Senate passes bill to save Holden area

By Chuck Huchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A bill ordering the formation of an ad hoc committee to discuss the possibility of converting the Holden Hospital grounds into "A People's Park" with the intention of "saving the trees," was passed unanimously by the student senate Wednesday night. The bill was sponsored by Dennis Kosinski, East Side non-dorm senator.

The bill results from the First National Bank of Carbondale, which owns the Holden Hospital grounds, is now considering three plans that would directly affect that area.

The, bill says, entails that "the destruction of the hospital would mean the destruction of all living things in the area with the construction of a parking lot."

The second plan is the construction of an office building in that area. The construction of a park is the third plan.

The primary purpose of the bill is to form an ad hoc committee which will be "formed immediately by persons interested in the preservation of our ecology and in the preservation of a cultural haven," Kosinski said.

Kosinski said there are over 1,000 birds which inhabit the trees surrounding Holden Hospital. "The people of Carbondale," Kosinski said, "and the students of SIU should have a cultural oasis in a city of cement and steel.

Kosinski said, "This committee will move immediately to discuss the three plans mentioned above with the First National Bank of Carbondale, the city and all parties involved with the intention of preserving "A People's Park" and with the intention of "saving the trees."

Kosinski submitted the bill for social and geological ecology. In other action, the senate elected a new president pro tempore to replace Bob Prince, who presently holds the position. Elected to replace Prince was Dave Maguire, University Park senator.

This action came after a long argument over the constitutionality of a bill introduced by Kosinski which called for the Student Senate to elect a new president pro tempore.

Board to continue search for chancellor

By Steve Brown
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The 14 month search for a permanent chancellor for the SIU Carbondale campus, will continue despite the fact that the Board of Trustees have inter- viewed for the job.

The announcement of the continuation of the search comes Wednesday after the three-man committee of Board members advised the Chancellor's Selection Committee that it had not made a final choice.

The University committee, composed of students, faculty and non-academic employees presented the Board with a list of seven candidates in February. The committee was disbanded after making its recommendations.

Alternative '71 opening moved to forum area

"Satyricon '71," Thursday's opening act for Alternative '71, has been moved from the Old Main Mall to the free forum area northeast of the University Center.

Chancellor Robert G. Lauer said the move, first planed because he feared classes held in buildings near the Mall would destroy the trees and birds and by noise from the afternoon's activities, which includes an SIU Stage Band concert and a Forte dance, the move was backed by student concerns.

Lauer said the dedication of Old Main will be held at 3 p.m. Lauer said per- mission for an official dedication had not been requested.

Since the dedicated will be held at 3 p.m. Lauer said permission for an official dedication had not been requested.

The Board committee, which is headed by Ivan Elliott of Carmi, has in- terviewed 30 candidates, plus some of other persons who were recommended to the Board. Dr. Martin Van Brown of Carbondale and William Allen of Bloomington are also on the Board.

Elliott said the purpose of the day's meeting was to inform the committee what action had been taken on their recommendations.

Sources close to the Committee indicated that several persons recommended to the Board had asked to be withdrawn from consideration. No reasons were given for the request.

Elliott said after the meeting, which was closed to the public, that a series of events had made the selection a difficult process.

"Originally the chancellor served un- der the University president," Elliott said, but now he is a member of a six- man committee.

Elliott said the chancellor now has much more power.

He said that all constituencies on the campus will be consulted before a per- manent chancellor is named. He said the details of how this involvement would take place would probably be discussed by the Board at their meeting next week.

Elliott said that the Board is still seeking additional recommendations for the position. He advised that any recommendations should be forwarded to him at the Board of Trustees Office in Carbondale.

Committee sends annex bill to House

SPRINGFIELD - A bill that would require the SIU Board of Trustees to petition the City of Carbondale for an- nexation of the SIU campus was quickly shuttled through a state House of Representatives committee Wed- nesday, before a University delegation arrived at the committee hearing to op- pose the bill.

House Bill 1790, introduced April 22 by Rep. Gale Williams, R-Murphysboro, was given a unanimous "do pass" vote after a call for op- position received no answer.

There was indeed opposition to the bill, in the persons of C. Richard Gruny, Board of Trustees legal coun- sel, and States Attorney Richard Rich- man, representing the Jackson County Board of Supervisors. Due to a delay in transportation from Springfield's Capital Airport to the State House, Gruny and Richman arrived at the House County and Township Commis- sioner's hearing on the bill 15 minutes late, only to find Carbondale's delegation leaving the committee room. The bill had been called up, a call for opposition was made and the bill sent on to the House committee calendar all in a matter of about 30 seconds.

When Richman heard the news, he commented, "It's highly unfortunate." Gruny said that he had not expected this quick action, but added that he was not surprised, because of past hearings.

The annexation bill was originally assigned for consideration to the House Committee on Higher Education, but it was later reassigned to the County and Township Committee, of which

War bill killed in Ill. House committee

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — After a thunderous debate punctuated by cries of “right on” from spectators, Illinois legislative foes of the Vietnam war failed Wednesday to get a bill for a U.S. Supreme Court test of the constitutionality of the conflict onto the House floor.

Rep. Robert Mann, D-Chicago, chief sponsor of the measure, said the narrow 13-12 tie vote in the house executive committee, by which the bill failed, shows a switch in opinion on the war since last session when a similar bill got only four votes.

Two other states, Massachusetts and Minnesota, already have passed measures seeking a Supreme Court test of the war, which has been waged without a formal declaration from Congress. The court has refused to rule on the Massachusetts suit.

Mann said following the hearing, which resulted in the 13-12 deadlock, the "bill is still very much alive for this session."

"He said the bill might either be "resurrected" in committee or forced directly onto the floor.

The tension level in the packed committee room soared as Republican leaders who tried to treat the bill as partisan, realized the vote would be close. At one point, a motion to, in effect, kill the bill failed 12-11.

GOP strategists furiously sought to obtain voting proxies from absentee members.

The chief opponent of the measure, Majority Leader Henry J. Hyde, D-Chicago, delivered a high-volume denunciation of it, charging at one point, "If we pass this, the ACLU will be in Washington running the country."

Holding up a well-thumbed volume of the speeches of Henry Clay, he trump peted, "Let me tell you, it can't have state rights on one issue and not on another.

Mann objected that there is a "difference between asking for a constitutional test of the war and going in the schoolhouse door in Alabama."

"The sad stories of Leroy Lew and Jefferson Davis aren't here today to testify to that," Mann said.

At one point Hyde cut into the testimony of a witness in favor of the bill, Mrs. Sally Steinhoff of Elmhurst, whose son was killed in action in Vietnam.

"He was used to lure the enemy across the Cambodian border," Mrs. Steinhoff testified. "He was used as bait by our own officers. This is wrong. He was a good boy, really a good boy."

- Don't grow up - pledge 'mother to 140 men'

By Darrell Abler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

She's 47 years old and still doesn't know what to do when she grows up. She's a college professor who is mother to 140 men each year.

Add counselor, social worker, sorority advisor and Spanish Indian expert and student activist to the list.

And you've got the many roles played by Marjory 'Mom' Daily, housed on campus for the past 22 years at University of Illinois, Small Group Housing.

She is referred to as a "super-mother," "guru-in-residence" and "mom-the-great." Regardless of title, Mom Daily is best known for her laugh, her amicability and her willingness to give.

All three trademarks can easily be seen almost any hour of the day or night as Mom's open door policy finds her listening to a depressed fraternity officer, tutoring a nervous freshman, leading a sensitive group or quelling a rowdy study break.

Mom Daily is easy for her to understand student problems since she's a student herself. She received her bachelor's degree in sociology this June.

"I was working my children's way through college," Mom explains, "and I was determined, after I completed their requirements, that it was time to take care of me."

Mom Daily is almost completely gray now, has been a widow since 1968. She is a daughter of her own—a daughter who is a school teacher and a son who is a Marine captain. She former was a social worker, when she compiled over 2000 hours of suicide prevention training in the state.

With her degree not far off, Mom is still not sure what to do when she "grows up."

"The only thing I can say for certain is that I've never really not been up," she says. "I'm serious. Just look around you at the people that are grown up. Most of them are pretty faceless. Isn't that? Do they really enjoy life?"

"They even prey their funeral expectations. Don't all that's all the time!" Mom Daily continued to prove her point as she began to live. Her latest venture is pledging Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority. Mom Daily is a group who has its space colonized at SIU.

"We wouldn't find a fraternity that would take me," Mom retorts. "We came to SIU. I want a little "anti-Greek", but I found out that "anti-Greek" is just a cliché. We are human beings."

Mom firmly states that her pledging goal is a "flash in the pan." She's definitely going through with it.

"The sorority seems to be able to understand that I got to be me and what's more they seem to give me the opportunity to be me."

Mom sometimes operates under some pretty unorthodox methods, and she admits that her superiors are often left guessing.

"The goal is to makestudent group living a real experience in learning."

"There's a give and a take," she says, "We go more by feelings than rules. We only have rules or guidelines. The first is each man has to do his own thing as long as it doesn't interfere with anyone else. And the second is that it is the responsibility of every man not to interfere with anyone else."

"Sometimes people have wondered why I don't know when someone uses a little raw language. But anyone you don't really know, in communication, even if you put it under the microscope, when you start looking, there is really important has to be communicated you have to tear down that barrier."

"I want to know what people are thinking. It's difficult here at SIU to be informed because many of our courses are stratified. When you can use old lecture notes and term papers, the..."
Harrisburg radio pioneer told area 'Harding won'

By Pete Brown

University News Service

The source of a public station, for that forgettable race between Washington, D.C., and Boston, was the result of a little bit of history for anything by radio. It was the first time anyone heard heard radio.

The year was 1920, and there was WJZLO, located in a shack at Harrisburg. When Harrisburg High School radio station several years later was Harrisburg's first true radio pioneer, Joe Tate. Tate had gone on the air two years earlier, immediately after he was sent home from World War I. Tate's station was licensed in 1922 as WENR, the first one in Southern Illinois for a long time the only one.

At an April meeting of the Illinois Historical Society a bunch of the old and new world's leaders associated with WENR, talked about its long and vigorous life.

Joe was not there—he died two years ago at 83, still an active ham operator and Civil Defense broadcaster—but the Rev. L.L. Gallant was. He married Joe's daughter and spent a lot of time out at the old shack. That was because his fiancée did her courting there, it being the only place nearby with electricity. Joe said, would broadcast with his partner, Harrisburg (Chicago) H.J. Raley playing records and Moody's that time with a hand-tuned "Vocera."

At that time there were no strict frequency control regulations, the few fouls Tate on the air just that whenever they got tired or ran out of records to play Gallant said the common WJZLO sign-off, heard from time to time up to 40 miles away, by people with radios, was Tate's "Shut er down, Doc, let's go home."

The 1920 election breakthrough that was Joe's big break until 1922, the year Tate sold it to the Harrisburg National Bank. That was the year of the big tornado and WENR was the only Southern Illinois station sending news of it to the outside world. Tate's broadcasting was a news relief train down from Chicago. L.R. Taylor joined the station in 1922 and he's still its general manager. Harrisburg was launching there that year was to be said to be the longest running newspaper program on radio anywhere. The Baptist Hour still goes on at 7 o'clock every morning of the week, with area notices and a worship service. Taylor used to play every record in the station-owned 78s at the most—once a day.

Of course, there was plenty of live entertainment, too. A local bar owner and violin enthusiast sponsored "The Old Fiddler's Con tent" and gave baby chickens to the winners. Thirty-thousand chickens, they say WENR got reports on that program from as far away as a U.S. garrison in Guatamala Ray, Cuba. There was Eddie "Kitten on the Keys" Miller and his piano show, hosted by Taylor, who said he had been a music man in the revues himself. There was Patty Raley the Doc's little daughter who stood on a piano stool she could sing into the station microphone.

In its heyday WENR has seen its transmitting tower blown off the bank road, but never has it missed a broadcast of the Baptist Hour. Even when Harrisburg was cut off by the Big Flood of 1937.

Chaos results when kids attempt to reform France

By Thomas Munn
Copley News Service

PARIS—There is no joy in Paris to mark the third anniversary of France's student revolution. The future of higher education looked rosy three years ago. Now it looks red.

Aside from undermining President Charles de Gaulle, student unrest in May and June, 1968, gave youths virtual control of universities. In a wave of enthusiasm, aspiring revolutionaries told their stodgy elders how to remake society as well as education.

In three years, youth power has surprisingly grown. Students have established their own administration. Some educators fear that only Communist-youth is well-organized enough to pick up the pieces.

Last year, neither students nor the French government had anything to say about the state universities. They were run by professors under a senator's system.

The man in charge of each school is the provost, who has a benign beard, a list of students. Their work was to see to it that the government accorded them as equal voice with senior professors on an council governing the universities.

Instructors were also given seats on the councils for the first time. They often side with students in voting.

So youth has power at its fingers tips. Yet only a third of the students took the trouble to vote for consultation last January.

Furthermore, there was little organized opposition to candidates put up by the National Union of French students. Half of its national officers are Communists.

Thus by default, French youth has left schools in the hands of professors and young leftists. The nonvoting majority apparently decided that it lacked the time or qualification to remake the schools—let alone society.

"Put imagination in power" was one of the slogans of 1968 cutouts. "The trouble is," commented a recent issue of the business magazine Les Informatio, "every student imagines a different reform." Reformers have not agreed on much so far except to shake up school administration. Chaos remained.

French schools had hardly been moved when a year and a half after the revolution. An agreement had to be approved by the nation's hierarchy of professors, and put into effect for all universities at the same time.

To speed reform, the government allowed university councils to break up unwieldy universities into smaller governing units. Provincial universities were split into two, three or four.

The American University of Paris (200,000 students) has been divided into 13— an unlucky number even here. The government could pull no money out of a hat to pay for more administrative staffs, let alone build more classrooms or hire more teachers.

Three universities share a single building in the Latin quarter. Professors burn midnight oil doing clerical chores instead of preparing lectures or doing research.

The reformers said teachers and students should be free to join the university of their choice. Some universities ended up with an instructor for every 10 students, others with one for 300.

The 1968 rioters wanted to scrap dead subjects, and attend modern courses that prepared youth for 20th Century jobs. Study committees have not yet agreed on the ideal courses to prepare for these jobs.

The rioters forced the government to abolish entrance examinations. That cushioned middle-class students against competition, but only temporarily.

There are only so many good jobs. But the government is trying to help them be learning a job. Avoiding competition to get into a university means rougher competition afterward.

The universities may work in three more years because the Communists would require another uprising predicted a Paris law school dean, Georges Volet.

Competition for grants opens for grad study

The official opening of the 1973-73 competition for grants for graduate study and research in the creative and performing arts has been announced by the Institute of International Education in Washington, D.C.

It is expected that there will be some $2 million available for 1973-74, according to Frank Fiesle, campus Fulbright adviser.

Eligible are resident or nonresident graduate students and research grants authorized under the Fulbright-Hays Act.

Music student will give voice recital

By University News Services

Deanna DuComb, coloratura soprano, will present her senior voice recital at 8 p.m. May 17 in the Home Economics Auditorium, the School of Music.

A National Merit Scholar and SIU President's Scholar, Miss DuComb of Carlyle has been seen in the Marjory Lynn Opera Theatre's production of "Die Fledermaus" in the role of Adele. "The Magic Flute" as Queen of the Night.

In order to create more interest and encourage students and faculty members to take advantage of the Fulbright scholarship opportunity, a faculty Fulbright Committee has been established at SIU-Carbondale. The committee members, mostly former Fulbright scholars, are Walter Wells, agriculture; Carroll Reiley, anthropology; Henry Piper, English; D.L. Cofield, Foreign language; and Allan Lang, president's scholar program. The SFIC committee was appointed by John Anderson, Dean of Foreign Languages and Life Education, and member of the State Fulbright Committee.

May coverage shows who controls Obelisk

To the Daily Egyptian:
Regarding a photo-exception in the May 7 Daily Egyptian, it seems that the Obelisk’s sales are moving very slowly this year. As one who has served the 1971 Obelisk myself, I am able to shed some light as to the reason for the yearbook’s lack of salesability. This year’s Obelisk is indeed one of the most disgusting displays of administrative claptrap I have ever seen.

The coverage of the school’s closure in spring of 1970 was relegated to minor importance and seems to have been written by Deltry Morris himself. The historical occurrence of closing a major university was given a few lines in the 1971 Obelisk, while the Greeks, the athletic department and all the other incidental, everyday University activities comprised most of the book.

It is unfortunate that the “staff” of the Obelisk decided that the Greek existence of Pig Run was more important than the closing of a multi-million dollar university. But considering the amount of influence these student publications have in the running of this University, it would not have been surprising if mention of the closure of SU was neglected altogether in the yearbook.

Unless the Obelisk’s staff can show more student control and decision-making in future operations of the Obelisk, I will personally object to the Obelisk receiving any student activity fees whatsoever in the coming year.

Student Senate better than 1867 legislature

To the Daily Egyptian:
This is an open letter to Student Senate critics.

A spirit of innocent playfulness pervades that institution. The twenty-five senators are a very nice body of men. They have a free and easy way with them that is decidedly refreshing. In order to dispatch business as rapidly as possible, and save the State expense, they usually omit the useless ceremony of voting needlessly, and adjourn from six to ten of them have the floor, and all speak at once. Those who are not engaged in making speeches, usually enjoy their massive task of manufacturing paper balls and then throwing them at each other, or in occasionally varying the proceedings by hurling books at the Speaker’s or some other’s “head.” (Theodore Calvin Fess, The Story of Illinois, University of Chicago Press, 1960.)

No, people, this isn’t the weekly Hutchcraft account of Student Senate proceedings. This is a newspaper account of the Illinois State Senate of 1867.

Considering the salary of a Student Senator (none) and student support that the Student Senate has (none), I believe we fare quite well under such circumstances. It is better than our legislature of a hundred years ago.

Student advises Phillips on government in exile

To the Daily Egyptian:
This is in response to a letter written by Robert Phillips, who made an abortive bid at becoming president of student government.

I admire his tenacity in his attempt to usurp the reins of impotence. He is, however, misunderstood in his efforts at stirring up indifference. By calling him self the SU Provisional Revolutionary Government in Exile, he is only inviting building inspectors and agents to come snooping around.

The one worthwhile thing about being president of student league is that one gets money. Should Robert Phillips accept less just because he lost?

I hereby issue a plea that he use his high office to call a coalition of radicals, freaks, and blacks to be called “Young Conservatives for the American Way of Life.” With a name like that he could solicit money from those who have it as well as strike a telling blow for peace as it were. As chairman, he could, if officially endorse the bombing of children by presidents and so forth and this would be an amusingly the right that we are bombing children.

The possibilities are endless.

I would like to stress that I am writing in a strictly advisory capacity.

Student praises teacher for downgrading grades

To the Daily Egyptian:
The function of education has never been to free the mind and the spirit of man, but to bend them.

Grades are an integral element in this binding function. Grades are a game. There is no doubt that the present grading system is effective in training people to live by grades. It focuses students’ attention on academic success, measured by marks, and what the students retain after the final is irrelevant. The final is all important. We read textbooks after the final grades are in; there is no more bother course reading because it does not affect the final grade.

Do people need grades to learn how to drive, how to walk, or how to find their own way around a new city? I believe learning happens when students desire to increase their knowledge in order to fulfill certain needs. Why A’s and E’s? Students can learn without such grades. Students do not need to be graded to learn to dance or to play chess. etc. If students feel the need to learn some math, they can learn without being graded A-E.

Suppose a person goes to college and desires to be an engineer or a high school teacher, does he think grades will get him what he wants? Did you ever think grades may turn students off? How said it is “Students are grade junkies—men who they would never learn without A’s and E’s. Grades have prevented learners from growing up. The students are continually tempted with lodestones and threatened with spankings.

Would it be great to be free to learn without penalties and threats, without having to play a competitive game for A’s and E’s? It sounds like a great system, but perhaps you are convinced that the vital, inextinguishable study students assume that grades are still necessary to screen people for various kinds of work. But think about it, I really believe that the best way to determine someone’s qualifications is to grade him A, B, C, D, E in everything he studies for sixteen years of school?

Thank God for Steve Kenville. He is a modern advocate of the abolishment of grades to be replaced by a more qualitative, extensive evaluation of the entire learning-adaptation of education. I am glad that he is my instructor for Educational Administration and Foundations 355. Philosophy of Education.

Fund nurtures birth control acceptance

By John Beder
Coplay News Service

When Dr. Clarence J. Gamble set up his first birth control clinic in the 1920s, the words "birth control" were taboo in most parts of the world. Newspapers were quick to label them like the plague. Politicians closed their eyes to the subject. Some governments called it illegal. There were parts of the United States where advocating birth control could land you in jail.

These attitudes have continued in many places until recent years.

Attitudes are changing in many parts of the world because of the possibly disastrous effects of the population boom.

Evidence of the changed climate toward birth control in the worldwide acceptability of the organization which Dr. Gamble founded to spread the birth control story—the Pathfinder Fund.

This little known organization has its headquarters in the Boston suburb of Chestnut Hill, where modest offices give little hint of the worldwide scope of its work. Pathfinder has established family planning programs from Peru to the Philippines, from Dakar to Djakarta.

A friend and associate of the famous Margaret Sanger and Dr. Robert L. Dickinson, both of whom were birth control pioneers, Dr. Gamble helped to start up clinics in the 1920s and 1930s. He helped to start a late sponsored contraceptive program in North Carolina and aided in establishing family planning clinics in 40 American cities.

Mission covers 30 nations

He began introducing birth control concepts to underdeveloped countries in the late 1940s and started the Pathfinder Fund in 1958, its mission being "to find effective new ways of solving the world's population problem and then helping to apply these new methods in programs around the world.

At the moment, Pathfinder is conducting or assisting with more than 200 family planning projects in some 80 different nations. Some were actions for birth control help. In others, a receptive climate had to be developed.

Efforts are primarily biologic and educational.

Today's special—U.S. dollars!

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Woe, woe, woe! Another crisis in international monetary circles. Nobody wants to buy our dollars. Not the Germans, the Swiss, the Dutch—no anybody. Suddenly, our dollars are a glut on the market.

Worse still is the panic that one New York banking house is reportedly trying to sell its dollars for 65 cents each—or two for a dollar—with very few takers.

The dollar had clearly lost its consumer appeal. Most experts blame the Vietnam war. Maybe so. But what about the product itself?

You go up to a German financier or a Swiss banker on the street these days and ask, "Hey, there, fellow, want to buy a dollar?" Right away, he wants to examine one.

And what have you got to offer? A little grey-green rectangle of paper. On one side there's a picture of a grim visaged, long haired gentleman with a sore throat. On the other is a funny looking pyramid and a spade. The pyramid is inscribed with the legend "IN GOD WE TRUST."

Naturally, your prospective customer's going to think you're some kind of religious nut.

The immediate answer, of course, is to put American dollars to work. If you try an American, he'll be good at it, pushing useless merchandise.

The first step in any such marketing campaign is to redesign the product. The dollar must not only be made larger to compete with foreign currencies, but it must be printed in full color, not the once monochrome print or a reproduction of "September Morn" might prove appealing—either suitable for framing. To put the growing youth market, the other side might display a portrait of Che Guevara raising a clenched fist.

For the sake of planned obsolescence, the design should be changed monthly, enabling merchants to advertise: "Get Your New June Dollars—On Sale Here"

Premiums are essential. Trading stamps, free postholders and one cent sales would go a long way to making the dollar more palatable. Such things as the dollar must bear a legend, it should read in bold letters "GOOD FOR TEN CENT'S OFF."

Coupled with a worldwide advertising campaign for the "All-New, Bigger, More Exciting Dollar," demand should soar. But, obviously, this is a merely a short-term solution. Eventually customers are going to ask, "What's new in this anyway?"

The answer will be difficult. We can only explain that our paper dollars are backed up by gold, a soft, yellow metal handy for filling teeth, if little else.

To make our intrinsically worthless dollars valuable, we'll explain, we dig up basically useless gold and rebury it in places like Fort Knox. Unfortunately, we must admit, we can't give anyone useless gold for their worthless dollars any more because we don't have enough useless gold left.

And you think we have a crisis now?

The only long range solution, then, is a modest proposal first suggested here several years ago—convert our economy from the Gold Standard to the Pistachio Ice Cream Standard.

Almost the same thing, except we cream. Figgled at 35 cents a quart, it would restore confidence in the dollar. Nations could eat happily on their frozen assets forever. And when hard times come, the people could avoid themselves of the national wealth and eat it.

Meanwhile, fellow Americans, keep the faith! It's the only thing your money's got going for it.

Sometimes diplomatic, too, making the necessary political contacts that enable family planning to find a berth in the market, for instance, the organization is working with a remote tribe to learn how family planning programs are accepted or rejected in different cultures. It has set up clinics in Indonesia and is now preparing a population education program there.

It distributes contraceptives in Haiti and Brazil and has helped an Italian family to operate a pioneering birth control clinic almost within the shadows of the Vatican. Work in Italy will become much easier now, thanks to a recent decision of the Italian Supreme Court legalizing the distribution of birth control literature.

Some funds go to Pathfinder.

All this work is done on a modest budget of about $2 million a year. Money comes from individuals, foundations and U.S. government grants. Congress gave the Agency for International Development about $75 million last year for birth control research and programs overseas. Some of this money was funneled through agencies such as Pathfinder

Much of its work is in the research and development of contraceptives that are inexpensive, easy to use and acceptable by people everywhere. Demographers agree that a meaningful attack on the population explosion still awaits dramatic breakthroughs in birth control methods—new concepts in contraceptive technology.

The educational effort is still as important as the biological in birth control programs. Millions of people must still be reached by radio, newspapers, lectures, billboards and other means to take the importance of population control and what it means to the well-being of families, nations and the world community.

Prejudices and superstition must be battled, too. The doctors of Pathfinder's nursing service must still be trained in contraceptive techniques. Thousands of clinics must be set up.

Philippines show trend

The need for organizations such as Pathfinder is reflected in the state of the union message which Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos made to his countrymen last year. "With a soaring birth rate," he said, "the prospects for a continued economic development are considerably diminished. Indeed, there is a possibility that we may not be able to develop what we have carefully built up over the years may be canceled by a continued population explosion. I have therefore made it a policy of my administration to check the population growth and even bring it down to a level consistent with the country's economic capability.

A large part of the population in the Philippines is Roman Catholic.

Former Prime Minister Lester Pearson headed a population study commission financed by the World Bank. In its final report, the commission emphasized the need to reduce the excessive rate of population growth, especially in those countries where, it said, "the high rate of increase is being swept away by a tidal wave of unwanted births.

Pathfinder Fund is one of the agencies fighting an eleven hour battle to stem this surging tide.
Court decision stirs activity
Death row alive with typewriters

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — The sound of pounding typewriters echoed through San Quentin's death row as inmates start preparing new appeals, hoping to keep alive following the U.S. Supreme Court ruling supporting the death penalty.

Nearly all the 45 men on the nation's most populous death row expected the court to affirm the death penalty as it did last week.

"There is a tendency to put the thought of death out of your mind," said Robert Douglas Hill, untermitten of death for murder. "And a lot of us really haven't thought about it for a long time. But you have to get used to it.

Hill, a 27-year-old former salesman, was convicted in Los "Talley Ho" picnic slated for Sunday

The annual SIU School of Communications picnic, entitled "Talley Ho," will be held Sunday at pavilion three at Grant City State Park. Supper Joe sandwiches and baked beans will be served from noon p.m., with a rock band entertaining afterward the meal.

Tickets for the picnic are $1 and are on sale at the Communications Lounge and each departmental office in the School of Communications.

State can't afford higher ed needs

SPRINGFIELD II (AP) - Gov. Richard J. Ogilvie, speaking at a luncheon of the Illinois Broadcasters Association, defended his suggestions to increase the state's educational support and higher education needs.

Ogilvie said he is not interested in a tax increase on Illinoisans until he is convinced the state has adequate support for higher education.

On another subject, Ogilvie said that his state's environmental protection policies had been carried to extremes that might ruin the economy.

"We could shut down all waterways and we could halt all manufacturing that contributes to air pollution," Ogilvie said. "Then we would have clean air and water, but nobody could live here except for a few hunters and fishermen. We must have reasonable and balanced objectives."

Funny films needed

Woody Allen knocks comedies

Hollywood (AP) - Woody Allen continues to change direction.

"I'd like to see a return to the funny films that Hollywood made in the early part of its history, used the comic. The silent era was the heyday, with such classic comedians as Harry Langdon, Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin."

"They were funny, clever and good work especially by the Marx Brothers, who are my particular favorite. Bob Hope did some very funny pictures, and so has Jerry Lewis. But Bob Hope's routines have tapered off since they have come almost too predictable. Oh, there are still comedies - M-A-S-H, for example. But they are mostly situation comedies, not ones with great comedians."

Woody Allen is doing what he can to help the situation. A woman ago, he wrote, directed and starred in "Take the Money and Run," which was well received by critics and audiences.

"Now he is doing the same triple duty with "Bananas," a wild parody about a Latin republic. It is likely to cause trouble with screen comedy, he said, was the death of comedians."

"Comedy is hard to do," said Allen. "I think there are performers who can become great comics if they set their minds to it. Peter Sellers, for example, was on the borderline between being an actor and a comic, and he went in the actor direction probably because that interested him more."

"Lest we all think comedians are in aappy, I want to say that I do not believe there is not a clown in comedy, as the silent era was."

Woody Allen was one of a recent generation of comedy performers who rose from the smoky clubs of S.I.U.

SU assets increase to $11 million

By University News Services

Assets of the S.U. Foundation have risen more than a million dollars during the past year, according to the spring report of Robert Gallegher, Foundation treasurer.

As of May 31, the assets totaled $10,390,000, a 9% increase for the 12-month period of 1967. Total assets included $9,181,208 in plant funds, as well as current funds of $208,200, loan funds of $147,405 and endowment funds of $771,806.

Among the assets are securities intimate clubs in New York and San Francisco. Among others are Mort Sahl, Louie Bocce, Mike Nichols, Elaine May, Bob Newhart, Shelley Berman. Such night clubs are now closed, and Allen, doesn't know where the next batch of comics will be spawned. Not in television.

"You never see the best of a comedian's work on TV," he observed. "You have to search through all your material to find what's left, watered down, routine something that's still effective, and you must be careful when working in television, lest you destroy your material."

11 attend YVP rally; Rap campus apathy

What was to have been a rally of the Young Voters for Peace (YVP) Wednesday afternoon, turned out instead to be a discussion of the in-depth war and the apathy on SU’s campus.

At the peak of the discussion, which was held in Brown Auditorium 11 percent were present.

Paul A. Schipp, visiting professor of philosophy, and John McCaffrey, student body vice president, had been scheduled to address the gathering.

Schipp expressed deep disappointment that he had received only six "peace-candidate" coupons.

The YVP has sponsored a Daily Egyptian advertisement which included a coupon by which young voters could pledge themselves to support only peace candidates in the 1972 election. The coupons were then to be mailed to Schipp at the Philosophy department through campus mail. The advertisement began Tuesday and will run until Friday.

Several persons said students were not signing the coupon because they could not see the value of doing so.

Others, including McCaffrey and Bruce Peterson, assistant professor of sociology, said such an attitude is self-defeating and the defeat of the superhuman transport by the U.S. Senate is proof that such grass roots efforts are effective.

Tentative plans were made to set up a YVP booth at the opening of Alternative ‘71 Thursday.

Gilbert said the amount represents the total federal share of $53,321 of the costs.

The money is released to the Illinois Department of Public Health from the Federal Hospital Construction Trust Fund in the General was appropriated by the 1970 General Assembly for use by the department.

SGAC wants volunteers for 8 committees

The Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) expressed a desire Wednesday for volunteers to do committee work and help program activities for next year.

Tom Kelley, chairman of the Cultural Affairs Committee, said SGAC needs people willing to work with "a good amount of dedication."

Kelley said the volunteers are needed because several of the committees have had very few members this year and as a result the chairmen have done most of the work.

SGAC committees with openings include Cultural Affairs, Free School, Parents and Alumni Relations, University Center Programming, Films, International Relations, New Student Orientation and Homecoming.

Persons wishing to volunteer should apply at the Student Government Office in the University Center.

Business council sets honors for students, faculty

The Business Student Council's "Parade of Honors," an annual awards night for students and faculty in the School of Business, will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in University Center Bilroom A.

Twenty-three awards and scholarships will be given to undergraduates in the various departments, according to Barbara Liles, vice president of the council. There will be eight awards given to faculty members for such categories as the sharpest dresser, the friendliest instructor and the instructor with the most subjective "objective" exam, she said.

Miss Liles said the the names of the award recipients will not be known until the night of presentation. Clubs in the business school also will be giving out awards to outstanding members and the students most likely to succeed will be acknowledged that night, Miss Liles said.

A faculty skit and a student skit will provide entertainment.

Guest speaker for the event will be Charles Rinderman, dean of the School of Business. Miss Liles said that the event is open to all students and faculty in the School of Business.

Police director says IBI will survive criticism

MATTISON (AP) - Herbert Brown, director of the Illinois Law Enforcement Department said Wednesday he does not believe the Illinois General Assembly will pass proposals abolishing the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

Brown told newsmen that the new media were "irresponsible" in reporting the IBl raids last month in Bloomington. He said that newsmen were not invited to go on the raids but were allowed to watch after they arrived.

Brown said there is no way to predict what will occur on such raids. He also said if criminals had been present at the Dec. 4, 1968 raid in which two Black Panther leaders were killed, State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan of Cook County would not be under grand jury investigation.

There were reports in Chicago newspapers that the special grand jury investigating the Chicago raid planned to indict Hanrahan.

Brown, whose agency oversees the IBI, said there has been a 400 per cent increase in the confiscation of narcotics since the IBI was formed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last crew developing an American supersonic transport plane was revising its Odyssey plans Wednesday when the House executive branch of the Appropriations Committee voted for the first time to fund the SST "in the current national interest." The House had been split on the issue since 1972.

The House Appropriations Committee voted 222-190 to fund the SST in the current national interest. The vote came after a lengthy debate on the issue.

The vote was a significant victory for the SST program, which has been controversial due to its high cost and uncertain future.

The SST, which would have been the first supersonic commercial jet, was originally envisioned as a way to connect America to other countries in just a few hours. However, the program has faced numerous challenges, including cost overruns and technological issues.

Despite these challenges, the SST program has received support from some lawmakers who argue that it would boost the U.S. economy and enhance national security.

The House Appropriations Committee's decision to fund the SST is a significant milestone for the program, but it remains to be seen whether it will receive the necessary funding to continue.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is set to vote on the SST issue in the coming weeks, and the final decision will likely depend on a variety of factors.

In the meantime, the SST program will continue to be reviewed and evaluated, and the results will likely determine its future.
Agnew leaves Illinois lawmakers distressed over antiwar remarks

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Spiro T. Agnew left Illinois lawmakers with memories of the Vietnam War on his mind Wednesday when he expressed a personal disagreement with the president over the administration’s policy of sending troops to Vietnam.

The vice president, in a statement to the Illinois legislature, said he had been “very disappointed” with the way the administration had handled the war.

U.S. pilots bomb enemy anti-aircraft

SARGOD (AP) — The U.S. Command announced Wednesday that American pilots had knocked out 120 anti-aircraft guns in North Vietnam in less than an hour.

The strike was one of the highest in the Indo-China war for a single action against North Vietnam’s underground defenses. It was credited to five U.S. F-4 Phantom fighter-bombers.

The U.S. Command said the Phantoms attacked the gun sites Monday after coming under North Vietnamese anti-aircraft fire while on a bombing mission over Laos. The attackers centered around Mu Gi, 70 miles deep into North Vietnam.

The command said all the U.S. planes escaped unscathed.

Peace actions slowed by apathy

Tom Dempsey, chairman of the Southern Illinois Peace Conference (SIPC), said fear and intimidation had deterred many from participating in the peace movement in recent years.

Young people have been tremendously interested in the last 12 months, deputy said. According to Dempsey, this feeling of apathy is coupled with hopelessness that has caused students to become less active than before.

Dempsey spoke as part of a four-man panel at a meeting of the International Relations Club. Tuesday evening attended the meeting.

Other panel members included Alvin Foster, pastor at the Lutheran Center in Carbondale, and Richard Johnson and Richard Schumacher from the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW).

Dennis Schumacher told the group that the meeting had a common goal and that the meeting had been more successful than the group hoped.

Our biggest problem with the current movement is that we just can't give a damn," he said.

Schumacher also said that the various groups represented at the meeting had a common goal and that this goal would be reached more quickly if the groups "used as many means as possible to obtain it.

Former president of Peru to speak

Fernando Belaunde-Terry, former president of Peru, will speak on "Latin America's Response to the 1976's" Wednesday, in Davis Auditorium, of Wham Education Building.

As constitutional president of Peru from 1962 to 1968, Belaunde's administration was characterized by economic growth, from the press and the promotion of economic development.

After a military group seized power in 1968, Belaunde taught at Harvard and Columbia and is currently on the faculty of the American University in Washington, D.C.

Belaunde attended the University of Miami and obtained his degree in architecture at the University of Texas in 1920, with post-graduate work and an honorary doctor's degree from universities in Lima.

Until 1961, he was professor of city planning and housing, and dean of the faculty of architecture at the National University of Engineering in Lima.

He has written two books, "Perry's Own Companion" and "Perry, Town by Town," and was founder and former director of a journal on Peruvian architecture.

The Latin American Institute, the International Relations Club and the Latin American Student Organization will sponsor the lecture in cooperation with the University of Miami.

Postal service revamping may retire thousands early

WASHINGTON (AP) - Postmaster General, William Bolson, discussed Wednesday a sweeping reorganization of the U.S. Postal Service that would centralize operations in Washington, D.C., and reduce the chain of command.

The reorganization plan, which takes full effect July 1, streamlines the service by reducing its regional postal headquarters and realigning the chain of authority between Washington and the local postmaster.

A spokesman for the Postal Service said the number of management personnel who will be affected by the reorganization is impossible to tell at this time. He said none of the 640,000 postal employees represented by unions would be re- moved from its staff.

The new regional headquarters will be in New York City, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, Chicago, and San Francisco. Eliminated will be 15 regional postal headquarters in Boston, Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Wilkes Barre, Minneapolis, Dallas, Denver and Seattle.

Honors group seeks students undergraduates who have completed 36 hours in history with at least a 3.5 average and must have at least a 4.0 overall grade point average.

Free school director wants ideas on open flea market

Paul Costello, director of SU's Free School, is seeking ideas for a proposed open flea market for Carbondale.

The flea market would offer community residents and students a chance to sell products of art and antiques

He said he is seeking additional comments and ideas on the market from any interested persons.

Costello said he has already received several letters, including one from the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber responded favorably to the idea, Costello said, but they suggested a permanent site not be built until the market proves successful.

Tentative plans are to provide a permanent area for the flea market, such as a grade school, and staff it with volunteers.

This would be under the board of governors, which would establish rules for buying and selling merchandise. The Student Volunteer Corps, run by Mrs. Sharon Huy, advisor, would be in charge of student activity, are discussing setting up the market.

Persons with ideas about the flea market would contact Costello or Mrs. Huy in the activities office on the second floor of the University Center.

Duar chosen as top U.S. doctor

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration has chosen Dr. Roger D. Engeberg as the nation's No. 1 doctor, informed sources said Thursday.

nounce Duar's nomination as

Pakistan on brink of economic ruin

DACCA, East Pakistan (AP) - A civil war of staggering brutality and hatred has left the 15-year-old nation of Pakistan on the brink of economic and political ruin.

Pakistan, though broke, is expending more than $2 million daily to support the army that shelled and machine-gunned this province of 75 million into submissive servitude.

It is estimated that deaths since the war started March 26 number more than the 400,000 killed by nature in last November's cyclone.

This time, each death means a family's lasting hunger.

Bailing out is indiscriminate.

Bengalis went on a separate East Pakistani nation slaughtered many of the six million non-Bengalis. When the army moved in, it settled the score, adding to non-Bengalis seeking revenge.

The resultant fighting brought damage reminiscent of World War II.

Lanes to industry and to commerce between the two wings of Pakistan are inedicaliable. So are the effects of slashed development. The $3 mills that turn out jute, East Pakistan's chief money-maker, are working at 15-16 per cent of capacity.

Reporters touring East Pakistan found that millions face starvation from famine and from bailed relief distribution.

Politically, the problems are as great. Bangladesh stood 187 at 148 National Assembly seats to Sheikh Muhammad Rahman's Awami League in December. He is now jailed, the party is banned and no one has any idea what happens next.

President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, who went back to the West after talks with Majap on restoring civilian rule collapsed in Dacca, maintains he wants diplomats to take back the government.

Confidence is shattered among Bangladesh West Pakistanians and indian migrants who settled here at partition in 1947.

City services may be in revised handbook

Services Carolinea offers its residents, recreational facilities of the area and off-campus housing facilities, were discussed Tuesday by a handbook revision committee under the direction of Tom Kachel, chairman of the committee. According to Kachel, the purpose of this committee is to supplement and explain the policies and procedures presented in the student handbook. And to go beyond and talk about areas outside the university—all facilities specifically used by the students.

The present handbook deals with these areas, but the committee feels that it does not go into enough depth. Carolinea offers many services to its student residents, as Kachel does not know about, said Kachel.

The new handbook could add students of these services and point out where to find them.

Speech majors to consider proposed operating papers

SU’s Department of Speech will hold a meeting for all its undergraduate majors from 2 to 3 p.m. May 18 in the University Theater to consider the committee’s proposed operating papers.

Lyle Hamilton, instructor in the Speech Department, will also talk about educational and public relations majors who are encouraged to attend the information session.

Hamilton said the operating papers have been approved by the faculty and graduate students and must be approved by the undergraduate majors before the policies are put into effect.

Undergraduate students will vote on the papers at a meeting in the Department of Speech. Hamilton said copies of the working papers are available in the Speech Department office and will be available each month in the information session.

Hamilton said Speech Department members who are both opposed and in favor of the working papers will be at Friday’s meeting to answer questions.

Murphysboro man fighting gun law

By Keith Davis

Student Writer

A Murphysboro chiropractor is waging a personal battle against the 1967 Illinois gun registration law.

Walter G. Amerman, 512 N. 1st St., was arrested last May 30 for violating the Firearm Owners Identification Act of 1967. He was found guilty on July 22 in Jackson County Court and fined $80 plus court costs.

He was arrested for possessing a German Mauser that he had taken from a German officer during World War II. Amerman went to court that he is thoroughly trained in the use of firearms, having served four years in an infantry officer in World War II.

He said he kept the gun in his home for the protection of himself and his family.

Amerman felt so strongly that the law is wrong that he decided to make his case a test of it.

His case is now pending before the Illinois Supreme Court.

Amerman said that the present law requires the people of Illinois to register their guns in an ineffective way. He added that it has no "teeth" in it. He said that the present gun law registers the names of people who possess guns in their homes, but not the registration numbers of the guns themselves. Without numbers police would have great difficulty in solving a crime, he believes.

He said that the 1967 Illinois gun law was designed specifically to raise revenue for the state and was not to protect law abiding citizens from criminals. He said that "criminals will obviously not register their names to the state as gun owners, but honest private citizens will."

Amerman said that in Germany, prior to World War II, lists of names of private citizens were used to disarm the people. Amerman said that a totalitarian government ever come into being in the United States, lists of names of all private citizens who owned weapons would be useful in gaining control over the citizenry.

The law is unconstitutional because it assumes a special levy on firearm owners, a selected group, and this is an abridgement of the tax uniformity clause in the Illinois Constitution. Amerman said Amerman said that he has a certain feeling of fear in knowing that he, as a private citizen, could have his name on a list that shows him to be a gun owner. He said that there is a certain safety in anonymity.

He said that "if we are to have a gun law it should be designed like that of England, where a stiff sentence is provided for mere possession of a weapon during a crime - making it unlikely that a criminal would want to use a gun in an act of crime."

Amerman has been a resident of Murphysboro for 28 years. He is being supported in his anti-gun registration fight by the House of Representatives by State Rep. Gale Williams. R-Murphysboro. Williams has said he does not encourage Amerman to make the test because of the expense involved.

Don Mitchell of the Murphysboro law firm of Mitchell and Branden is representing Amerman in the case.

Rescue at mudslide

Onset of the two men trapped in a 15-foot ditch after a mudslide at Rosanne Trailer Park is reflected on their faces during rescue. At left, Tom Gilkeson is helped by Carbondale Fire Department members. Above, Glenn Lee is hoisted by a rope. Firemen were assisted by State Police city employees and several residents of the trailer park. The Tuesday slide burned Lee under about six feet of dirt, Gilkeson's feet deeper. According to reports from Doctors Hospital, Gilkeson and Lee are in good condition. (Photos by Nelson G. Brooks)

Koch: no surprise at Battle of Bulge

By University News Services

History calls World War II's Battle of Bulge the last German offensive on the Western Front (December 1944-January 1945), during which Germans under von Rundstedt in a surprise attack, broke through the American front in the Belgian Ardennes, creating a bulge in Allied lines.

Robert G. Hooks, doctoral student at SIU, who worked with Koch for three years, editing and rewriting manuscripts and compiling the book, said one chapter, "Fog of War," should prove beyond reasonable doubt that even though the higher command ignored reports, the Third Army intelligence staff not only knew of the German buildup in the Ardennes but detailed it in published intelligence reports and predicted the coming offensive that became known as the Battle of the Bulge.

The 480-page hard-bound volume is scheduled for publication October by the Army Times Publishing Co., Washington, D.C. Koch, who lived to see the book finished, and his wife resided in Carbondale for several years prior to his death, died in 1955. Koch, a Carbondale native returns in "U.S. Intelligence for Patton." Koch, a native of White County, said that when he and Gen. Koch began comparing the book in 1967, he soon learned Koch had been working under two handicaps. Koch had deep and lasting respect and adoration for Gen. Patton and Koch's own modesty.

Because of the first, Hooks said "General Koch was reluctant to stress the Patton item as being his because of the old man's many negative comments about himself. Because of the second, he had limited use of information that Koch had his own remarkable research experience.

Koch had served with Patton at Fort Riley, Kan., in the peaceful years preceding World War II, and was called by Patton to be his chief intelligence officer for the remainder of the war. Following the conflict, Koch organized and directed the first peace-time combat intelligence school in the history of the U.S. Army.

The book contains a prologue and 13 chapters. Two chapters tell of Patton's invasion of Africa, the advance intelligence planning, and of the part intelligence played in Pat- ton's actions against Rommel's forces in North Africa. Two others describe the planning for the Sicily invasion, even before the North African campaign was ended, and the drive across Sicily.

Those chapters describe planning in England for the cross-channel invasion and the Third Army strike across France, which led up to chapters on the Battle of the Bulge. Other segments take up the German surrender, the makeup of men on Patton's intelligence staff, summation of combat in intelligence methods and techniques developed during World War II and a portrait of Patton, "that colorful and controversial American general as I knew him."

Hooks, whose doctoral work is in government and journalism, obtained his bachelor's degree from SIU in 1961. After U.S. Army service he reported for the Granite City News for 1962. Later returned to the University to work for SIU News Bureau. He edited the periodical, SIU Alumni, 1966 to 1970. Before resigning to study and write.

Hill's 2 mile win was 'the clincher.'

"The two mile was the clincher," said Hill's trainer, Lew Hartung. Freshman Dave Hill upset Illinois pointer Black Creek in the two-mile run in 3:06.2.

The win put the Salukis ahead in the running score with two events to go. Illinois will meet Indiana in a meet tonight in Memorial Stadium.

Hartung said he was pleased.

"I thought the Salukis were the best," said Hartung. "I thought the Illinois distance man from Canada has maintained his lead if there were another mile."

"Dave runs the three as well as the two," said Hartung. "He will be one of the greatest three-and-six milers as well as a great miler."

"He's still young so he doesn't press the people in the middle of the event like he should." Hartung said.

Hartung was also pleased with Hill's performance in the mile where Illinois' Horace Woodcock led the meet, and scored record in 3:48.2.

This is one of the finest under ever run.

Hill's second place of 4:01 is a career record for him. It also would have placed him third in the mile.

"That second place of Hill was a disappointment to me," said Hartung.

"I have made plans and put a strategy in the first place, the event Southernners swept all three places for points.

Tennis tourney here this weekend, conference crown to be awarded

By Ernie Schulew

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

What do Marv Gray, Don McNarma, John Wren and Dwayne Kubz all have in common?

Firstly, they are all coaches in the Midwesten Conference. But more significant is that all they have agreed that when the conference tennis championship opens, SIU will be heavily favored.

The conference meet opens at the SIU courts at 9 a.m. Friday and according to Indiana State net coach Kubz, "I think we will all have to play catch up with Southern, but there may be some spots where the rest of the conference will be able to pick them off."

One of those spots Kubz is referring to might be at the top two singles where Jorge Ramirez will be challenged by Tim Gillikson and Graham Smock will take on Gillikson's twin brother Tim.

Tim Gillikson defeated Ramirez early in the season as part of the Sabot 7-2 victory over the Huskies, while Tom defeated Graham Smock.

The only SIU player outside of the Gillikson's that could develop into a threat would be Herb Nold, who according to NU's coach John Wren is playing much better than he did earlier in the season." Nold plays at No. 1 singles and has a 4-7 record.

The Gillikson's also team up to give NU a solid shot at the No. 1 doubles championship. The Huskies have a 15-3 record while Ramirez and Graham Smock's (SIU No. 1 squad, are 11-1.

Depending on the draw, the No. 1 and 2 doubles competition could turn out to be a hard fought affair especially with both State's No. 1 team of Kevin Clarkowski and Stan Malless can compete with the rest of the conference.

"We felt," said Ball State sports information director Earl Vestingmeier, "that these two guys (Clarkowski and Malless) can compete with the rest of the conference."

The Cardinals' No. 2 doubles team record is 12-4 while their No. 1 team of Sam Penden and Dick Muenster is 7-4. Ball State's coach Gray disspelled any thought of moving the two around because, "I have an ethical obligation to keep them there. We have been playing the other conference schools with them there, plus the other boys have a little more experience at No. 1."

Penden plays No. 3 singles and has a 12-4 mark which is the best on the Ball State squad.

Unfortunately for the Cardinal's Muenster (11-7) and Penden are the only two players that are over the 500 mark in total wins. Clarkowski is sporting an 8-4 singles mark, while Dave Fleeman is 3-12 and Bob Brexler is 3-13.

"We are hoping that our two doubles and three singles can score," said Gray. "But our biggest problem is depth.

"For instance, on paper Indiana State looks good, but where they kill us is on the depth," Gray said.

Indiana State has a 13-6 record with a tough loss finish in the Huskie Invitational at Northern on April 30. Ball State's record is 14-5 and Indiana State squad is competing in the event. The Huskies tied Notre Dame for the top spot.

The Symmetry will be No. 4 singles man Mike Cudahy who has the best record in the conference. While Penden won twice in 22 starts and Max Pukorkey at 14-7.

At Illinois, State, it has not been a very good season for tennis. After the death of coach Eugene Hill the Red Birds accumulated an 7-11 record for new coach McNarma.

John Nolan, who plays at the No. 4 slot, is the second best record on the squad at 13-4 while No. 6 man Mark Suter leads the pack with a 15-4.

"This is where our main strength lies," said McNarma. "When we won, we won at these and the third and the doubles -- doubles."

At the third doubles slot is one of the biggest things that ever happened to Illinois State tennis, his name is Ron Longer and he stands 6-11.

"We might not have the best tennis team at the meet," quipped sports reporter Dave Evers, "but we will have the tallest player."

Evers puts his height to good use as the Illinois State duo is also playing for Will Robinson's basketball team.

Illinois State has lost to Ball State and Indiana State by identical scores of 5-4.
