Students on Probation to Meet Wednesday at Furr Auditorium

All students who are on scholastic probation are expected to attend a meeting at 8 a.m. or 2 p.m. Wednesday at Furr Auditorium in the University School, according to Jack Graham, coordinator of the Advisement Center. Attendance will be taken.

Since the University is interested in the student make satisfactory progress this quarter, these meetings are designed to provide helpful study hints, Graham added.

Graham offers the following as a supplementary checklist for students to help improve academic status:

1. Keep a copy of Study Hints from Counseling and Testing Center. Read it. Put it in your desk. Read it before tests. Review it before exams. Remember—there are no second chances. Testing hints can be practiced on many of its ideas on use of time, preparing for examinations and reading.

2. After each class, ask the following questions: a) What did we discuss today in class? b) How does this relate to next class? c) What is the class assignment for the next class?

3. Learn the value of organizing and recopying class notes. Make up your own notes in your own words and revise in regular daily review.

4. Try to discover what are the basic problems causing your lack of motivation or lack of satisfactory progress.

5. Starting now is the hardest part. Set a reasonable time schedule for study and try to stay with it.

6. Be aware that the Counseling and Testing Center is staffed with qualified counselors to help you with understanding yourself, reviewing alternatives to problems, and selecting meaningful educational and vocational goals.

Phillips of State Department Opens Pan-America J-Week

Race Problem Is National, Integration Leader Says

By Minniean Brown

"The segregation-discrimination problems which exist in the United States today are not just southern problems... they are national problems," Lawrence Goyot, Field Secretary for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, said in a campus interview.

Goyot feels that the problems exist because so many people sit back and say it doesn't affect them.

"It is no longer possible for the U.S. to sell the commodity of freedom on the foreign market, when there exist in this country," he said.

Goyot is a field secretary in Hawaii, where there are more than 20 demonstrators were arrested last Sunday for picketing. He is a part of the voter registration project in Mississippi.

Goyot gave a description of the registration project in Mississippi:

"The prospective voter must go to the courthouse, give vital statistics, read the preamble to the Mississippi constitution, interpret any one of the 206 statutes on the constitution, then write a paragraph describing the duties of a good citizen.

"Whether or not the applicant passes the literacy test is left to the discretion of the registrar. This kind of flagrant misuse of the law prevents both Negroes and whites from voting," Goyot said.

Goyot is a graduate of Tougaloo College in Tougaloo, Miss. He has been arrested more than 12 times, suffering the indignities which leaders of the movement face when they are sent to jail. Once he was placed in solitary confinement for 2 months in a prison in Parchman, Miss. When Goyot was asked how he stood up under such strain he said he always found something else to think about rather than jail.

While Goyot was here he spoke before several classes, and at a meeting of the Student Nonviolent Freedom Committee.

The Legal Age of Maturity

Dean Zaleski deserves credit for opening debate on the question of raising the minimum drinking age for beer.

If a considerable number of under-21 beer drinkers are as rare as seems likely, those punished do have a legitimate complaint about the haphazard application of the law. If the under-21s do disobey it; relatively few are punished.

The problem of life we call maturity is more than a matter of birthday. Twenty-one is not a sacred age, automatically conveying maturity--any more than 18. For instance, would be, it is true that many 18-year-olds are too young to assume much hard liquor. Many of the same immature 18-year-olds will also be incapable of handling beer safely at 21.

Many 18-year-olds are also too immature to marry successfully and raise families, but they marry anyway. Many are unprepared to compete for jobs with a future; others have maturity of sorts thrust upon them by military service.

The maturity that 21 bestows is not acceptable as such only because society cannot assess each individual. All are immature at the best age at which to apply that rule because it is also the age of legal responsibility.

Today there is evidence that the ban on under-21 beer does not exist. Adults with current social custom. There is no legal basis for this view. It is only a slow growth toward that goal. To allow 18-year-olds to consume beer would place responsibility for wise or unwise of that privilege up on them. Some would abuse it. Others would rise to the responsibility and accommodate the privilege into their lives without losing their sense of proportion. Everyone, whether at 18 or at 21, must make a personal decision whether or not to drink--and if so, how much.

Certainly any law is most effective when backed by the force of public opinion. If citizens do not enforce by their own conduct the law their representatives make, police cannot.

If beer-drinking before 21 is commonly permitted at home—and Dean Zaleski's experience suggests it is—all the state troopers in Illinois could probably not control the drinking age realistically.

A suitable compromise might be reached this year, serving beer but not hard liquor. While it would give those under 21 a legitimate place to drink beer, sale of hard liquor to minors would still be under relatively strict control, no more imperfect than today.

Certainly the problem of who is mature enough to handle beer or hard liquor will not be solved by decree. Proposals for modification of present liquor laws deserve serious consideration.

Letter To The Editor: Writer Says Few Minors Can Cope With Alcohol

The statement made by Mr. Zaleski ("Zaleski Suggests Realistic Approach to Law on Drinking," April 7) seems to be an endorsement to the theory that if enough persons force their will to be done, it must be right. A similar idea in respect to raising the Illinois speed limit was projected because "more people drive faster than 65 anyway."

The fact that persons between the ages of 18 and 21 may marry, start a family or business, or serve in the Armed Forces does not necessarily mean that those persons will fulfill those responsibilities. Those persons may also get divorced, lose their jobs, and dodge the draft.

We feel that there are relatively few minors who can adequately cope with the influence of an alcoholic beverage.

Lowering the age on beer alone would not be realistic, for it only consumes a large amount of beer to equal several mixed drinks. Those not able to control hard liquor would also not be able to control the effects of beer.

It seems to me that Dean Zaleski's office and parents of underage drinkers are neglecting their responsibilities by suggesting that the law be changed to accommodate law breakers. Perhaps Dean Zaleski might better review his abilities to enforce the liquor laws and take steps to expand them.

I would also observe that drinkers below 21 and above 21 are not one's parents is a far different situation from allowing every minor every year.

As a result of the fact that many Illinois voters have been talked about but not materialized. And for good reason, there is evidence that the ban on under-21 beer does not exist. Adults with current social custom. There is no legal basis for this view. It is only a slow growth toward that goal. To allow 18-year-olds to consume beer would place responsibility for wise or unwise of that privilege up on them. Some would abuse it. Others would rise to the responsibility and accommodate the privilege into their lives without losing their sense of proportion. Fr. Campbell Beats Salukis 88-56, Drayton Ties Record

Led by Paul Drayton, 220-yard world record holder, and Steve Crane’s 61 foot-plus shot put, Fort Campbell’s strong track team nipped the Saluki Track Club 88-56 at McAndrew Stadium Friday.

Drayton was the only “name” on the “Screaming Eagles” squad, but names alone don’t win track meets as the Eagles have little trouble in proving.

The Salukis, who were comprised of the varsity and the Saluki Track Club, stayed close to the paratroopers until the last few events as the Eagles cracked the lead wide open.

Drayton, who ran for the great Villanova team last year, is currently the Stadium record in the shot put, Fort Campbell’s McAndrew prised of the Salukis.

AN UNPARALLELED EXPERIENCE

“A flaming editorial. ‘In White America’ can laugh and morn, but most of all it is filled with indignation and it comes amusingly and passionately alive.” – Tauman, New York Times.

Utilizing excerpts from actual documents, six actors re-create the history of the American Negro. Beginning with an account of the 18th century slave trade, the remarkable presentation spans the years in words, hymns and folk music, concluding with a first-person description of the integration attempt at the high school in Little Rock. In a slice-of-life drama that provides an emotional experience of extraordinary depth. The Original Cast Album includes four pages of authentic photographs and drawings.
