It’s been seven years since Scott Barnes photographed two executions by a MIaD, a member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, in downtown Beirut. It was the first time he had ventured into Lebanon, where he was American servicemen just two of the 1,400 POW-MIAs held behind when U.S. military forces pulled out of the Vietnam War in 1973.

Barnes, a former CIA reconnaissance intelligence agent, claims to be the only American to actually see and photograph live American POWs during a government-sponsored massacre.

But upon returning to the states in November 1981, Barnes discovered that his mission had been aborted and that the CIA was denying having ever known him.

When Barnes died in 1983 of “accidental carbon monoxide poisoning” Barnes launched his one-man campaign to expose the cover-up.

He has testified before the Senate Veterans’ Affairs Committee and has served as an advisor to the President’s Commission investigating American POW-MIAs in Vietnam.

But Barnes said he and his family have received numerous threats and that the dangerous and dangerous situation is behind this conspiracy.

By 1986, the CIA had logged over 1,000 eyewitness reports of American POWs in captivity in Southeast Asia, Barnes said.

One of these, Col. Charles E. Sheldon, has been officially classified as a prisoner of war by the President as a living POW.

Barnes supports the Stimson Center, which still strives for the recognition of the U.N. resolution 242, which authorizes the resolution to be the past on grounds it treats absent for a homeland as a refugee problem.

The PLO rejects Resolution 242 and refuses its reference in the political process, said Yasser Ko’haa, a senior aide of

Habash. “If we have to, we will submit the issue inside the Palestine National Council for voting.”

Such a vote on 2.3 U.N. resolution would be separate from the main vote on the Palestine Liberation Organization recognition of Israel which it recognizes the right of all countries in the region, including Israel, to exist within secure borders.

Parliamentarians were also expected to vote Monday to endorse a “declaration of independence for Palestine.”

Nurses, community and more than 400 student volunteers ended the weekend blood drive in the Student Center Friday with 2,341 pints of blood collected, but blood is still a precious commodity in the hospitals of the region, Vivian Ugert, Red Cross Blood drive coordinator, said.

Although the drive fell short of the 2,500 goal, Ugert said, “We feel really good about the results of the blood drive.”

Ugert said she was especially pleased with the fact that 409 people donated for the first time last week.

Japanese film life at SIU-C

Network documents experiences of exchange students

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

A Japanese television crew came to Carbondale last week to film a documentary about student life at SIU-C.

Seita Ikuo, a film producer, said, "This program is entitled "International Exchange at the Grass Root Level; Person to Person," and the program is sponsored by The Office of Japanese Prime Minister and The Japanese Public Information Center.

The crew is from Tokyo TV Asahi, one of the five major television networks in Japan and comparable in size to American networks ABC, NBC, or CBS.

The program's purpose is to introduce Carbondale to its Japanese sister city, Nakajo, as well as showing Japanese students learning and interacting with other students from around the world.

FIU-C has recently established a campus at Nakajo, SIU-C Niigata.

Nakajo is the first Japanese municipality to invite an American university to establish a campus.

The film is produced by Hiroshi Seita, who has done other films about Japanese students interacting with their neighbors while studying abroad.

In the early 1960s, Seita began filming in different countries, charting their growth and spread through their young people.

"I wanted to show young people growing and changing ideas. It gives me great hope for the future," Seita said.

He was first asked to go to Southeast Asia, where he had been 10 years earlier.

"I was amazed at the progress that had been made, especially since we (the Japanese) had a part in the devastation that had been done, going back to the Second World War," Seita said.

"I'm interested in thoroughly investigating the countries I want to learn more about," Seita said.

Beginnings with Japan's neighboring countries, Seita has since filmed documentaries every year.

Last year, we went to the South Pacific Islands because a department of the United Nations dealing with developing countries had a focus on them. This year, we are going back to Africa and Europe," Seita said.

Observing the changes a decade had made left him inquisitive about other places, Seita said.

"I inspired me to thoroughly investigate other countries. I want to learn about them," Seita said.

Beginning with Japan's neighboring countries, Seita has since filmed documentaries every year.

One of the documentaries also depicts Japanese students' roles in promoting understanding.

"They (the students) get such a rich and warm experience. We show them growing into their own persons, growing not only scholastically but personally," Seita said.

During two days of filming, the crew was at various Carbondale locations, including an informal gathering of students Thursday night.

The scene was filmed at an apartment in Southern Hills where two international students live.

Kanako Usui, a Japanese student who arrived in Carbondale three months ago, shares the apartment with Lily Aguilar, an Argentinian. They met as a result of having the same major — speech communications.

The two graduate students invited friends from around the world to dinner, which featured oyster, sushi, and Japanese pot pie.

Seita and his crew recorded the dinner party and conversations, which will be incorporated with scenes of the dancers from the Japanese University department and the town in the documentary.

"The topics discussed at the party were the recent American presidential election, preservation nature of the Japanese and foreigners have of each other and differences in school systems.

The crew was aided by the Japanese Student Association during its four-day visit.

"We drove them around while they looked for sites and just helped them get used to the area," said Akira Itaka, a senior and a student in molecular science.

The film will be aired on Jan. 15, 16 Adults Day International Day, a national holiday in Japan honoring young people.

University Teaching Should Be A Profession...
Rather Than An Occupation

Unionization of our faculty would be a radical change for the University, a change which we think would be a serious error. It would conflict with our professional obligations and aspirations.

So we, the undersigned, will vote "No Representative" in the November 16 unionization election.

Opinion & Commentary

We shouldn't forget Veterans Day lesson

THE HOOPLA over the presidential election is subsiding. We hope the enthusiasm toward patriotism that characterized the campaign will not fade.

We believe it is fitting that our nation's veterans chose Veterans Day to underscore some of the concerns that the rhetoric of the campaign promised the nation would be able to deal with.

Veterans in St. Louis are concerned with cuts in the Veterans Administration and benefit. In essence, the nation's commitment to its veterans should be as sacred as the Social Security trust. Money for veterans should come first and these funds should not be hostage to politics as in the new administration begins its attempts to manage the national debt.

THE DEBT we owe our veterans should come before any payment to our creditors. Our veterans put everything in their lives second to defending our country. The least we can do is make a similar commitment to dealing with the problems they have, because in many instances those problems arose from their duty.

No other employer would be allowed to walk away from job-related injuries and illness, and the government should not be allowed to turn its back on the Vietnam and second-guess the center helped paralyzed veterans develop skills to allow them to function as independent citizens although confined to a wheelchair. The center bought the house that belonged to the residents of the town.

However, 17 years after Agent Orange was last used in Vietnam, a Vietnam veteran in a wheelchair struggles to have the real causes of the Vietnam problem that led to Agent Orange's use recognized. The government bought the house that belonged to the residents of the town.

THE AMERICAN LEGION also chose Nov. 11 to release a shocking report on Agent Orange. A spokesman for the Legion mentioned the problem. In essence, does the nation's obligation to veterans who are suffering from health problems believed to be related to exposure to the herbicide, which was used during the Vietnam War, end at the end of the Vietnam War? The government should allow them to function as independent citizens although confined to a wheelchair.

Programs like that are not handouts, but helping hands and should not be curtailed.

The American Legion also chose Nov. 11 to bring attention to the Vietnam veteran. The Legion study suggests that we are far from finding a cure for the Vietnam experience.

The study shows that Vietnam vets average lower salaries, in others with similar education and background. Combat veterans from Vietnam are four times as likely to have a divorce or marital separation than those who did not serve in Southeast Asia.

High combat veterans — those frequently exposed to war, tend to have a greater tendency to fall victim to drug use and are reluctant to report their problems with drugs. Up to 15 percent of the Vietnam veterans suffered from psychiatric ailments, shell shock, or combat fatigue in past wars. Combat experience is related to many other disorders, including high blood pressure and ulcers.

We ARE on the threshold of the 1990s, and on the verge of having Vietnam veterans back into society. We are coming to realize that the Vietnam war affects veterans, their families, their friends and eventually all of society. A kind of national identity and pride of country should be achieved those goals unless it recognizes how deeply the undercurrent of the Vietnam legacy runs through society.

We need to make the kinder, gentler nation until we treat these honorable men and women. Veterans, a courageous and proud breed, often are reluctant to express their feelings. That is, we who have not served our country in combat, can serve it well by demanding a commitment from those too proud to ask for themselves.

"You don't reward someone for breaking in your house and showing your locks are no good." — University of Illinois professor in response to people who called a student responsible for a laptop outbreak of computer virus a "thief."
The group started to organize on campus in 1964, Kolb said. Now it is up to administrators to vote. Now it's up to the faculty and SIU-C professionals and American Federation of Teachers to decide whether lEA will be the collective bargaining unit. Kolb said. The Illinois Federation of Teachers, the affiliate of the AFT represents six four-year institutions.

The Illinois Federation of Teachers, and the Illinois Education Association (IEA) is the fastest growing union in the state's four-year universities.

"The IL-IMP joined IEA because it is the fastest growing union in the state's four-year universities," Kolb said.

Other universities testify UP helped faculty equality

Getting rid of the merit system for evaluating faculty was one of the first things the collective bargaining unit (IEA) for Chicago State, Eastern Illinois, Northeastern Illinois, Governors State, Western Illinois, and Sangamon State University Professionals spokesman said.

"The first and foremost thing the union has done for this campus is the radical change in evaluating faculty," Slaab Jano said.

"In the past, the merit system became a tool for the administration to reward friends of the administration." North Eastern Illinois University President John Murphy said.

University Professionals has represented five universities since 1978.

The union also has made the legislature more sensitive to the needs of the higher education community, Jano added.

Chicago State librarian Katherine Bunker said the University Higher Education Legislation Program holds three days each spring to lobby for higher education.

UP has addressed bills in session, testified at the Illinois Board of Higher Education meetings about the budgets, testified at appropriation hearings, and invited legislators to speak at the campuses.

"We've had the opportunity in the future coalition that held a rally last spring in support of the income tax increase, she added.

UP: We will meet needs

A collective bargaining contract should reflect what the people want and University Professionals will be the union to do that, UP President Donald Donow said.

UP and the Illinois Education Association are two unions trying to represent University faculty in the Nov. 16 collective bargaining election.

UP's approach in law says it is a vote on unionization was nothing but a charade to get some space and a play for media coverage, Donow said.

"They knew at that time, just as we did, that the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board was setting a date," Donow said.

The IEA held a press conference Sept. 7 and said it would seek a court order to force a vote on collective bargaining if the IELAB did not set a date.

"It was a charade to get some space in the paper," Donow said of the IEA's threat.

When the board set a date for collective bargaining Oct. 6, IEA President Don Keck said the board acted so quickly because of IEA's bargaining.

"IEA put up a smoke screen," UP member Thomas Eyson said.

"We considered obtaining a court order too, but we don't like to make a lot of noise," Donow said.

University Professionals is a localized branch of the Illinois Federation of Teachers, which is the bargaining representative for the university and its four-year universities.

The American Federation of Teachers is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

"UP pays about $1.56 a year per member to support lobbying activities," Donow explained. "It doesn't tell us how to conduct anything, but it does impact legislation."

University Professionals was chartered as SU-CU-I in April 1971 as the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers.

"We knew collective bargaining was the right thing then," Donow said.

Since collective bargaining, the faculty has had more control of working conditions, a good grievance procedure and a better retirement plan and a good pay raise for media coverage, Eyson said.

UP has provided legal services and support to faculty and has a proven track record, Eyson said.

While the IEA staff members "pretty much run their operation," UP is run by the faculty, Eyson said.

"They brought some semblance and order to the central administration," Lieber said.

UNIONS BATTLE TO REPRESENT TEACHERS

IEA experienced enough to serve SU-C leader

By Nora Bentley

Although the Illinois Education Association doesn't serve four-year universities, it serves in size and the strength of its staff support are reasons why it was chosen to represent University employees.

The National Education Association, the national organization of IEA, represents more than 60,000 higher education professionals, more than the American Association of University Professionals and American Federation of Teachers.

Its membership, which includes elementary and secondary educators, is 1.9 million, and it is the fastest growing union in the U.S., Gary Kolb, president of the association, said.

The IEA has 65,000 paying members and wants to add the SIU faculty and professional staff to that, Kolb said.

The IEA said direction to the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Act, which would designate the association as the official representative of the employees, might make the board more likely to vote for collective bargaining.

Kolb said the association has done its job in the past.

The unit determination hearings that decided whether a bargaining unit would be divided took 18 months when it should have been done in four to five months, Kolb said.

Also because of state politics and the conclusion that the administration argued the hearing officer took one year to render his decision. After the decision was made, the IEA asked for an appeal. The appeal stage lasted five years, Kolb said.

"No public university that opted for collective bargaining has decertified the union."

—Gary Kolb

Lots of money was spent and the situation is back to where it was before the hearings, he said. The hearings officer decided SIUC and SIUE will be two separate bargaining units, Kolb said. The university wanted the campuses to be considered one unit, he said.

Professional staff members will be in a separate bargaining unit, Kolb said.

A vote between the University and the IEA was whether chairpersons and directors should be part of collective bargaining.

The University asked the hearing officer that they be excluded from collective bargaining, Kolb said. The decision by the hearings officer was that they were a part of the faculty bargaining unit.

The University asked the hearing officer to represent any four-year institutions, but does represent community colleges, Kolb said.

"We've done an excellent job with (John A. Logan)," Kolb said.

Jack Hill, vice president for instructional services at John A. Logan Community College, said the IEA provides a way for faculty to have input about decisions concerning them.

"It's the best approach to the system is very professional, and has the college's best interests at heart," Hill said of John A. Logan.

The Illinois Federation of Teachers, and the Illinois Education Association (IETF) represents six four-year institutions.

Donald Keck, IEA organization's representative, said he is in the bargaining unit as Northeastern University, Chicago State, and Governors State, to be considered a separate bargaining unit, they would have to go through a complex process or switch unions, Keck said.

Larry Jones, professor of educational administration at Eastern, said the University Professionals are "poor in hearing and representing up." He said Eastern has the smallest representation in the bargaining unit and that there are a significant number of faculty members dissatisfied with tote on.

"I think it's completely ineffective," he said.

James E. McKinney, professor in foreign language at Western, said that the UP just signed a three-year contract. Earlier in the year an attempt, started by faculty at Eastern, was made to bring the IEA on campus, he said.

"Only 19 people at Western signed the petition," McKinney said.

If the university switch to IEA, they might still have to go through the preliminary process, but IEA would be in favor of separate units, Keck said.

The Faculty Relations Board of Governors and Sangamon State University employees.

"No public university that opted for collective bargaining has decertified the union," Kolb said. Changes in affiliation have occurred, but no university has gone back to the system used before collective bargaining, he said.

IEA represents 26 higher education institutions, community colleges and four-year institutions, Keck said. Since collective bargaining began 20 years ago, 40 percent of the higher education workforce has unionized.

"It's a normal part of the process and that's the way it should be," Kolb said.

The Central Management System was the first four-year institution to have collective bargaining, and it was represented by IEA in 1968, Keck said.

See IEA, Page 6

See UP. Page 7
"When the collective bargaining law passed, NEA and AFT had both been bargaining for about 10 years in different states," said Kolb, assistant to the president for the ILEA, said the AFT has been bargaining for longer than 10 years.

AFT bargained first in 1943 for school teachers in Illinois, and NEA local bargained in Connecticut in 1946, Keck said.

Christine Maitland, organizational specialist from the NEA higher education office in Washington D.C., said collective bargaining wasn't an issue before this time.

"There was tremendous interest growth in the teaching community during the 60s. It was during that time that collective bargaining came to higher education," she said.

Kolb said the NEA-IEA is organized differently than other unions, and that the organization enables it to be run democratically.

The NEA-IEA is "totally democratic," Kolb said. Administrative staff, organizers, and researchers are hired by the membership, and the staff, and can't be members," he said.

"It's very different from other unions where leaders (union officers and members) are one in the same, and have a lot of interest in keeping power," Kolb said.

2 percent of adults in U.S. in custody

WASHINGTON - About 3.4 million people, or almost 2 percent of the nation's adult population, are in the custody of federal, state and local correctional authorities, the Justice Department said in a study released Sunday.

The survey also found the number of adults in the United States in prison at that time, 11 percent, rose from 1986 to 1987.

"The faculty government needs to be strengthened so they will have real power to make real decisions."

—Donald Keck

Kolb said there are many reasons why the IEA should be the union to represent SIU. He said the IEA is a service-oriented union that members depend on during and after the election.

NEA's service system is called "lurch." The representatives are paid staff that work for the faculty in processing grievances, negotiating contracts and any other problems that may arise within faculty and administration, Kolb said.

There are 1,100 union representatives all over the country, and the faculty chooses them, he said.

"No other union has the service system we have," Kolb said.

"We've done a lot of identifying of how the University has been using resources," Kolb said. The IEA has published information on the administrative hierarchy and has helped a number of faculty members with grievances, he said.

"I think we've become a major force in four years," Keck said.

Kolb said the IFT has been on campus for about 17 years, and it has claimed to be a grass roots union.

"What have they done? I've been here for nine of those 17 years, and they haven't been an active force in administration," he said.

If the IEA is chosen as the collective bargaining agent for SIU, they plan to do three things, Keck said.

They will attempt to increase support for faculty research by asking for a larger share of the money used for overhead and will bargain for salary increases, Keck said.

"There are two real benefits, and there are another goal of the IEA, he said."

"We're going to aim at total compensation," Keck said.

A cafeteria benefit system is an example being considered, he said.

"This will allow faculty to make up their own benefit packages, Keck said. For example, if one faculty member has children, he or she may want tuition benefits and take more insurance benefits.

"One goal is to increase benefits and the other is to have a voice in the process," Keck said.

Strengthening of faculty governance is to issue that has been discussed, Keck said. Faculty governance refers to the procedures used by college and university faculties to participate in the institutional decision-making process.

"The faculty government needs to be strengthened so they will have real power to make real decisions," he said. Affirmative action, women's equity, and the sexual harassment policy also will be looked at, he said. Other platforms will be published before the Nov. 16 election, Keck said.

"The administration for the last eight years has been an option unaccountable. The IEA will hold them accountable," Keck said.

Kolb said this can be done by challenging the administration publicly to explain their stance on controversial issues, by applying pressure through lobbying to make the University act responsibly, and by making the administration adhere to the contract.

"The IEA will hold the institution accountable for how the University is run and how its resources are used, Keck said.

IEA membership includes 1.9 million elementary and secondary educators, and is the fastest growing union in the country.

negotiated by the faculty.

"Many of the potential grievances are resolved before they go very far because both sides must follow the con­tract," Olson said.

However, EIU's Secondary Education professor Ron Gholson said collective bargaining has not been all that effective given the current economic conditions.

"The union was very silent during the 1987-88 school year when we didn't get a raise," he said.

The board's faculty did receive a 9.6 percent increase this year, 4.7 percent of which was allocated by the state. Under collective bargaining, there has to be an agreement between the money goes," Olson said.

Therefore, faculty have more influence over that money, he said.

Layzell said UP provides good union leadership.

"The union leadership has been responsible for the stability of collective bargaining," Layzell said.

Olson said, "UP works under a set of rules that doesn't change depending on the in­dividual." A year ago, a Governor's

IEA membership includes 1.9 million elementary and secondary educators, and is the fastest growing union in the country.

State department chair thought a particular faculty member's office hours should be spread over four days, but the faculty member wanted office hours spread over three days. A Governor's schedule, Olson said.

"Without a contract, the chair had to realize that under the contract, the faculty member had the right to establish his own office hours," he explained.

Without a contract, the chair had the right to establish faculty office hours.

But Gholson said the union hasn't been able to solve all the problems.

"Some of the faculty are angered by the Fair Share Act," he explained.

EIU Mathematics Depart­ment Chairman John LeDuc agreed.

The Fair Share Act is a provi­sion that can be adopted into a contract, which requires all faculty, not just union members, to pay a designated amount to the union representing them.

Illinois UP President Mitch Vogel said the amount is fairly cheap compared to other unions and will not be used for political campaigns.

"We decided it was about time everyone paid a fair share of the costs of negotiating." he said. "We negotiate for everyone, not just union members."

Holmgard said it is not union dues but a payment for services non-union members get from the union.

"It places an undue burden on the union members when somebody gets sent back and collects the benefits," she said.

The fair share payment at Chicago State would amount to about $200 to $250 or 4 percent of the union dues per academic year.

independence" designed to herald the creation of an independent Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied territories.

A spokesman for the Palestinian National Council, Ahmed Abdul Rahman, predicted in a news conference Sunday that the majority of PNC members would endorse U.N. Resolution 338 as well as 242 on Monday.

"In the political statement we will adopt U.N. resolutions that are concerned with the establishment of Palestinian territorial inviolability and area; international waterways in Palestine, Resolution 242, the only way to get the peace process moving.

The parliament-in-exile opened its extraordinary session Saturday at the sprawling Club des Pins conference center on the Algerian coast.

In a keynote speech Arafat asked President-elect George Bush to forge a new policy in the Middle East that would deal with the PLO and not just Israel. The United States has demanded that the PLO renounce terrorism and recognize Israel's right to exist as conditions for any talks.

U.S. Ambassador Christopher Ross was the only Western ambassador to Algeria to stay away from the opening session, attended by 16 deputies from around the Arab world.

Hard-line Palestinian leaders said they feared that conceding Israel's right to exist would give away the PLO's main bargaining chip without getting anything concrete in return from Israel.

Two dorms back Scout food drive

Two residence hall councils will support the new statewide "Scouting for Food" drive this week.

The Neely Hall Council and the Triads Executive Council will collect canned goods and other pre-packaged food in their residence halls today through Saturday.

"I thought this would be a great opportunity for the residents of Neely Hall to help others," Amy Giomi, Neely Hall Council president, said.

The project is part of the 1988 nationwide "Good Turn" by the Boy Scouts of America. The food collected both in Southern Illinois and across the nation will be turned over to local and regional agencies which provide food for hungry people. Food collected nationally will stay in Southern Illinois.

Pediatricians condemn rock videos

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Academy of Pediatrics warned Sunday that popular rock videos may be bad for teenagers health.

The academy of 56,000 pediatricians released its statement about the videos in this month's issue of the AAP News.

Noting that teenagers today watch an average of two hours of rock videos per day, the physicians said, "Music videos may represent a new art form..." but we believe it is one that academicians may not hear understand rock lyrics and violence, substance abuse, suicide and sexual behavior.

Rock videos can also be purchased as albums or singles at record or video stores. While early generations of videos seemed to have more in common with home movies than professional films, those produced today are often produced by some of the biggest names in Hollywood.

Many of the characters who may not hear understand rock lyrics cannot avoid the often disturbing images that characterize a growing number of videos, the doctors said.

The academy reported 97 percent of the videos with a theme or story contain sexually suggestive material, while 56 percent contain acts of violence, often directed at women.

New Alzheimer's drug to be tested at Indiana University Medical Center

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — While it won't cure or reverse the devastating effects of Alzheimer's disease, researches at the Indiana University Medical Center believe a new drug will at least slow the pace of memory loss in the mysterious illness.

IU is one of a few U.S. research centers selected to test the drug, Milademe, on Alzheimer's patients. It is hoped the drug will "reversibly" brain cells that control memory and learning — the part of the mind ravaged by Alzheimer's, said Dr. Hugh Hendrie, director of IU's Center for Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders and chairman of the university's department of psychiatry.

The drug could give hope to the more than 2 million Americans suffering from the disorder, for which there is no known treatment.

ONLY BARGAINING CAN RESTORE FACULTY DECISION MAKING AT SIUC

I used to think that there were havens from the world and that perhaps the "holy towners" of academia could provide shelter, promote integrity, and encourage investigation. My notion has changed as I have come to learn that academia suffers from the same problems that plague much of our society. The centralization of power and the growth of an ever-distant administrative bureaucracy lead to abuses, short-sighted intellectual professions, and stifling of individual potential. So it is at SIUC. Decisions are made for faculty, not by faculty, and those decisions define much of our working lives.

Collective bargaining can lead to a restoration of individual initiative and power within a cooperative framework of shared decision making. To those who say, "the union will rob me of my individual rights," I say the union is your—your 2nd-place. To those who argue, "our funding comes from Springfield and can't be increased," I say IEA can effectively lobby for increased funding for education in Illinois. I also point out that the grievance procedure is not in Springfield, the promotion and tenure policies are not in Springfield, faculty health and safety issues are not in Springfield, and departmental respect for the role of faculty does not originate in Springfield. SIUC IEA/NEA can negotiate many issues having no dependence on increased funding. To those who say, "we will be forced to bargain away the right that we have," I say, do you really believe that the administration will make our working conditions so oppressive as to risk losing a fine faculty and discouraging prospective faculty members from coming to SIUC? I also ask for the evidence—show me a faculty who has been harmed by any substantive rights. Finally to those who don't trust their colleagues to negotiate a fair contract, I say participation is the key to a strong, representative us-to. Get out and vote; and after IEA wins the election, get involved.

The key to excellence is participation. The utilization of the faculty provides an opportunity and a challenge. The opportunity to regain power over our own destinies is now. The challenge is to live up to the responsibility and trust involved in collective action. Seize the opportunity—embrace the challenge! Vote SIUC IEA/NEA on November 16th.

Photon X-ray will assure Illinois laboratory's success

CHICAGO (UPI) — The flurry of publicity surrounding the loss of the superconducting supercollider has overshadowed another high-tech project of significant importance both financially and scientifically to Illinois, and university-based scientists believe their Photon Source, the world's most powerful X-ray machine, called Advanced Photon Source. The project is expected to provide myriad research applications for industry as well as for university-based science, the Chicago Tribune reported in its Sunday editions.

With its billion price tag, thousands of jobs and scientific implications for the future, the collider generated intense competition among states seeking to have the project located within their borders. When completion is expected to be the most expensive science project ever funded by the U.S. government.

Until last Thursday, when the energy department chose Texas as its preferred site for project, Illinois had been considered among the frontrunners in the competition. Key to the state's case was the existence in Batavia of Argonne, where research into high energy physics is already internationally renowned.

The decision to locate the collider in Texas brought bitter protest from officials in states not chosen that the selection was based on reasons more political than practical.

But despite the prestige associated with the project and the jobs involved in building and running it, there is little likelihood it will deliver many discoveries of immediate practical value or economic import, the Tribune said.

FDA should regulate smokeless cigarette, Surgeon General says

CHICAGO (UPI) — Surgeon General C Everett Koop said Sunday he thinks the Food and Drug Administration should regulate smokeless cigarette and believes there are questions about its effects on health.

Speaking at a news conference at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association, Koop said he could see no reason to call the device a cigarette in the first place.

The smokeless cigarette, such as "Premier" now being marketed in Illinois and Arizona by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., is a cigarette-shaped device containing a capsule with tobacco and various flavorings and other chemicals. The tobacco is not burned. Instead, hot air from a charcoal heat source hits the tip passes through the capsule, picking up nicotine and tobacco flavorings.

"I don't know how you can call that a cigarette," Koop said. "It delivers nicotine in a container and having hot air generated by the burning of charcoal pass over it. That makes it a drug delivery system in my way of thinking, and that would almost mandate that it would have to be regulated."

Congressman helped NASA block autopsy on astronauts

A magazine story in the Miami Herald, a Sunday magazine Focus said a top-level NASA official contacted Nelson, whose district includes the Kennedy Space Center, seeking his help in keeping the medical examiner from participating in an autopsy.

Under Florida law, the local medical examiner must hold an autopsy for any deaths in the official’s jurisdiction.

Dr. Laurie McHenry, Brevard County chief medical examiner, eventually dropped his request to conduct the state-required autopsy on the astronauts’ remains, which were signed by a NASA official in Houston.

“I got a call from the congressman, who said the presidential commission was in charge and didn’t want me to participate,” McHenry said in a telephone interview Saturday.

Nelson, a member of a shuttle mission aboard Columbia that ended 15 days before Challenger’s launch, said in the article he agreed to help “to do what I could to ease the conflict. It would have been terrible to see autopsy reports in the newspaper. I got in touch with the congressmen and explained the problem.”

Later, NASA issued a news release announcing McHenry’s participation in an autopsy, although the invitation to watch military officials conduct the examination was withdrawn.

Nelson said in the article he was “terribly upset” about the incident.

The seven Challenger astronauts — commander Francis “Dick” Scobee, co-pilot Michael Smith, Judith Resnik, Ellen Ochoa, Ronald McNair, Gregory Jarvis and school teacher Christa McAuliffe — perished Jan. 28, 1986, because of two solid-fuel boosters developed a fiery leak, triggering a rupture in the shuttle’s huge external fuel tank and the destruction of the manned orbiter.

The shuttle crew compartment broke free and plunged nearly 10 miles into the Atlantic Ocean.

Free-lance writer Dennis Powell, in the article for Tropic magazine, alleged that NASA covered up aspects of the search for astronaut remains.

The article said that NASA, in order to avoid curiosity reporters, ordered remains of the astronauts placed in plastic bags for a one-night trip in a pickup truck from Port Canaveral, where the remains were taken off a ship, to a morgue at Patrick Air Force Base.

The article also quoted anonymous NASA investigators as saying the astronauts survived the fiery blast but may have been conscious when their crew compartment hit the water.

How the astronauts died was never conclusively determined. NASA at first said they died in the explosion but announced an investigation after the disaster at a news conference July 28, 1986, that some or all of the shuttle flyers might have survived all the way to impact in the ocean.

Joseph Kerwin, an astronaut-physician at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, told reporters the explosion was not of sufficient force to kill the astronauts.

What could not be determined was whether the crew cabin maintained pressure following the desecration from the rest of the orbiter, allowing the crew to maintain consciousness.

In a letter to Rear Adm. Richard Truly, chief of the shuttle program, that was given to reporters, Kerwin said “The crew possibly, but not certainly, lost consciousness in the seconds following orbiter breakup due to in-flight loss of crew module pressure.”

Challenger broke up at an altitude of about 46,000 feet, according to the presidential disaster commission, and the second was months after the explosion was a second, 15,000 feet or so before arcing down into the Atlantic Ocean.

Any loss of pressure at such a high altitude would have quickly led to unconsciousness but the condition of the cabin after impact made it impossible to precisely determine what happened after the explosion.

The article pointed out that three of the astronauts’ personal emergency air packs had been turned on.

Taylor said Hall "side stepped" the constitution and his actions were unfair. "We have a habit of saying this is what everyone should follow," she said.

Hall said he was appointed to several of those boards two years ago under the proper procedures, before his election to USG's executive office. He said he was unaware of what actions the committee would take against him.

Recently-appointed committee member Kris Fabian warned the committee that an "internal war" could ensue and suggested the committee take no action against Hall because, as president, he was obviously qualified for those board positions.

The committee also will report recommendations of five other commissions and boards.

Following a mandate passed at the Oct. 26 USG meeting, the committee reported at the USG meeting Wednesday 10 of the applicants for the Judicial Board of Governance for subsistence.

Everyone should follow become regular donors, which procedures before the blood supply depends on President because these people can take everybody, Barnes said.

President said Hall recommended by the Senate. They were approved by a two-thirds vote.

The mandate instructed the committee to report: to the senate an entire board of 18 qualified members who would hear appeals of impeachment and interpret the constitution.

The executive board sent a list of 35 applicants to the committee. Five were determined to be ineligible because they failed to meet the 2.5 grade point average.

While SIU-C holds the national peace-time blood drive record of 1,364 pints, Ugent said college students generally are responsible for 25 to 35 percent of the blood supply in the nation.

"Without student blood donors, we would be in a crisis situation all the time," she said. SIU-C is the leader among college campuses.

Ugent said other college campus blood drive campaigns look to SIU-C as the national leader, and that is why it is important not only for the region, but for the nation, that blood drives on this campus are successful.

President of negotiating to make every possible effort to bring home American POWs. Barnes said one of Reagan's campaign promises in 1980 concerned the POWs. "He called them one of our nation's highest priorities," Barnes said.

When George Bush takes office in January, the lawsuit also will apply to him, according to Barnes. Barnes said there is no easy solution to the POW-MIA problem, but he does advocate economic pressure instead of war threats.

"You can't just go there and risk 500 lives to rescue five men," Barnes said. Barnes instead advocates placing social and economic sanctions on Vietnam and Laos.

He said that the U.S. government sent a Vice Presidential or a Secretary of State to bargain with Southeast Asia.

have a tough time versus a good blocking team, and we consider Southern a good blocking team," Morgan said.

"Bus Chris has such a repertoire of offense, that she can just put the ball where it needs to be."

During the crucial second game, Rehor orchestrated the Redbirds' comeback from an 8-point deficit with 17 kills. Her 31 attack percentage was tops for both teams.

"The momentum changed when we found out we could come back," Rehor said.

"Different people were coming up with key blocks or a big kill. The team really pulled together." Rehor's defensive prowess, recognized nationally by having an average of 1.55 digs per game, frustrated the Salukis hitters. Her defensive highlight came midway through Game 2, when she took a Nina Brackin spike square in the face and still managed to keep the ball alive. Illinois State scored on that play, and SIU-C called its last time out, trailing 11-8.

The score was tied five times in Game 2. The Salukis served game point twice—once in regulation and again in overtime—but the crucial swing of momentum came when SIU-C's Lori Simpson was called for a service violation with her team leading 14-13.

The score was then tied at 14, 15, and 16. Illinois State's Angie Raff, who finished with 10 blocks, made a stunning rejection and Rehor followed up with a kill to win the second game.

"We couldn't sideout when we needed to," said SIU-C's Yeri Noble, who led the Salukis with 9 kills. "I felt comfortable out there, but I also felt that Illinois State had this little edge. Maybe it was the crowd or the court, but I thought they had an advantage."

The attendance for the match was 1,512.

Lisa McAlie finished with 12 kills for Illinois State. Stacey Anderson led the Redbirds with 46 assists and 15 digs.

Errors plagued the Salukis all evening. They had 33 hitting errors and only 42 kills, resulting in a negative attack percentage. They also had service errors and only five service aces.

"What was a little frustrating was the unforced errors, the damage we did to ourselves," Hunter said. "It's a common sign of youth being in the picture."

The Salukis start three freshmen, but also have as many as four seniors on the court.

"The older players tried to play as hard as they could, even if they hit or free-flowing as they could," Hunter said. "They carried too much pressure on their shoulders and that's what let Game 2 get away."

Navratilova defeats Evert to keep Virginia Slims title

CHICAGO (UPI) — Martina Navratilova used a rocket serve Sunday to defeat her great rival Chris Evert 6-2, 6-3 and win the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Chicago.

Navratilova improved her lifetime record against Evert to 47-37. She has won this tournament nine times, including the last three years.

"Getting my first serve in won the points for me a very high percentage of the time," said Navratilova, who earned $40,000. "I was probably 70 percent on my first serve and won 80 percent of them. I was even down two break points. I even threw a couple right at her and I never do that."

Beauchem said he was also battling a hip injury which kept him from running good pace during the last two weeks.

"I think we have two weeks are plenty of time to recover," Beauchem said. "Even if (Dennis) didn't run the type of race he wanted to. He wasn't ready to run. The type of the field made a move."

Dennis said he felt the team did not practice well the last couple of weeks and may have lacked the mental edge needed coming into the meet.

"The team had a bit of a advantage, lining us into the meet," Dennis said. "The coaching staff is everything we're concerned with. We just weren't up for this one."

Behind Dennis in seventh with a time of 30:39 was David Beauchem in 57th place with a 1:36 left in the game that landed on the Nebraska field.

"That kick was very indicative of the day," Rhoades said. "The guy made a great kick down where you can't do nothing with it.

Saluki halfback Garrett Hines did play some in the contest, as for a broken right arm were negative. Offensive line coach Reese Younts saw limited action due to an ankle injury."

Dennis said the injuries have been playing a factor for some time.

"The injuries have taken toll a bit corner and the strength of the people we were playing has something to do with that," Rhoades said. "The last four games has been a big four-game streak."

No surgery for Gibson

If there was one bit of good news that came out of the weekend for football coach Rhoades it was about Fred Gibson.

Rhoades learned an arthroscopic test on the sophomore showed no minor damage to the quarterback's right knee. He will not undergo surgery.

"We will have 100 percent recovery," Rhoades said.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mike Tomczak ran for a touchdown and threw for another, and Chicago intercepted five passes and limited Washington to five rushing yards Sunday to lift the Bears to a 34-14 blowout over the Redskins.

Tomczak, playing his second straight game in place of injured Jim McMahon, completed 15 of 26 passes, including a 22-yard fourth-quarter touchdown to Dennis Perry. Tomczak also scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak in the third quarter.

The Bears improved their NFC-best record to 9-2, and gained a measure of revenge for their playoff elimination the past two seasons at the hands of the Redskins.

The defending Super Bowl champion Redskins, 6-5, lost two of their past three games, including a 41-17 defeat against Houston, to endanger their playoff chances.

Chicago is 13-2 in games started by Tomczak.

The Bears surged to a 20-0 halftime lead behind rushing touchdowns by Tomczak and Matt Suhey and two Kevin Butler field goals. Chicago's harassing defense induced Washington Coach Joe Gibbs to replace ineffective starting quarterback Doug Williams with Mark Rypien in the third quarter.

Chicago Coach Mike Ditka watched from the Bear's sideline during the game and jumped the bench after suffering a heart attack at the Bears club headquarters and four days after being released from a Chicago area hospital. St. Luke's Cardiologist Dr. Jay Alexander.

Before coach Ditka was his cardiologist, Dr. Jay Alexander.

Chicago's Neal Anderson ran for 50-yard touchdown with 5:16 left in the game.

Bears’ Mike Ditka proclaims his shouting spells are over

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka vows he is a changed man.

"You'll never see me yelling and screaming again. You can hold me to it," Ditka, 49, said after his team beat the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins, 34-14, Sunday. "And you won't see me with a cigar in my mouth, either."

Eleven days after suffering a mild heart attack, Ditka took his normal place on the Bears’ sidelines. But what wasn’t normal was Ditka’s demeanor.

"He was real low key and quiet," said Chicago quarterback Mike Tomczak, who has been the recipient of some of Ditka’s past ranting and raving episodes. "But we all knew he was there. He has such a presence."

Ditka, who has earned a reputation as one of the NFL’s most fiery and ex-中心城市 coaches in his seven years guiding the Bears, said it’s hard for him not to get excited, but now he is trying hard to control himself.

"I tried not to get too excited, but I was watching the Tampa Bay game and my blood pressure was 64. I took a third down play in the third quarter and up to 138," said Ditka, who had his blood pressure taken throughout the second half by cardiologist Jay Alexander.

"Naturally, I’m going to get excited. That’s the way I am, but hopefully not to such extent as I used to."

Ditka added that he plans to change his schedule. "I’m going to be smart about this whole thing. I’m due to have a heart monitor test tomorrow early and I’m going to cut back my workload to three days a week for a while," he said.

Ditka suffered his heart attack on Nov. 2 at the team’s training facility in Lake Forest, Ill., and was not released from the hospital until Wednesday night. Doctors initially said Ditka would not return to his job until next week, but the stubborn coach returned to work Thursday morning and insisted upon traveling with the team this weekend.

Ditka admitted he felt a little tired in the first half.

"I think we (the sun and the sweaters)," he said. "But I felt tired in the second half. Maybe the score had something to do with it."

The Bears jumped out to a 20-0 halftime lead and the Redskins were never able to get closer than 15 points the rest of the way.

"We had to play a lot more defense, it was very physical, and every time someone would run through the lane they got bunched up I think we went well, but we still have got some adjusting to do."

The Skakia were paced by McSwain’s 20 points, while Rick Shaypole added 15, hitting seven of 11 shots, and Harvey 19. SHUC outrebounded the Tigers 43-35 with McSwain, Shaypole and Todd Krueger each pulling down seven.

It felt pretty good, but it was a lot different than I expected," said Harvey, who fouled out with 3:31 to play. "It was not as intense as I expected, but I never played against college players before. I almost expected it to be easier, I was going to do it easier.

"It wasn’t really physical, and I committed some silly fouls, but that is something I have got to get used to and learn to live with."

Victoria was paced by Gary Gaspard’s 31 points. Gaspard nailed nine of 13 shots for the Tigers, who hit 21 of 50 for 42 percent.

Mark Case added 13 points for Victoria, nine of which came in the first half thanks to three three-pointers.

"We had to get in the little guys face, and we did a better job of getting out and getting on him in the second half," Herrin said. "Gaspard is just a good player."

"We got in their cutting lanes and got some hands in their faces. We made some mistakes, but that is always our nature. We were probably a bit nervous. We just like to play, they are getting tired of the coaches coaches.

Dennis NCAA bound

Freshman's running highlights Salukis' day

By Robert Baxter

Freshman Jon Dennis was the lone bright spot on the McSwain Curtain on Saturday, as he finished seventh at the NCAA Division 3 cross-country championships. Dennis was one of the top five finishers not associated with a first- or second-place team, which qualified him for an berth in the NCAA race in Des Moines, Iowa.

"I am pleased to make the nationals," Dennis said. "I did enough to get through. Now I'll look ahead to finishing in the top ten." If Dennis finishes in the top 25, he will be awarded all-America status. Dennis said anything beyond that will be a bonus.

The national championship meet is today at the Mark Golf Course, the site of the District's competition.

Dennis finished high in the standings, he said but was pleased as pictured with his overall performance.

"I lost a bit of concentration in the middle of the race," he said. "At about the 7,000-meter mark I knew I was in a move and picked up the pace. I just didn't stay with him." Despite being solo, he tried to run up on the leaders.

Jon Dennis and coach Bill Cornell said he noticed struggling during the race.

"I am pleased with his performance," Cornell said. "But he was struggling at mile 4 and 5, then into the race. He looked very rugged." The team finished the season with mixed emotions as it saw Dennis qualify for the nationals and at the same time finished 11th out of 15 teams.

The Salukis did finish 5th of Missouri Valley Conference rivals Western Illinois and Drake. Indiana State finished seventh.

NORMAL—The night before Chris Rehor. The standing ovation she received during the SIU-C team introductions preceded any other possible outcome.

Rehor the diminutive 5-foot-6 outside hitter destined to be SIU-C's top player at this year's NCAA Tournament. She could be heard throughout the gymnasium.

"It is the time again tonight," said Illinois State coach Julie Morgan, whose team needed to win in three games to earn the top seed for Friday and Saturday's conference tournament.

The three-game decision resolved what had been a complicated race for the conference championship.

Through Illinois State (25-8, 8-1) was led with Northern Illinois (22-9, 8-1) and Southwest Missouri (23-4, 6-1) for first, the Salukis were without the advantage of winning percentage of games won.

At the top seed, Illinois State was the only team to beat the SIU-C four-tournament conference tournament. Not only will this be the last match for Rehor to be held in the season-to-be-abandoned, 20-seat seat. Horton Field House, it marks the first time Illinois State has held the tournament since 1969, when the Illinois State captured the second place and the Illinois State the third place.

The Salukis (13-13, 6-3) enter the Gateway tournament as the No. 1 seed for the third consecutive season. They take a losing record into postseason play for the second straight time.

Defensive effort leads Salukis in exhibition

In Rich Herrin's school, one equation is very important. Good defense equals instant offense.

The equation paid off for the Salukis Saturday as their defense carried them to a 75-68 exhibition victory over the Victoria-Australia All-Stars.

"We had more possessions in the second half, but we held them," Herrin said. "Defense gives a team instant offense. We got the run and we took the run. We got the win, and defense won the game." The instant offense translated into 44 second half points, including three

"The highlighy intensified races, like the MVC," Cornell said. "They really take a toll on the runners."

The running younger runners may take even longer for them to recover from that trend. Cornell said the extra 12 minutes of running the other runners had to run 6.3 miles in this meet may have been too fatiguing.

"The other teams had been practicing at 50 miles a week," Cornell said. "Our team has been going only 36 to 38 miles a week. We can't run such a young team any harder than that.

The Salukis had only two seniors at the meet, David Hartin and gallery. Glavine did not run the race but was finished as the Salukis' No. 2 runner in 5734 places.

"We seem to have the team's attitude in approaching this race," Glavine said. "I wish we could have said the same as the emotion they stirred up when entering the MVC championships.

"We just didn't perform as well as we usually do," Glavine said. "We couldn't get up for it. The main meet of the year for us is coming up next week."

The running younger runners may take even longer for them to recover from that trend. Cornell said the extra 12 minutes of running the other runners had to run 6.3 miles in this meet may have been too fatiguing.

"The other teams had been practicing at 50 miles a week," Cornell said. "Our team has been going only 36 to 38 miles a week. We can't run such a young team any harder than that.

The Salukis had only two seniors at the meet, David Hartin and gallery. Glavine did not run the race but was finished as the Salukis' No. 2 runner in 5734 places.

"We seem to have the team's attitude in approaching this race," Glavine said. "I wish we could have said the same as the emotion they stirred up when entering the MVC championships.

"We just didn't perform as well as we usually do," Glavine said. "We couldn't get up for it. The main meet of the year for us is coming up next week."

"We should have a better attitude to get ready for this one."
