Council prepared to repeal Halloween Fair Days

Chamber of Commerce planning activity as alternative to annual street celebration

By Lisa Mitter
Staff Writer

During the Carbondale's City Council meeting Tuesday night, the membroes began the preliminary steps necessary to kill the Halloween street party.

An ordinance designed to end the Halloween Fair Days will still be enforced this year, Doherty said. This means alcohol cannot be sold in glass containers throughout the Halloween weekend.

The second point to remain is the hours of operation for establishments with liquor licenses. These hours will be required to close at 1:45 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 28.

Steve Hoffner, city manager, said since the time changes that weekend, the bars will be allowed to stay open until 1:45 to avoid confusion, but liquor can't be served after 1:00 a.m.

"We've got to get the message out that there will be no party this year in Carbondale," Mayor Neil Dillard said. "We don't want the party crowds in Carbondale this year."

Hoffner said the Carbondale Community Development Division will begin a community-oriented Halloween activity away from South Illinois Ave.

Councilman, Keith Tuchborn, said he was happy that there would be alternative activities made available this year, but he said he was still worried about the thousands of people coming to Carbondale who don't know that the street party will be canceled.

"Most of the people will go to the bars and I'm worried about what will happen when the bars fill up," Tuchborn said.

Gov. signs bill for education

Admission requirements toughened

Gov. James R. Thompson signed a bill listing course requirements for entering public colleges and universities Tuesday on the Old Main Mall.

Surrounded by junior high students from Sandoval, Thompson made official the 15-unit course requirements currently adopted by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, with the addition of vocational education as an alternative to the foreign language, music or art category.

The admission requirements, which will go into effect in 1993, include:

- Four years of English
- Three years of social studies
- Three years of math
- Three years of science, and
- Three years of a foreign language, music or art.

Thompson said by standardizing the minimum requirements for students entering public colleges and universities, the quality and character of secondary education will be increased.

Sandoval eighth grader Josh Martin said he too liked the new law and will make schools try harder to attract prospective college students to their colleges.

Ratcliff and about 40 of his classmates were adopted by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission last year as part of a pilot program that studies current needs of middle school students.

Continuing education to offer course on Japanese culture

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

The Division of Continuing Education will open its Lifelong Learning program Sept. 11 with a new course on Japanese culture as well as old standbys such as yoga and sign language.

The classes will be offered to anyone in the community with an interest in furthering their education. Jane Evers, coordinator of professional development, said,

"It's a way of making the resources of the University available to the public," Evers said.

The new course, Understanding Japanese Culture, will be taught by Alan Kim, a native of Japan and a professor in foreign languages and literature at the University.

"The course is important because Illinois is accommodating many Japanese firms," Kim said. "In general, Midwest regions' understanding of Japan is very poor. This is an opportunity to learn. Mutual understanding is the key.

Stop sign installed at parking garage

University security posting officers at busy intersection

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Traffic has been slowed to a stop in the campus parking garage. A stop sign has been placed in the garage at the bottom of the ramp, which connects the lower and upper level.

Morgan Hagan, campus parking manager, said the reason for the sign is due to the past there have been accidents and some extremely close calls between exiting and entering traffic.

"Myself and the director of security were told to keep an eye on the safety issues and it's a busy intersection in the garage," Hagan said.

Director of University Security Dr. Hagan said campus police will begin by issuing University tickets, and if that doesn't work city ticket will be issued.

"University security police tickets are considerably less than city tickets," Harris said. "University tickets won't count against a person's driving license where a state or city ticket will."

Campus police haven't issued tickets at this date but instead have been verbally warning violators.

Police have been posted at the intersection during the garage's busiest times, which are generally during class breaks, according to Harris.

The upper level of the parking lot is reserved for red stickers generally held by students while the lower level is restricted to cars with blue stickers which are allowed for faculty and staff. The garage is northeast of the Student Center on Douglas Drive.

Syrian artillery hits fuel ship, traveling naval blockade

BEIRUT (UPI) - Syrian artillery Sunday hit a ship carrying fuel through a naval blockade to Lebanon's besieged Christian enclave, sparking an internationlly that apparently gutted the ship and banned to death the lives of 11-member crew, military sources said. Hours later, French Foreign Ministry Undersecretary Francois Scherer arrived from Syria for separate meetings with leaders of Lebanon's rival Christian and Syriacentral Committees. Two days earlier, the French navy was hit by ships of the Christian-led Lebanese army and brought about, where one was listed in critical condition, the sources said.

Panamanian leader optimistic about power

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) - Just three days before a new government must assume office in Panama, acting President Manuel Expressionism added his voice to the many assertions that the new government will not go down. "I have known these facts for some time, and I have had the opportunity..." he said, reading from his notes. "I have come to the conclusion that the new government will not go down."

Florida voter turnout high to fill House seat

MIAMI (UPI) - Turnout was unusually high Tuesday at South Florida voters, ending a very bitter and ethnically divisive campaign, chose a successor to the late Rep. Claude Pepper. The battle to succeed the legendary Democrat, who represented the Miami area for 27 years, was tinged with racial charges and countercharges between Republicans Henry Waxman, a Cuban-American state senator, and Democrat Gerald Richman, a Jewish attorney.

Environmentalists attack Illinois company

WASHINGTON (UPI) - An environmental group, warning of a "clear and present danger" to the health of consumers, and a national chemical company Tuesday for continuing to export two controversial pesticides even though their use has been banned in the United States. Greenpeace, the international environmental organization, issued a report charging that the 4.8 million pounds of chlordane and heptachlor sold overseas by the Vulsic Chemical Co., of Rosemont during the past two years have come back to haunt U.S. consumers in the form of tainted food imports.

Artrain rolls into county in October
By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

Combining the attractiveness of a railroad train, and the focal point of children and toys, the nation's only traveling art museum the Artrain will be in the Carbondale area Oct. 19-24.
Active since 1971, the train, brainchild of Helen Milliken and the Michigan Council for the Arts, this year is conducting a four-state, 27-stop, MidWest tour encompassing Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin and Illinois.
Over its 18-year life, the train has visited 350 communities and 28 states.
Boasting a wide array of themes, the train features a collection of antique toys from Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson, former buyer and vice president of FAO Schwarz, a New York toy store. In addition, talents from both area artists and ones on board the train will be profiled.

fighting water, heat and insects in order to map about 1,200 acres of the 7,000 acre lake.

The map, which Frank said the department hopes to complete by 1996, was used by the refuge to help fishers locate fish and help boaters and water-skiers locate shallow water or underwater obstacles in the lake.

The refuge also will use the map in planning refuge management, Frank said. An example is the use of information collected by the group about lake water levels to determine the amount of green the refuge will be able to support this winter, he said.

University engineering technology students also surveyed the forest surrounding the lake, Frank said.

"We are actually making a relief map of the entire refuge," he said.

Dr. John Chen, dean of engineering and technology, said of the project, "I'm proud of our students."

Frank said the mapping work at "the kind of project you dream about but never actually think you'll have the money in your budget to do."

Dr. Chen declined to say whether the class could be offered next summer.

The project utilized University equipment, except for a boat loaned to the class by the refuge and a Trimble Global Positioning System loaned to the class by the St. Louis-based Saeler Instruments, Frank said.

A civil engineering technology class was awarded a "Take Pride in America" plaque Friday by Craig Orchard Lake National Refuge for its work mapping the lake's floor this summer.

University considers fast food franchises

FART CARS, fast money... fast food? Yes, fast food restaurants could be added to our Student Center by next spring. "Name-brand" pizza, hamburgers and ice cream may be filling the students stomachs if all goes well.

We are all for these restaurants inhabiting the Student Center. A proposal document will be sent to our Student Assembly. It is expected that all types of fast food services and food service companies will be considered. The restaurants with the highest bids will get the contracts, and the benefits seem clear.

THE FOOD service that SIU-C employs is Marriott. John Corker, director of the Student Center, said that there is a possibility of a fast food service company coming in with a fast food franchise itself, especially if the company owns a franchise.

Either way, the restaurants should be added. These are something that the students want, and will get at no cost to the student.

THESE FAST food franchises will pay for the construction of the restaurant. They will also stay open longer than the current food service operation, giving those students who stay on campus until late at night a chance to grab a quick bite to eat.

The franchises will also allow students who want to eat the infamous Big Mac or perhaps the Pizza Hut slice the chance to do so without going too far.

OTHER UNIVERSITIES have already taken the step and implemented fast food in their student unions or centers and found them to be advantageous.

We do agree that fast food is in. We've all seen how ugly a school yard can get when they have already taken the step to implement fast food in their student unions or centers.

The decision. Some believe that this will get just what policy or policy is enough. What is happening in Colombia now shows that the drug problem is a serious business, real war which requires many sacrifices of lives.

Colombia's war not only costs billions of dollars, the cost is living in a stage ofiglia, and families are under death threat and the country is living under constant violence.

Now, let's suppose that the government of Colombia wins the war against the drug dealers. If that happen, the drug dealers are just going to change their base of operations to another country and the price of drugs will rise.

With the prices up, those who abuse drugs will need more money to buy the same drug and delinquency will be on the rise.

IF that is the case, the war on Colombia will be a waste because the drug problem has two faces: those who produce drugs and drugs and those who use drugs.

Bush's decision to support the government of Colombia with more than 80 million dollars pleased and surprised the government and the people of Latin America. It pleased them because the United States, the drug user, is sharing responsibilities with Colombia. It surprised them because, before today, the so called "war on drugs" seemed more a rhetorical campaign than a real political decision.

Nevertheless, the effort must be completed and there must be a real policy to eliminate drug abuse. The drug problem is such a complex issue that it requires a permanent and constant long-term policy, which gets to the root of the problem.

President Bush might impose the death penalty on those who use drugs or he might make drug consumption legal, but the problem won't be solved.

People who abuse drugs, usually teenagers and poor minorities, are doing so because they want to escape from the reality that they are living in. Is it their reality or the way they perceive it? It could be changed, and is the first policy that late American government must implement.

The people of Colombia can't stand on the sidelines, they have already taken the step to implement fast food in their student unions or centers. They need the opportunity to change their reality.

The American people, family, government, community, and situation must give the people of Colombia the opportunity to change their reality.

The American government must give the drug abusers the opportunity to change their reality.

Students one step ahead of slow AIDS legislation

RECENT ACTION by the Illinois General Assembly, which mandates schools to adopt AIDS policies, comes after many schools in the state have already taken the initial steps.

We've all seen how ugly a school yard can get when uninformed citizens decide to protest the presence of a child with AIDS at their school. All they see is AIDS and the people they are trying to protect uninformed citizens because there is no basis for their prejudice, their anger, or even the insults they may pack in their own child's lunch to deliver to the child with AIDS.

It is not a question of being informed, then the problem lies in the unwillingness of the bigot to accept what has been proven to be true: The AIDS virus or related immune deficiencies cannot be transmitted to another person by sitting in the same classroom with the AIDS victim.

It IS surprising that such a precedent was not enacted by the General Assembly sooner. And it is to the credit of schools that acted before being told to act. The General Assembly did not tell schools they had to set any certain type of policy, only that they should have a policy, whatever it may be. The General Assembly also said it would be against the law to hinder the policies set by the individual schools.

The University shall not show discrimination in enrollment or employment, as well as confidentiality of records and medical information.

The AIDS virus has been around for several years, and will probably be around for several more years. It's time for everyone to realize that AIDS is something that we will have to live with, and, presumably, go to school with too.

Chinese leaders find economic growth stifled

Kansas City Times

China's outgoing ambassador to the United States, Han Xun, has begun the job of trying to repair his country's acute public relations crisis in a recent speech, he said his government believes it has faced a serious insurrection in Beijing.

"The government and the people of Colombia are giving us a new lesson. Declare the war on drugs at any cost. Drug dealer's mercenaries killed the Liberal President E. C. Galan two weeks ago, the audience thus confronted a Justice Minister in 1984 among many others.

As a response Colombian President Virgilio Barco initiated a crackdown on drug traffickers. On the other hand, drug dealers declared last week out of the game, politicians, journalists, magistrates, tradeunionists and even those who have opposed them.

Before the war that we are seeing now in Colombia, the drug problem was capable of illusion that made many people think that a simple "just say no" policy was enough. What is happening in Colombia now shows that the drug problem is a serious business, real war which requires many sacrifices of lives.

Colombia's war not only costs billions of dollars, the cost is living in a stage of negative percentage, and families are under death threat and the country is living under constant violence.

Now, let's suppose that the government of Colombia wins the war against the drug dealers. If that happen, the drug dealers are just going to change their base of operations to another country and the price of drugs will rise.

While some gain, others lose rights

Hey folks, has anyone noticed that the Eagle and the Bear have switched places right on stage? I don’t know how much of a change this will become, but so far one example of a strength rather than a weakness to the severity of the change.

Now that the invader is finally letting some of its sphere of influence have a few of their rights, while our leaders seem to like taking those rights away.

You may have noticed in the paper the Monday before last a few articles outlining some of the War that the against the Ukrainian community quite abolishing the pesky right of an individual to be charged by a publicly accountable community judge.

Handily, the police were only too happy, as foxes always are, to take advantage of this chap coop. The police get to decide why they will arrest you. No one but your parents need know of the why and how you will be picked up. Two thousand three hundred and thirty-three was taken over the weekend by 20,000 police. (Historical footnote: This does look like fascism, and we did fight a war against them.

Meanwhile, in Poland, the formerly capital crime of two parties of the government with bullies but with memos telling the ancient Polish communists to sit on their hands. Very, extremely, definitely not doable.

Prof says walk or bike it, but do not tear up field

I was indeed saddened by reading the article in the August 28th DE concerning new parking rules. Saddened, because of the loss of grass and trees necessary to breathe life into the earth. Must we pave over this entire University before we satisfy the unquenchable thirst of pervious cement for parking spaces? The law of diminishing returns does indeed provide less with bullies but with memos telling the ancient Polish communists to sit on their hands. Very, extremely, definitely not doable.

As a transfer student to SIU, I as well as many other students, have been reading the Daily Egyptian for the past four months. The paper was a welcomed surprise, while comprehensively covering current student events it also prints a great number of national interest articles.

I obviously have no complaints but as a first, I suggest that the paper include a list of television listings. This listing could be printed daily or inserted weekly in the paper. These listings would be invaluable to the measureless help to the many students of number of students with televisions.

Secondly, I suggest that the Daily Egyptian include current standings of Major League Baseball and Professional Football, whichever is in season.

I am a senior at SIU and have no knowledge of the policies of the Daily Egyptian and its present state is impractical because of space and cost cutting. My suggestions might simply encourage more people to drive.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials reflect a consensus of the Daily Egyptian staff. The Daily Egyptian is a newspaper of the SIU Student Government. Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247 Communications Building. Letters should be typed and of equal space. Letters are subject to review and will be limited to 200 words. Letters longer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Meanwhile still, in Columbia, we have our leaders and their reaction (not always to be expected from a group who really feel any given issue). Do we see the sway protestors of our constitution swearing and protecting our constitution? Not really, no instead, they’ll give over $65 million of your money to fund that kid on the face team.

Voyager holds small part of mankind as it travels beyond our solar system

In 1949, Christopher Columbus sailed the Atlantic Ocean and discovered the Americas. Three hundred years later, we are discovering our solar system and sailing uncharted regions of space.

I am sure most of you have heard of the two Voyager spacecraft that are now a hundred years later, we are discovering our solar system and sailing uncharted regions of space.

These and other valuable discoveries are priceless to our understanding of ourselves and of the universe. The further Voyager travels, the closer we come to understanding our origins. We are reaching to the heavens, but we are finding ourselves.

Questions and answers about planet Neptune

Here are the six major questions scientists posed before Voyager 2 visited Neptune and the answers obtained in the last six years.

The information was provided by Edward Stone, chief Voyager project scientist:

A. Voyager II have a magnetic field.

B. Yes, but it is tilted 50 degrees, surprisingly like that of Uranus.

C. How long is a day on Neptune?

D. About 16 hours, 3 minutes, faster than a day on Uranus, slower than a day on either Jupiter or Saturn.

E. What kind of weather does Neptune have?

F. Inside receiving less than 5 percent as much heat from the sun as Jupiter, Neptune possesses a huge storm system (the Great Dark Spot) similar to Jupiter’s Great Red Spot. Neptune possesses surprisingly active storms, ever-changing clouds that cast shadows and winds that reach 700 mph.

G. How many satellites does Neptune have and what are they like?

H. Neptune has at least three moons and several more "moonlets" associated with it's rings. A, B, and C, are irregularly shaped and small in geologic change since they were formed. This contrasts with moons of similar size at Uranus and Saturn, which show signs of substantial change since their formation.

I. How many rings does Neptune have?

J. At least three complete rings and two more possible ones. But ring material at distances beyond 400,000 miles from the planet is a mystery.

K. How big is the moon Triton?

L. Triton has a radius of 816 miles, making it about three-quarters as large as Earth’s moon.

M. How much is the percentage of rock that is similar to the material in the planet’s core?

N. It is the coldest known object in the solar system, with a surface temperature estimated at minus 450 degrees Fahrenheit.

American Lung Association sponsors bike trek

Fund-raising event traverses 106-miles; designed for bicyclists of various levels

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The Shawnee Trails Bike Trek is a chance for cyclists to have a lot of fun while raising money to help others, the organizer of the event said.

“This is a chance for people with good lungs to do something for people who don't have good lungs,” Helen Saunders said.

The bike trek, sponsored by the American Lung Association, is scheduled for Sept. 15 through 17 and will lead trekkers through Union, Johnson, Massac, Williamson and Jackson counties.

“We feel we will be able to accommodate three-day weekend for bikers,” Saunders said.

Saunders said the three-day, 106-mile trek across Southern Illinois is designed with cyclists of all skill levels in mind. She said that besides the regular part of the trek, there will be an optional 30-mile course for advanced cyclists in the Big Buy/New Columbia area of Massac County.

The course for the trek was plotted with the scenery of Southern Illinois in mind, Saunders said.

“We've got some people from out of Southern Illinois and we want to show them just how neat it is around here,” she said.

Saunders said the main purpose of the trek is to raise money to support various ALA programs which will benefit Southern Illinois. These programs include research, local clinics, and a camp for asthmatic children.

Participants must pay a registration fee of $25 and are required to raise at least $250 for the ALA.

The trekking event raises the most money will win a three-day and three-night vacation for two in Cancun, Mexico.

Saunders said.

All participants raising the minimum $250 will receive a T-shirt, but the trekker earning the most money will win a three-day and three-night vacation for two in Cancun, Mexico. Other prizes will be awarded for various amounts of money earned, Saunders said.

Saunders said trekkers earn the money by getting sponsors who pay in one lump sum or by the mile.

She said about $21,000 was raised by 40 trekkers last year and that that amount should easily be exceeded during this year's event.

There are 34 trekkers already entered, Saunders said, adding that half of last year's 80 cyclists signed up in the last month before the event. She said she expects to see the same trend this year.

there is a possibility of a food service company coming in with a fast food franchise, especially if the company owns a franchise.

"Fast food franchises shouldn't cost us a dime," T- 'brand said. "We'll go out for burgers and the highest bidder will get the contract."

Halebrand said the goal of getting fast food franchises is to encourage more students and members of the community to use the Student Center.

Corker said fast food franchises will stay open longer hours than the current food service operation. He also said that other schools have found fast food in their student centers to be advantageous.

Cambodian peace conference still deadlocked

U.S. delegate faults Communist factions for lack of progress in 19-nation session

PARIS (UPI) - A monitoring Cambodian peace conference remained deadlock Tuesday on the eve of its 11-year-old war.

"It became apparent ... that there was no possibility of meeting at this stage and the time has not yet come for a compromise," Foreign Ministry spokesman Jean Gueguinou said.

Gueguinou said negotiators at the conference, scheduled to end with a closing session of foreign ministers Wednesday, were heading "in the direction of a resumption of the conference in Paris within a few months, probably in the spring." The 19-nation conference remained deadlock over a power-sharing formula for the Cambodian government and the three rebel factions trying to depose it, along with an international control mechanism to monitor a cease-fire after the promised Vietnamese withdrawal next month, he said.

Other major powers apparently shared France's pessimism over the outcome of the conference, which France had initially hoped it would end with the signing of a peace accord for Cambodia.

Key participants at the opening, including Secretary of State James Baker, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen and U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, did not return to Paris for the final deliberations that began Monday.

A senior U.S. official also held out little hope for a settlement.

"After three and some weeks here, we do not see the will to move the game from the battlefield to a political process coming together any time we had hoped," said Richard Solomon, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs.

Solomon, who heads the U.S. delegation, blamed Cambodia's two communist factions - the Khmer Rouge guerrilla group and the Vietnamese-backed government - for the lack of progress. The Khmer Rouge, responsible for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians under the leadership of Pol Pot, was ousted by the Vietnamese invasion in December 1978. Since then, a three-party rebel coalition including the Khmer Rouge has been fighting to depose Vietnamese-backed Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen.

"It is very clear that both the communist factions are not in a compromising mood," Solomon said. "Our judgment is, given those realities - if there is no commitment (military testing)," said Solomon, But, "given the unwillingness of the parties to agree to participate in this coalition structure, it looks to us as though things are heading in that direction."

"It is very clear that both the communist factions are not in a compromising mood." Our judgement is, given these realities...clearly there is a basis for unfettered civil conflict."

—Richard Solomon, U.S. assistant secretary of state

U.S.-backed rebel leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk has insisted that the Khmer Rouge be included in the transitional government, while Hun Sen wants to deny them any significant role. Other major stumbling blocks to a settlement are:

- The composition of an international control mechanism to supervise the Vietnamese pullout;
- The organization of a cease-fire;
- A dispute over whether the word "genocide" should be banned to describe Cambodia's past in a final declaration.

In the future of Vietnamese settlers in Cambodia.

- The Vietnamese also said the deadlock could result in a suspension of the conference "leaving open the possibility of reconvening this forum some months down the road, when perhaps realities on the ground have given people a clear sense, of the real balance of forces at play here.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach announced last week that Vietnam retained the right to "reintervene in Cambodia ... if the Cambodian authorities ask us to come back in."

He refused to speculate about whether the United States would respond to such a re-intervention by stepping up aid to the rebels, saying such a decision would have to be made by the U.S. Congress.

 deployed a police to put down the disturbances, Yoon said.

The protests were organized by the National Council of Student Representatives, a hardline dissident group, which sent 100 Free Korean students to camp on campus and tried to take to the streets against the government.

About 1,000 students from Sungkyunkwan University in Seoul held a late afternoon rally on campus and tried to take to the streets against the government.

"The deaths of the leaders of the movement will make our position even stronger," said Suwon Police Chief, who heads the police in charge of the pro-democracy students.

Other students also said the deadline could result in a suspension of the conference "leaving open the possibility of reconvening this forum some months down the road, when perhaps realities on the ground have given people a clear sense of the real balance of forces at play here."

Communist unions consider ignoring strike moratorium

WARSZAWA, Poland—Chief Communist Party officials warned yesterday that pro-communist trade unions may ignore a proposed moratorium on strikes aimed at giving the new Solidarity-led coalition government a chance to revive Poland's shattered economy.

Pro-communist trade unions have been at loggerheads with the central government over economic reforms promised by Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a long-time Solidarity activist and head of Poland's first non-communist government since World War II.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa has said he will announce the moratorium once Mazowiecki has held a second meeting of his cabinet, probably in early September.

However, communist unions in earlier statements have warned they will ignore the moratorium and continue to strike.

Combining forces, the unions have been able to offer members perks such as substantial reductions in government homes.

"We cannot say that Walesa's prestige in society is indispensable," Joseph Oleksy, who heads the Council of Ministers' committee on trade unions, said in a telephone interview with United Press International.

"Not only the Solidarity union operates among the people," he warned.

Oleksy admitted that while observance of the proposed six-month moratorium would greatly benefit Poland there could be no guarantee resistant workers, both communists and non-communists, would halt work stoppages.

"We cannot be sure that strikes will not emerge for six months," Oleksy said, adding a moratorium would certainly be questioned by the international community and by pro-democracy groups.

Despite his warnings, workers across the country seem to be braving their support behind the new Solidarity government.

On Monday nine strikes ended and three new ones began at smaller enterprises, while four continued.

The country's main foreign travel agency, China International Travel Service, posted a staggering 94 percent plunge in business in July.

Crackdown in China to decimate tourist trade to tune of $1 billion

BEIJING—(UPI)—The brutal crackdown on democracy in an effort to stop an estimated $1 billion in lost hard currency revenue has taken a heavy toll on China's foreign travel industry, an official news report said Tuesday.

"The situation in July to nearly half the level of July 1988, but may be about recovery from June following the bloody crackdown, the report said.

"The nine rebel-run towns in July evidence of continued support for the "Gang of Four" and given a death sentence that was consigned to life imprisonment.

The tourism figures, carried by the English-language China Daily, underscored the introduction of public debate on "the way" by pro-democracy groups.

Chinese sources knowledgeable about party affairs have said the unions have been able to offer members perks such as substantial reductions in government homes.

Afghans, communists fight; 100 die near Pakistan border

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan—A whirlwind fighting between U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas and communist troops is continuing around a government-held town in eastern Afghanistan, with more than 100 casualties reported since last week, rebels said Tuesday.

Also Tuesday, the most powerful group fighting the pro-Soviet Kabul government, in a further blow to rebel unity, said it would not attend a planned meeting of its counterpart in the Pakistan-based rebel government, calling for a consultative council to be held.

The rebel-run Medef Information Department of Islamic Afghanistan said in a statement that at least 70 guerrillas have been killed or wounded in fighting that broke out last week around the eastern towns of Khost, 20 miles from the Pakistan border.

It estimated government casualties at about 40, but another 65 soldiers and militia members have taken refuge in Pakistan. Medef said reports were still coming in Tuesday of new battles in the area.

Two officials at Kabul Radio said heavy rebel shelling of Khost Tuesday left six soldiers dead, but that in related operations, 15 rebels were killed and 29 injured.

Rebel sources on Monday said the guerrillas last week captured a military garrison nearby, but said one of those was reaken by government troops a day later.

Khost was the scene two years ago of one of the biggest military operations of the Afghan civil war.

Thousands of troops and guerrillas died at Soviet and Afghan government forces attempted to break a rebel siege of the town.

Last February, Moscow complained a withdrawal of its troops backing the Kabul government.

However, the rebels have since had little military success, in part due to a lack of coordination among the resistance groups. A rebel operation launched in March to capture eastern Jalalabad city ended in a devastating defeat.

The failures by the resistance, which is backed by the United States, China and some Middle East nations, have prompted speculation it may be forced to negotiate an end to the war with the Kabul government.

In a further blow to resistance unity, the Hezb-e-Islami guerrilla group said in a statement it would no longer attend meetings of the interim rebel government until elections are held in refugee camps and rebel-held areas of Afghanistan.

Bush, staff discuss aiding Colombians

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (UPI) - President Bush convened his top security advisers, bush foreign and domestic, Tuesday to review plans for a boost in aid for cocaine-crippled Colombia in an effort to obtain U.S. aid, particularly equipment that can be used to protect Colombian judges and others officials who are under threat of assassination by the Medellin drug cartel.

"We have asked the United States for more support, not only in words, but in resources. ... I am very pleased with what we have done so far, and I think we can work out things," she said. President Bush has been "very supportive" of her country's efforts.

She said she was asking for aid package of "around $19 million."

De Greiff said her country is not seeking U.S. troops. "We have our own armed forces and they are doing their job," she said.

The minister also rejected the suggestion that many judges and other officials are on the payroll of the drug cartels. "That is the image many of you have, but that is not true."

Justice to return home despite threats on life

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Colombian Justice Minister Monica de Greiff said Tuesday that she will not resign her post despite threats against her life by cocaine traffickers.

De Greiff told a news conference in Washington, where she has been seeking U.S. aid for the fight against the drug cartels, that she will return to Colombia next week to continue her work.

There had been reports de Greiff, 32, the junior justice minister Colombia has had in four years, would resign, but she said she had never considered such a step.

"Contrary to what you may have heard, I am calm and I don't believe in such remarks. I have not even talked to the authorities in Colombia, and we must protect her."
Jesse Jackson vists family of teen slain in racial attack

NEW YORK (UPI) - The Rev. Jesse Jackson Tuesday met with the family of a black teenager who was killed by whites in Mississippi in what authorities described as a racially motivated attack. Jackson, in comments released in a newspaper column, expressed his sympathy to the family of the teen. The teen, whose name was not released, was shot dead in a confrontation in Jackson County, Mississippi. Jackson declined to say whether the slaying was racially motivated.

Report says Beijing is continuing brutal political repression

BEIJING (UP) — The brutal crackdown on democracy demonstrators in China last October, which left 100,000 in jail and millions on the run, is continuing, according to a new report by human rights organizations. The report, based on interviews with former prisoners and eyewitness accounts, says the government is using a variety of methods to suppress political dissidents, including torture, arbitrary arrest, and secret trials. It also says that the government is using secret police units to monitor and arrest dissidents and their families.

As cinematic gnomes go, there's nothing new about this version, save for the restoration of qualities lost upon release. "Oz" after seeing it violated by a crusades on CBS for decades and encroached upon in such pictures as "That's Entertainment!" and the film books, it takes an exquisitely restored Technicolor print to make you appreciate its original beauty and appeal.

Voyager 2 leaving solar system; ending a 'Decade of discovery'

Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) - Voyager 2's historic flyby of Neptune and its volcanic moon Triton marked the climax of a "decade of discovery," scientists said Tuesday.

A final news conference, five days after the plucky robot raced past Neptune, scientists showed awed journalists a spectacular computer-generated movie based on Voyager 2 pictures that gave the illusion of swooping over the surface of Triton, where scientists believe nitrogenic ice volcanoes may exist.

It was a remarkable finale to the fourth and final planetary encounter in Voyager 2's 12-year space odyssey, a journey that has carried the craft past Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, a host of moons and now Neptune—a flyby known as "the last picture show" to the men and women at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"As exciting as the encounter with Neptune has been, this encounter is really only the fourth and final planet that Voyager has revealed in an unprecedented decade of discovery in its journey through the outer solar system," project scientist Edward Stone said.

$42 million handed out in state lottery

Chicago (UPI) - A couple stepped forward to claim the $42 million Illinois Lottery Jackpot and said Tuesday the instant wealth leaves them numb and overwhelmed.

William and Kathleen Madigan of Hometown, Ill., told a news conference Tuesday at the State of Illinois Center they had bought just 12 tickets—all of them with numbers chosen by the lottery computer.

"I really don't know what we're going to do with it. We just feel numb," said William Madigan, 50. "It's really frightening and scary."

Madigan said he realized he and his wife had won when they checked their tickets at 10 p.m. Saturday.

"It was the first time we had an indication that any of the tickets were any good," he said. "I didn't believe it. I called Kathy in from the other room and said, 'Here, you check.'"

Madigan said he will continue to work as a supervisor at Kane County's Carbondale until the end of the year.

He said he has fantasized about what he would do if he won the lottery—but "I just can't remember.

The family planned a quiet vacation to celebrate the new-found wealth.

"We won't be home for a while," William Madigan said.

The Madigans were accompanied by their three children Jennifer, 38, said she will quit her sales job at the Mole Hole gift shop in Oak Lawn.

"I apologized to my bosses but I've been working for a long time and now I would like to stay home and enjoy my children," she said adding that she also plans to devote more time to the Ronald McDonald House charity.

The winning ticket was bought at White's Pantry in Oak Lawn. William Madigan said he has been buying $10 worth of tickets every week for the past six years, had gone into the store to buy a newspaper and bought the ticket as an afterthought.

The children were not told about the winning ticket until Monday and the family hired a lawyer to set up an investment plan before stepping forward, he said.

The Madigans will receive $2.1 million per year for the next 20 years.

It doesn't matter how you bat as long as you can hit the ball

By Bob Hertzel

Script Howard News Service

Stan Musial's career batting average was .331. People always wondered how he did it.

"He's the greatest player of all time," said Piniella. "He was so accurate in hitting.

"He looks like a kid pecking around the corner to see if the cope are going to stop him," said Piniella. "He was a really great hitter.

There are many things to admire about Musial's hitting. He's been a very successful hitter over his entire career. He's produced a great deal of power.

Musial's hitting 230 with four homers it would be a hitch.

With Jay Bell of the Pirates the movement of the bat is not a timing device. It's a hitch and he and May have been trying to correct it.

"Jay started with the bat down and pointing straight up and down," said May. "That's fine. A lot of guys get hit there. In his situation he's trying to get the bat into position as his foot was getting down. It meant he had to rush to get to right position.

So they decided to lay the bat on Bell's shoulder so they couldn't drop so dramatically.

"For me it's the quickest way to steal," said Bell.

Most hitters would find it difficult to keep the bat on the shoulder. Much of hitting comes from extending the arms and they can't be extended when they are holding the bat in tight.

By Bob Hertzel

"I've looked at Clemente's swing a thousand times and it's one of the most interesting to watch. You watch at the point where the foot touches the ground.

"Bell, however, is said is comfortable.

"I've always been one to take change is a positive way. I've been trying times in my career.

"When Bell, lowering the hands was a way to correct a problem. Other hitters have different approaches.

One of the most obvious was Clemente. As Davis connected for what 10, 10 he held his bat up high like Yastrzemski.

"He was always one of the guys I looked up to as a player in high school. I wondered how he could hit like that," said May. "I don't know how he does it. I can only assume he had reasons because if you want to be a hitter you have to be in the big leagues.

"I know that because I was bat buying on opposing teams in the major leagues. He had a normal stance then. I'd guess he used a heavy-footed bat during that period of time and held it high because you need some movement to get momentum going.

When May got to the major leagues he held his bat up high like Yastrzemski.

There is a trend returning to baseball among the power hitters, who are hitting their feet high into the air, maybe a foot too far and a half off the ground, as they stride.

The individuality of the hitter is endless. Al Simmons, a Hall of Famer, used to step in the batters box to the side rather than straight ahead - yet hit .334 during his career.

Ty Cobb had his hands spread as far as the bat for control, something that Joe Lind of the Pirates does to a far lesser degree.

Some hitters close their eyes, others open them so they are almost looking at the pitcher. The Astro's Glenn Wilson is one such hitter. So is Jerome Walton of the Chicago Cubs, who had a 30- game-hitting streak earlier this season.

It doesn't matter how you bat as long as you can hit the ball.
Rozelle suspends 13 players for use of anabolic steroids

By United Press International

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle Tuesday suspended 13 players for violations of the league's drug rules, marking the first time an American professional sports league has ordered a mass suspension for using the muscle-building drugs.

All the suspended players are eligible to return to their teams on Sept. 1, unless some other drug test to prove they are clean of steroids, if their suspensions will be extended.

The most prominent player on a list that is mainly of rookies and marginal players is Philadelphia offensive guard Ron Soil, a 1967 Pro Bowl choice with the Indianapolis Colts who was acquired by the Eagles last season.

The commissioner's action came one day after U.S. District Judge Dan Roselle signed a request by the NFL Players Association, which represents more than 15,000 NFL players, to block the suspensions and the release of the names of players from those who tested positive for steroids.

The list of players suspended did not include those who tested positive for steroids but have already been punished by the clubs.

NFL Director of Public Relations Jim Heffernan said the league would not disclose how many players no longer under contract with the teams tested positive for steroids.

The suspended players came from 13 different teams, with the Buffalo Bills having three players and the Cowbys and New York Jets having Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers each having two apiece.

Among Buffalo's three suspended players were defensive end Ernie Dace, linebacker back, and Tom Doctor, a linebacker, along with cornerback Mel Renfro. All three tested positive for steroids.

Maurice Upshaw, the Los Angeles Raiders tight end and Venus Kirk of the Los Angeles Rams, were suspended by the NFL for using steroids.

Seattle's wide receiver Dave Elmendorf back, and Tom Doctor, a linebacker, along with cornerback Mel Renfro. All three tested positive for steroids.

Maurice Upshaw, the Los Angeles Raiders tight end and Venus Kirk of the Los Angeles Rams, were suspended by the NFL for using steroids.

Upshaw: Drug policies contradictory in NFL

By United Press International

Gene Upshaw, chief of the NFL Players Association, just can't understand why a player who uses cocaine, an illegal drug, is treated more gently by Commissioner Pete Rozelle than a player who uses anabolic steroids, an off-the-shelf prescription muscle-building drug.

Rozelle Tuesday suspended 13 players, most of them rookies or marginal players, for flunking one test for steroids. Under NFL rules, it would have taken two failed drug tests for Rozelle to suspend a player for using such street drugs as cocaine.

"They should be treated the same way," said Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director.

In a statement released Tuesday, the league explained why cocaine users get a second chance before they are suspended, while steroid users get just one.

"The... for the quickie discipline is the competitive edge that steroid users can obtain on the playing field," the statement said. "We feel that steroids pose a special threat to the basic concepts of competition and sportsmanship on which public confidence in the NFL depends."

Rozelle's decision to suspend the players for using steroids, signaling the first time an American professional sports league has punished steroid-users... drew strong opposition from the players' union, police from some club officials and interesting allies from at least one of the punished players.

Chicago Bears safety Maurice Douglas speculated that the positive drug test may have resulted from medication he took for a wrist injury in January.

"I have never to my knowledge taken any anabolic steroids," Douglas said. "I took something that wasn't a steroid. A guy who knew how to take it and sell me a pill. That hurt my wrist, I didn't think it was a steroid. I've never been on them in my life."

"I was just a patient," he said.

Douglas said he had been taking a prescription painkiller called Tylenol.

"I didn't take it in any form that could cause anything like this," he said.

Douglas said he had been told by Rozelle that he was the only player suspended for using steroids.

"I don't know why, I'm just a patient," he said.

Douglas also criticized Rozelle for releasing the names of the steroid-users.

Evert plans to seek a more private life after U.S. Open

NEW YORK (UPI) - Don't let the fact that she still answers to Chris Pointers and wears colorful hair accessories fool you. At age 34, Chris Evert has been much changed from the teenager who two-fisted her way to the summit of female tennis.

- While her romances still carry fascination, the last one was with Jimmy Connors' girlfriend, the woman eager to let the world in on her second husband, Andy Mill.

The shy teen-age whose tennis games were on the hands of her father and whose heart was once in the hands of her tennis coach, now confesses lovesick distractions cost her titles — has become the spokeswoman for the women's tour as president of the Women's International Tennis Association.

Tennis is a sport that allowed the world to watch Evert grow. But she finally discovered she wants more private time, and after this U.S. Open, she no longer wants to earn her living playing a game.

"I'm said all year this is my last year," she said Tuesday after winning her first-round match against Betiina Fulco, 6-4, 6-2. "Now everybody's shocked I did it. I thought it was a big deal."

Oh, but it is. On a sunny, drizzly afternoon, the sparse crowd marveled for her match points and appeared more crowed than usual when Evert won three straight games to be up 4-4.

Evert said she was aware of more support but hadn't considered the match the start of the grand farewell. Evidently, though, her fans aren't the only ones open to the possibility.

"It doesn't feel different with me," she said. "Martina (Navratilova) asked me before I went out there, 'Does it feel any different?' I didn't really know."

"I'm aware of the people's reactions. I could get real emotional if I let myself but I can't do it because I don't want to forget why I'm out there. And I'm not out there for them to clap and praise and thank me for all the years of tennis. I'm out there with a tennis racquet."

Note the mood. No tournament manning, Match. Through 16 Grand Slam singles championships (six U.S. Opens), Evert was nothing if not focused on the moment at hand. The instant associations with her game was the two-fisted backhand. But there was also the diligence cool intensity.

"My trademark has been concentration," she said. "When I missed a ball, I didn't think too much about it."

"Now that I don't have that (concentration), I see how tough I really was. I see what they were talking about; 'killer instincts...single-mindedness...like a machine out there...incredible intensity,' " Evert said.

"I'm worthy of a Grand Slam champion for the last time."

"I looked ahead at the draw and I have every big name in my way," she said.

Then again, Chris Evert's opponents will have to play as big a game as they did — and has been for nearly two decades.

Yankees' Thrift leaves, team's woes continue

NEW YORK (UPI) - Syd Thrift, a throw baseball executive who this season tried to restore his career by the troubled world of the New York Yankees, Tuesday resigned as the club's senior vice president of baseball operations.

The Yankees made the announcement in a three-paragraph statement and said Thrift cited "personal" reasons for the decision. The team named no successor.

The move comes 11 days after Yankee owner George Steinbrenner fired Manager Dallas Green.

"He talked to me for a long time earlier this year," Green said. "There were discussions for leaving the Yankees were personal and as far as I am concerned, they will remain personal with the statement quoted Steinbrenner as saying.

Steinbrenner had taken Thrift off his board of directors and later criticized him, saying: "It's about that good boy of old stood up and walked out.

Thrift departs with the franchise in turmoil. Entering Tuesday night's game with the Atlanta Braves, the Yankees had lost five straight to plummet 17 games under .500.

Green's successor, Bucky Dent, lost 10 of his first 12 games.

Lomax out for season

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) —Phoenix Cardinals' quarterback Neil Lomax, suffering from degenerative arthritis in his left hip, was placed on the NFL's injured reserve list Tuesday, making him ineligible to play this season.

The Cardinals said that Lomax, an eight-year veteran and two-time Pro Bowl selection, will remain with the team and continue to participate in hopes of returning his career in 1990.

Lomax missed two full games and portions of four others during the 1988 season because of the arthritis. His participation in pre-season camp this year was limited and he did not practice in any of Phoenix's three preseason games.

The loss of Lomax leaves the Cardinals' quarterback job to Craig Hodgecock, signed as a free agent last winter.

Besides placing Lomax on the injured reserve list, the Cardinals waived tight end Mark Walczak and applied for a roster exemption for offensive tackle Luis Sharpe to add the veteran to the 53-man roster.

Sharpe signed a two-year contract Monday, reportedly for between $1.2 million and $1.3 million.

The Cardinals said the application for a roster exemption was made because of Sharpe's late arrival.

If granted, Phoenix would be allowed to carry one extra player on its roster through the regular-season games or until the Super Bowl.

Lomax, a second-round draft choice out of Portland State in 1981, completed 253 of 443 attempts for 3,395 yards and 20 touchdowns during the 1988 season when he passed the 20,000- yard mark in his career.
Cubs set Wrigley attendance mark, reach 2 million fans at record pace

Imagine being hit by more than 290 pounds of trunk, sweat and dirt propelled by an inescapable desire to move anything in its way. This is what happened over 75 times during a three-hour period.

On any given Saturday during football season, about ten Saluki football players who fit the above description spend an entire game fighting “in the trenches” for little or no reward.

But they wouldn’t have it any other way. You know how it is, 275-pound center Bob Grammer said the satisfaction of being a lineman comes when the team puts points on the board.

Grammer seldom hears his name announced in the loudspeaker at the games or reads his name in the papers like quarterbacks, running backs and receivers do, but he doesn’t mind.

“Going to the game is what we got paid to do,” Grammer said. “The more headlines the other guys got, the more clothes they were doing.”

Grammer has started 33 consecutive games in center for the Salukis and is considered the anchor of the offensive line by offensive line coach Scott Meyer.

Meyer considers Grammer the quarterback of the offensive line and an essential part of the new offensive system.

The Saluki offensive line battled it out with the defensive line of Arkansas State during the 45-43

The Salukis were led by defensive line coach Ralph Young. Hart expects strong support from the defensive line positions are very important.

"To be a lineman you have to be a guy who really and truly is a football player," Young said, "especially with the speed of today's game."

It’s hard being a lineman because every play you’re involved in some phase of contact with some part of your body," Young said. "These guys are unsung heroes.

The defensive linemen may run 350, but they want to run "especially with the speed of today's game."

"The lineman is like the catcher in baseball because they’re involved in all the action but receive little press," Young said. "Linemen have to have a sense of humor," Young said. "And I have some characters."

According to Young, 6-foot-4, 260-pound senior Shannon Ferbrache has a personality that may set him on a job as a late night show host. He should do it.

But presently, Young considers Lineman Martin the one of his best defensive linemen.

Hochertz said he wanted to be a linebacker in high school but because of his size was delegated to the line. Hochertz, 6-5, 235, went to Caray-Grove High School.

Like Grammer, Hochertz’s job is to make someone else’s job easier.

“if our linemen can get 100 tackles in a season then we’re doing our job,” Hochertz said. “It’s our job to keep them clean.”

The Salukis have had three head coaches in as many years. Athletic Director Jim Hart is Optimistic about the season, in spite of the frequent turnover.

Bob Smith will be entering his first year as the Redbird helm when the Salukis play Sept. 2 at Nebraska. With the exception of second-year head coach Bruce Halls and Stanley King, the Salukis are adjusting to an all-new coaching staff.

“I am really excited about the way they’re preparing for the upcoming season,” Hart said. “At this point I think we know how difficult the situation is. The players are trying to get back to new coaching strategies.

Hart feels that the players are handling the situation well. “The job the coaches are doing is excellent and the players are saying good things about them. I have hope for a competitive season and I am excited about the way they’re preparing for the season.”

Last season the Salukis won four games before losing the last five. The team finished with a overall record of 4-7 and fifth in the conference. After a 2-4 mark under former head coach Rick Rhoades, Hart feels the team ran into some bad luck last season.

“I don’t think it was Rhoades’ fault,” Hart said. “The football team had some injuries last year that were hard to overcome. Scott Gabbert stepped in and performed very well when (Fred) Gibbons was sidelined. Those injuries can really hurt you under this Bob (Smith) can keep them going if they get adversity.”

Hart is pleased with the support shown by Undergraduate Student Government President Tim Hildebrand and other student organizations. “The groups I have talked to are all excited,” Hart said. “The Greeks and freshmen seemed really enthused.”

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and city council member John Mills also have been very supportive, as well as many area merchants, Hart said. “The excitement level is better all around and it was last year,” Hart said.

Another issue facing Coach Smith is the campaign to eliminate football, initiated in the spring by anthropologist professor Jerome Handler. Hart, however, chooses to focus on the positive aspects brought out by the controversy.

“This situation made everyone who loves football get involved,” Hart said. He praised the rhetorical, thought-provoking question: If you take away football, what’s next?

Fortunately for the football program, Hart said, a lot of community and University support has proven that Saluki football still is a popular commodity.

Hart also said that since the Voluntary and Football season season on the same weekend, a special promotion has been planned.

Cubs make up 9 runs to win in extra innings

CHICAGO (UPI) Houston Astros' Harold Ramirez set a club record with seven RBI Tuesday, but it was not enough to stop the Chicago Cubs' roller-coaster ride with destiny.

Ramirez's second career grand slam in the fifth inning off reliever Lee Wilkins gave Houston a commanding 10-6 lead. The Cubs then took over with Dwight Smith capturing a dramatic comeback with an RBI single in the 10th inning of the West Chicago 10-9 win.

The Cubs, who broke a six-game losing streak last week that saw their lead in the NL East dwindle to one and a half games, now have won three straight. Three of their last four wins have been in extra innings, and they have now have three come-from-behind wins for the season.

"This is going to send a message in Montreal, St. Louis and New York," said Smith, who threw out Ramirez on a key play in the eighth and then transformed the game in the bottom of the inning with a sacrifice fly. "This ball is for real, and it's a 24-run ballgame."

Ramirez looked like a come- back candidate for Houston. He had an RBI hitter's choice in the second, a two-run double in the fourth and his second career grand slam in the fifth.

Ramirez, who hits a great deal and is a product of the Dominican Republic, said he would be happy to play in another major league team.

The Cubs began their comeback slowly. Grace scored from second on a single hit by Joe Morgan in the sixth and Domingo Ramos drove in a run with an RBI single.

"Ramirez had an outstanding game offensively," astro manager Art Howe said. "It's a shame we lost the game. That's probably the best game of his career."
