Students’ Ousted Appeals May Be Heard by Board

Appeals of six of eight students expelled after a break-in at President Delyne W. Morris’ residence in May 1968, may be considered at the August meeting of the SIU Board of Trustees, according to Paul Morrill, assistant to the president.

The Board’s willingness to review the appeals depends on whether, in light of the findings of a three-man faculty-administration panel, the appeals warrant review, Morrill said. The panel met in late May and early June to investigate the break-in.

Records of the investigative meetings have been sent to Board of Trustees members.

Board members have given no indication whether they will review the appeals, Morrill said.

Morrill said that the expulsions continue in effect even though the Board will not meet for more than a month.

TWO LEGAL COUNSEL. Richard Gruny said East St. Louis attorney Richard G. Young had written the Board June 18 requesting that it postpone reviewing the cases of Bell, Dawson, Singleton, Thurmond and Walker until after the August meeting when more complete legal briefs and motions could be made available to the Board.

The Jackson County Grand Jury last Thursday indicted the eight in connection with the break-in.

Council Moves Slowly
To OK Renewal Project

The Carbondale City Council moved slowly as only the first three items on the agenda were completed before the meeting Tuesday evening.

Actions taken by the members included:

- the decision to abide by an earlier ruling requiring dedication of an additional 20-foot right-of-way for a plat of land owned by Dr. John Peterson and located in the Hunter Woods subdivision.

- pending a resolution approving the report and recommendations on the College Neighborhood Urban Renewal Project given by William J. Burns, Community Conservation Board (CCB) Commissioner.

- The reading of a letter from the vice-president of the Illinois Central Railroad and an immigration by Mayor David Keene that his office is awaiting confirmation of another meeting date with railroad officials to discuss future passenger station locations.

A member of the CCB told the Council that 27 families, of which 16 are student-families living in the College Neighborhood project area, may have been relocated. The relocation period designated in the plan may now extend up to 18 months, according to Burns.

There are about 1,200 persons living in the area though only about 400 single students will need to be relocated. Many of the others live in existing dormitories which will not be affected by the urban renewal.

Lincoln Park Program Draws 150 Kids Daily

By Brian Trenach

“Do your own thing” seems to be the advice given to youngsters playing at the special facilities constructed for the Lincoln Recreational Park Program this summer.

Every day about 150 students come to the park to make use of the colorful facilities erected and supervised by the SIU Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education.

The park is subdivided into five separate areas, each with its own facilities and staff. The five areas are the Tot Lot Center, the Music and Drama Center, the Arts and Crafts Center, the Teen Center, and the Nature Center.

In addition there is a special Swimming Center provided free of charge by the University City Dormitories every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Special events are also planned for the children including nature hikes, bicycle rodeos, roller skating, fishing, and dancing.

On July 4, a special holiday celebration for adults as well as children will be presented.

“Children will be water in the summer. A multi-scale circus with animal acts and professional circus performers will be presented on the park grounds. Last day for the special summer program will be August 17.”

Sarah Thompson, 12, who lives on East Freeman, said she comes to the park every day because “there’s lots to do and lots of fun.” She said she and her brothers and sisters recently caught the most fish at a fishing contest sponsored by the park. Reginald Miller, 10, said he has become an expert at playing “carom,” a table-top game similar to pool having only four pockets and using checkers instead of balls. Reginald said he planned to come to the park every day for the rest of the summer just in case somebody started to get as good as he is.

“If anybody starts to get good I’ll just have to see ‘em down,” he said.

Paul Stevenson, playground director, said that his staff is primarily interested in finding out what the children want to do and then helping them do it.

Stevenson said registration is open to all children free of charge and that each youngster who registers will receive a special “I play at Lincoln” button. In addition, he said, the program is especially interested in attracting parents and students to come and help with the program.

Stevenson said registration is open to all children free of charge and that each youngster who registers will receive a special “I play at Lincoln” button.

The Lincoln Recreation Park Program is primarily the product of William Ridgler, chairman of the Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education. He said the program is one of the largest University operations in the country in which the school directly enters the local community to assist in community development.

Park Program Draws Crowds

Ridinger, a alumni of Columbia University, said that perhaps much of the recent discord there could have been avoided if that school had first set up similar community involvement projects.

In addition to the Department of Recreation and Outdoor education, the Carbonate Park District and the Carbonate City government are fully cooperating with the Lincoln Recreation Park Program.

Stevenson said the park is being set up as an example for other communities, showing them how an effective summer playground facility can be set up at little expense.

Many of the various centers were built by inmates of Vienna State Prison Farm, Stevenson said. He noted that the men had constructed the frontier fort using the same kind of wood and construction that the original frontier fort used. He also said the wooden stick horses used by the children were also made by the men.

Stevenson said the goals of the park are simply to all the children ’free play: creative thinking.’ He said the park program is open Monday through Friday from 12:15 to 2:45 p.m., Wednesday.

STARRING FRED MACMURRAY - TOMMY STEELE - GREER GARSON
Some Poor Had Steak

On at least three occasions, large groups of poor people's demonstrators wearing dungarees marched into Washington restaurants, sweetly, and then marched out without paying the bill. The attendant of mass lunacy was led by the Rev. A. D. King, brother of the late Martin Luther, who depicted test 96 of his brethren to a steak dinner at the $4.50-a-plate hotel, but when the group insisted on being served they were asked to leave. The meal was over Mr. King given a bill for $16.50, which he said was all he had, and led his followers out of the hotel. When he was figuring it was luckier than it might have been, decided not to pursue the matter.

Martin Luther King proffessed to deploring, but we can't see that what his brother has done is very different. The latter Mr. King is probably congratulating himself on having put a slick one over on a rich hotel, just as his colleagues may be hoping to put a slick one over on Congress. When applicants for help start asking if they should do more on a personal bases, anybody ordering a steak dinner should expect to pay these days. Mr. King handed over $106, which he said was all he had.

All-Black Economy Idea Rejected

In a commencement address Monday, Andrew Brimmer, a Federal Reserve Board member and a Negro, rejected the notion of an all-black economy on the reasonably reasoned economic grounds. He argued persuasively and realistically that a separate black community can provide neither full employment for its members nor all the goods and services they want to buy. Birmmer urged the graduates of Clark College, Georgia, to use their option to take jobs in the world economy.

They key word in his analysis is "integration." Birmmer said that the Negro college graduates haven't had any choice outside their own community. They have generally been unaware of or unwilling to take advantage of opportunities to move outside of the barriers that they do have. Unfortunately, this will remain the case for some time. Moreover, of course, many Negroes have few if any marketable job skills at all.

It is easy to conclude on such evidence that the Negro must seek his future outside the mainstream of America. Marcus Garvey's back-to-Africa movement and its counterpart: The proposal to carve out a separate black nation within America. But neither program nor any other along the same lines represents a practical, realistic, and radical solution to the American dream must be a reality, for our twenty million American Negroes.

It is important that Birmmer and others who have won the prizes of the wider world hammer home to Negro college graduates that they, too, can make good. But it is at least equally vital that spokes­ men in Negro colleges should be able to break down the dropouts and encourage un­ registered voters. It is also in the best interest of the nation to encourage them like it really is. Until they do, Negro separatism will continue and the Negro will live only in his ghetto, with all of the problems which this involves.

An Editor's Outlook

Students Mix Ethics, Fun, and Games

By Jenkis Lloyd Jones

In the clackstaff struggle between Life and Look magazines for the national circulation sweepstakes, we're getting a lot of gee-whiz journalism these days.

One of the lip-smackiest pieces of geewhizery appeared in the Life of May 31 and consisted principally of a number of testimonia to the spiritually en­nobling effect of college shackup, to be known henceforth, apparently, as "the arrangement." Dr. J. Reis of the University of Chicago described the end of the "double standard" under which the collegiate male was more sex-corporal than the end, and he forecast "healthier, more open modes of attitude." Dr. William Masters, the Kinsey researcher, forecast "arrangement" rather than weaker relationships, and Dr. W. H. Seward spoke rather vaguely about "not so much a decline to moral codes as a change in their contents," meaning, apparently, that students who went to college are a lot higher class than those who sleep with anybody.

Dean of Students Wally Stites of Antioch College says: "I feel like asking whose business all this is. Sexual fun and games aren't important here. Much more important, our students are working toward living by a set of values. They have a very ethical approach to life."

All good students want to be ethical. If you can be ethical with fun and games, boy—that's egg in the back of the hogs. As to the cohabiting students themselves, Life claimed to have interviewed 75 couples. Although all expressed pride in their new emancipation, few wanted their names used. Indeed, the testimonial had the foggy quality of old patern medicine ads in which Dr. M. W. of North Dakota allows in how Chief Muskra's Electric Oil cleans her away from death's door.

So in Life we read that Patty and Al in New Orleans are so determined not to get "hung up" that neither squawks when the other does. The set aside the shot and Ed and Carol of Berkeley live in a room with a gym with each other, but it's quite a proper arrangement because, as Ed says, they "don't like their ear plugs."

A certain UCLA coed assures that she and her bed companion are not prepared to have children outside marriage. "I don't care for any kids being illegitimate particularly," she said. This is a very great sentence and should be engraved on some­thing.

Millie at Berkeley says she'd tell Ned she really loves him but it sounds "too Dick and-Janeish." Presumably the idea is that the student of higher matters, like the Vietnamese War, a Harvard senior de­scribes his arrangement as "a fundamental new consciousness much bigger than morality."

And Laura in San Francisco is apparently just cuddly. "Living together," she claims, "is nice on Sunday mornings when you have nothing to do."

Life magazine is a powerful advertising medium, and after these warm endorsements the inci­dence of college bundling ought to go up 1000%: When you mix urine with holy rationalization, you're bound to get a lot of action. With the pill and penicillin, the old deterrents of pregnancy and venereal disease can be handled and no one seems to believe in hell anymore. So the Minnesota coed who last year said she con­sidered intercourse a mere social gesture like shaking hands natur­ally drew a great deal of male interest.

The only possible trouble is that marriage was invented as a sort of price for "fun and games." Until the Great Society came along with subsidies for casual children, the male was supposed to acknowled­ge the difference in status, and blithely accept the fine in the vineyard to support those who didn't begin to ring.

People who have no intention to beget might sleep around without benefit of clergy to no great detri­ment of society, but after a while most women get very broody and want real children.

If the male, in the meantime, has been taught that he can have fun and games without such hangups as dirty diapers and baby shoes, and if his previous pleasures are denied him in an effort to get him to the altar, he may go else­where.

What really looms is the emascu­lation of the male—a distressing weakness of much of America's ghetto society—in which the living­ in of the man without the responsi­bilities of husbandhood has contri­buted to the wastes, to the thrushes in the alert to bottle the beveragage.

The secret of the Coca-Cola con­centrate, needless to say, must be the best-guarded formula in the world. The substance also must defy analysis, else it could be bottled.

If the U.S. government has any secrets it would like to keep, per­haps a study of the security system used by the Coca-Cola company would be in order.

Pop Popular With Reds

The vaunted Communist spy apparatus at last has been foiled in an attempt to obtain secret information. The Reds obtained atom and hydrogen bomb information with apparent ease from the most secret recesses. They have lured high-ranking British officials to Communist countries as defectors. No doubt they have access to Chinese bomb secrets.

Books are pirated outside the I.R.C. Customs and published with no thought of royalty payments. Inventions from the Western world are re-invented by Communist propagandists. But their flameless infiltrators met their match when they took on the Coca-Cola company of Atlanta, Charles W. Adams, senior vice-president, announced it will sell its soft drink syrup to com­paniest in Hungary and Yugoslavia and broadcast scenic alerts to bottle the beverage.

The secret of the Coca-Cola con­centrate, needless to say, must be the best-guarded formula in the world. The substance also must defy analysis, else it could be bottled.

If the U.S. government has any secrets it would like to keep, per­haps a study of the security system used by the Coca-Cola company would be in order.

Some 26,000 Plants Create Floral Clock At Edinburgh Castle

BY Gordon Irving
Copley News Service

EDINBURGH, Scotland — A floral clock draws most of the attention in the Princes Street Gardens, beneath the shadow of Edinburgh Castle.

Created in 1903, it is said to be the first such clock in the world.

About 26,000 plants are used to create the clock each year. A squad of city gardeners spends a full month planting the area.

The design of the clock face is always based on a topical subject. A recent one was the centenary of Canada. Other subjects have included the Festival of Britain and the 200th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns.

The hands of the clock measure about five feet and five feet long, and are controlled by a lateral shaft. The minute hand revolves every thirty seconds.

When filled with plants, the minute hand weighs 80 pounds, and the hour hand 50 pounds.

The works of the clock are housed in the base of a statue nearby.

Princes Street is one of the world's most handsome boulevards. The gardens run the length of its southern side.

Many people visit the Scottish-American War Memorial. This was set up in 1927 by American men and women of the Scottish contribution to the winning of World War I.

One of the other showpieces of Princes Street is the Sir Walter Scott Monument, everyone's idea of the Scottish novelist and poet, who lived in the city as well as having a home in the surrounding countryside. It takes the form of a Gothic spire 200 feet high, with a statue of Sir Walter under the canopy of arches.

Attention Focused On Fate of NATO

BY Gene Sherman
Copley News Service

LONDON—Attention to the fate of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in the coming crucial year for the North Atlantic Treaty is mounting in Britain and other member countries.

The series of fast-moving events over the last two years has lessened Europe's concern on the organization formed 19 years ago for mutual protection.

To the United States, which has ultimate command over the 7,000 nuclear weapons in Europe, the importance of responsibility for maintaining the peace.

There it remains, but much has happened to change the aspect of NATO and to put into question the shape of future events.

Both in the United States and Europe, the future of NATO will in the coming year be a point of concern, with Britain itself in an air of uncertainty.

France's defection from NATO and the removal of Supreme Headquarters to Brussels have been exacerbated by the political revolt against President Charles de Gaulle.

In the wake of the student and worker rebellion and its definitional effect on the economy there is not likely to be a revived interest of the Atlantic Alliance—not that it seemed likely anyway.

During the last year Western military strategies have watched with interest the Soviet and American superpower rivalry and its political alignments in the Middle East.

Thus, when the war swung East again, when Soviet troops in Poland moved toward the Czechoslovakian frontier as the resistance to Communist domination in the East grew.

The East-West detente which has formed many of the ambiguities of the late seems to be taking shape only on one side of the Iron Curtain.

When it became unsettled, the Warsaw Pact lapsed not.

As some 6,000 American troops and 100 airliners and 5,000 British troops were withdrawn from NATO forces, the 30-nation, war-grounded, highly trained Russian divisions stood solid in East Germany.

Other NATO countries are struggling with the problem of mutual defense versus defense costs. American's intentions will be scrutinized with intense self-interest during the next 12 months.

East Berlin Somber

BERLIN—West Berliners, fond of giving nicknames to just about anything that walks, stands or flies, already have one picked out for a 110-foot-high radio-television tower now under construction in East Berlin.

The nickname seems as likely from emotional feeling as from the fact that when completed the needle-like structure will peer down on all 2.5 million Berliners like some Cyclope eye.

Easily the highest structure in either side of the city, the new tower will stand nearly one-third taller than West Berlin's celebrated Funkturm, a mini-Eiffel Tower built in 1924 and presently the most lofty Berlin landmark.

The East Berlin tower as yet has no formal name. It will serve three purposes: provide a spectacular, revolving mid-air domain in atmosphere in a restaurant halfway up, give East Berliners a bird's-eye peak at their city from an observation deck on top, and provide a powerful transmitting platform for amenas beamning radio and TV into East Germany.

The 1,100-foot tower, however, is one of very few architectural spectacles in East Berlin where postwar reconstruction, compared to West Berlin, has lagged.

Without West Berlin as a handy comparison, East Berlin to the casual tourist seems just like any other bustling European city. New, smart-looking high-rise apartments blanket broad, tree-lined streets. Along Karl Marx Allee (formerly Stalin Allee), a welter of shops big and small offer everything from ice cream to women's wear.

The 5-year-old Berliner Hotel, catering mostly to foreign visitors, is a 300-room showpiece and has become a favorite convention spot.

It is when the visitor crosses from one side of the divided city to the other that the differences are startling.

West Berlin glitters with neon. By comparison, East Berlin is somber.

West Berlin is noisy and boisterous. East Berlin is subdued and orderly.

At rush hour, West Berliners queue up in gigantic traffic jams which extend practically from one border to the other. In the East sector, traffic is light and fewer late-model cars travel the streets.

East Berliners travel in small, prewar streetcars while West Berliners have one of the world's most modern subway systems nearly completely in the high-speed, efficient U-Bahn which spreads like an octopus through the city.

On a bus tour of East Berlin, a middle-aged woman guide points out each new shopping mall and bazaar as a major accomplishment of a collective society. But to tourists fresh from the glittering, new multistory, multimillion-dollar Europa Center, a complex of 200 stores, restaurants and theaters on West Berlin's Kurfurstendamm, the comparison is almost embarrassing.

It is in its war memories, government buildings and trappings distinctively those of a collective society, that East Berlin excels. Architects have had a field day, for instance, in erecting rows of apartments for "working mothers" and free nursery complexes for their preschool children.

Getting into East Berlin to view all of this can be an experience not unlike trying to explore the inner workings of the Pentagon.

The easiest, least time-consuming way is by guided tour. It hardly excites, however, to be shown the grass roots of East Berlin this way, especially when the simply dressed woman guide, obviously well-schooled in subtle but effective soft-sell, begins her spiel.

The rules are simple: cameras are permitted, but no photos, please, of police-guarded control points or military installations. The bus, it should be added, passes none of the latter. No Western newspapers, no maps if they show the Western side of the Berlin Wall. Currency may be counted and reported down to the penny.

The wait at Checkpoint Charlie, the allied-manned crossing for non-Germans entering the Eastern sector, takes about 15 minutes. A uniformed policeman checks the undertire of the bus with a large mirror, pokes into the engine compartment, probes under the seats while the passengers have their passports checked outright. The double-deck bus squirms through an obstacle course of cement barricades erected to prevent gate-crashing from the East.

Each visitor is required to pay three marks (75 cents) for the privilege of visiting the DDR—the Democratic German Republic. Citizens of West Germany and West Berlin, who require not even a rise of visitors, flume at this form of what they call extortion which flouts the Potsdam agreement on postwar control of Berlin. They are even more angered when they are required to exchange their West German marks (four for each U.S. $1) for highly inflated East German currency.
Players Give Pace Change

By Dean Rebello

It's time for a change of pace, campus theater-players. We laughed at last week's production of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" by the Summer Music Theatre Company, and now it's time to ponder upon the Southern Players' drama, "Sweet Bird of Youth." "Sweet Bird of Youth," still another Tennessee Williams' drama about life in the post-Civil War, rather decadent South (this time the setting is "somewhere on the Gulf Coast") will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday in the Southern Playhouse in the Communications Building.

The drama, first of four plays to be presented by the Players' 14th Summer Theater Company, involves a young hustler ("The Hustler" himself, actor Paul Newman, played the male lead roles on Broadway and in the movie version,) who uses an aging movie actress to finance a trip to see his boyhood sweetheart.

The play is directed and designed by Darwin Payne of the Department of Theatre. Payne is rapidly becoming an "old hand" at directing the plays of Tennessee Williams. He also directed the opening plays of the 1966 and 1967 summer playbills, "William's "Summer and Smoke" and "A Streetcar Named Desire."

For the production, and for the other plays of the summer playbill, the Southern Players are utilizing the talents of 26 collegiate actors selected from across the country.

According to Sherwin Abrams, associate director of the Department of Theater, the Players have a "very full schedule" for the summer. The resident company, following the presentations of "Sweet Bird of Youth," will perform "The Streets of New York" and "Mr. High Pockets" at SIU during July 4-6 and 10-12 respectively. On July 13 the company will give a special performance of "Mr. Highpockets" before the National Campers and Hikers Association on the DuQuoin State Park grounds.

The entire company then moves to New Salem State Park, where they will stage daily performances of the two last-mentioned plays during July and August. The group will also present the Illinois State Sesquicentennial play, "Make Her Wilderness Like Eden," at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield, Aug. 9-15.

A special cast selected from the Carbondale campus will present "Barefoot in the Park," by Neil Simon, Aug. 1-3 in the Southern Playhouse.

Tickets for "Sweet Bird of Youth" are now available at the University Center Information Desk and the Theater Box Office in the Communications Building. Tickets are $1,50 for students and $2 for non-students for each performance. Season books at one-third discount are $4 for students and $6 for non-students.

Annette Campbell as "The Princess Kosmonopolis"
Washington: (AP) — A Poor People's Campaign mule train made a wide sweep through muggy Washington Tuesday, but the white waggoners were discouraged from trying to follow their leader, Ralph David Abernathy, to jail.

Abernathy was sentenced earlier to 20 days imprisonment but other campaign leaders remained free.

Tension in the city, where temperatures have been peaking in the 90's, was still evident but as due approached, officials decided against repeating the night hours curfew they imposed Monday when sporadic violence flared in Negro sections.

Mayor Walter E. Washington announced that "If any emergency should arise requiring a curfew it will be imposed."

Mayor Washington's prompt decision to bring in the National Guard when roving street crowds became unruly Monday night was applauded Tuesday in Congress.

House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan cited the mayor for "the fine manner in which he handled the situation" and Rep. John S. Monagan, D-Conn., said he wished the same "firm and decisive steps" had been taken during the disorders in April.

Police said they made 282 arrests during the night. Most were for curfew violations but 27 persons were booked for looting and one for arson.

The man charged with arson was identified as Alvin Rowan, 21, of St. Louis, Mo., who told police he had been living at Resurrection City. Most of the others arrested, police said, were Washington residents.

Mayor Washington, criticized by many in the city's business community for moving slowly in calling for troops in April, this time rushed in some 2,000 police in riot helmets and gas masks and mustered 1,400 National Guardsmen in a matter of hours.

Vocational Business Education Offered to Teachers, Students

New approaches to vocational business education will be explained to school teachers and college students in a two-day workshop at SIU, Aug. 5-6.

It will be the second annual workshop of this kind to be held at SIU. Workshop speakers will emphasize project methods and preparation of instructional materials.

Speakers on the program will be Mrs. Eileen Coleman, business education teacher and court reporter; Mrs. Viollet Davis, coordinator of In-School and Interrelated Programs at Casey; Miss Fern Harts of Southern Missouri State College; and Bernard Ohm, chief of business and office occupations, the State Board of Vocational Education and Rehabilitation at Springfield.

Graduate Credits will be granted to those who hold a bachelor's degree. Registration fee is $5 which covers coffee, portfolio, and conference materials.

The workshop is sponsored by the State Board of Vocational Education and Rehabilitation, and the Department of Secretarial and Business Education in cooperation with the University Extension Services.

Visitor Assists

Summer Session

Wilma Warner, from the faculty of Western Illinois University, is a visiting staff member in the Department of Home Economics Education for the first four weeks of the summer session, according to Anna Carol Fults, department chairman.

Miss Warner is assisting in a wage-earning workshop directed by Miss Fults and is also supervising the summer field experience of two students who are specializing in extension service.

The three visiting professors will be on SIU's Carbondale campus this summer to take part in seminar workshops of interest to junior colleges.

Ken August, of Southern Missouri State College, who will be the first chairman of the Department of Higher Education, said the first of three workshops on Junior College Administration will be held June 17-28. This course will deal with the duties and responsibilities of board members, presidents, deans, and business managers, Philip D. Vallo, associate professor of education and acting chairman of the Division of Curriculum and Teaching at Fordham University, is the teacher.

Dramatic Writers, Critics

To Highlight Symposium

William Kezeleko, editor-critic and author, will headline a symposium of dramatic drama which will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon Saturday in the University Theater of the Communications Building.

Kezeleko, who has written such books as "The One-Act Play Today" and "Best Short Plays of the New Theatre," has also done scene writing and worked in films.
Student Seeks Summer of Adventure in Mexico

By Inez Reebcher

The hot summer sun and the dust of Mexico's Baja Californiaburn the eyes of an S.U. student and another Mexican companion from El Paso.

Aboard lies the next village, where horses wait to be shod and bathed. With the sound of a guitar carried by the student, Estefan, fish market vendors come to provide their meal and ingredients will be shing and roasted.

This will be the summer of Neel Graefelman, a junior majoring in history, and his friend Escobar Rodriguez will shing in Mexico this summer. The villagers look for-ward, and the experience will introduce them to Graefelman's horse.

"I couldn't see why I should pay $10 just to have a horse. It never looked very hard to me," he said. He learned quickly and was soon earning good pay on his own. Graefelman carries most of his tools on a packhorse. Each town usually has an arvil and a makeshift forge that he can use. His unusual baggage includes a $400 guitar, a car-bine, a revolver, fishing gear, cause food, a sign camping outfit and a small supply of veterinary medicine.

"I always bring medicine for me and the horses. The horses I shoe are sometimes suffering from neglect, and I am suffering from 'Morne-zuma's revenge' a virulent type of amoebic dysentery," Graefelman explained with a grin.

Rodriguez will bring similar equipment, including a second shelter-half, so that together they will have a complete 13 piece tent.

Graefelman resembles the "man with no name" from the movie "A Few Dollars More." His apparel consists of a beard, boots, a T-shirt, a battered felt hat and a spade, a kind of decorated blanket.

The young blacksmith said he has never expected trouble from the ever-present bandits because he carries very little money and because "I'm armed to the teeth." I'll have always been treated with courtesy. When I ride into town all the children follow me begging me to stay with them. Many times the fiesta has kept me from moving on. I play, drink and dance all night, and sure enough, the next morning my head feels like an over-in- fated basketball.

Graefelman speaks fluent Spanish and plays a sensitive and spirited guitar. At S.U. he plays with the "Chandra Ellis Quartet." He plans to start his summer's journey in Ensenada, where he will buy a horse then join Rodriguez in the next town, San Telmo. Together they will ride slowly toward La Paz, the only big town in the south.

Graefelman plans to follow the scene of adventure as long as he can. After graduation in 1969, he intends to go to Australia with a friend. He said he is not obsessed with success or earning money and will eventually teach history when he decides he is ready to settle down.

He believes the world is too serious and people devote too much of their time to getting and spending.

"You know, they've lost the ability to have a good time. They're born, they grow and go to school, get a job and marry. Then they retire and they're too old to do any- thing with the money they've saved. I want to retire and know that I've done everything I wanted to do, if that's possible."

Three Foreign Students Believe American Students Justified

Three foreign students at S.U. agree the students protec-tants in this country are wrong, and feel students are relatively new in America and foreign countries view the student protest as an old form of group expression.

Andrew Davis Family, Menagerie To Migrate South in Fall

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Davis are moving to Mississippi this fall. Mr. Davis, a physician, is moving to Columbus, Miss., from his home in North Carolina.

Davis, a graduate student in the Department of Zoology, and his wife, have been researching in the United States and are very interested in the foreign students' protest. Mrs. Davis is hoping that they will not disrupt their plans to move south.

"We have no plans as of yet," Mrs. Davis said. "Mr. Davis, a 'Spider-Man,' is doing graduate work in the Department of Zoology. "We are hoping to find a trailer to move our few belongings, but the movers are available but they are expensive." Mr. Davis owns over 200 birds, 40 dogs and 15 cats.

"Mrs. Davis plans to move to Columbus, Miss., in the near future, and Mr. Davis will follow."

Mrs. Davis is planning to obtain a new house, and Mr. Davis is hoping to find a new home. The Davises have two part-time boarders, a man and a woman, who are planning to move to Columbus, Miss., in the near future. They plan to take the dogs, but the cats may have to be left behind.

"I am not sure that we will be able to find a new home," Mr. Davis said.

"Mr. Davis, known around campus as a 'crazy' bird watcher, is doing research with spiders and has several species at home."

When the horses arrive in Mississippi, Mr. Davis plans to board them in nearby stables. He has written a letter to the stable on the Mississippi campus. Also, he is trying to find boarding information through a faculty member who also has a horse, he is named Mr. Davis.

"We are hoping to find a trailer to move our belongings, but the movers are available but they are expensive," he said. Mr. Davis says he plans to move to Columbus, Miss., in the near future, and Mr. Davis will follow."

English Test Deadline Friday

Registration deadline for the English Test as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) exam is 2 p.m. Friday. Students wishing to take the exam must register at the CSE Building, T 42, and pay the $5 fee. The exam for non-native speakers of English will be given Aug. 2 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in Davis Auditorium, Wham Education Building.

Many colleges and universities require this exam for admission of foreign students, according to J.H. Friend, CSE director.
$340,000 in Grants For 1,268 Students Approved by State

The Illinois Scholarship Commission has approved state grants for 1,268 students at the Carbondale Campus, according to Frank C. Adams, director of the SIU Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance. All of the amounts for the 1968-'69 school year total $340,000, compared with a total of only $45,000 which was made available to 192 SIU Carbondale students last year. The increase, Adams said, is accounted for by a jump in funds appropriated for this purpose by the General Assembly.

In a letter dated September 19, 1968, to June 1967, the State of Illinois provided approximately $2 million to 41,000 students, as either Illinois state grants or SIU scholarships. The allocation for the current bimonth is $29 million, half for scholarships, and half for grants.

The difference between the two types of aid, Adams explained, is that the scholarships go to students with exceptionally high academic potential and some degree of need, while the grants are intended for students with good but not such high potential, coming from low income families.

The chairman said he anticipates that most of the grant recipients will return to SIU in the fall, whether they may attend another Illinois institution either public or private. The amount of each grant is determined by the cost of tuition and fees at the school attended.

Students still may apply for Illinois state grants for the coming year, Adams said. The deadline for filing is June 15, 1969. To obtain this aid are instructed to come to the SIU Scholarship Office located in Washington Square, where they will be given all necessary assistance in filling out required forms.

Local Governments Subject For Study in $16,000 Grant

Illinois local governments and their future manpower needs will be studied by the Public Affairs Research Bureau at SIU under a $16,000 grant.

The Bureau received the grant from the Illinois State Board of Higher Education, according to David Kenney, bureau director. Of the grant came from the federal Housing and Urban Development department.

The study will concentrate on the manpower needs of local governments from 1970 and how educational institutions can help meet them. The project probably will last about one year, Kenney said, and employ a research assistant and two part-time graduate assistants. The research associate has not been chosen, Kenney said.

No Swimming Lessons

The Student Activities Office has announced that due to the lack of a sponsor there will be no swimming lessons offered this summer at Lake-on-the-Campus.

SIU Educator on Tour

Brazil Needs More Schools

John E. King, professor of education, recently returned from an education evaluation trip to Brazil where he found that more education is needed at the elementary and high school levels in Brazil.

King, on a mission for the United Nations Development Program evaluated four higher education proposals Brazil has made to that UN program.

"The government needs to get its elementary and high school public education programs organized and funded so a larger percentage of the population can be helped," King said.

King, chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Supervision and a former president of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, said the country has inherited a set European system which believes college and high school education should be only for a small percentage of the population and not for working people. Most of the people accept this, he said.

Major reasons for a better educated working class, King said, are to reduce the infant mortality rate, bring about more participation in government, and for increased social mobility.

"There's a terrific infant mortality rate in Brazil," he said. "Parental need for sanitation and diet for the sake of their families."

Poor, uneeducated people in both rural and urban areas need to become more literate in order to participate in their country's government and to help produce a better government, he said. Social mobility is needed to move the children of poor people up through the economic strata to a better life.

Some of his observations:

- There's a great deal of admiration in the United States, the display of sympathy at the time of Senator Kennedy's death was tremendous; there is recognition of need for change, especially in Sao Paulo; the country has plenty of land, strong nationality groups, friendly, warm people, and generally a peaceful population; there's very little overt racism, with willingness shown to accept individuals as individuals, violence is at a minimum.

However, there was student unrest. At one university he visited there was a strike, at two others there were demonstrations. Some were protesting the Vietnam War, some the United States, and some Communist, he said.

Strong Finish Ends SIU Tennis Season

By Barb LeFevre

SIU's tennis team closed out the season with a 31-15th place finish in the NCAA tournament last Sunday in Arkansas Little Rock, Mo., to account for the best showing in the school's history.

"Of the 156 entries the boys drew the 4th, 7th and 10th seeded players in the tournament," Coach Dick LeFevre said with a little bit of luck and a better draw we could have easily finished in the top 10.

"However, Fritz Gildermeister's downfall was unknown as did Josie Villareal and the doubles team of Mike Sprengmeier-Villareal, and we failed to pick up four of five minor wins that could have easily gotten us into other competition," LeFevre added. Sprengmeier won the之心 of SIU's seven points. He received a bye in the first round and then beat Bruce Pervelt, University of Seattle, in the second round, 6-2, 6-3, and then Sprengmeier then lost to Chuck Darley, University of California, the fifth seeded player. Gildermeister lost a first round singles match to sixth seeded John Lickey of Rice, 11-9, and 6-4.

Although he drew a bye for the first round, Gildermeister was defeated in second round action by High Thompson, Mississippi State, 4-6 and 7-5.

"Josie should have won that one," Gildermeister told Thompson earlier in the season," LeFevre said. "But the Gildermeister would have had to meet USC's Stan Smith and that would have been the end.

LeFevre is dissatisfied with the present single elimination tournament for the NCAA teams. He is interested in the idea of a playoff format for the tourney to make it more exciting.

"This year 39 teams scored points and 17 schools didn't even enter," LeFevre said. "We hope that in the future the NCAA committee will propose a district affair for the eight districts to hold a playoff to select the last eight that will be the only players.

LeFevre will lose the backbones of his 1968 SIU team with the graduation of Sprengmeier, Villareal and Johnny Jones.

Southern finished up regular season play with a 7-0 record. All three losses were by one point.

SIU was beaten early in the season 5-4 by Oklahoma University and then, in the last three matches straight matches before losing the last two by the same score 5-4 to both Illinois and Mississippi State.

During the season SIU won the Illinois Intercollegiate Invitational Tournament and the Tennessee Classic by defeating such tennis powers as Oklahoma City, Houston, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Tulsa and Florida State.

"I'll have a very young team next year with only MacKay Domincquez and Gildermeister returning," LeFevre said. "Also the Indiana State High School champion, Ray Briscoe, New Albany, Ind., has signed a letter of intent and will be with the team next year." LeFevre is also looking forward to the possibility of signing several Australian high school tennis players and two players from Brazil.

"It's still very early to make any predictions for next year, but it doesn't look that glum," LeFevre added.

The team will go on its annual spring trip, still subject to final approval, in which LeFevre hopes to play teams such as South Carolina, University of Miami, Georgia Tech, Princeton, University of Miami, Florida, and Georgia.

HOUSTON (AP)—There will be standing room only at the upcoming All-Star baseball game. It will be played indoors, to a sellout crowd in the 45,000-seat Houston Astrodome. And also for the first time it will be held at night. The date is Tuesday, July 9.

This game, the 39th in the series between the stars of the National and American Leagues, will also see in attendance for the first time official of 24 major league teams, four of which are 1969 expansion clubs—San Diego, Seattle, Kansas City and Montreal.

With baseball spreading its talent thin at the top, next year may find some teams represented in the 1959 game by players who never expected to gain All-Star status in the good old days of eight-team leagues.

In fact, there will be some new faces this time from the two 10-team leagues.

For instance, players in each league were permitted the vote for only three outfielders. In the AL that could mean old standbys like Carl Yastrzemski, Willie Horton and Tony Oliva would be starters. But Frank Howard, whose home run hitting gave the game of baseball a much-needed shot in the arm this spring, is a sure bet to make it to his first All-Star game as a competitor.

The game can be said for Rick Monday, Oakland’s center fielder who recently began hitting. Incidentally, both Howard and Monday are $100,000 plus bonus players.

Managers—Dick Williams for the AL and Red Schoendienst for the NL—will select the pitchers, Williams almost has to select Baltimore’s Tom Phoebus for his first All-Star appearance on the strength of the sophomore’s April no hitter against Dick’s Boston Red Sox.

Cleveland’s Luis Tiant, Chicago’s Tommy John and Minneapolis reliever ace Ron Perranoski appear as other pitchers likely to see their first action in the classic, on the basis of fine spring performances.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter of Oakland, last year’s 2-1 loser in the 15th, is a must off the perfect May 8 game he pitched against the Minnesota Twins.

In the NL, it was hard to leave pitcher Jerry Grote of the New York Mets off the team that has an outstanding catcher in Atlanta’s Joe Torre, Grote, never an All-Star, led the surprising Mets in hitting this spring and handled adversity such fine young pitchers as Jerry Koosman, Tom Seaver, Nolan Ryan and Dick Selma.

Kookie Koosman is a must among the NL pitchers. So is Dodger Don Drysdale, who has appeared in seven of these games since 1959, and Giants Juan Marichal who has been in six since 1962.

Drysdale made the headlines with seven straight wins and 38-2/3 scoreless innings to snap Walter Johnson’s 1913 record, the year the Big Train had a 1.09 earned run average. Red Schoendienst, the game owner will enable him to join a select list of former All-Star players who later managed in the classic. The other player-managers still active as pilots are Hank Bauer, Alvin Dark and Leo Durocher.

For Red Schoendienst, the game will enable him to join a select list of former All-Star players who later managed in the classic. The other player-managers still active as pilots are Hank Bauer, Alvin Dark and Leo Durocher.

Schoendienst, who led the Cardinals to World Series victory, played in nine All-Star games. His 1950 home run in the 14th inning in Chicago won that one, 4-3, for the NL.

Even though the American Leaguers will work out in the huge Astrodome the day before the classic, the home team NL will be favored. It has won the last five games, including the last three by one run on timely hitting and strong late inning pitching.

Indoor Sellout Makes All-Star Tilt Different

Steve Heckel, SIU’s only golfer in the NCAA golf championship, failed to qualify for the finals recently in Las Cruces, N. Mex.

Heckel opened the tourney with an 80 in the practice round and shot a 74 for the first round and 72 for the second to compete in the finals the golfer needed a score of 144 or lower. Heckel’s score of 154 eliminated him.

Crier Jones from the University of Oklahoma was the individual winner with a score of 276, eight under par.

The University of Florida took team honors with a total score of 1,154. The University of Houston placed second with 1,156 while Wake Forest took third with 1,190 strokes.

Oklahoma and University of Texas tied for fourth place with 1,102 strokes, and Arizona State finished fifth with 1,160 strokes.

Out of the 225 entries, only 72 men managed to meet the score of 144 or lower to compete for the final rounds of golf. Of the 32 teams, only 16 were invited.

During the season, Heckel posted a 73.5 for 16 rounds of golf. He played in the number one position for most of the year. He won the Gold Cup tournament this year at Benton and has been course champion at Crab Orchard for the past three years.

The Saluki golf team played some of the best teams in the nation and managed to wind up the season with a 24-6 record. Among some of the Salukis’ victims were the University of Iowa, Notre Dame, University of Illinois, Illinois State, and St. Louis University.

“Steve had a lot of tough competition and the course was extremely tough, from what I hear,” Coach Larry Holder said. “He has a year of eligibility left and possibly next year he’ll make the top 20 golfers.”

Holder will lose only two of his players through graduation. Seniors Jack Downey and Jim Schuff will be lost.

Joining the next team will be regular Heckel, captain of next year’s team, Harvey Otto, Denny Kortkamp, Dave Warg, Terry Testy, Terry Rohlfing, and Mike Beckman.

Upcoming lowerclassmen who could add support are Tom Nelson, Gordan Raines, Robert Armour, James Holmes, and Robert Gray.
