Ways of Life

By Philip J.C. Dark, Chairman
Department of Anthropology

"New Guinea Paintings" is a joint project of the Department of Anthropology, the School of Fine Arts and the Office of Research and Projects.

Collection of the exhibit began in July, 1964, when Joel Marting of the Anthropology Department and I went to New Guinea, sponsored by SIU and the National Institute of Mental Health.

We were there to survey certain areas suitable for future research into the art and language of a culture which still kept its traditional, non-Western ways of life.

While in Magrik, a district of the mighty Sepik River, which flows for 750 miles through the grasslands, swamps and jungle of New Guinea, I met Robert MacLennan, a research medical officer of the government of the Territory of Papua and New Guinea.

Dr. MacLennan showed me a fine collection of gouache paintings he had made by the Abelam natives.

I suggested that he bring these paintings to the United States when he came to Tulane University to take up a post in the Division of Epidemiology. The idea developed between us of exhibiting the paintings with some I had obtained in western New Britain where Marting and I spent some weeks among the charming Kilenge people.

The paintings Dr. MacLennan collected in December, 1963, were made for him by the Wosera of Pukago village. Generally, they are done on flat sheets of sago bark. Local pigments are used. The paintings in this exhibition were done mostly with powdered tempera on sheets of cartridge paper, both pigments and medium being well suited to the indigenous methods of painting.

Women were barred from seeing the painters at work as they are when the men produce paintings for the decoration of the facade of one of the giant, 60 feet high men's houses for which the Abelam are famous.

The exhibition will include photographs which depict these houses and give an idea of the wealth of inventiveness of the Abellam artist.

The Kilenge of western New Britain, like the Abelam, are carvers and painters but their style is quite different. Their paintings were made with marking inks on paper—an unfamiliar medium—and depict designs painted on large, sea-going, outrigger canoes and other objects, particularly a variety of masks used in "rites de passages" and on other ceremonial occasions.

This exhibition was initiated by Herbert L. Fink, chairman of the Art Department, and myself. It has been made possible by the Office of Research and Projects, John Fox, School of Fine Arts, has designed the exhibit and the catalogue, which describes the two cultures and their paintings and which has been compiled by Dr. MacLennan, myself and Mrs. Loretta Hill, of the Department of Anthropology. Dr. Adrian Gerbrands, associate director of the National Museum of Ethnology, Leiden, The Netherlands, who is visiting professor of anthropology, has acted as consultant.
A Need Was Seen

OUTLET PROVIDED TO SHOW, BUY ART

A VIEW OF GALLERY EXHIBIT

By Larry Lorenz

"There was no place in Carbondale to buy unusual gifts and no place to buy or even look at art."

That's the explanation Dale Johnson gives for establishing Carbondale's only art gallery. He saw the need, found a patron and two empty rooms in a downtown office building and opened Aesthetes Unlimited Gallery or, simply, The Gallery. "No one knows what 'aesthetes' means," he says.

Now there is not only a place where students can buy relatively inexpensive works of art—prices start at $2—but also a place where students and faculty members unable to show their work at SIU's Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Mitchell Gallery can exhibit. The two rooms on the second floor at 217 1/2 W. Main St., are filled with oils, water colors, silk screen prints, lithographs and pottery. Ordinarily, the main room holds a display by one artist while the back room contains a potpourri of works by a number of artists.

And it is good art, despite fears of some potential browsers that students' work is not of high quality because they are "studying to be artists," That is a mistaken belief, Johnson says, "because these people are not really studying to be artists. They are artists. That's their first line of work. They are studying to be teachers or something else in which they can use their talent."

Despite this obstacle, there has been a good deal of interest in The Gallery and Johnson says this is gratifying. But he admits that the venture has not been very rewarding financially.

As a result, it is largely a one-man operation. Johnson designed and painted the rooms himself and did the necessary carpentry. He hangs exhibits himself, prints the programs and makes the coffee he serves at openings.

There is a slightly pained expression on his face when he recalls that it cost him $9 to have the word "GALLERY" painted on the front door by a professional sign painter. He says the cost prevented putting the full name on the door.

The germ of the idea for The Gallery was in Johnson's mind as early as his sophomore year. He included an art gallery in a plan for refurbishing the east side of Washington St., north of Main St., which he submitted as a term project that year. But he didn't actually decide to help patch Carbondale's culture gap himself until Christmas, 1964.

After the first of the year he began the hard work of finding a location and a backer, then the job of making a gallery out of what had been a business office. His grand opening came in June, with an exhibit by a number of SIU artists. After closing during the summer, he reopened the gallery last fall.

Currently showing at The Gallery is an exhibit of a variety of works by several SIU artists. It will be followed by a one-man show by Vince DiMattio, which is scheduled for opening on Jan. 23. A reception from 1 to 5 p.m. will accompany the opening.

The Gallery is regularly open from 1 to 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.
Sculpture as well as paintings are displayed.

John Stroye has brought a swath of history to life in his Siege of Vienna that, for most readers, hasn’t even been a date found on secondary school history examinations.

The roster of people John Stroye traces to introduce his story under the heading “Some of the Principal Personages” could be the cast for a facet of the operetta “Michael Apafi, Prince of Transylvania; Murad Ghiraj, Khan of the Crimies; and Inre Tiholy, King of Hungary.” Stroye’s aim is to convey to the reader through his genius, that he lifts those people out of their two-dimensional stereotype and invests them with the human personalities at no sacrifice to scholarship.

This chronicle of palace intrigue and continental politics, dominated in the West by France’s Sun King, Louis XIV, and by Karla Mustafa, Grand Vezir to the Ottoman Sultan Mehmed IV, in the East, fills a vital gap in history. Austria was just recovering from the devastation of the Thirty Years War which had battered Vienna’s Gates. The successful defense of Vienna marked the beginning of decline for both France and Turkey as arbiters of continental politics. Emperor Leopold I went on to drive the Turks out of Hungary and parts of present-day Yugoslavia. But the struggle was not without price, as Stroye in his picture of plundered villages and peasants slaughtered by the armies in transit.

A 'Minor' Writer's Ship of Jewels

A collection of stories by Katherine Anne Porter, known as "The Bishop and the Beatnik," has been reviewed by Paul G. Schlueter in the Department of English. Porter's stories, which include tales of love and life, have been published in various volumes and are known for their insight and emotional impact. The collection includes stories that are not only unique but also provide a glimpse into the human experience.

Church 'Blunderland' Boggles Bishop

Chandler Sterling, Episcopal Bishop of Montana, has been described as colorful in his book. The book includes stories that are not only unique but also provide a glimpse into the human experience. The chapters in the book are descriptive of the Episcopal Church, its clergy and lay people, but the shoe will fit many feet. It is bright, breezy and barbed. Illustrations are bad, but you can't have everything.

Mali Federation Placed in Focus

In West Africa there lies an area about two-thirds the size of the United States and more than eight times as large as France. Encompassing a wide array of physical regions and an ethnically diverse population of about 25,000,000, the area once contained some of the greatest of the medieval West African conquest states and empires, among them the empire of Mali which reached its zenith in the 14th century. In 1904, the French incorporated this area into their French West African colonies called the French Sudan (A.O.F.J.), dividing it into eight territories for the convenience of colonial administration.

REVIEWED BY

JEROME S. HANDLER,
DEPARTMENT OF ANTHROPOLOGY

The following day, all of these former colonial territories are independent republics.

From French West Africa to the Mali Federation focuses upon the recent political life of two of these republics, the former French Sudan (today known as the Republic of Mali) and Senegal, the Federation they created in 1958, and the reasons for this federation's failure in 1960.

Post World War II developments in the French African colonies involved the peaceful emergence of African political parties and the crystallization of an Islamic nationalist movement in French West Africa. It was not until 1955, however, that France formally began to accept the legitimacy of African political action and demand.

As a result of referendum in 1958, France ended the colonial administration of the former French West Africa, and although her colonies had chosen independence, most African leaders expressed a desire to remain within the French Community. France, nevertheless, faced the problem of how to retain some form of political union between former African colonies, and Mali Federation was one product of this desire.

Those African leaders who were primarily responsible for the formation of this federation agreed that it could strengthen their countries' economic development and their position against the rest of Africa and France. Yet political elites, who play a key role in Dr. Foltz's analysis, emerged in their perception of the colonial heritage and the details of the future of an African federation. Furthermore, no prominent individuals or groups were deeply committed to making the Federation a success. For many in Senegal and Soudan, the Federation was a compromise between Senegal and Soudan, for few an annoyance; for most of the masses, a compromise; and for neither a Federation. A review.

Soon after the Federation was formed, a number of disputes among English-speaking Senegalese and Senegalese leaders. The former wanted a completely sovereign federation with strong central government and a rapid Africanization of governmental and administrative posts. The Senegalese, on the other hand, wanted to retain Europeanism in the bureaucracy, were concerned about greater political autonomy on the governmental level, and were opposed to internal self-government. France, in control over foreign affairs, defense, and monetary policy.

The Federation's weaknesses crystallized around particular disputes culminating in a series of events which came to a head early in the morning of August 20, 1960. At this time, two months after the Federation's official independence as a sovereign state, the Senegalese leaders declared the independence of the Republic of Senegal from the Mali Federation.

Soon afterward, France recognized the separate independence of both Senegal and the Soudan, the latter changing its name to the Republic of Mali on September 22, 1960. The tense relations between Senegal and Mali were formally terminated until September 1963 when the presidents of both countries reopened the railway link at the Senegal-Mali border.

Senegalese political leaders perceived the Federation as an attempt to make Senegal a "domestic political base and, therefore, their organization, to play a significant role in African political life." This is the most paradoxical explanation the author gives for the Federation's failure. But this explanation implies for the future of international political organization, so that the political elite that are crucial for the emergence of these unions, and these unions are only likely to be welcomed when they are perceived as sources for strengthening the elites' political base and control within their own countries.
Bernstein Conducts Modern Music

By Philip H. Olson Assistant Dean School of Fine Arts

An album of modern music conducted by Leonard Bernstein proves itself to be a rewarding experience for the listener who gives it a studied hearing.

This recording is a bold step by Columbia Records to make available to the listening public examples of music of our time. All of the works presented were composed in 1961. Many hearings and study of the excellent notes by Edward T. Cone was a rewarding introduction to the listener interested in being aware of the "new" in 20th century music.

Ligeti was born in Hungary, but now resides in Vienna, and writes of his music: "My personal development began with serialism, but today I have passed beyond serialism. In "Atmospheres," I have attempted to supersede the structural approach to music which once, in turn, superseded the motivic-thematic approach, and to establish a new textual concept of music. . . . This sort-to-speak informal music is embodied in a new type of orchestral sound; the sonorous texture is so dense that the individual interwoven voices are absorbed into the general texture, and completely lose their individuality.

This is the reason for the unusual format of the orchestral score, which is noted on eighty-seven staves, since the pitch of Feldman's score is so-to-speak informal music is embodied in a new type of structural approach to music which once, in turn, superseded the motivic-thematic approach, and to establish a new textual concept of music.

It's 'Tight, Witty, Knitty' Way In World of Spring Fashion

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—You are going to notice women this spring. Italian boutique designers have decided that.

Black and white, vivid colors. Apron skirts that wrapped around some bikini-clad models did nothing to make homebodies out of them. One little after-swim coat dress was tied around a yellow bikini costume in such a way as to keep the perkiness exposed.

As grandmother made patchwork quilts, Italian knitwear designers Inesmarina, Lida, Nardini, Rommata and Golf Tricotra stitched together wild sections of color. Sometimes the color of each pants leg was different.

Temperance leaders were outraged.

Some parents were for it, some against. One father declared that if his kid starts hitting the sauce at school he can darned well pay for it out of his pocket money.

D. Chafetz told a New York conference on "Alcohol and Food in Health and Disease" Wednesday he thought it would be a good idea for the young to start "practicing drinking" in elementary school and continue it through college.

"Alcohol," Dr. Chafetz said, "is here to stay. People must learn to develop a health attitude toward it."

Gov. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, a reformed alcoholic, commented: "This psychiatrist ought to consult a psychiatrist. I disagree 1,000 per cent. Children ought to be taught the great danger involved in the use of alcohol, not how to drink it."

Mrs. Fred J. Tooze of Evanston, Ill., president of the Christian Temperance Union, assured the Chafetz plan "would turn any school for alcoholism and double this number of alcoholics and problem drinkers."

But Dr. John Kranitz, professor emeritus of pharmacology at the University of Maryland, said: "I think this might be a good idea. After all, roughly half the people in America do use alcohol."

Mrs. Leonard Volker of St. Louis, Mo., mother of three boys and a girl, said: "I think the idea is fine—most kids who drink too much are those who never had contact with it before."

Temperance? Early Teaching? "Sauceology" Becomes Issue

NEW YORK (AP)—A psychiatrist's suggestion that schools should teach students the techniques of social drinking was greeted with a mixture of bouquets and brickbats.

The governor of Iowa said: "It wasn't whiskey which brought out the nose in the town's two taverns, which by local option law sold only beer. One came had already been hit with a 30-day suspension for continuing disorderly conduct. In the referendum, even some Swallowfield wets voted no.

"It wasn't really a question of wets versus drys," said a campaigner for prohibition, "it was a question of getting undiscernible elements to stop congregating in our community."

Swallowfield—population 400—is adjacent to Owen County, which is both whisky- and beer-dry. So Swallowfield became the stomping ground for frustrated Owen County drinkers, many of whom couldn't hold their beer.

Presidential Duds: "Fat...Nothing"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson stayed aloof, above the battle, Friday, as an international argument raged about his duds.

Undisguished, said British critics; the President should set a higher nautical standard as leader of the Western world.

The London publication Tailor and Cutter, British bible of men's fashions, described the Johnsonian clothes a "fat, round nothing."

The President reserved comment, but his press office had a newspaper clipping handy. This showed that only last Monday the Fashion Foundation of America pronounced the President "beef-dressed for his position, and also for his personality, which is informal, homey, folksy."

The psychiatrist—Dr. Morris Chafetz—of Harvard University—should see a psychiatrist himself.

A cross-section of educators called the Chafetz proposal interesting, but counseled caution.

New York, N.Y. (AP) — A group of outraged voters decried a tiny spot in one of the nation's wettest counties.

By a count of 73 to 52 in a local referendum, it's back to prohibition for the community of Swallowfield.

Swallowfield is one of the 35 precincts of Franklin County, in Franklin County three major distilleries have 70 million gallons of whisky aging in storage. The other 34 precincts remain wet.

Town Returns to Prohibition In Middle of Wettest County

By a count of 73 to 52 in a local referendum, it's back to prohibition for the community of Swallowfield.

Unusual Hush Falls Over Viet Jungles

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP)—A hush fell over the jungles of South Vietnam Friday, broken only by the occasional crack of a Viet Cong soldier's rifle or the boom of a guerrilla mortar. It was reported that the Viet Cong had begun early last year to cease-fire proclamations for next week.

For the first time since a major peace offensive on the Viet Cong's Iron Triangle kicked off seven days ago, U.S. and South Vietnam forces 50 miles northwest of Saigon reported not a significant contact on a single guerrilla killed.

Another indication of Viet Cong inactivity came to the north. Three big South Vietnamese army convoys passed safely from Quin Nhon, 190 miles northwest of Qui Nhon, 100 miles north of Saigon, along a guerrilla-infested road to Phieu, 160 miles farther north. It was the first successful heavy transportation along the route since last August.

The last known U.S. casualties came Thursday night 15 miles northwest of Qui Nhon. A U.S. Air Force plane flying support for Vietnamese ground patrols pulled out of a stricken and rammed a C-123 flare ship. Both planes crashed, killing the pilot of the plane and the six aboard the flare ship.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk and presidential envoy W. K. Harrison were flown back from India Friday.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey flew back from India Friday and reported discussions with Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri in New Delhi. India, and Harriman said his confederate would kill him after the kidnaping. He tipped police to his own plot.

Beverly Hills, Calif. (AP)—One of two murder slayings of a top union official Thursday night in an abortive attempt to kidnap multimillionaire Leonhard K. Firestone was an informant who tipped police to the whole scheme, authorities disclosed Friday.

George Scalise, 28, had gone to Los Angeles police in fear that his confederate would kill him after the kidnaping, said Capt. John E. Hankins, head of Beverly Hills detectives.

When the shooting started, he was supposed to drop to the ground out of the line of fire, but for some reason didn't.

Scalise and his partner, William Calvin Bailey, 44, entered Firestone's home with raised pistols and met death from the shotgun of an anti-Viet Nam detective. Firestone, 58, advised of the kidnap plan, left the house several days ago at the suggestion of officers and was staying with friends in the San Francisco area.

He is president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. of California and a son of the late Harvey Firestone, founder of the company in Akron, Ohio.

"We called off the kidnaping. We gave the right of counsel to the appellant without allowing the appeal to have an attorney or take a record of the proceedings," the ACLU had said in an injunction against Board 323, arguing that it had denied Ronald Miller, 19, a University of Michigan sophomore from Huntington Woods, Mich., his right of counsel or a record of the proceedings. Miller and Robert Sklar, 19, another U-M sophomore from Huntington Woods, are scheduled for an appeal hearing at Board 323 Monday.

The agreement, signed in Tashkent, U.S.S.R., set off a Cabinet dispute in New Delhi and threw open the race for prime minister. Rehabilitation Minister Mahavir Tyagi resigned, saying he objects to interim Prime Minister Gulzar Lal Nanda's pledge to honor the declaration before a new government is formed. In Pakistan, President Ayub Khan went on national radio in an attempt to quiet Pakistani fears after demonstrations against the Tashkent agreement were reported in the West Pakistan capital of Lahore and elsewhere.

Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, en route home from Tashkent, sent a message to Ayub saying he was sure the people of Pakistan like the move.

The agreement, worked out at Kosygin's urging and signed Monday by Ayub and India's prime minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, pledged the governments of both countries to work for peace in South Asia.

Ruhs at the Tashkent meeting ended with Pakistan still demanding that the Kashmir issue be allowed to decide future control of their Himalayan state in a plebiscite, and with India determinedly insisting that Kashmir is a part of India and not a subject for negotiation.

The next day Shastri died of a heart attack in the Soviet central Asian city. Indian Home Minister Gulzar Lal Nanda took over as interim prime minister and immediately announced India would honor the Tashkent declaration. Tyagi's resignation opened the doors of Congress party to 12 other candidates for the prime minister's seat. The ruling Congress party Wednesday elected its parliamentary leader, who is automatically asked to head the government.

Students' Draft Case Opens

DETROIT (AP)—The federal government agreed Friday to allow two University of Michigan students appealing draft reclassification appeals from deferred to immediate availability life of the right of counsel at a hearing Monday.

U.S. Dist. Atty. Lawrence Gulow made the agreement with American Civil Liberties Union attorneys before U.S. Dist. Judge Wade H. McCree Jr. The ACLU had sued in federal court to prevent suburban Royal Oak Draft Board 323 from hearing a draft reclassification appeal without allowing an appellant to have an attorney or take a record of the proceedings.

The ACLU had sought an injunction against Board 323, arguing that it had denied Ronald Miller, 19, a University of Michigan sophomore from Huntington Woods, Mich., the right of counsel or a record of the proceedings. Miller and Robert Sklar, 19, another U-M sophomore from Huntington Woods, are scheduled for an appeal hearing at Board 323 Monday.

Miller and Sklar were convicted of trespassing during an anti-Viet Nam war demonstration Oct. 15 at the Ann Arbor, Mich., draft board. Their reclassifications followed.

Leif J. Sverdrup, major general, retired, U.S. Army Reserve, and a prominent St. Louis engineer and civic leader, is chairman of a metropolitan area committee to promote interest in a Midwest National Security Seminar to be held on SIU's Carbondale campus March 21 to April 1.

Gen. Sverdrup, board chairman and chief executive officer of Sverdrup and Parcel Associates, Inc., architects and engineers, will preside at a luncheon Tuesday for some 85 civic, educational, business, labor and industrial leaders in St. Louis. Held at the Bel Air East Motel, the luncheon will feature a program by spokesmen from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, explaining the National Security Seminar.

The 10-day seminar at Carbondale, sponsored by the University in cooperation with the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, outlines the responsibilities and actions of the United States in the promotion of democracy and the rights of free people throughout the world.

Alexander R. MacMillan, director of Southern's Transportation Institute and a retired Air Force colonel, is general chairman of the seminar. He expects an attendance of 600, including more than 200 reserve officers and the civilian components of the Armed Forces.

The public is invited to attend.

In Gymnastics Meet
Key Roles Assigned To Four Newcomers

Four sophomores will get their first taste of dual meet competition tonight when the Saluki gymnasts meet the Cyclones of Iowa State at Ames.

The performance of the floor, Paul Mayer, Fred Dennis, Roy Harstad and Dale Hardt, will probably determine the outcome of the meet, since they occupy 11 of the 28 positions on the teams.

With Southern trying for its 38th consecutive dual meet victory, and at the same time meeting its toughest opponent of the year, Coach Ed Meade admits there is going to be a lot of pressure on the four.

At the same time Meade feels that they will be more than equal to the test.

"All four have had more gymnastics meet experience, than you might first expect," Meade said.

Mayer will be the busiest, competing in free exercise, on the side horse, parallel bars and the long horse.

Dennis, who has suddenly become Southern's top ring man, will perform on the side horse, high bar and rings.

Harstad, whom Meade calls a great competitor, especially when the going is toughest, will be working the high bar and parallel bars and probably the rings.

Hardt will be performing his specialty, the trampoline. Hardt was slowed by a back injury early in the season, but is now considered the team's No. 2 gymnast.

Hardt scored a 94 at the recent North-South meet in Fort Lauderdale which was four points behind Frank Schmitz's score of 98.

Voters who will be joining them are Larry Linclauer, the all-around performer; Rick Tucker, who will work the high bar and parallel bars; Brent Williams, who will perform in the free exercise event, trampoline and long horse; and Schmitz who will work in free exercise, trampoline and long horse.

Single event men will include co-captains Mike Boegler, Tom Cook and Huch Dvorak.

Boegler will perform on the side horse, Cook will work on the rings and Dvorak, the trampoline, Iowa State, with a 184.70-157.25 victory in its first meet against Kansas State, is led by Jerry Fomana, all-around performer, and Jerry Crowder, who placed in the finals on the parallel bars.

Both teams tied for third place in the finals last year. Earlier in the season, Southern scored a narrow 61-56 victory over the Cyclones here, the Salukis' closest score in three years.

Both Strong Defensively

Salukis to Tangle With Wildcats In Promising Back-Court Battle

The Salukis take on the University of Arizona at Tucson tonight, their second foe in that state in two days. They played Arizona State at Tempe Friday night.

The U.A. Wildcats have lost three games in a row, dropping their record to 7-5, since beating California last month in the Far West Classic.

The Wildcats had gotten off to a fast start this season by rolling over four of their first five opponents. But most of them were smaller schools, and Arizona ran into trouble as it progressed into big company.

Arizona will be similar to the Salukis in at least two respects. Neither team is exceptionally tall. The Wildcat's tallest member is a 6-8 forward, Dick McCune.

Also, Arizona is basically a single-guard team, which seldom racks up the astronomical scoring totals common to so many Midwest teams. Like Southern Illinois, most of the Wildcats' scoring has been in the 60 to 80 point range.

The big man in Arizona scoring is 6-3 Ted Pickett, who averages 17 points a game. Joining him in the back court is No. 2 scorer Bob Spano, who at 6-1 averages 14.7 points a game.

Quite a battle should shape up in the back court with this pair opposing Southern's leading scorers, George McNeil and Dave Lee. McCune averages 17 points a game and Lee 14.4.

Up forward, Arizona will probably go with Bobby Fox and Mike Brown. The 6-4 Fox averages 12.3 points a game, while the 6-3 Aboud has an average of 8.5.

Starting at center will probably be Bob Hancen, with a nine-point average. Backing up the 6-6 Hancen are 6-6 Jerry Jacobs, 6-7 Tom Sutton and Mike Nordik, the team's big man at 6-8.

Coach Jack Harman will probably use his usual starting lineup of McNeil and Lee at guard, Clarence Smith and Randy Costa at forward, and Boyd Neale at center.

After tonight's game, the Salukis return to play against small-college powerhouse.

Auto Club Sets Sunday Rally

The Grand Touring Auto Club, Inc., will stage a sports car rally Sunday, beginning in the south Arena parking lot at 1 p.m. Registration will be from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Southern plays Evansville and unbeaten Tennessee State next week.

SIU Teams Take to the Road For Weekend Sports Activity

There may be truth in the saying "there's no place like home," but that could be small consolation to SIU's winner sports teams, all of which will in action on the road today.

The basketball team will be the farthest away in Tucson, Ariz., for a game against the University of Arizona.

Freshman to Play Bradley Tonight

The season is not yet half over, but the freshman basketball team has already begun a few wins of its own. It will have to spring a few more to tie the Bradley Papoose tonight in Peoria.

The game will be preliminary to the Bradley-Louisville varsity game.

The biggest surprise has been from Creason Whittaker, who was considered the anachronism on the team before the season started.

Whittaker, a 6-1 guard from Jacksonville, is currently tied with forward, Willie Griffin for team scoring honors.

Each has scored 20 points a game and 10 free throws for 70 points, or an average of 17.5 points a game.

Whittaker also leads the team in passing to make 57 passes as against 18 passes for Orlando Pickett.

Paluch Mum on Sports Fee Hike

Student body President George Paluch had no comment Friday on what action he plans to take concerning the fee increase bill, passed 10-7 by the Campus Senate Thursday night.

The bill calls for a $14 hike in the activity fee to provide revenues for National College Athletic Association scholarships for intercollegiate athletics.

Paluch said last week that he would not sign the bill unless administrators had expressed written opinions on the measure.

Paluch, who was not present at Thursday's Campus Senate meeting, said he would wait to see the full report of the committee which recommended passage of the bill to the Senate.

Committee chairman Ray Leidl said he had talked to John S. Rendleman, vice president for business affairs, who was in favor of the proposal; C. Richard Crumy, University legal counsel, who said the fee increase as proposed is legal; Dean Justice, manager of the SIU Arena, who was concerned over the wording of the policy contained in the bill; and President Morris, who would not express approval of the dis-proposal at this time.

President Morris office said Friday that if Morris receives a formal proposal on the action, a fee increase from the Campus Senate, he will send it to the University Council and ask its members to investigate the matter and make a recommendation to him.

The University Council is an advisory group composed of faculty and administrators. Athletic department officials have argued that the fee revenues to be received from the additional scholarship money will not be enough to attract top high-school athletes.

The proposal was discussed in the last meeting of Student Welfare Committee. A sample of student 锦州 on the measure showed 2,059 to 1,678 in favor of the fee increase.

The Senate bill as passed Thursday calls for the fee increase to take effect at the beginning of summer quarter. 100-1. Finalized student vote on the increase must come from the Board of Trustees.

Board Chairman Kenneth Davis of Harrisburg, who has spoken in favor of the increase, said last week that he believes the measure will come up for consideration at the February meeting of the Board.

"The movement to the left on campus is a misguided attempt to assert individual liberty," said M. Stanton Evans.

It was Evans' opinion that students could be better off if they were looking in the conservative camp.

He saw himself as a master of the lectern in an SIU address on the conservative view of contemporary America.

The young editor of the Indianapolis News spoke to an overflow audience in Shryock Auditorium Thursday night.

His audience was a mixed gathering of students and local citizenry. The students were from both the left and the right of the philosophical space.

Evans won the audience over with his first remark, in which he apologized for interrupting any fanatic viewing.

The outline of Evans' speech was a definition of the terms, "liberal" and "conservative." He said the emphasis in the conservative point of view was on the individual as opposed to the society.

He referred to the liberal outlook as a "mirror image" concept centered on the individual. The emphasis is put on "collectivity over the individual."

Evans went on to cite an example of the Amish farmers and how they had been forced to make social security payments. He said that this was in violation of their religious beliefs.

He referred to this type of action as "philosophical arrogance.

Evans said that the "liberal establishment" is now in control in Washington. He said that it is supported by the liberal news media. When questioned after the speech on this point by a Daily Egyptian reporter, Evans said that the television networks are completely one-sided in the matter. He said that the news magazines are not much better and that the only place where there seems to be any amount of agreement is in the daily press.

Evans answered questions after the speech.

One question concerned how much freedom the Communists should be given in this country.

Evans replied that under the first amendment the right of free speech must be protected. He said that this is a basic right that cannot be denied.

However, he went on to say that he would recommend that there be severe legislation against those whose Communist affiliation grew from an allegiance to Moscow rather than a philosophical belief.

Evans noted after the speech that he was pleased with the "questions and the intelligent conversation." from the audience.
