New rules not enough help
Red decal lots still overcrowded

By Daryl Stephenson
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Despite liberalized regulations and lower fees, parking on campus is still a problem for many SIU students. For red decal owners, the problem is especially acute. Most centrally located red lots fill up before 8 a.m., and usually remain full until late afternoon. Consequently, students arriving later find it difficult to find parking places. So far, 5,500 red decals have been sold, according to Virgil Truman, assistant security officer. There are 30 red parking lots, he added, providing parking space for 3,000 cars. However, except for those located around the Communications Building, most of them are in outlying areas of the campus.

"Therefore," said Clifton B. Anderson, chairman of the University Senate sub-committee on traffic and parking, "these outlying lots, like lot 18 by the Arena, are inconvenient for most students, since most classes are located in buildings in the central part of campus."

The result, said Anderson, is that red lots around the Communications Building are overcrowded, while the outlying lots are relatively empty. Complaining the problem, said Anderson, is the fact that many blue lots are not being used to their full capacity, thus adding to the frustration of the red decal owners.

A case in point is blue lot 57, north of the Communications Building. The lot has a total of 71 spaces, but, said Anderson, it has been virtually empty throughout the quarter. Anderson said that lot 57, which used to be red, was converted to a blue lot this summer, after blue decal fees were dropped from $20 to $45.

"We thought," said Anderson, "that the decrease in fees would result in a rush to buy blue decals. So lot 57 was converted to meet this expected increase in blue decals."

"However," said Anderson, "the rush did not materialize, and the expected number of blue decals (about 2,000) were not sold."

So far only 1,800 blue decals have been sold, according to Truman at the Security Office. The sub-committee is scheduled to hold its first meeting of the quarter next week. If the sub-committee approves the conversion of lot 57 to red, the proposal will then be considered by the University Senate, and then sent to President Robert G.Layer for his approval.

Anderson said that conversion of lot 57 to red would greatly help the parking situation, but not entirely solve the problem.

Anderson said that he hopes efforts of the sub-committee and security office surveys will help in finding some long-range solutions to the parking problem.

Carbondale named finalist in All-America cities contest

By David L. Mahlman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale has been named one of 18 finalists in the 22nd All-America Cities Award Competition for community betterment through citizen action, it was announced Wednesday by Carbondale Mayor Neal Eckert. Eckert made the announcement during a press conference with the City Council. City Manager William Schmidt, SIU-Carbondale President Robert G. Layer and Vic Koning, president of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, presented. Each year, All-America City awards are made by the National Municipal League for significant improvement or community betterment through citizen action. According to the League, the designation an All-America City has served to strengthen citizens' commitment to civic betterment, in some cases
Activities planned for Parents Day

Tour of the campus, rag intramural Recreation, collettes and a football game are among the activities plans for "Parents' Day" today. All students and students' parents may enjoy Saturday at Parents Day.

At 10:30 a.m. and until 5 p.m. in the Ballroom Lounge of the Student Center, the Administration, deans, sorority and fraternity houses will be open for a view of the campus.

The Student Activities Office, 311 McClung Memorial Hall, will present "Meeting, movies, a play...are some of today's events.

Southern Players: "The Great Good Country Room," a play for children. 2:00 p.m., University Theater. general admission free, 80 cents.

Student Tenant Union Meeting. 7:30 p.m., Student Center Ballroom B. Invitations and admission: 10 cents.

Hill Foundation: Open. 7 p.m., midiumight. 311 S. Washington Ave.

Stadia Home Economics Association: Membership drive. 8 p.m., Home Economics Carbonara Community Center. Admission: 20 cents. Bridle, 7:30 p.m., and bridge admission: 5-8 p.m., 211 W. Eib. Invitations and admission: free.

SU Recreation Club Meeting. 6 p.m., Newman Center, 785 S.

SGAC charges admission.

Students will be charged admission to some SGAC-sponsored events in the future, according to Tom Kelley, chairman of student activities.

Charging a token admission fee will help finance scheduling of different events which have previously been free, Kelley said. The policy change was made necessary by a severely straitened budget, Kelley said. The additional fee which will be charged in SGAC is in addition to a range of programs, he said.

Teacher denies faculty caused party; says Talley letter sought scapegoat

By Richard Layne

Dean Moulton, president of the Carbohydrate Federation of University, denied that the faculty had responsibility for a "street party" which blanketed the campus on the last weekend of the fall quarter.

Interviewed by a student reporter in mathematics, said "It's ridiculous to blame the faculty for this kind of event. We have nothing to do with the number or size of events. The faculty has been dealt with as a scapegoat."

Speaking for the CFU, Seldon said, "We have yet to see anyone put up in defense of the faculty. We don't think the administrators should take a stand against us." A meeting of the officers and committee chairman of the CFU approved Seldon's statement 12 to 10 last night.

Seldon's statement was made in reply to a letter written by C. Hor-}

OEP upholds increases at dorms but denies other housing hikes

The Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP) has upheld board room and board increases in student dormitories at BU; but has refused to approve raises previously announced for Southern Hills and University Trainer Court.

This information was contained in a letter from the Chicago Regional OEP to President Robert C. Layser. The letter said room and board hikes for Southern Hills may remain in effect provided the increases were announced prior to Aug. 15 and deposits were received after the announcement of the increases, but prior to Aug. 15.

The letter also stated that rentals for each student apartment and student trailer court lot during the period of the freeze may not be at a rate which exceeds the highest rental charged for each apartment lot prior to the freeze.

S. L. Bussell, director of Housing Business Services, said the OEP's announcement means that increases approved by the Board of Trustees on Feb. 13, apply to dormitory facilities. The facilities affected are: Brush Tower, University Park, Thompson Point, Small Group Housing and Southern Acres. He said the University Trainer Court and Southern Hills increases will not take effect until Nov. 13 or until a time when adjustments are permitted. Layser indicated refunds or credits will be made to those who have paid increased rentals in these two areas.

Moulton accepts new job in administration

"After summarizing the division of the division of responsibilities," the letter said, "it was clear to all that there was an immediate need for a new dean. Emil Speng, that I could make a move at this time without detriment to the Student Services division at BU. According to Moulton, he will serve as an infor- mational aide to the Dean of Students Affairs staff.

The letter stated that the move was act- ually made during the latter part of last week by Moulton and that he will move into the new office in the Gilroy Hall. Moulton said that the change was not announced previously because he wanted some people to be informed of his new assignment before it was printed in the newspaper.

Moulton said in charge of student affairs of students and public relations. Mole is assistant for student of staff and includes student ser- vices and student services.

Moulton declined to explain where he would be in the new post.

Berkeley students back public-interest law firm

BERKELEY, Calif. — More than 4,000 students at the University of California at Berkeley have voted to contribute $1 a year to the public-interest group, which would deal only with public-interest cases.

A similar fund has already been established at the university's Los Angeles campus and another is planned at two state colleges at San Jose and Santa Clara.

Purse strings can be painful

The purse strings are getting tighter for higher education in Illinois. And adjusting to this is proving to be quite painful.

Said the politician to the professor: “Sorry, I have no more money for you. You must learn to do with what you have, although it is less than what you are used to.”

For over a decade, SIU and other state universities have had their hands on the dollar. But his situation has changed.

As one Illinois Board of Higher Education official put it, these schools have become the victims of too large, too inefficient, mostly squandering bureaucracies.

And it is for this reason that there is little money left to be given to higher education.

SIU has an operating budget somewhat lower than last year's.

On top of that, the IEHE is asking all state schools to work an ordered list of their lowest priority programs—any that may not be a current area of need. The higher board can make a statewide list of low-priority programs which would be cut to free money for new programs for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

The University of Illinois administration has taken the hardest stand so far, doing everything possible to restore the $6.8 million Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie cut from its budget item for salaries.

The Student Advisory Committee to the IEHE, in line with this stand, has decided to try to persuade the state legislature to override the governor's budget cuts.

The feeling is mutual statewide:

Everyone, in the American tradition, is running around crying and grumbling for more money.

And imagine the state legislature being asked to help cough up more money, especially when it is worrying about feeding all its little horses.

Saddam library schedule

Letters to the editor

To the Daily Egyptian:

‘Sad’ library schedule

A very casual perusal of the Oct. 7 edition of the Daily Egyptian would fail to point out perhaps the most important bits of news to be published this quarter. Placed in relative obscurity on the bottom of page 3 was the new schedule of operation for Morris Library. It is very obvious now how little many people think of the library.

Perhaps the most saddening part of this new schedule is the position of the administration which is reflected by this change. Obviously there are many more things more important to the operation of this university than the library—covering the overpass for instance. It is not hard to imagine the impact that this will have on future enrollment. Undergraduates as well as graduates will think twice before deciding to come to a university, which may have first-rate instructors, but only a third-rate or non-existent schedule of library operation.

Things were bad enough before this, especially on weekends, but a cutback of this nature and the obscure way in which it was announced can only succeed in damaging further Southern’s reputation of being a major university.

Thanks from firemen

To the Daily Egyptian:

An Open Letter to the People of Carbondale:

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the people of Carbondale for their cooperation during our efforts to bring Fire Prevention Week (Oct. 3-9) to the public attention. The contributions of time, equipment and just plain enthusiasm from everyone—businessmen, University, junior and elementary students; parents; everyone—were more than we had expected and were very gratifying.

What we have tried to accomplish, and hope that we have succeeded, is to impress upon the public that fire prevention can and should, be practiced on a year-round basis—and that to keep less from fire to a minimum, we need, and now feel that we have got, the cooperation of all of the people of Carbondale.

Thank you again to everyone who helped us in this campaign; unfortunately, limitations of time and space make it impossible to name each individual and his contribution.

Filthy talk at game

To the Daily Egyptian:

After attending the Arkansas State-SIU football game at SIU Saturday night, I was compelled to write this letter.

I am a graduate student, 30-years-old, from the east, and do not consider myself too far removed from the present undergraduate population. I am not opposed to long hair, far out clothes, nor voicing one's opinion.

Up until now, since I had very little social contact with SIU students, I thought that most of what I heard about the "young people" was just not quite true. Now I am convinced they are worse than I had heard.

My date and I arrived at the game about one hour prior to the start of the game and found what appeared to be good seats. I might mention here that since I had to pay an entry fee, part of which goes to athletics, I purchased student tickets. As game time approached, all the surrounding seats began to fill. I noticed that a good portion of the nearby students were either drunk or were well on their way. Almost everybody had a bottle or two under their arm and were very proud of their ability to bring lots to drink. The game started and so did the action in the students seats of the seating.

I have never heard such filthy talk in all my life. Not only were we among the few not identified as "college boys" using every foul, four-letter word they could think of, but the "college girls" were really getting a big kick out of it. The girls really seemed to enjoy that kind of behavior.

At half-time we decided to leave and listen to the rest of the game on the radio. I have heard my lesson and will never put myself in a social situation with the students of SIU again.

As I mentioned, I'm now convinced that the youth of our time (as measured by the SIU students) is headed for hard times. No longer can I look upon the college student as a fine example and good citizen. Perhaps they should be treated with the same filth and contempt they show for others.

Congress fails to meet issues

For a few months at least, the military draft ceased to exist. The appropriated time limit ran out and the proposed two-year extension was tied up and packaged as a political football to be thrown between both houses of Congress and finally among the different political factions in the Senate.

It is now history that on Sept. 22, the Senate, by a slim margin, finally passed a two-year extension on the draft.

The exact facts of what went on in the various political backrooms may never be known and are probably of little importance. But what is evident and of importance is the fact that the Congress of the United States once again failed to confront the main issue that was at hand—non-voluntary military conscription unconstitutional.

As in the past, private political considerations took precedence over a consideration of public welfare or even more important, constitutional validity.

The military draft, in its many months of debate in Congress, has served as a lever to force the acceptance (by political coercion) of a wide range of demands—ranging from military pay raises to withdrawal from Vietnam. But it is evident that hardly a member of Congress gave much serious consideration to the moral and constitutional validity of a military draft.

The draft, once again, is the law of the land. But it still remains in a state of limbo in as much as Congress has in open forum or covertly, failed to call attention to the more basic issue of conscription.
The plight of the intellectuals

By Harry S. Ashmore
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

I have just spent a week in the company of a group of tycoons and their more or less intellectual critics behind the scenes at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions to consider "The Corporation and the Quality of Life." The corporation, as a more or less independent power center, has become the natural target of most of the dissatisfaction in the American society. And as we move across the years and races and generations, the matter can no longer be written off as a problem in corporate public relations.

The most obvious issues are those having to do with the poor health of the poor and the more or less apolitical ethnic minorities deprived of a fair share of the affluence that the new classes have gravitated for the majority. Then there is the environment, which is being polluted by the noise, congestion and noxious waste that are the byproducts of industrialization.

The tycoons, recognizing that these conditions do exist and that they cannot any longer be absorbed under the old rules of laissez faire, pay much more attention to the intellectuals than they used to. But I am not sure, at the end of a week, that the intellectuals really have anything much to say since they have only been thinking about a prevailing situation that is in the view of most people a threat to the human spirit.

If there is any single area of agreement among intellectuals, it is that they have entered a period of rapid change unprecedented in human history. To some this is a qualitative condition, and to many it is basically inevitable. It is in the same manner, unfashionable to give voice to the old, unoriginal faith in scientific-technical progress as an ultimate benevolent force capable of finding its own solutions to the problems man creates as he continues to bend nature. Yet the prevailing political argument that arises from this view seems to me curiously old-fashioned. Democratic voices, in a science-jargon, the immediate issues are still those that have divided men, and nation for more than a century, and the philosophical questions seem to have been much advanced since they served as precursors to the French Revolution.

We are still arguing about individual liberty and social equality as if those were the only options, one exclusive of the other. And those who cannot stand the resulting strife seem to be betting a great deal on an incoherent state of nature where, immune to all the corruptions of modern society, the noble savage somehow has been recreated.

Intellectuals entertain wide differences about the extent of the dislocations in the American society, and about the kind and degree of action required to set them right. But few if any still consider the status quo tolerable. It follows, then, that if they must choose the environment of the revolutionaries and are repelled by the mass immunity of the gentler upstanding vision, they are committed to seek change within the democratic process as it presently exists in the United States, or as it might be adapted by reform acceptable to a majority.

This bedrock proposition seems to be fundamentally repugnant to many intellectuals. The reason, I suspect, is that it requires, if not faith in the collective judgment of the mass of Americans, at least the acceptance of the popular majority as the controlling authority on all broad public issues. The Constitution consigns to the judiciary authority to countermand the popular will, but only in protection of individual liberty, as defined in the Bill of Rights.

It is a rare intellectual who will admit that he is elitist, but it is also unusual to find one who is not frustrated by what he deems to be the ineffectiveness to adjust, and versed with preoccupation with material values, that are commonly identified as leading characteristics of the mass culture. Thus the frequently overwhelming temptation of the fortuitous situation to decide what is best for the people, and to impose it on the losers power came to hand.

Under any theory of democracy I can understand, including that labeled participatory, individual liberty is not separable from, but is a central component of, social justice. Since no society, in East, has yet attained a satisfactory level of social justice the usual impassioned comparisons are not of much account. What we do know is that nowhere have a purer and more diverse body of people been found for a truly egalitarian reorganization of wealth and power and where such a radical displacement has been achieved voluntarily began to move the institutions of individual liberty to guarantee that there would be no directional change. The question then is not the extent to which the whole United States may be viewed whether it is morally or can be seen in the same direction, but that I would suggest, is the real issue is whether the majority of the board rooms of our great corporations are not so.

City areas may be 'off limits' for cars

Editor's Note: This is the second of a two articles discussing the possibility of "off limits" for cars in city areas. The first article also touched on the same subject, but the second article expands on the possibilities.

The changes may mean that we can't drive our cars as much or where would like to in the future. Askew predicted in an interview. "They could mean we're an irreplaceable vehicle traffic for downtown districts, limiting the use of cars in metropolitan areas and even gasoline rationing to reduce driving." Or it could be a combination of all these. Askew says he doubts most big cities can meet the agash-curb requirements for which Ruckelshaus has set a 1975 deadline.

"Emission controls on new cars will improve the combustion efficiency and make the car around with little or no controls. They will be around for a number of more years. The average car is on the road for 10 years."

One possible way to ease air pollution in the big cities would be the building of new "controlled" metropolitan areas in open countries. A proposal made by Indian Spilhaus, a noted educator and scientist.

Population is climbing "faster than we can provide the human services which people need to remain human," says the former president of the Franklin Institute. Philadelphia, dean of, the Institute of Technology, University of Minnesota, and director of research at New York University.

The urban dilemma is an American problem and a worldwide problem," Spilhaus says. "At its root is the fact that too many people drift into too few cities or their immediate environs."

"Consequently, 70 per cent of all Americans now live or one per cent of the land."

Spilhaus envisages future cities of "controlled size" dispersed and surrounded by ample areas of open land. Present "new towns" project like Columbus, crowded into the 30-mile corridor between Washington, D.C. and Baltimore, are not the answer, in his view.

The proposed Minnesota Experimental City (MEX) would be a logical prototype, the educator believes.

MEX is a cooperative venture of business and industry, the federal government, the state of Minnesota and its university. Planned since 1967, it is to be a complete city of 25,000 outside the commuting range of existing cities. Construction is to begin in 1973.

Spilhaus says MEX "will also be a huge urban laboratory, effecting actions necessary to alter the social, economic and physical environment to achieve otherwise unsustainable ends over a relatively brief period—10 years."

"It demonstrates that eventual gains of a grand system of dispersed cities are great enough to justify huge calculated experimental risks."

Dispersal, as Spilhaus sees it, doesn't mean "the whole United States would become a single sprawling suburb of some megacity in the eastern environment of so many American communities."

Already in the various automated systems that could move people "motorless, driverless and noticeably in semiautomatic pods, computer-controlled passenger cars travel from where they are to where they want to go without stopping."

Dispersal is the "only path" in auto cities by means of a modern transport system of this kind would do away with the need for freeways and traffic control. "It would lessen smog, save lives and free valuable space."

Bridge match to benefit Foundation
The Starvitz Abrams Memorial Bridge game will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Carbondale Community Center at 200 W. Elm St.

The bridge game is the first of its kind honoring the late Abrams, former SIU professor in theater.

The tournament is open to everyone and will be played in pairs. A donation will be asked of each bridge player.

The donations from the tournament will go to the SIU Foundation. The Foundation will award them to "Best Student Director of the Year" in theater.

The winning bridge couple will receive individual trophies and will keep the large traveling trophy for one year.

Those who wish to contribute to the fund can contact Mrs. Doro Denzel at 809 Skyline Drive in Carbondale.

Private funds help finance research

Money from private sources is being used by the SIU Foundation to help finance research grants and to establish new professional schools, according to Lawrence Astor, director of estate planning for the Foundation.

In a meeting Thursday in Chicago, Astor said that Dr. Watson of Miami, Fla., an SIU alumnus, has earmarked $250,000 in his will for the SIU Medical School research program.

In addition, said Astor, the Foundation has received $10,000 from the estate of the late Ruby J. Mauamore of Royal City, Ind., for a scholarship fund for Union County students and $1,000 from the St. Louis Staur Foundation of Chicago for education of the deaf-and-blind.

It was also mentioned that since last April the Foundation has received about $500,000 in private grants and endowments.

Kenneth E. Miller, executive director of the Foundation, said that continued growth of state funds has made the possibility of further budget cuts by the Illinois Board of Higher Education for the academic year 1971-72 less likely in the search for more help.

The Smorgasbord will be closed Thursday-Saturday for remodeling, but will open next Monday.

Eco-village forms student's dream of dormitory living

By Sue Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Student housing would be new the same.
Instead of building dormitory food, students would be growing and preparing their own.

Students are dissatisfied with the layout of their living areas and have no one to blame but themselves for the way they built it.

This is not a macroscopic synopsis of Walden or some obscure rooftop community in North Dakota. It is a description of how things could be at SIU with a student-designed housing plan-the eco-village.

The idea for the village was originated by seven students in the General Studies World Game class last spring. The village would be a 60-acre self-sufficient community of domes, a frame and similar structures and would house 100-150 students depending on the scale on which it is built.

But unlike most term projects, this one could become a reality.

The origins of the project Robert Cartwright, a senior in landscape architecture, is the only one working on it now and he is quick to point out that the project has "nothing to do with developing a new kind of housing community." Neither would it follow the lines of traditional student housing projects
Cartwright calls the eco-village a "planned" cooperative working community or a land-based shop.

"It is an experiment in learning by doing and living," said Thomas Turner, an environmental science major who has visited the project director with Focused Projects.

The eco-village would be a self-sufficient community to be developed using environmentally -friendly methods. The proposed features of the village outlined by the project include a laugha system for cooling, a separate power plant, possibly

The village would not be a static community. "That's the trouble with traditional housing areas and buildings," said Cartwright. "They can't be changed easily to serve a new purpose.

The village would be built so it could be taken apart and reassembled at a different location, Cartwright said. In keeping with the philosophy of change, the village is being designed to last five years.

The village would be built mainly by the students who would live there. Students also would be expected to volunteer for a few hours of their time to maintain the village's landscaping, laundry, gardens or whatever other services it offers.

The village's sewage system would feature three lagoons and several filters. The sewage would pass from one lagoon to the next until the water in the third lagoon would be pure enough for swimming. Cartwright said further filtering would be required to purify the water for drinking and use in the eco-village.

The soil stabilization method may be used to provide foundations for the domes. By this method, a foundation can be formed by combining a concrete or asphalt mixture directly with the soil. Then, when the dome was removed, the foundation would decompose and the land would be ready for cultivation or rebuilding, Cartwright said.

The village would be containing utility pipes for water, food and electricity to another possibility for the village's growth.

Cartwright estimates the eco-village to be in about two years. "It could be lived in before the end of the school year," he said. At that time, all three features are

The village and Turner are now working on sources of funding for the project. If the project is awarded a grant, a team of professionals and "trained students" would examine the possibilities of the project and design and test the most

City manager claims industry is needed for growth of Carbondale

By David Mahfouz
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The one major need for the continued growth of Carbondale is industrial expansion, the city manager William Schmidt told the City Council Tuesday night.

Schmidt made his comments in his first-year report to the Council on major activities of the past year and future needs of the city. Schmidt also said that the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision of Mayberry vs. Pennsylvania—handed down after Hoffinan ruled—allowed Judge Hoffman to impose a contempt sentence at the conclusion of the trial.

Ombudsman aids students

Coordinated by Michael Jr., Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If you’re not doing well in school because you don’t have enough pocket money, when you were bailed out for marijuana-talk to a University Ombudsman.

“We are here to help students with any problem they may have whether it be related to the University or not,” says Lisa Brigham. Brigham and Mrs. Mary Walker are serving not only as liaison between students and administrators, but as “middlemen” and friends to some students and reliable friends to others.

The Ombudsman Office has just begun its third year. In its second year there was a 126 percent increase in requests for assistance.

“Already I talk to about five or six people every day,” said Brigham. “Sometimes the number may be as high as 12 a day.”

This is partly due to an increase in student awareness of the office, said Brigham. “We are pleased that students are reaching out to us,” he said.

According to Brigham, the beginning end of quarters bring the majority of students.

“At the start of a quarter, many students have trouble with registrations and seek help in getting fees deferred. At the end of the quarter there is always the problem of grades and registration holds,” he said.

The wage-price freeze and tight University budget have also had their effect on the Ombudsman’s Office.

“Many students now come in with financial problems which resulted from cuts in wages and work hours,” said Brigham.

Brigham replaced Reggie Davis in September, taking over his special position to aid in solving major problems of black students at SIU.

“However,” says Brigham, “a student, whether he is black or white, can see whoever he wishes. Some black people just prefer talking to someone else black about these problems.”

According to the black ombudsman, the majority of students who come to him are black.

Brigham said that the office had received a great deal of social problems, mainly because students did not know that they would be accepted.

“Our scope is not limited to any type of problems,” says Brigham. “We work with any kind of problem a student may have, from a case of racial confusion to serious legal problems.”

Brigham explained how he works as Ombudsman. “If a student comes in the office and has a problem with a prejudiced instructor, for example, he is questioned,” he said.

“I try to find out if the grape is legitimate first,” said Brigham.

“Next, I can check with the appropriate through students and others. If something of this nature is confirmed the student is helped correct in getting the instructor to recognize the student and his grading, a meeting is arranged.”

“The meeting would consist of myself, the instructor and the dean of the particular school,” says Brigham. “The complaint will be stated and evidence presented. The matter is then in the hands of the dean.”

“Of the dean fails to act appropriately, the matter is then taken to the Ombudsman Committee composed of five faculty and student representatives, and then to the President’s Office.”

Ombudsman said that he does not change or question University policy, but that he does try to explain it to people.

“We are all here to help students, and the more I’m talking to the students, they’re more willing to ask me questions,” he said.

According to Brigham, “We do all that we can to help the student go to college without problem free as possible.”

GOP seeks break in revenue deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are testing alternatives to President Reagan’s revenue-sharing plan, now blocked in committees, thus keeping alive the possibility of some help this year for hard-pressed local governments.

A request for immediate action by the House Ways and Means Committee on the proposal to earmark part of federal tax receipts for states and locals was made and rejected last week in a stiffly polite exchange of correspondence between Nixon and Chairman Wilbur D. Millis, D-Mass.

Nixon mentioned no alternatives in his letter to Millis. But two Republican members of the committee requested the subject in House speeches, urging action in the Congressional Record during Washington.

“The administration has not taken an affable attitude about possible alternatives, understanding that the need for action overrides questions of formula desirability,” Rep. Edward B. Colebank Jr. of New York said.

Caliprie Stage season opens Friday

Theater goers are in for a treat with Caliprie Stage’s upcoming production of "The Caucasian Chalk Circle." This groundbreaking play, written by Bertolt Brecht, explores themes of justice and morality.

"The play is a powerful commentary on the human condition," said Caliprie Stage artistic director and actor John Smith.

"This production will feature a talented cast of local actors, ensuring a high-quality performance that will appeal to all audiences," said Smith.

"The Caucasian Chalk Circle" is directed by Caliprie Stage co-founder and actor Matthew Johnson. Johnson is known for his distinctive acting style and has received critical acclaim for his work in previous Caliprie Stage productions.

"Matthew is a celebrated actor who has brought many memorable performances to the Caliprie Stage stage," said Smith.

The play will be performed at the University’s Schuyler Center from Friday, November 18 to Sunday, November 20. Tickets are free and can be obtained at the door.

Strikes cutbacks hurt U.S. economy

By the Associated Press

A 20-state coal strike and a trend of East and Gulf Coast dock strikes continued to make wavers in the nation's economy, Wednesday. Besides layoffs in related industries such as railroads, many firms faced a tightening of essential supplies.

"It takes a little bit of time, but the expansion definitely is being put on," said a spokesman for the manufacturers association of the Delaware Valley. A number of firms in the Philadelphia area were reporting running loss on raw materials and imported parts because of the 15-day coal strike by 30,000 East and Gulf coast members of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association.

Picketing miners halted delivery from coal stockpiles to the Wright, W Va., Steel Division plant. Some 306 pickets stepped up, despite an earlier warning that a layoff of 6,000 steel company employees would be necessary if its coal supply was cut off.

More than 2,000 railroad employees already were idle as a result of the strike of 160,000 United Mine Workers, and further layoffs in that industry were threatened.

There was no sign of a contract settlement in the 15-day coal strike. At issue were union demands for a boost in the top wage from $37 to $40 per day and a doubling of the 40-cent per ton royalty the industry pays the union.

UUM Chief W.A. Tony Boyle accused the Blaurniutous Coal Operators Association of holding up President Nixon's economic program to avoid settling the strike which begins Oct. 1.

"But as President Nixon has pointed out," Boyle declared, "new contracts are being negotiated in other industries without regard to the freeze or any other aspect of the nationalization program.

"We are ready to negotiate a new contract with the BCMA consistent with fairness and equity for coal miners."

"The East and Gulf coast dock strike began Oct. 1 also, in a showdown over the issue of continuing an annual income guarantee in the Port of New York. In cost to the economy was estimated at $57 million a day.

About 7,000 ILA members in Texas ports continued to ignore strike orders from headquarters. The only piers being struck in that state were at Beaumont, where pickets from one local kept longshoremen from four others off the docks.

In Brooklyn, an estimated 500 strike longshoremen lined up for food stamps, interest free loans and other assistance offered by ILA Local 184.

There was no change in the shipping picture on the West Coast where the independent International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union has mounted a court challenge to the Taft-Hartley injunction which halted a 14-week strike of 13,000 dockers.

Democrats submit 'fairer' remap bill to House

SPRINGFIELD, I1. (AP) — Democrats introduced into the House of Representatives on Monday a new bill to reapportion the state's 112 House seats. The measure, drafted by a bipartisan panel, would assign seats to candidates in a manner that is more likely to be fairer to the state's U.S. House delegation and give Republicans a voting advantage.

This is immediately due to have his bill moved up on the House agenda to bypass the committee stage before Republicans debated the effort, 84-43.

House Majority Leader Henry J. Hyde, R-Chicago, said that the "subject of congressional reapportionment is extremely complex and cannot be rushed through the House, as the gentlemen well knows."

"It's too important for us to be stamped," Hyde said.

Some argued that if the legislature failed to pass a remap bill "it might be created by a new governmental body, namely a federal court."

"It's incumbent on us to do our constitutional duty and effect reapportionment," he said.

House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, said that he "has no idea how the map will be amended.

First House action on the map was needed, Pierce said, to begin a constitutional deadline for passage of reapportionment. He said Democrats never meant to approve the document in the form it cleared the House.

Four of Pierce's colleagues refused to support him in a floor debate cut short by heavy snowstorms, only to be shut off by objections from Hyde. This is improper and I think the gentlemen know better," Hyde said.

"What is this, the U.S. or something?"

Hyde referred to a suit filed in the U.S. District Court for northern Illinois by Democrats challenging the map is gerrymandered as is to allow Republicans to win 11 of 12 House seats and send the long-standing 12-10 tie in the state's congressional delegation.

"I'm putting it in the floor plan that's in the place it is to try," Hyde said.

The bill introduced by Rep. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, finally ruled that Pierce could not introduce the matter under House Rule 14, as he had sought to do, because that regulation permits only protests against legislative action.

Blair upheld the contention of Hyde that what Pierce actually was protesting against was not a legislative action but a court action. But one Democrat after another rose to protest against the use of his vote as a "weapon," and Minority Leader Clyde L. Chase roused cheers from his followers as he thundered, "I'm saying it was taken out of context, misunderstanding and the truth about my vote was not told.

Methane powers vehicles

Work goes on to perfect anti-smog devices

MIAMI (AP) — Nash-Stack drivers around Miami in a car whose trunk is filled with condensed methane gas. A sign on the rear bumper tells drivers that they are getting 10% per cent less pollutants than usual.

"Many individual drivers ask me how we do it," said one driver. "I say tell them, and they fall for it with methane."

A test program will start in 1973 half, in which two stations will sell both gasoline and propane, or a new combination.

Meanwhile, our main thrust is toward fuel-filler lines, station city vehicles, government vehicles.

Flushing is going on in the latest ams, simultaneously and automatically for present

The methane system is just one of several new approaches being studied to meet government stan-ards which require a 10% per cent

cut in engine emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons

It has a jump on other systems in that it already is installed in more than 70% of the cars. By the end of the current version, plan in installation is about 1980.

On Sept. 4, William D. Rensburg of the Environmental Protection Agency, announced that a gasoline engine had been developed that meets the 1975 standards.

Bugi EPA and Ford Motor Co.,

designed the engine, agreed it is far from commercial production and its present state remains under strictly controlled conditions.

Another new entry in the antipollutant equipment area comes from International Materials, a small Lynnfield, Mass., engineering firm. It is a $500 gadget that purifies gasoline before it enters the engine to smog. Marc S. Weiskopf, the firm's director and the heart of the Miami operation, designed and built a fuel reforming system that fits in the trunk.

"Gas and water are mixed together and pumped into a high-temperature chamber. Under the heat, the water reacts chemically, breaking down the gases, which powers the engine, and carbon dioxide. The chemical process eliminates pollution-producing carbon.

The hydropon, a nonpolluting, mobile, efficiently said, and all that comes out of the tail pipe is water vapor.

The EPA has shown an interest, and in August gave International Materials a $30,000 contract to deliver working models for evaluation.

Industriatist William F. Lear of Bom, Nw., for years has been trying to develop a Rankine cycle engine based on the ideal steam engine principal in which a fluid produces energy to drive the power plant. He conceived earlier this year he had problems.

But in September, he reported the

Dow Chemical Co. of Midland, Mich., had made a breakthrough by perfoming a fluid Lear calls "Learjet" which is used instead of water in the engine's vapor generator.

Lear said two of his engines have been started successfully. Rankine engines with two, a bus and a car. But he said, "If we can get a commitment between him and GM for use of his equipment, Nash Stack is convinced that eventua lly the automakers will turn to methane.

"It is nearly pollution-free and already beats the 10% anti-pollution standards set by the EPA," he said.

"The system has been thoroughly tested and has been accepted by the reasons, accepting the environmental effect as an added bonus," Stack said.

EPA and the tough California Air

Pollution Control Board.

Among vehicles equipped with the system are the 1,500 owned by California's Pacific Lighting Corp., which developed it in the first place more than two years ago.

The Federal General Service

Administration has ordered 2,000 kits and has installed them in such agencies as Cape Kennedy, Fla., the

Manned Spacecraft Center, Houston, and a Veterans Administration hospital in Nashville, Tenn. Cali

More than 200 communities, most in pollution-conscious California, are using the system in city-owned vehicles.

California's Gov. Ronald Reagan is said to be concerned converting the state's entire fleet of 20,000 vehicles.

A present drawback is that a vehicle can carry only enough methane for about 105 miles of driving. That's why Stack's firm, Air Pollution Control Corp., is selling a dual fuel setup. With a flick of a switch on the dashboard, the driver can change from methane to normal gasoline tanks.

Aside from reducing pollution, Stack said methane is a money saver, and that is the main selling point.

"When a fleet operator un-derstands that he doesn't have to spend on fuel, makes spark plugs last twice as long, and makes savings on labor and slows his fuel bill nearly in half, he must welcome this for economic reasons," Stack said.

Letter entered as evidence in Henderson court martial

PT MEAD, Md. (AP) — Col. Orson K. Henderson's court martial was informed Wednesday that the colonel once offered to take full responsibility for "a command inquiry" he conducted into the My Lai raid and for a finding that "irresponsible acts of killing noncombatants did not occur.

Henderson's offer came in a letter he wrote to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the Army chief of staff, on Dec. 18, 1968, just after the start of the Pentagon inquiry into the My Lai affair.

The 51-year-old career officer told Westmoreland he was making the offer "in the interest of strengthening the American people's confidence in its Army and in building a growing disenchanted with the Army officer corps.

Henderson said outside the courtroom that he received a reply from Westmoreland stating "basically thanks but no thanks.

The letter was introduced as prosecution evidence against Henderson, who is accused of not properly investigating atrocities reports and of lying twice to the Pentagon inquiry.

In the letter, Henderson said he conducted the "command inquiry" after receiving reports of wild shooting by troops and the death of 38 noncombatants by artillery and helicopter gunship fire during the March 16, 1968, attack on the Viet namese village.

Henderson said he informed President Richard M. Nixon of the "irresponsible acts of killing noncombatants did not occur.

World leaders to celebrate Iran

PERSPOLIS, Iran (AP) — Vice President Spors T. Agnew and kings, queens and presidents arrived Wednesday in this city of plush tents in the desert to celebrate the 1,000th anniversary of the Persian monarchy.

Among the country's arrivals were President Kuramu V. Popolur of the Soviet Union and Empress Hajes Baleshu Isabasha of Ethiopia, who has resigned longer than any of the world leaders gathering in this man-made man. The emperor is fresh from a visit to Communist China.

While flying here from Ankara, Turkey, Agnew said: "I'll maintain a low profile. He noted he is in the fifth echelon of protocol, just after prime ministers.

While the vice president said he had made no advance arrangements for diplomatic talks during the celebrations there may be an opportunity for informal discussions amid the pagesantry.

Student advocates meditation course

By Robert W. Smith

The Stu-ent advocates meditation course, which includes a technique of transcendental meditation (TM), should be offered for credit at SIU, according to Powell Woods, a freshman majoring in psychology.

"A dozen major U.S. universities have established the course already and it shouldn't be too many years before most universities will," Woods said.

Transcendental meditation, with the aid of proper instruction, is a technique where inner states of mental activity by the conscious mind allows a person to reach the "source of thought" or "pure consciousness," according to Woods.

It is from this pure consciousness that creative intelligence is found, Woods said.

"It is where the subject of all thought lies," Woods, an instructor of TM, said.

Maharishi Mohesh Yogi, the founder of RCI, describes it as a systematic inquiry into the source of all knowledge in order to provide a uniting and dynamic basis for all branches of learning.

"Through meditation, and individual increases his perception and realizes greater values of life," Woods said.

Deadline opponents ponder

House vote on Indochina

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the face of strong Senate lobbying pressure, House opponents of a six-month congressional deadline or U.S. military involvement in Indochina were undecided Wednesday whether to risk a showdown vote next week.

Republicans Whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois said he will decide over the weekend whether to call in House members for a vote to be held Wednesday.

"If we had to do it today, I would do it," Harrison, an Illinois Republican, said. "But I'm not sure we should do it this week without more time for study." Harrison is chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

A majority of House members have said they want to vote on whether or not to extend the six-month deadline on U.S. involvement in Indochina.
Sen. Byrd opposes forced integration

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, a prominent Democrat, has strongly opposed forced school integration and has been one of the high court's severest critics.

Byrd, a conservative Democrat, has voted against confirmation of court nominees he regarded as too ultraliberal. He also took the unusual step for what he termed turf wars to prevent them from sitting on him in the courtroom.

"What is most likely to be achieved by busing and forced integration is increasing mediocrity in education," he told a national convention of the conservative Young Americans for Freedom, meeting in Houston, Tex., on Sept. 2.

Celebration set by Indian group

The Indian New Year, Diwah, will be celebrated Oct. 28 by the Indian Students Association. The association will sponsor a dinner and a concert of Indian music. The festival dinner will be at the Oct. 4 meeting.

In other business at the meeting, Arvind B. Mohanty was elected president, Manoj S. Kang, vice-president, Lalita V. Vochhiyawala, secretary, Raj K. Madhira, joint secretary, and Avishek G. Bhagat, treasurer.

Poster display to open Friday

A poster art show will open Friday in the Gallery Lounge of the Student Center.

The posters on display have been used to advertise Student Special events. The show is being sponsored by the National Affairs Committee of the Student Government Activities Council.

The posters will be displayed through Dec. 12. Those interested in the exhibit will be given the show at 5 p.m.

Music proficiency exam to be given Saturday

A proficiency exam will be given for Music 300 at 10 p.m. Saturday in Algydd, room 300.

Those planning to take the exam should contact Catherine McHugh, professor of music education, or the Music 300 office.

Saddle club will ride into competitive meets

The Saluki Saddle Club is organizing a competitive riding team. Justin Young, assistant coach of the club, said the teams will participate in competitive meets between different riding clubs.

Twenty riders will be chosen to form the Saluki Saddle Club. The first meet will be held on Saturday, April 8, at Springfield Junior College at the Saluki Saddle Club.

 Sen. Byrd opposes forced integration

"A leveling process will have been set in motion which can have the effect of stifling incentive for the bright and gifted student while discouraging the less well-prepared student and the slow learner," Byrd said the claim that forced busing and integration will teach the races to live together is false.

"Judging from the many racial incidents of fighting, knifing and shooting that are increasingly occurring in the nation's high schools, there is no reason to question the ef- ficiency of such forced race mixing as a way to achieve racial peace and understanding," the senator stated.

Byrd noted that the 1954 Supreme Court decision which ordered school segregation was based on the premise that school assignment on the basis of race was unconstitutional. Yet, he said, busing is in itself assigning students to schools on a racial basis.

He said the courts could do more to improve black education if they would require equal amounts of money be expended per pupil on blacks and whites.

"One hopes not too far away... children, both black and white, will no longer be treated as Negro pips in a social experiment that amounts to pure folly and that the needless handing of them, like cattle, for countless miles and at a wasteful price will cease to be an abomina-ble.

Saddle club will ride into competitive meets

The Saluki Saddle Club is organizing a competitive riding team. Justin Young, adviser and manager of the club, said the team will participate in competitive meets between different riding clubs.

Tryouts for the riding team being held at the Saluki Stable. Riders should be members of the Saluki Riding Club although interested riders are also encouraged to try out.

There will be two divisions of the meets: English and Western riders, according to Geoff Driscoll, one of the organizers of the club. This is being done because of the differences in the types of competitive riding.

The first meet is Nov. 8, at Springfield Junior College at the Saluki Stable.

Independent caucus forms to reform College Dems

A new independent caucus within the college Democrats of Illinois (CDI) has formed following a walkout by delegates from seven Illinois universities, including SIU, at the CDI convention Sunday in Chicago.

According to Tony Konnis, the only SIU delegate at the convention and one of the dissidents, the caucus was formed to protest the tactics of convention leaders, who refused to acknowledge dissident members from the floor.

Konnis said that in addition to SIU, the caucus was made up of delegates from the University of Illinois, Illinois State University, Sangamon State, Northwestern University, Rock Valley College, St. Xavier College and Loyola University.

The controversy first erupted when “the executive board of the convention refused to recognize the delegation from St. Xavier, Loyola and Rock Valley,” Konnis said.

However, Konnis said, the three delegations had applied for charter membership but were turned down by convention leaders.

When we attempted to bring up debate on the convention floor over charter credentials for charter membership, said Konnis, we were not allowed to speak.

Finally, the leadership attempted to pass 15 resolutions on the floor without discussion or debate. This is what prompted the delegates to stage the walkout and form the caucus.”

Konnis cautioned that the caucus is not an attempt to break away from CDI, but will concentrate on working for change within CDI.

He said that members of the caucus are in contact with each other and if issues arise within CDI that involve the particular concerns of caucus members, they will meet and decide on appropriate action. The leadership of CDI would like to see caucus members remain in the organization and that “though they may not like what we are doing, they will accept it rather than split.” Konnis said.

Konnis said the caucus will not attempt to endorse any particular candidate for the 1972 Democratic nomination for governor even though many caucus members opposed the convention endorsement of Lt. Gov. Paul Simon.

The caucus will deal only with issues involving ethics and freedom within CDI, said Konnis.

Pious thief takes 60 religious books

A visiting professor said Wednesday that approximately 60 books have been stolen from his office.

Frederick Barbeebeur, visiting professor in the religious studies program, said he noticed the work of what he called a “pious thief” two days ago. The books could have been removed from his office this summer.

Barbeebeur said he had been away from SIU during the summer and returned only recently.

Barbeebeur reported the theft to the Security Police Tuesday, but at Wednesday, no information had been found concerning the theft. Barbeebeur said he will not press charges.

He is offering a “high reward” for any information leading to the recovery of the books and is asking whoever took the books not to sell them. The books are of little market value, Barbeebeur said, but are irreplaceable to him.

Consumer conference slated for Oct. 20

The fourth annual Consumer Conference will be held Oct. 20, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom, according to Karen Craig, conference chairman.

Protection will be the conference theme, with a slant on the safety aspect, Mrs. Craig said.

There will be two speakers for the morning session, Guy Bentner, from Underwriters Laboratories Inc. and George W. Schaefer, chief of consumer protection in downtown Illinois for Attorney General William Scott.

The afternoon session will include four concurrent workshops beginning at 1:15 p.m. Speakers for the afternoon session are: T.G. Klapkens, Public Health Service representative; Albert J. Lembig, Food and Drug Administration consultant; Larry Williams, public relations manager for Country Compudonics and Richard Brown, representative from the office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Special topics for the workshops include product safety, poisons protection, fire protection and education.

No specialist award winner for this week

For only the second time in two years, a winner was not named in one of the five categories awarded weekly by the SIU football coaching staff. No specialist award was given this week.

The Touchdown award went to Thomas Thompson who scored twice in the first quarter of SIU's 14-0 upset over Arkansas State last Saturday night.

Thompson was the game's leading rusher, getting 138 yards on 25 carries.

Mark Ora, formerly an offensive tackle, graded 75 per cent rushing for Lionel Ammer at right end and received the Blocking award.

Linebacker Norris Wills won the Interventions award by grading 96 per cent and picking off one pass.

And Bouch Chambers took the Saluki award for defense Chambers made 18 tackles, assisted on two others and graded 72 per cent against Arkansas State.

Offensive players inducted into the Victim Club were Ora, Rich Kohler, Larry Perkins, Sam Reed and George Jenkins. Unnamed numbers were Lionel Ammer, Bill McGee, Jeff O'Brien, Tom Salton, Ron Notta, Jerry Alinder and Randy Nott.

Proficiency test offered

Proficiency tests for cross country, bowling, basketball, and tennis will be offered by the Department of Physical Education for the fall quarter. The written test for each event will be administered 1 p.m. Saturday in Lassom Hall room 118.

A student may take all proficiency tests except for bowling and handball, whereas he may only take one of the two. Students may now register to take the winter quarter test at the Physical Education Office, Arena, room 118.

Tentatively, proficiency tests will be offered winter quarter for swimming, track, basketball, physical fitness and bowling. Tests for spring include softball, swimming, archery, tennis, golf, handball and physical fitness.

For additional information contact Walter Ellis, room 118M, Arena.

The Harmon Football Forecast

ratings and forecast

The Big Eight features Oklahoma against Missouri in a sort of program in town.

Every week of the college football season has its specialists, and this Saturday's schedule is no exception. Oklahoma-Texas, Arkansas-Tennessee, Northwestern-Minnesota, Southern California-Washington are just a few of the games that will be featured.

The Big Eight powers, Nebraska and Kansas, sliped into the league and secured that spot.

In the Southwest Conference, it's "The Time Again." The conference is dominated by the usual suspects: Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. These teams are going to be battling it out for the first time since the start of the 1971 season.

And this is the last week of the season. The conference is set to be played off on the weekend. Thanks to a little more competitiveness in the league, we have seen some close games. Our picks for the final week are just a few of the many memorable games of the season.

Frosh gridders look ahead to opener with Sycamores

By Brute Schmitz

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The frosh, labeled by most observers as one of the best frosh classes to ever be seen in the history of the University of Illinois, will get a chance to live up to their advanced billing Monday, when the Illinois' new men will step on the field for a 1 p.m. game with the Sycamores. This is a gridding contest that just about everybody that has seen them play expect will be made easy for the frosh from Indiana, Bob Ledbetter at the helm. Wins will be expected from the frosh and big things will be expected from the new men.

Wrestling schedule lists top opponents

An 18-month season, highlighted by matches with the University of Illinois, Ohio State and Oklahoma State a week ago, will be featured by the wrestling team. Also included on the card will be the Midwest Meet to be held at the SIU Arena Feb. 15-16 in a schedule in its entirety.

Auto club schedules rally for Oct. 17

The Grand Touring Auto Club (GTAC) will sponsor the annual Rally on Oct. 17 as one of many fall quarter events.

John Simms, president of GTAC, will announce details of the events at a later date. We are expecting some out-of-state students to attend the Gimmick Rally, he said.

The rally will be held Nov. 12 at the Campus Shopping Center. Simms said the group expects to draw a large crowd of type car they own. Most of the cars at the rally will be of the foreign variety, he said. Trophies and awards will be given to first place drivers in each event.

Anyone may enter in the Gimmick Rally. It's the kind of thing you've been waiting for, Simms said. Entry deadline is Thursday.

Salukis move into top ten with Arkansas State win

Last Saturday's upset victory over Arkansas State in a boosted SIU into the top ten in the Associated Press weekly football rankings and previously unranked Arkansas State moved to seventh in the AP poll.

With the victory, the Salukis, who are 4-0 and 2-0 in the Ohio Valley Conference, upped their record to 5-0-2, ranking them 12th in the Associated Press weekly football rankings.

Huge TV audience watches
Rookies pace Pittsburgh to 4-3 Series victory

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Reserve catcher Matt May and reliever Bruce Koon, a pair of 21-year-old rookies with unflinching nerves, combined their efforts to bring the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Wednesday night in the fourth game of the World Series.

May, batting for Koon, drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning with a pinch-hit single after the baby-faced but mean right-hander had stalled Baltimore's bats on six innings of one-hit pitching.

Their steel-nerved performances before an anticipated record television audience of close to 80 million watching the first night game in series history pulled the Pirates even with the Orioles at two victories apiece in the best-of-seven showdown.

And it made a record Thouye Stadium crowd of 51,278 dilleredly happy at the end of a tense, dramatic struggle in which their favorite, Roberto Clemente, lost a homer on a disputed foul call by umpire John Rice.

Koon, who on Tuesday night saved the Pirates with three scoreless innings, came on for starter Luke Walker after the Orioles scored for three quick runs in the first inning, got the last out of the inning and was virtually untouchable through the next six innings.

Only Paul Blair was able to get a hit, a blookey double, as the kid who was pitching for Waterbury in the Eastern League last year, set the Orioles down never allowing another Baltimore runner to reach second base.

The two somewhat fat men, perched on the blacking steel like overweight blackbirds, couldn't have cared less whether NLU ever again won a football game.

The purpose of their trip was investigative and the subject matter was Lionel Antoine, Southern's All-America tight end.

"You know what he is, don't you?" said the older one who talked quite a lot about girls in college towns. "He's a BFOT.

A what? "A Big EWeping Offensive Tackle"

Wen't Antoine make it at tight end in the bugs? The answer was no. Why? The older one didn't say, but Antoine dropped a pass about 20 yards away. Maybe that's why Offensive line coach Bob Mazie brought his herd of elephants over to destroy the blocking sled so the two pro football scouts leaned against a fence.

And kept talking about girls, all of whom weren't their daughters. They eventually grew tired of that and the conversation wandered back to football.

The older one laughed about his trip to the University of Oregon where "those kids in a-kitches expect you to talk to me." Texas had destroyed Oregon, 35-0.

And the older one was also unhappy his daughter wasn't admitted to the University of Michigan. It only gave her a "B" average in high school.

"This is the home of a black athlete having troubles getting in, or staying in. That was his last complaint of the afternoon.

Tom Laputka

The younger one, who is paid by the Atlanta Falcons, had a little black box that sprouted a few insignious football scout and rich playboys.

And in this book was a little computer printout sheet labeled "attachment for Tom Laputka. The names listed below were Lionel Antoine, Dick Smith and Tom Laputka.

The older one asked if Laputka, who everyone else always thought was named Lapatka, ended up in jail after lifting a television last year.

He was tolled.

The younger one said Laputka was listed at 6-5, 230 pounds. He was surprised to find out Laputka carried around another 20 pounds.

Then the older one said he saw Laputka play in Canada and the younger one asked how he looked.

"He stunk," said the older one, pulling up his pants which were slipping down over his brown shoes with the broken shoelaces.

"Do you have a Greg Goodman on that list," I asked.

"Greg who?" said the younger one.

"Greg Goodman, the kid. He boosted a 55-yarder against Arkansas State last year.

The older one smiled.

The younger one was, unimpressed.

"You have to be awfully goddamn good to get on this list," he said.

Dick Towers sent Antoine and Billy Story to work with the defense. The two pro scouts scattered over to find something on another blocking sled.

The older one walked around his Clerets and talked about getting movies of Southern's victories over Dayton and Arkansas State.

About 20 minutes later, contact drills were over and it was time for sprouts. The two pro scouts was down to an old guy who didn't watch the "big guy" who didn't win any spots but absolutely nobody got in his way either.

They seemed pleased.

The older one said he'd head for Arkansas State on Wednesday. "They won't be very happy.

The younger one said he'd head for a bar.
