Billions-dollar atom smasher to Texas

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Texas will be the home of the world's largest atom smasher. Energy Secretary John Herrington announced Thursday, but the choice for the superconducting supercollider project was soured by money questions and claims of political favoritism.

Formally called the superconducting supercollider, the atom smasher, when built, will be the largest and most expensive scientific device. President Reagan set off a scramble by job-hungry states in early 1987 when he gave his go-ahead to the project. One of Reagan's final acts before leaving officeJan. 30 may be formal designation of the site. He is expected to ratify Herrington's choice — from most corners of Illinois Thursday was swift and bitter with many crying political foul. U.S. Rep. Robert Michel of Peoria, the House Republican leader, said he would ask President Reagan to personally review the decision, calling it a "slap in the face.

Area veterans look at war experiences

Men don't regret serving in military

By John Wallday

Many veterans who served this country, in peace or at war, are reminded today of the time they spent in uniform. Most remember proudly and have no regrets despite how ugly it may have been, though some wish things would have turned out differently than they did.

Four wars.

Four men.

Four experiences.

At 93, John J. Wright, professor emeritus of history, has trouble recalling some of the particulars of being a soldier during World War I. "They declared war, so I signed up. Funny thing, I thought I joined the Army but they put me in the state militia," Wright said.

Wright was a student here in 1917 when he was called from the classroom because of a racial riot in St. Louis. Soon after, the 33rd Infantry, the National Guard, took over the militia, and Wright found himself in what he described as the "ranks."

After the state-side training Wright and the 130th Infantry, Regiment of the 33rd Illinois Division, located in Carbondale, were sent to join the war in France.

Wright said after fighting with British forces against the Germans near Luxembourg, his group was separated from its unit and faced the most important offensive of the war's end — The Battle of the Meuse-Argonne.

The Meuse-Argonne was the blow the American forces struck that decided the fall of the German forces in World War I.

"We went up over the top of the trench there several times against the Germans. We gave them a go, they retreated and we followed them for a while," Wright said.

Wright was wounded on the last day of the war by a mustard-gas shell as he said eight other men were walking above a trenchline.

The mustard-gas oily liquid landed on the men causing skin burns and irritation. "By golly that shell hit and knocked us down into that trench. One man got killed and another died later," Wright said.

Wright returned from the war after recovering from mustard-gas burns to his face, arms and lungs — he had been away almost two years. The University hired him in 1925, and he retired in 1963.

Wright laughs about it now, "I was proud to go, but later on we saw how foolish we were. We should have waited to get drafted."

Paul Towson, who retired from University Housing in 1979, was captured in The Battle of the Bulge in World War II.

He was captured as a second lieutenant in the Army's 106th Infantry Division after only five days of combat.

"We were surrounded and mustered out," Towson said.

Receipient grateful for blood donors

By Phyllis Coon

More than 100 donated units of blood have helped to keep one University student's life going round.

"If that blood wasn't there, I wouldn't be here," Aaron Ellis, senior in microbiology, said.

On Nov. 20, 1987 Ellis, who had been suffering liver problems since 1983, underwent a liver transplant at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis.

"People don't understand how complicated a transplant is," Ellis said. "There had to be 100 units on hand before the transplant could begin."

During the transplant Ellis used 60 units of donated blood and was able to use two units of his own recycled blood.

"From what I heard there was no problem in finding the 100 units," Ellis said. "That's a lot of blood. I'm glad that the donor program worked for me."

USG uses procedure to wage a battle

By Brad Bushue

The Undergraduate Student Government Senate (USG) was unanimously Wednesday into a parliamentary procedure showdown in a debate concerning whether a senator could remain on the committee long enough.

President Bill Hall said the possibility of two-thirds of the USG senate voting to remove Committee for Internal Affairs Chairperson Juliana Taylor prompted Taylor's supporters to use parliamentary procedure to slow the meeting's progress to avoid a vote on the matter.

"The vice-president and the provost are using parliamentary procedure to hold and delay Juliana's impeachment," Others also were instrumental in the delay, he said.

A vote of more than two-thirds of the senate overturned the Vice President Larry Gaither's decision to invalidate a petition to have Taylor impeached because it had not been submitted through the proper USG procedure.

"Typley's supporters used parliamentary procedure to stall a vote to impeach her because it was obvious the majority of the senate could not do it," USG, Page 9

Britain and Iran agree to resume full diplomacy

VIENNA (UPI) - Britain and Iran agreed Thursday to resume immediately full diplomatic relations that were partially broken off more than a year ago when Iranian Revolutionary Guards killed and beat up a British Embassy aide. The agreement was signed in Vienna by Sir David Menzies, an assistant undersecretary, and Maimoon Vaezi, director general of Western Europe in the Iranian foreign ministry.

British-owned tanker splits, sinks in Atlantic

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (UPI) - A British-owned oil tanker, lashed by 25-foot waves and heavy winds, split in two in the Atlantic and caught fire Thursday. Rescuers found two scorching lifeboats but no signs of the 27 crew members, authorities said. John B. Holmes, marine controller at the Halifax Rescue Coor-dination Center, was not optimistic about the chances for sur-vival in the frigid water.

Palestinian independence rejected by Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Israel has rejected all aspects of a Palestinian declaration of independence expected to be an-nounced next week by the Palestine National Council, the Foreign Ministry said Thursday. The army, in an effort to discourage widespread demonstrations during the mean-while, began Saturday in the Algerian capital of Algiers, has reinforced its troops in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and arrested doz-ens of Arabs.

Strange disease in Ukraine causes hair loss

MOSCOW (UPI) - A mysterious disease causing loss of hair and baldness has struck 114 children in a Ukrainian town, forcing authorities to order a special diet for them and take other precautions, a health official and school officials said Thursday. The Ukraine was swept by rumors suggesting the unknown illness was caused by residual fallout from the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

EPA study: Indoor air harmful in buildings

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In a study that could help explain the "sick building syndrome," federal officials said Thursday that testing has found indoor air in new buildings has levels of harm-ful chemicals 100 times greater than outdoor air. The En-vironmental Protection Agency study, the first major U.S. assessment of indoor air pollution in public buildings, said chemical concentrations in new buildings were highest in the initial months after construction was completed and could remain elevated for up to six months.

500 top appointees to make room for Bush

WASHINGTON (UPI) - With an emphasis on dignity, President Reagan passed the word Thursday that his Cabinet and more than 500 top political appointees are expected to resign by Jan. 20 to allow President-elect George Bush to assemble his own team. The message was delivered to key appointees at a breakfast meeting in the Cabinet Room by Kenneth Duberstein, Reagan's chief of staff, and reiterated by the president at an afternoon session.

Principal arrested on drug-buying charges

NEW YORK (UPI) - Drug counselors were dispatched Thursday to a South Bronx elementary school whose principal was arrested for allegedly buying crack, but a school official said he doubted the children would be unduly upset because life in their area has made them "streetwise." Principal Matthew Barnwell, 55, of Manhattan, was arrested on a street near his Harlem apartment about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday by undercover police officers who had been stakeing out the area because of heavy drug traffic.

Therapist convicted for falsifying drug data

Baltimore (UPI) - A psychologist considered a leading expert on drug therapies for hyperactive children was sentenced Thursday to 60 days in pr.sion in the nation's first federal con- viction for falsifying scientific data. Dr. Stephen Bregning pleaded guilty in September to two counts of falsifying data on drug therapies, including Ritalin and Dexedrine, in order to obtain more than $160,000 in federal research grants.

A Review

"Margaret Fleming" tells the story of what can happen when one experiment with infidelity.

The play, directed by Larry Knowles, includes good acting, good scenery and a realistic plot.

The two-act play takes place in Canton, Mass., in 1890. Philip Fleming, played by Ken Traynor, is told by the town doctor that his illegitimate son has just been born.

Fleming, who has a wife and infant daughter, resents no responsibility for the child, but is prompted by the doctor to visit the girl, who was made very ill from the childbirth.

In the next scene, Philip returns home to his wife, Margaret, who is unaware of the newborn child. It is soon revealed to the audience that Philip's mistress is the sister of Miss Fleming's maid, Maria.

Upon Maria's request, Margaret visits the dying girl, Lena, where she finds out the identity of the baby's father. She rummages through her husband, but he leaves town in shame.

Because of an earlier eye infection, the news of Philip's illegitimate child causes Margaret to lose her eyesight. Played by Leah J. Ellison, the character of Dr. Larkin, who struggles with knowing the truth about the child and trying to protect the health of his patient, Margaret.

Brian Scott Gant excellently brings out the serious character of Dr. Larkin, who struggles with knowing the truth about the child and trying to protect the health of his patient, Margaret.

Alban Dennis brings humor into the play as Joe Fletcher, a former employee of Philip and the wandering husband of Maria, who now sells various items door to door while looking for free alcohol.

Maria Bindley, Fletcher's wife and the Fleming's maid, was excellently portrayed by Leah J. Ellison. The complex dilemma of her character included remaining faithful to the Flemings while dealing with her own death and the child. She also helped lighten the mood with her antics in dealing with her husband.

The play ends with Philip returning home to his wife, who has taken in his illegitimate son after the mother dies. He asks Margaret to forgive him and she agrees, even though she said their marriage will never be as happy as it was before.

The play, written by James A. Herne in 1890, includes scenes of drama, but is broken up with humor, which is one of the strong points of the play. The play's finale includes good acting and good scenery, portraying the complex characters of Margaret Fleming, excellently enacted by Amy Spies, who portrays Margaret in the play "Margaret Fleming," and her husband, Philip Fleming, played by Brian Scott Gant, to save her sight. The play will be performed tonight through Sunday in the Communications Building.

Other characters included in the play are all mill workers Mr. Foster, Williams, and Bobby, played by Chris Mitchell, Paul E. Soria and Joe Mikula.

Mrs. Burton is played by Micki M. Bunting and Hannah and Jane, two of the Fleming's maids, are played by Jeni Dees and Dawn M. Wail.

The play will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday and 2 p.m. on Sunday in the Laboratory Theater in the Communications Building. Tickets are $2 and are available at the McLeod Theater Box Office or at the door.
Veterans deserve better understanding

TODAY we honor the men and women who fought for our country. We must remember the sacrifices these men and women made in service of our country, but we also must remember the senselessness of war. The statistics speak for themselves.

Nearly 600,000 Americans died in war this century, more than half of them in World War II. According to statistics, 82,781 U.S. servicemen were lost in battle and never recovered to be brought home to their families.

THE EMOTIONAL SCALES of war cannot be measured, but they do run long and deep. Many veterans return home with feelings of guilt, uncertain about their future. Many Vietnam veterans, who returned from an unpopular war—the first war lost by the United States—and felt rejected and hated by many segments of U.S. society, Consequently, many veterans, not just Vietnam veterans, return home to face such problems as alcoholism, drug addiction, and emotional and psychological problems.

MORE PEOPLE can understand the psychological scars of war. Those feelings are a burden for many veterans and no amount of explanation through books or television can do them justice. Even honest attempts to explain the senselessness of war, such as the movie "Platoon," have been criticized by veterans as merely one interpretation of war.

Put they do help the public arrive at some understanding of the complicated problems these men and women experienced; an experience that the public should understand more thoroughly.

Letters

Thanks to the veterans

Once again, the media of the United States has emphasized the political issues, taking recognition away from one of an American public holiday. Veterans Day is celebrated in the United States on Nov. 11, which is Armistice Day for people in other countries. Friday, Nov. 11, it is not only a day to remember the war dead, but also a day to remember the good things veterans have done in the past: America's freedom of the press, freedom of religion, education and the other rights that are guaranteed to us by the Constitution. During our country's history, our forefathers have worked in a way that I have chosen to accept, the给他们 years of their lives defending the nation, that we citizens use daily. During their service, hundreds of thousands have died preserving our freedom. During the Korean War, Southern Illinois University, John A. Logan and the Southern Illinois region had a great resource. Many U.S. veterans are still in college earning their education. I find that to be a blessing to our school and a vast unutilized resource of experience. Our country has been blessed by many other thousands of American Veterans, each adding to the uniqueness of the local culture. These people are living history, long-forgotten by many, if not all of us, including myself. Therefore, I thought it would be a good idea to take this opportunity to thank the veterans of SIUC and the surrounding communities. Thank you for defending our rights as defined by our forefathers and proving through time by your service. Thank you for serving our country and keeping this a free country where we can vote, learn, speak our mind, pray openly, and utilize the other rights of the Constitution. — Mark H. Case, graduate student in forest product economics.

A peak into a USG meeting reveals chaos, pickering and implied threats

By John Baldwin Staff Writer

IT BEGAN with the honorary appointment of a 3-month-old—the son of one of the members.

The student senate held a two-and-a-half hour debate, an implied physical threat, the president calling for security and general chaos—business as usual.

Once again the United States Senate was dealing with an impeachment.

Schafer, the faculty advisor, said Juliania Taylor doesn't meet the academic requirements of所需的 students according to the USG constitution. But the president of the Senate for Internal Affairs, which ensures that members of the USG meet constitutional requirements, including academic requirements.

A BILL was presented to have Taylor moved from the Student Senate and the academic yearbook, ironically, to CIA.

Others say they can't know whether the requirements or not. And they say others on the senate can't know either because Taylor's transcript and grade record are long gone.

And even if they knew whether the requirements were met, the senate feel that the USG constitution allows her to continue holding her position in her cumulative GPA.

The people trying to remove Taylor from the CIA, however, say that is ridiculous.

Taylor says her academic standing shouldn't be discussed publicly, but the senate voted against her request to hold the discussion closed.

VICKI APONTE, who presented the bill, says Taylor's being on the committee presents a conflict of interest. She says it has become clear to her knowledge that Taylor doesn't meet academic requirements, which does not measure up to what many with those who don't will feel that too.

And thus begins the web.

In the middle of debate, Taylor announced that she didn't want her academic requirements even be discussed in a public meeting.

Without going to a vote, as required by law in the Illinois Open Meetings Act, vice president Larvexter in a huddle, who chairs the meetings, asked all non-senators to leave the meeting.

When Daily Egyptian members declined to leave, Gaither, trying to enforce, said whether they were going to leave while president Bill Hall shook his head and mouthed "to." WHEN MIKE Putzek, a senator, after saying waiting for the moment a reporter was sitting, removed the vote in what some construed as a show of force.

This prompted the president to ca on building a team. But things cooled down.

And even if the removal of his coat wasn't a show of force and apologized "If I gave anyone that impression."

Daryl Johnson, the SIUC student trustee, said only a discussion of Taylor's actual average could be held in closed session according to the Illinois Open Meetings Act.

A member of the senate, who wanted to remove Taylor, called, met in closed session to discuss Taylor's political requirements. It was called by the president calling for security during the proceedings.

A peak into a USG meeting reveals chaos, pickering and implied threats. But EFFORTS the debate and the political requirements, whether to remove Taylor from the committee could be closed instead of in an open session to discuss Taylor's political requirements, including academic requirements.

But EFFORTS the debate was the only way to remove Taylor from the committee could be closed instead of in an open session to discuss Taylor's political requirements.

Housing promotes family awareness

By Kimberly Clarke

The University Housing declared Nov. 7 through 13, sparking a week of activities to promote awareness of students with families, Jackie Koh, communications aide for family housing, said.

President John C. Guyon also signed a proclamation claiming Sunday, Nov. 13 as Family Housing Day. "Traditional-aged students, have been the main population in the past but now the non-traditional enrollment is getting larger and we are seeing more students with families," Koh said.

Also planned are games at the Recreation Center for both parents and children, a campus tour for the children, and a arts show in the Avenues Play Fields.

There will be an essay contest for parents entitled "How We Make It Work," an international food and handcrafts show in the faculty portrait still-life drawing session and a family potluck dinner.

Also scheduled are events at the University Museum and the University Housing promotes Family Awareness Week, according to Guyon, said.

Peabody Fairchild, president of the φκο family and 18 year-old boy who is the program coordinator, said. "It is very structured and the staff really cares, which is very rare," said Fairchild.

Also from the residents were feedback from students to the University and family being the main population, Koh said, with the parents knowing they are being looked after and who they are with.

Lisa Dudley, an undergraduate student and a resident of Evergreen Terrace, had been a University of Florida student for 10 years and now resides with her family. "We are not the only family on campus," she said. "There are also other students, nontraditional students, that are not the same age. We have to work harder at being a family." Dudley said.

"People might be surprised to learn that φκο receives such an award, but we have one of the best Greek systems in the nation," she said. "Kohlke has been the main population for the past several years and much of the Greek population have had Greek systems before they graduated. It is a great honor for us and our active alumni, Goembel said.

"This award shows what a group of guys can do, and what a remarkable experience," he added.

Dudley said φκο has received both the Award of Excellence and Southern Illinois' Most Outstanding Chapter Two years in a row.

The Board of Trustees failed to gather the minimum numbers required to hold its November meeting Thursday.

Assistant to the Chancellor Katherine Walsh said two members were stranded by bad weather in central Illinois and two others had prior commitments.

The board cannot hold a meeting with four voting members absent.

Board Secretary Carol Krimmel from Moline and Chairman Harris Rose of Jacksonville were detained by the weather.

Members George T. Wilkins and A.D. VanMeter could not attend the meeting because of personal commitments.

President John C. Guyon said the meeting would not be re¬scheduled. The board was supposed to meet Wednesday night to evaluate Guyon in executive session.

Also on the board's agenda was the approval to acquire real property and the recommendation of an architectural firm for the removal of the former dental clinic at SIU-E.

The estimated cost of the dental school renovation is $926,500. The first phase of the project will be funded by Building Illinois appropriations of $363,300.

The remaining $563,200 will come from future Build Illinois Contingent Appropriations or from University operating funds.

The board was voting to hire the firm of Kennedy Associates, Inc. from Belleville.

The board approved the renovation at 10 June meeting. The next Board of Trustees meeting will be Dec. 8 in Edwardsville.

These women have been traditional "plus size" consumers, uninterested in current trends and styles and imposed by the fashion industry.

J.R. Dick Berry served in both World War II and Korea and he cites the difference between the two.

In Korea, Berry served with the 1st Infantry Regiment of the Army's 25th Division in several front line positions, including Heartbreak Ridge, Kumwa Triangle and the Punchbowl, all of which are remembered as heavy fighting areas of the war.

"I left our country made a terrible mistake by fighting a limited war," Berry said. He claims that President Harry Truman should have listened to General MacArthur and engaged with mounting Chinese forces at the Yalu River while they had the chance.

LATER, MORE than 100,000 Chinese poured over the boarder and inflicted heavy casualties on American forces.

"Truman was responsible for all those wonderful Marines and soldiers that died (in Korea)."

"There were bullet holes coming through the skin of the chopper when we were taking off."

A friend of Etherton's pulled him to safety and helped get him evacuated from the area, for which he received a Silver Star — the nation's second-highest medal for heroism.

"They put me on that chopper, I was full of morphine, and I remember the guy on the chopper holding my hand. He took my hits and his hits got as big as silver dollars."

"Truman was responsible for all those wonderful Marines and soldiers that died (in Korea)."

--- J.R. Dick Berry

By April 1969, Etherton was in his senior first class with 1st Battalion, 5th Marines of the 1st Marine Division operating in the Quang Nam province, south of Danang in a heavily enemy fortified area by north Vietnamese and Communist Viet Cong Forces.

On January 29, 1970, Etherton was leaving over his pack when North Vietnamese soldiers attacked the night before, friendly South Vietnamese forces were set in position around one of the exposed flanks. They left the area during the next morning without notifying the Marines still remaining.

I looked just glanced at my watch, it was 1:05 (a.m.) when we got hit," Etherton said.

BEFORE ETHEERTON could find cover he was shot by the enemy machine gun nine times, breaking both legs. He also received shrapnel wounds from a rocket explosion while he was lying wounded.

"I thought I was done for. I felt numb and warm from all the blood."

A friend of Etherton's pulled him to safety and helped get him evacuated from the area, for which he received a Silver Star — the nation's second-highest medal for heroism.

"They put me on that chopper, I was full of morphine, and I remember the guy on the chopper holding my hand. He took my hits and his hits got as big as silver dollars."

AFTER 14 months in a military hospital, Etherton's return home was much like that many other Vietnam veterans were met with and nothing like previous war's he had experienced.

"When I got out of that tent I was treated with dirt... underlife that dirt, because that's the way it was."

Etherton said when potential employers saw his veteran card he was treated like a pariah. He said the only place he didn't feel scorned was the Veteran of Foreign Wars post in Murphysboro.

"When I walked in that door I was treated like a king, but not when I walked out." Etherton now lives in DeSoto and is employed at the Coca-Cola Bottling Company in Des Moines.

After almost twenty years, Etherton still sticks to his original feelings, "If I had to do it all over again, I would go back again..."

"No regrets."

the face at the Midwest." He had no evidence from any quarter which supporteed that Texas has such distinct advantages over the Illinois site that a decision in favor of Texas was warranted," Michel said.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he and Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini are drafting a letter to President Reagan and president-elect George Bush asking them to delay a final decision on locating the SSC until the General Accounting Office issues its master and an independent panel of scientists is appointed to evaluate the DOE's selection of Texas. Reagan is scheduled to select a final site before he leaves office in January.

"I can't say I understood the reasons for choosing Texas," Simon said. "The advantages certainly belong to Illinois.
Several of the remaining sites, including Texas, were adequate, but none could match the Illinois site point for point.

The super collider, an oval-shaped, 53-mile-long, 10-foot-wide underground tunnel, is expected to be the largest colliding particle accelerator — or atom smasher in the world.

Sen. Alan Dixon, Illinois' senior senator, said it was obvious the decision was political rather than based on merit and called it an affront to the Illinois congressional dlegation. Gov. James R.
Thompson and other state and local officials.

"I am appalled and deeply disappointed to learn that two days after the 1988 presidential election, the campaign continues," said Dixon, a Democrat. "I do not believe that the timing of this decision and its proximity to the election is a coincidence. Had the decision been based on merits, we would have won it.

Thompson said he would look elsewhere as well.

"I share both the disappointment and even the courage that is being expressed today by the leaders of the SSC Illinois delegation from Illinois," said the Republican, governor who was national co-chair of Bush's presidential bid.

Donald S. Perkins, chairman of the SSC for Fermilab Inc., said he was "thunderstruck" by the decision and said it could endanger funding from Congress for the project.

"It was so clear that the SSC would cost less, would be operating sooner and would be much more likely to work as judged by 'head' at Fermilab," Perkins
said.

U.S. Rep. Dennis Hastert, whose district includes Illinois'
site for the SSC near Batavia and the Fermi National Laboratory said he too, believed politics was behind the decision.

"I think Illinois had the advantage of most effectiveness and had the scientific community already in place," Hastert said. "On the other side of the coin, the Speaker of the House (Jim Wright of Texas) is very powerful. He can move (Congress) whatever he wants to." Hastert also said he believed Fermi would be drained of its talent as a result of the DOE's decision.

Illinois officials noted that when California was still in the running for the project the Los Angeles Times backed Illinois, saying although it would like to have the project, it belonged in Illinois.

But there was one group
happy with the decision.

William Tardy, head of Citizens Against the Collider
Here or There said it was "evident that the Illinois site was inadequate".

"It definitely was not a political decision. The decision was based on merit. Texas is a far better site for building this project from an environmental point of view," Tardy said.

CATCH has been opposed to the Illinois site near Batavia because Texas would displace
1,000 homes in the area. Tardy said the group would not contest until Reagan makes his final decision.

blood was there when I needed it."

Since the transplant, Ellis said he never needed blood transfusions.

"You can't know how my body is checked to see how my liver is doing," Ellis said. "I've heard the first year is the roughest with a transplant. The first year is almost over and I can feel my body is still accepting the liver.

Ellis said he will probably need occasional blood transfusions for some time to come.

"I don't know when I'll need blood again," Ellis said. "But no one knows when they will need it. That's one reason everyone should get a taste to donate while they can. Just because someone hasn't needed blood doesn't mean they won't need it in the future."

Because of his liver problems, Ellis said he was never able to donate blood.

"But since I can't donate blood, I'll donate my time to help out and promote the drive," Ellis said.

Ellis said he is able to do almost anything he wants to except "play football, but I never did that anyway."

Vivian Ugent, coordinator of the University's blood drive, said "we're not asking people to give blood, we're begging." The goal for the drive is 2,600 pints and 1,877 have been collected already, she said.

Today is the final day of the University's fall blood drive. Blood Makes The World Go Round.

Donations can be made from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Student Center.

congressional delegation, including House Speaker Jim Wright.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., was among the lawmakers from losing states to reject the "strong smell of White House politics" in the decision on the site.

House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois called on Congress to insist on a "re-evaluation" of the choice. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said he was marshaling other lawmakers to challenge the decision and ask for an independent review.

"I really don't know if you, there are no politics in this," Herrington said. "We were faced with picking the best of the best.

The super collider will be a ring-shaped underground ring of super magnets 33 miles in circumference built in a tunnel 10 feet in diameter. It would push beams of protons to nearly the speed of light.

Scientists would study the proton's collisions, which create new subatomic particles to build the blocks of the universe and for clues on how the universe was formed.

The super collider would be 20 times more powerful than the largest existing particle accelerator, the Tevatron at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill., which is being built.

While under construction, the collider was expected to employ several thousand workers and when finished in the mid-1990s, would employ 2,500 scientists and technicians and have an annual operating budget of $270 million.

In a statement, Herrington said the House Science Committee received the highest overall technical evaluation ratings of any proposal and exhibited no significant overall weakness.

"No other proposal received outstanding ratings on geology and tunneling, regional resources, environment and setting," he said.

Herrington said his committee and special appointees were not told of the choice until Tuesday. Reagan and President-elect George Bush were informed at 9 a.m. EST Thursday, about the same time governors were told of the choice.

The Energy Department received 43 bids last fall for the collider, including one proposal to build it in space.

This year, the National Academy of Science picked as finalists sites in Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Texas and Tennessee.

Texas made the largest upfront offer for the collider -$1.1 billion in aid.

"The super collider was the best choice for the nation's future," Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said.

"I hope the world will recognize the wisdom of the decision," Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said.

"The only question now is, 'Can we build it?'" Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said.

vote against her, Hall said.

Had the impeachment bill gone to a vote on the floor and received the required two-thirds majority vote, Taylor would have been removed from her interim seat on the committee. But she could appeal and remain in her position until she would be heard by the Judicial Board of Governance.

A petition was circulated for names of senators who believe Taylor is not academically qualified to be a senator or chair the committee.

Knauf, who chairs the meetings, said he ruled the petition invalid because it was submitted during the meeting. The impeachment bill did not have the names of a majority of the seated senate as needed, he said, and its late submission was a violation of parliamentary procedure.

More than two-thirds of the senate contested Gaither’s ruling on the petition’s validity and overturned it.

Hall said the senate’s vote was changed by Gaither and indicated bias. The controversy is a vote on the senate’s chair of a meeting should be neutral. Gaither denied Hall’s statement that his actions were biased.

Hall said, “Larvestor (Gaither) chose not to abide by the majority of the Senate and had his own little filibuster, completely ignoring the petition’s validity.”

During a discussion between senators about Taylor’s eligibility to sit on the committee after being impeached for defiling the Senate, senator Bob Knauf shouted, “This debate would not be necessary if she’d just resign.”

Knauf said he and other senators are frustrated because the internal struggles that the USG is engaged in are preventing them from doing what they were elected for - serving the students.

When a vote on the bill of impeachment was called, a motion was made by two committee members to adjourn the joint meeting to prevent the vote from going through. Fabian shouted to the Daily Egyptian reporter to “recognize the committee members as being the source of the motion.”

After more debate on Taylor’s qualifications as a senator, Chris Reckebach, the pro tem, told the senators that no ruling could be made on Taylor’s case until the Judicial Board of Governance interpreted the constitution’s requirements. “We cannot reasonably decide on Senator Taylor’s eligibility until we have a firm interpretation,” he said.

Taylor requested the meeting be closed to all who were not senators so she could discuss her grade point average with the senate.

Daily Egyptian reporters said they refused to leave because the senate must vote on the impeachment during the closed meeting, as required by law. Hall, citing a “physically convenient” rule for security when the committee’s sergeant at arms confronted one reporter.

All Registered Student Organizations were funded at the beginning of the meeting. A motion to amend the constitution was tabled to the committee, but a bill on Taylor’s impeachment was left on the floor. That bill will come before the senate at the next meeting Nov. 30.
Richard "Oozy" Suddeth, owner and operator of Oozy's Tattoo Parlor, 205 W. Walnut, said he will tattoo anything, anywhere and he is keeping his word. So far he has left his mark on 54 clients since opening the parlor in July.

Suddeth said his business attracts a variety of clients who request all types of tattoo designs. "There's something here for everybody. I've never had someone come in who didn't find a tattoo they liked. I've got over 2,000 designs and what I don't have I can get," Suddeth said.

The walls of the studio verify that there are all types of tattoo designs. Charts of the designs he offers adorn the parlor's walls. Tattoo types can vary from cartoon characters to Harley-Davidson bikes. "These are to help the uncertain customer in his choice of ornament," Suddeth said. Suddeth said although there is no top-selling design, most men prefer to tattoo their arms and shoulder blades while the most popular areas on women are around the waist and belly button.

The oldest tattoo Suddeth has done include the Grimm Reaper on a woman's shoulder blade, two raccoons, one on each inner thigh of another woman and a satanic star on the arm of a man.

Some of Suddeth's more creative work can be seen on Oozy's website. The 36-year-old is covered from shoulder blades to toes with 71 tattoos, 61 of which he applied himself.

Suddeth tattooed a spider web on the knee of Lynette Whitfield, freshman in English, Whitfield said she is so happy with the tattoo that she plans to get another. "This time I'm going to draw a spider on a skull for my shoulder," Whitfield said.

The prices at Oozy's vary greatly, depending on the size and number of the design. "I won't turn on my machine for less than $30, but I'm reasonable. The cheapest tattoo I gave was a heart for $5 and the most expensive was the Grimm Reaper," Suddeth said.

University of Illinois professor Robert Youngman, who received his master's of fine arts from SIU-C in 1952, won a competition to design a sculpture for Pulliam Hall.

Alumnus to create sculpture

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Through an early childhood love of his father's crafts, the first graduate of SIU-C's sculpturing program has molded a satisfying career, the graduate said.

"I first learned about sculpturing in my daddy's blacksmith shop in Murphysboro," Robert Youngman, director of the Art for Architecture, Urban and the School of Art and Design at the University of Illinois at Champagne, said.

Youngman, who received his master's of fine arts from SIU-C in 1952, has completed more than 30 commissioned concrete sculptures.

He is working on a fountain at Purdue University, he said. The fountain, which will take him about a year to complete, is 70 feet in diameter and 36 feet high, Youngman said.

But the size of the work that brought him back to his alma mater was cast at about two feet in diameter, he said.

"I'm very happy to be able to do the piece for the University," Youngman said. "I've always loved the school and the area. I'm happy to be able to do something for it." While Youngman's Half Crown did receive the award, he said that sculpture will have nothing to do with Purdue University.

Youngman entered, Half Crown, a bronze sculpture in the Pulliam Hall Sculpture competition. "As part of the competition we were asked to send in a number of slides," Youngman said. "We were also asked to make a model of a finished piece. Mine was the Half Crown."

The competition was a result of funds from the Illinois Percent for Art Program. The program states that whenever construction or renovation is done for any public building, one half of one percent of the total budget goes toward art for the building.

The Pulliam project's art commission is about $25,000. There were 26 Illinois artists entered in the competition. Judges of the competition awarded Youngman's sculpture the commission award.

"I'm very happy to do the piece for the University," Youngman said. "I've always loved the school and the area. I'm happy to do it."
PHOENIX (UPI) - A centenarian regarded as the last surviving veteran of the Spanish-American War era plans to celebrate Veterans Day this year by sending a greeting to U.S. military personnel around the world.

Spanish-American War veteran Nathan Cook, 103, said he will receive a 53-cent-a-day job at a Kansas City packing plant at the age of 15 to enlist in the Navy after seeing a street poster that beckoned: "Join The Navy and See The World."

During a 46-year Navy career that began with training at the end of America's war with Spain, Cook was once taken for dead, packed off to a hospital as a corpse, but he returned to active duty to serve in two world wars.

"I don't feel old, I feel young yet," Cook wrote in a message that will be delivered Friday to the 500,000 American men and women serving at military installations around the world.

"I'm glad to be able to send greetings to all servicemen this Veterans Day.

"Cook's message to military personnel will be telefaxed to 21 bases and numerous American warships on active duty."

From his room at Fort Courage, "the nursing home at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Phoenix, Cook recalled how he fooled the Navy into letting him enlist on April 19, 1901, when he was just a boy.

Cook, who persuaded a sister to sign his enlistment papers indicating he was 17, went to the Kansas City recruitment office with a nephew who also planned to join but backed out at the last moment.

"The Navy wasn't taking youngsters like myself," Cook said. "One of the sailors came out into the crowd and told us that the next time they open the door, go in and don't say anything about your age. Once you get inside, they'll take you. And they did."

Cook said he was shipped off to California, where he spent time "sailing up and down the coast between San Francisco and San Diego, Calif."

"We didn't see any real war," he said. "We just trained at it."

The Spanish-American War formally ended when the Senate ratified the Treaty of Paris in 1899. But the VA Medical Center in Phoenix said the agency regards the conflict as having ended on April 2, 1902, when the last U.S. troops left Cuba. For that reason, it lists Cook as the last surviving veteran of the war, even though he never actually saw service in Cuba.

Cook said he started off earning $15 a month in the Navy until he "got lucky" and was promoted to boatswain's mate. "I'd go to bars with the gang on liberty and get seven and tonic in a whiskey glass. They all thought I was a big drinker."

Pacemaker recipient doing well

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) - The first patient to receive a next-generation nuclear-powered pacemaker that controls both chambers of the heart said Thursday he feels good after surgery.

The device, weighing just less than 3 ounces, was implanted in the chest of John Sniffen, 47, of Clifton, N.J., in a 90-minute operation at Newark Beth Israel Medical Center on Thursday.

The new device replaced an old-style pacemaker in Sniffen's chest. It is the first pacemaker that is both powered by plutonium-238 and capable of regulating both chambers of the heart. It also more closely mimics a natural heartbeat.

The nuclear power source, previously used only in single-chamber pacemakers, gives the new device a lighter size and increased longevity, pacemaker a life of 20 years or 40 years.

Deadline: Tuesday, November 15
WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director William Sessions said Thursday a decision will be made within two weeks of whether criminal violations were committed when a "virus" disabled thousands of research computers from coast to coast.

Sessions said at a briefing that the FBI’s probe into the virus is in the "investigative stage" and any decision to bring charges will be made by federal prosecutors. Investigators have focused on Robert Morris Jr., 23, a Cornell University graduate student, suspected of creating the "virus" — the rogue computer program that spread wildly last week and jammed computers linked in a nationwide network.

The virus struck computers in academic research centers and caused what a Defense Department spokeswoman described as "widespread" disturbances in the national branch of the military's defense data system. "At least the preliminary phases of the investigation" will be done, she said, "in a very prompt fashion."

Sessions said, which could be within two weeks.

Gymnastics coach looks at career

Meade says talent is better than ever

By Megan Hauck

Staff Writer

"There's a sign on Coach Bill Meade's door that reads: 'Heaven doesn't want me and hell will take over.'"

For Meade, 40 years in the coaching business has been more heaven than hell. It has changed much.

"Over 30 years of coaching, my demand for excellence hasn't changed," Meade said. "Though I will say that my patience has increased.

After graduating from Penn State in 1969, where he spent four years as a teammate and (parallel) bar man," Meade became Coach Meade, spending the next eight years at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill building a gymnastics program from scratch.

"It was a bigger challenge there," Meade said. "Anything I learned I had to learn out of a book.

I talk to gymnasts who'd mastered certain skills and find out now what they did. That's something I've always done.

Although Meade's methods may not have changed much, his athletes have. Gymnasts he is coaching now could have won national championships 20 years ago, he said.

"Some of the tricks they do in here at the start, I never would have even tried with the boys at North Carolina," Meade said. "I was afraid they would injure their shoulders.

"I tried them when I came to Southern because it was a much higher level of competition, and I had recruits to work with."

As vice president of the Pan American Union, Meade sees the international side of the sport. But he says he prefers the dual meets to anything overseas because he's able to see team competition in dual meets.

"It's probably like a father would a son when he gets his first Little League run. I see them progress, and that's very exciting.

Meade, who deals with 23 countries in North, South and Central America, plans to go to China and Japan in December as a representative for the United States Gymnastics Federation. His duties in both countries will be to encourage participation in the 1989 Goodwill Games in Seattle.

"It's a good article of accord like we did in the Soviet Union," he said. "It's a means to encourage participation in international events and promote exchanges of coaches and athletes to other countries."

As for retirement -- don't mention it to Meade. "As long as I have my health and the kids are fun to work with, I'll be here."

Early injuries not serious for women

By Robert Baxter

Staff Writer

It appears early season injuries that have been plaguing the women's basketball team are coming to a close. Players down with injuries at first thought to be serious are now being given the green light.

Coach Cindy Scott said senior Cathy Kampwerth saw her physician today and it appears surgery will be needed.

"Cathy is going to start running again," Scott said. "It is up to her as to how long it takes her to get back to full strength."

Kampwerth was originally thought to have serious damage to her knee.

Sophomore Cyd Mitchell, who had earlier been diagnosed with a cartilage problem in her knee, is now practicing and things are looking good coach Scott said.

Fresman Grace Jones has also been out. She was suffering from tendinitis, but is now out of crutches and is with Kampwerth with some light running exercises in preparation for the regular season which begins Wednesday.

"I don't think the time off will hurt her," Scott said.

"As far as Grace it may affect her more because she is unfamiliar with our system. However, she has been at practice and has kept up with what's been happening."

Tressel said his squad must remedy "the Liberty game, there were more touchdowns thrown by them in the first quarter than we gave up all of 1987." Tressel said, "We have to learn not to give up touchdowns." Tressel said the Salukis' wishbone may cause the Penguins' defense some problems. Youngstown's defense allows 194.3 rushing yards and 23 points per game this season. "The nice thing about running the wishbone is the defense would rather not h ills because the offense can pitch out," Tressel said. "(Scott) Gabbert may give them a bigger advantage the (Fred) Gibson because he gives them a lot more throwing opportunities. We are going to play a wishbone team that throw 31 times the week before (at Southeast Missouri), so they give us a taste of the whole spectrum."

Saluki quarterback Fred Gibson will receive an arthroscopic exam today, with a decision on surgery pending the results of the test, Coach Rick Rhoades said Thursday.

"If all trends on what they find," Rhoades said. "I think everyone agreed we were wasting some valuable time. We have to get him healthy and ready to go for next season." Gibson said the decision comes as no surprise. "It was something that was inevitable and we waited as long as we could to get the knee to respond," Gibson said. "It's something that needs to be done now."

Although he is uncertain how long it will take to fully recover, Gibson said he is prepared to work. "Hopefully it is just slight cartilage damage, but once they get in they may find something else. I'm disappointed, but it's something I've been prepared to handle."

"As the third-year coach said he believes his team has the ability to explode offensively before the end of the season. "When you are dealing with young people and they get a surge of confidence, they are tough to beat," Tressel said. "When you have a ball club below .500 you look for something early in the game to give you that confidence."

Frustration has been evident at times, but Tressel said his players have generally overcome it. "I think the players are much more resilient than that," Tressel said. "I think we (the coaches) take it more as life and death than they do."

"The most important thing is we walk off the field feeling good about ourselves," Tressel said despite the fact SIU-C and Youngstown share no real rivalry, the two teams have met four times, and are similar in one respect. "I think you are dealing with two programs who will one day be among the elite in Division I-AA football," Tressel said. "I have a lot of respect for Rick Rhoades. We are both trying to build a program like crazy, and fortunately we had a lot of success last year."

"I think because we are both building up programs, it is not real difficult to get up for a game. We are just two teams who are trying to get better." Youngstown has scored only 30 touchdowns this season. His team, rank 17th in the nation with 31 points per game, has scored only 12 touchdowns. "It is something that needs to be done now," Gibson said. "It's something that needs to be done now."

Freshman runner adjusting to new surroundings

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The dog days of summer can affect any of us when we start the fall semester. Just imagine how it feels to someone coming to the United States for the first time and landing in the Midwest in mid-August.

"When we landed in St. Louis, the captain said it was 115 degrees," freshman Vaughan Harry, runner for the men's cross-country team said. "When we left England it was about 60 degrees and rainy and I put on a jacket to board the plane."

Harry said even though he didn't need the jacket it was a good thing he had it on when he left the plane.

"When we came out, the other end of the tunnel at the airport it hit me," Harry said. "I couldn't believe how hot and humid it was."

"The coach (men's cross-country coach Bill Calli) had sent David (Beauchem) to pick me up. Beauchem didn't realize I would miss Harry runs," the captain said it was about 60 degrees, but it was humid. It was good about the program here.

The dog days of summer can be a tough time for some students. Vaughan Harry couldn't believe how hot it was.

"When I write home it really bothers me," Harry said. "I didn't realize I would miss them this badly. The first month was really tough but I think now I am adjusting."

The similarities to his own country, and here in the United States Harry said, have made it easier for him to adjust and make friends quickly.

"It is amazing how genuinely friendly people are here and it has helped me get through those tough moments. It also helps having roommates who run too. We can relate to each other's problems," Harry said. "Here the team is the most important thing. I have adopted a team attitude here and I feel I fit the team down after the race."

"At times like that, I just sit myself down and tell myself I'm young and still learning. I'm a freshman and try to build on that." Youth was not the only problem for Harry in the race. He has been suffering from a chest infection all season.

"I went to the doctor a couple of times," Harry said. "The last time he told me I'm suffering from asthma. It's brought on by the stresses of competition. Usually an inhaler will clear it up."

Although Harry said he had little trouble adjusting to being away from home, he said he still misses his family.

"My parents have always told me: 'If you want to do it, go for it. We'll back you all the way.' Without their support I probably wouldn't be running today."

Harry said he has worked very hard to improve his running and to overcome some of the problems he had in the past.

"I had to settle for a 22nd finish. I have learned up to this point in the season to prepare myself for the true turning point in his running career came when he was 13," Harry said.

"I am used to running individually back home," Harry said. "Here the team is the most important thing. I have adopted a team attitude here and I feel I fit the team down after the race."

"For me to run with runners who will compete in the championships this weekend in Des Moines, Iowa, was very well because we can learn from each other."

Harry came here from Redditch, England, a city about two hours north of London.

He and his roommate-friend freshman Jon Dennis both elected to come here to run with the United States.

"My mom and dad were hesitant at first about me leaving," Harry said. "But coach visited my family over the break. They made them feel good about the program here and they respected him."

Harry said he owes his running success and Persistence in attaining his goals to his family.

"I started running when I was 10," Harry said. "My sister wanted to join a running club and gave me the idea."

"My parents have always told me: 'If you want to do it, go for it. We'll back you all the way.' Without their support I probably wouldn't be running today."

Although Harry said he had little trouble adjusting to being away from home, he said he still misses his family.

The similarities to his own country, and here in the United States Harry said, have made it easier for him to adjust and make friends quickly.

The true turning point in his running career came when he was 13, Harry said.

"I had to settle for a 22nd finish. For some reason when I turned 13 I started to enjoy it."

From there Harry started to improve and competed in districts as well as national races across his native England.

"My immediate goals are to become All-American status the next two or three years and see steady gradual improvement within myself."

Harry said he will use all he has learned up to this point in the season to prepare himself for the District meet Saturday in pursuit of a top finish.

"Ever Jough I do set high goals for myself," Harry said, "I do keep things pretty well in perspective."
Illinois schools sign top players

By Troy Taylor

Most of the state's major college basketball programs had recruits sign national letters of intent Wednesday, the first day high school players could sign.

The University of Illinois, which has eight seniors on its current roster, brought in four but lost 6-10 Shangquille O'Neal to San Antonio, Texas.

Those that are headed to Champaign: the backcourt tandem of 6-3 Tim Geer and 6-4 Brooks. The tandem of 6-3 Ken Gibson of Bloomington, and 6-4 Tom Michael of Carlyle.

Michael, who also visited SIU and Missouri, is a 6-8 forward that averaged 22 points per game.

Bradley, the defending Missouri Valley champs, signed two Peoria-area players in 6-7 Tony Wilson of Peoria Manual and 6-8 Scott Behrends of Bartonville Limestone.

Eastern Illinois brought in Kent Andrews, a 6-6 center from Indianapolis.

De Paul got 6-7 Deryl Cunningham of Westminster St. Joseph.

Western Illinois announced that 6-3 guard Tim Chase had transferred from Texas The signing period.

They are 6-6 Calbert Cheaney of Evansville, 6-10 Chris Lawson of Bloomington, Ind., 6-4 Greg Graham of Indianapolis, 6-9 Pat Graham of New Albany Ind., and 6-3 Chris Reynolds of Peoria Central.

Michigan signed 6-7 Sam Mitchell of Kalamazoo, Mich.,

and 6-4 Tony Tolbert of Detroit.

Notre Dame signed 6-7 Mike Williams of Ocean Hill, Md.

The signing period ends next Wednesday. The second signing period starts April 12.
Powerful Australia men’s first hurdle

By David Gallienniti
Start Writer

The men’s basketball team will start its 1989-90 season against the Victoria-Australia All-Stars at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Arena in Terre Haute.

“This is the best international team we’ve had on campus,” head coach Rich Herrin said. “They are supposed to be a powerhouse.”

The Australia-based team is mostly made up of 25- to 30-year-olds and includes one 7-foot and two 6-11 players, assistant coach Ron Smith said.

The team is touring the country, and will play such teams as Oklahoma, Purdue, Wisconsin, Western Illinois State and Bradley.

“Their schedule looks to be from the perimeter,” said Smith, adding that the Australians were five of five from the three-point line Monday night against Whittier College in Calif., whom they defeated 96-78.

“They seem to be shooting absolutely everything,” added Herrin, but how good they are I really don’t know. We can’t expect the people on their schedule are, though.

We’re only sitting fact the game is labeled an exhibition game because SIU-C is the Salukis’ final recruit, SIU-C will be playing to win.

“We would like to play everyone, but think we’ll have to play the ones who will always be playing to win,” Herrin said. “It’s something we’re really looking forward to, and we just want to start playing right now.”

Assistant coach Rodney Watson said the Salukis will be playing a second exhibition game at 8 p.m. Nov. 18 in the Arena against the Athletes Fighting Substance Abuse.

The Iowa-based team is composed of former Iowa, Iowa State and Drake players who turned the country facing money to fight substance abuse.

“They have been together for a few years now and know they are pretty good,” Watson said. “They certainly have the capability to beat another good team.

Women’s basketball team signs two standout recruits

By Robert Baxter

Last season the Salukis signed two multi-talented players — Colleen Heimstead and Grace Jones — during the early season college signing period.

This season it appears they have again signed it rich as two more student-athletes will be entering the women’s basketball program from next fall.

Angie Rougau, a 5-8 guard-forward from Memphis, Tenn., and Kelly Furr, a 6-7 forward-center from Springfield, both signed national letters of intent Wednesday to play for the Salukis.

“It’s neat for me to finally sign a Memphis player, since I spent four years of my life there,” Coach Cindy Scott said. Scott played basketball and tennis at Memphis State University from 1971 to 1975.

“I think Angie (Rougau) felt like she really fit in with the team,” Scott said. “She’s a very skilled player. She’s multi-dimensional. She’s able to fill it up from the outside and play inside as well.”

Scott said both players fit the ideals of the coaching staff by meeting the physical needs of the Salukis.

“The Salukis (11-12, 5-2) are in fourth, with Bradley (12-6-14, 5-4) needing two victories to have a chance to tie

Volleyball team needs 2 victories to keep pace with Gateway teams

By Lisa Warns

The women’s volleyball team has won one match this weekend to qualify for one of the four spots in the Gateway Conference tournament, to be held Nov. 18-19.

The final two matches of the regular season will be against Indiana State (6-12 overall, 9-7 Gateway) at 6 p.m. Friday at the ISU Arena in Terre Haute and against Illinois State (21-7, 6-1) at 7 p.m. Saturday at Horton Field House in Normal.

The race for the Gateway championship is tight, and it got tighter when Illinois defeated Indiana State 15-9, 15-13, 15-7 Tuesday night to create a virtual three-way tie for first.

Illinois State shares the top spot with Southwest Missouri and Northern Iowa, teams that each have only one conference loss.

The Salukis (11-12, 5-2) are in fourth, with Bradley (12-6-14, 5-4) needing two victories to have a chance to tie.
