secretary and treasurer for the marital corporation.

Marriage in the sound institution it is today because we protect ourselves against unforeseen emergencies with things like major medical insurance, says Dean.

All that is required from the insured in a payroll deduction, a big filing cabinet, and a clever bookkeeper with plenty of time to keep records, correspondence with the medical and dental professions and a few trigonometric computations. This, of course, is where the distaff side enters the picture.

Other duties of the corresponding secretary and treasurer are to pay the hospital insurance, medical insurance, accident insurance, mortgage, fire and wind insurance on the house, liability insurance, insurance covering repair to the television set and washing machine, five kinds of Personal Lines insurance, fire insurance, camera insurance and life insurance on everybody including the dog.

She also gets to decide how to best fend off the Internal Revenue Service in the spring.

If you can't find a lady accountant or lawyer to marry (and the supply is extremely short), Dean's suggestion for the next best thing to do is marry a girl who can repair electrical appliances.

The final solution is, naturally, to marry a rich widow.

He said a decision would be made Tuesday regarding the appeal of three graduate students who were arrested after President DeWitt Morris warned students to stay off the streets or be "severed" from the University by arrest.

Also awaiting decisions from the administration are nine other students who returned to summer school. They are facing disciplinary action because of the disturbances.

A card is being prepared on each of the 15 persons identified as students. The card will form a file available to the administration by the end of this week.

Exciting Hours

Of Dachau's End

This book recounts the events of the day the American 45th Division "liberated" the prisoners a week earlier had liberated at Dachau, Germany, in the last days of World War II. Of the 25,000 Jews taken there by Gun, one of the liberated prisoners, forces the reader to relive the horror and cruelty of the liberation and extinction of that day.

Since arrest, interrogation, and detention under interrogation did not tend to rob the victim of humanity, regarding the obituaries of this activity of this report is a miracle of journalism. The same critical faculty that Gun brings to this narrative landed him in Dachau in the first place. A top-flight international reporter, Gun's expose of Nazi practices in the Western world, which he reported that Russian soldiers would not destroy the Lehrmacb caused his arrest. This record is not only testimony to Gun's work - it is a demonstration of the toughness of his fiber as well, for he illustrates the book with photographic record of a camera stolen by his captors.

This book is far more than a simple record of the goings and comings that Gun has researched his subject and in which he has achieved a perspective on the holocaust of the unprecedented, passing over the "vital" as well as the important, in its summary manner, and the world as it is, is warily soberly, with Hitler, with others. The writer's account of the individual responsibility of all humanity. He makes an excellent case for this the reviewer.

In the mind of this reviewer, the dehumanizing effect that attend, that rob us of the reality of death had upon the victims was by far a greater crime than the final decrees. Reward, of Gun's accounting of the plight, of the Jews. The reviewer reminds us that non-Jews of Nazi genocide policy outshines the Jews by more than two to one. Gun contends that guilt for Nazi atrocity must be borne, at least, partly by the western powers that have resisted solely with Hitler, nor with what many 360 bodies would be for the sake of the inter alba barrograff after a long year in the air.

The same galley humor which underlies this narrative probably preserved Gun's sanity and perspicacity in Dachau. It helps the reader stay with the story to the end.

A recent issue of a national news magazine reports a lively market exists in replicas of Nazi decorations of valor, for artifacts such as the Wehrmacht helmet and similar symbols of Hitler's 1900 Kriegreich among "College" American teenagers, one youngster even giữa.

"It really upsets your parents, that's why everybody does it.

This reviewer became acquainted with Dachau in bucolic Bavaria before it was celebrated to its present whitewashed splendor. Time spent among men and women, who, even women, who, even in the United States of America, the United States, the Teutonic tidal wave raged, had eroded the capacity to think the situation, was amusing. Persuading The Day of the Americans should be made a prerequisite to the purchase of Master Race ideograms for the sellers of such merchandise.

Roye T. Bryant will Head
College Placement Council

Roye T. Bryant, director of the SIU Placement Services, is the new president of the College Placement Council. He will be installed during the organization's convention now under way in Denver, Colo.

The council is an international organization representing placement officials at about 1,500 colleges, universities, and placement services of the United States and Canada, as well as 1,800 to 2,000 employing organizations from business, industry, and government.

Last fall he completed a year's tenure as president of the national Association for School, College and University Staffing, remaining on the executive committee this year. In 1958-59 he headed the Midwest College Placement Association. The College Placement Council is composed of three representatives from each of eight regional associations, two representing education, one representing business.

Byrd Is Named
College President

Milton B. Byrd, a member of the SIU faculty at Edwardsville from 1958 until 1962, has been named by the Board of Governors of the Colleges and Universities as president of its new Chicago college.

Byrd, who served as an associate professor in the Humanities Division and associate dean of instruction at Edwardsville, will assume his duties Sept. 1.

He is presently vice president of academics at Northern Michigan University.

The new Chicago college will receive $48,103,000 of the $183,024,902 in funds approved by the Board Monday, and industry employers. Bryant will take a leave of absence from his SIU post during the fall quarter to attend the College Placement Council affairs, including attending annual meetings and serving on eight regional associations.

A member of the SIU faculty since 1948, Bryant has directed placement work since 1957 and holds a doctor's degree in education from Washington University.

A native of Moberly, Mo., he received his bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Illinois. After four years in the Air Force, Byrd joined the placement council last year.

Criminologist Joins
SIU Crime Center

Elmer H. Johnson, a former North Carolina state prison official, has been named professor of criminology at SIU. Johnson will serve as the staff member of the center for the spring, summer and fall semesters. He will be joined by Paul R. Howard, the assistant director of the state prison system.

He helped reform a penal system ranking fifth in the nation in inmate control. His efforts included development of psychiatric treatment resources, introduction of social workers to treat male prisoners, and the introduction of the first phase of an in-service training program for employees.

He also designed and implemented a punch card system for prisoner population accounting and modernized classification procedures.

Johnson also served as assistant director of the statistical services division of the North Carolina State Department of Public Welfare during the summers of 1951 and 1952. He served as a parole supervisor, and in 1961 prepared an emergency report for the U.S. Probation Commission.

A native of Racine, Wis., he holds three degrees including the Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin. He worked five years as a copy editor and reporter for the Racine Journal-Times, and was an Army Air Corps officer in World War II.

S U Microbiologist Awarded
Grant to Study in Denmark

Isaac L. Schechmeister, professor of microbiology, will study immunological reactions of viruses by means of electron microscopv in the biophysics department of Statens Seruminstitut in Copenhagen, Denmark, for the next year.

Schechmeister has been awarded a special fellowship by the Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases of the U.S. Public Health Service to carry on the year's study and research.

The fellowship, which is frequently granted, provides a full year's salary at the same rate of pay which the recipient receives from his home university, according to Schechmeister.

In addition to his teaching and research, Schechmeister for a number of years has directed many undergraduate and graduate programs in microbiology which has been supported by training grants from federal sources. For six years he has directed a summer training program for graduate students.

This summer he was awarded a $189,577 five-year grant from the Virolology Section of the National Institute for Microbiology and Infectious Diseases in the area of public health and medical laboratory microbiology.

He has received numerous grants from the National Institutes of Health, the Office of Naval Research, the National Science Foundation, and other agencies in support of his research and teaching. He has published more than 75 papers and abstracts reporting on research studies ranging from control of bacterial populations, air disease, and effects of radiation on immunity to infectious diseases, to oral hygiene.

In addition to his teaching and research, Schechmeister has been awarded a special fellowship by the Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases of the U.S. Public Health Service to carry on the year's study and research.

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) - Premier Nguyen Cao Ky has smashed Buddhist defiance threatening his regime and cautiously renewed peace talks with Buddhist leaders.

After the remnants of defiance were liquidated in the north and Saigon's Buddhist Institute was sealed off by police, Ky began discussions with the institute's moderate head, Tam Chau.

Ky stressed that the "present opposition of some monks to my government results from a misunderstanding of my government has never pursued a policy of religious repression. But we could not tolerate open rebellion."

Tam Chou, who dissociated himself from the recent rioting and moved out of the Buddhist Institute compound, obviously was trying to restore the church's position.

The monk pleased with Ky to release arrested Buddhists, particularly Tri Quang, who once wielded tremendous power by now has been reduced to repeated appeals for the government to resign.

Tri Quang was transported Tuesday from the northern city of Hue to Saigon hospital where he was under guard. In a gesture of conciliation, the government allowed other monks to visit him.

It was clear that a dialogue has been started, with major political consequences possible.

The government is in a favorable position at no time has the unified Buddhist church been more shaken up and divided. Its more radical faction has demonstrated no concrete policy beyond demands for the resignation of Ky and the chief of state, Nguyen Van Thieu. This led to a split within the Church leadership.

On the fighting front U.S. airborne troops came to grips Tuesday with a 500-man Communist battalion in the third major clash this month along the vital highlands waist of South Vietnam.

It was a new battle in a jungle war that a British government witness Lord Walton, forecast the allies will win within 12 months. The political sky, overcast all spring seemed to be clearing.

More than 2,000 Americans of the 1st Airborne and 1st Cavalry, Airmobile, Divisions smashed at heavily fortified positions of the Red battalion in Phu Yen Province north of a coastal base 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

The Communist fought from tunnels and bunkers to keep a toehold on the eastern flank of the highland area. This an area they have long wished to control and thus cut South Vietnam in two.

The Communist force has lost 69 known dead and probably many more. However, headquarters has not yet said whether the unit was a hardcore guerrilla outfit or a North Vietnamese regular battalion.

U.S. W. Will Maintain Readiness
In Europe, McNamara Says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said Tuesday the United States would reduce its armed manpower in Europe if the Soviet Union cut its forces in the Communist East. But McNamara would not say whether the United States had discussed this possibility with Moscow. He said that is a matter of diplomacy, not defense.

And he told senators investigating the problems that beset the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, "It would be unwise for our nation today to reduce our combat capability in Europe."

He said a cutback in U.S. combat capability there would be prudent only if the Communists made reciprocal concessions, political or military.

McNamara said he draws a distinction between combat capability and manpower or expenditures. He said there are legitimate pressures now for reduction in the level of U.S. forces in Europe.
French Leader Opens Parley With Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle of France opened talks Tuesday with Soviet leaders on easing East-West tensions and emphasized that other European nations should undertake bilateral negotiations with the Kremlin.

The French president's call for this example to be followed by others represented a move against U, S. policy for maintaining a united front in the West.

In turn, his Soviet hosts brought a proposal for a conference of European nations on mutual security, a French spokesman reported, in which the United States would probably play only a minor role.

De Gaulle has shown interest in such a conference since it is in line with his conception of a "European Europe" without the United States. French sources denied, however, that he took the Soviet suggestion seriously.

The specific mention of Germany represented another departure by De Gaulle from the U. S. support policy that German problems should be discussed only by the Big Four victorious powers in World War II.

A communiqué on the opening talks said only that they were held in an atmosphere of frankness and cordiality, and that De Gaulle had stressed in the need, in his view, to end the confrontation of East and West blocs in Europe which resulted from World War II.

De Gaulle has indicated that he aims at taking over the role the United States played under the late President John F. Kennedy in seeking a lessening of East-West tensions, and his visit to the Viet Nam War. The Soviet Union has refused to take any new steps with Washington until its Vietnam policy is changed.

De Gaulle's reception by the Soviet public has reflected the high official favor.

Hitler's Ghost Seen Hovering Over New Party in Germany

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP)—A new German political party has emerged from a convention full of promises for the future of the fatherland.

Leaders of the 18-month-old National Democratic party rejected accusations that they are heirs of Adolf Hitler's National Socialists. But their emotional speeches, constantly interrupted by cheering applause, sometimes were similar to German political rallies of 30 years ago.

The chairman, industrialist Fritz Thielen, 49, told his followers that the party has the "historical task of tearing the German people out of its lethargy" and restoring Germany to its true place in the world.

He scoffed at opposition from trade union members, who staged a protest rally outside the conference hall.

His audience ranged from Bavarian farmers to smartly dressed businessmen, teachers and lawyers.

Young men in their late teens and early twenties wore the arm band of parliamentarians and engaged in discussion with opposition senators outside the building. The party claims 30 percent of its members are under 30 years old.

The National Democrats polled only 2.5 percent of the vote in last year's elections. Thielen, 49, and storm-faced, announced that his party has representation through a four-man splinter group in Bremen's State Parliament.

At a news conference, Thielen and Deputy Chairman Adolf von Thadden defended their often controversial views.

They attacked the Social Democrat party chairman, Willy Brandt, for leaving Germany during World War II to live in Norway. They said that no further reparations should be paid to Israel.

Asked by one reporter how the National Democrats' aims differed from those of the Nazis, Thielen said his party did not advocate anti-Semitism.

A squad of 200 riot police, with dogs and water cannon, was stationed at the conference hall throughout the three-day convention to prevent clashes between party members and their opponents.

He scoffed at opposition from trade union members, who staged a protest rally outside the conference hall.

His audience ranged from Bavarian farmers to smartly dressed businessmen, teachers and lawyers.

Young men in their late teens and early twenties wore the arm band of parliamentarians and engaged in discussion with opposition senators outside the building. The party claims 30 percent of its members are under 30 years old.

The National Democrats polled only 2.5 percent of the vote in last year's elections. Thielen, 49, and storm-faced, announced that his party has representation through a four-man splinter group in Bremen's State Parliament.

At a news conference, Thielen and Deputy Chairman Adolf von Thadden defended their often controversial views.

They attacked the Social Democrat party chairman, Willy Brandt, for leaving Germany during World War II to live in Norway. They said that no further reparations should be paid to Israel.

Asked by one reporter how the National Democrats' aims differed from those of the Nazis, Thielen said his party did not advocate anti-Semitism.

A squad of 200 riot police, with dogs and water cannon, was stationed at the conference hall throughout the three-day convention to prevent clashes between party members and their opponents.
