Reagan able to testify at North trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A federal judge ruled Monday that Oliver North can call his former boss - Ronald Reagan - to testify at his trial on 12 felony charges in the Iran-Contra scandal, and the case moved toward jury selection Tuesday.

Barring last-minute objections, the prosecution of the fired official of the National Security Council was to open at 9 a.m. Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell with jury selection expected to take about two weeks.

North, 45, faces 12 counts that include obstruction of Congress, destruction of documents and receipt of illegal gifts. If convicted on all 12 counts, he faces a maximum of 60 years in prison and $3 million in fines.

Minus one panel of 12 jurors, plus six alternates, is seated, John Reker, chief deputy to independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, will begin formal presentation of the case that took $13 million and more than two years to produce.

Lawyers on both sides have said the trial could last until the Fourth of July.

Monday, in a final pre-trial conference, attorneys met a subpoena North issued last month in President Bush but has not sought to quash.

Gesell ruled the defense had not adequately demonstrated the need for Bush's testimony and threw out the subpoena. Reagan "shall remain subject to call to testify," he said, but left open the possibility of future subpoenas to serve either as president, the Justice Department or other parties.

The judge also ruled that North could not have diary copies of Reagan kept while in the Oval Office.

Logan athletes arrested

By Richard Nunez and Mart Barnett

Seven men, including six basketball players from John A. Logan College, were arrested Monday for two residential burglaries in Carbondale.

The seven were charged with the burglary of two apartments in the 900 block of S. Rawlings earlier this month. Neal Jacobson, public information officer for the Carbondale Police, said:

"We are now in a position to make regarding the value of the (stolen) items or recovery of the items," Jacobson said.

The seven men arrested were Terrence Johnson, 19, Lawrence Collins, 19, Artemus Preston, 19, Sedrick Brown, 20, Anthony Johnson, 23, Andre Boyland, 22, and Sedrick Brown, 20. All seven reside at 518 S. Rawlings, except for Sedrick Brown, of R. 5 in Carbondale.

Each face one count of burglary, except for Sedrick Brown, of Jefferson and Edwin Brown, who face two counts of burglary, each.

"The players have been temporarily suspended from the team until the charges and violations can be verified," John Sella, athletics director for the college, said.

Sella said the players have not yet been suspended from the university.

The seven men were arraigned Monday at the Jackson County Courthouse before Judge John Phil Gilbert and released on a $5,000 recognizance bond.

Search for dean begins

By Megan Hauck

Advertising for a position of dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts will begin as early as this weekend, Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs, said.

Directors and chairpersons from the departments and schools with the CCFA discussed the fine points of the job description and requirements of deanship of the CCFA and settled on the following requirements for candidates:

- an earned degree that would be available for appointment within the academic unit of the CCFA;
- recognized excellence in scholarly research and creative activities, and public service activities;
- proven administrative abilities and evidence of assertive leadership;
- appreciation and support for the diverse research, creative and public service activities of the CCFA;
- an ability to advance the goals of the CCFA;
- an ability to develop and maintain productive relations with on- and off-campus supporters and with funding and fundraising activities;
- a fundamental commitment to the educational needs and achievements of faculty, staff and students.

It was unanimously agreed that candidates for the position of dean already have obtained full professorships as a minimum requirement.

NORMAL — In 1989, the magic number for the Salukis was 1,000.

Following on the footsteps of Kai Nurnberger and Randy House, each setting their 1,000th career points earlier this season, SIU-C's 74-67 win over Illinois State Monday night marked the 7,800th win in the 74-year history of the University's basketball program.

"I'm pretty happy about it," Saluki coach Rick Herrin said.

"You've got to celebrate once in a while." Among those in attendance at the Redbird Arena was former Redbirds' standout and All-American Doug Collins, now head coach of the Chicago Bulls. Collins, who played under Herrin at Benton High School, said the win is a tribute to his former coach.

"I'm pleased to see Coach Herrin has got the program going and I'm very happy for him," Collins said. "Coach Herrin deserves all he gets. He has worked his tail off his whole life for basketball. Southern has a great basketball tradition."

Several Salukis alluded to the game as a double-milestone, and even over.

CIA: SPC could be hit by budget freeze

By Miguel Alba

The Student Programming Council's budget for fiscal year 1990-91 could be placed on hold if the Undergraduate Student Government Senate decides it does not meet Student Organization regulations.

Charles Hagerman, Student Government Senate chairman, will propose the bill, which has already been recommended by the CIA, to the senate Wednesday night.

Hagerman said the SPC constitution is in violation of RSO guidelines by not having a democratic process for the selection of committee chairpersons. The people who have exclusive voting rights in SPC business and thereby control the organization.

"SPC offices are set up in a manner that could be manipulated," Hagerman said.

SPC received about $100,000 of student fee allocations during the last fiscal year to run its operations.

However, the bill seeks to place SPC on probation, which is an internal measure taken by USG. Even if SPC's budget is approved for the following fiscal year, it will not be allowed to access funds until RSO regulations are met.

All majors invited to apply for job; may receive credit

Last year 18 University students received Mickey Mouse ears during graduation ceremonies from the Walt Disney World College Program. "The Mickey ears even have a little tasseled attached," Dolores Page, who participated in the 18 week program during the fall, said. All students are eligible to apply for the college program, but if Disney gets to the University later in its recruitment cycle they will announce preferred majors. Regina Glover, associate professor in the recreation department, said.

"I plan on going for other semesters," Page said. "Once you get far into the marketing curriculum at SIU I will have the opportunity to shadow Disney executives around." On the second leg of the program Page will be returning to Disney as an MGM studio tour guide, she said. However, McKneelen said she does not want to return. Humor may be the best part of 'Three Fugitives'

By Kathleen DelRe Staff Writer

"Three Fugitives" is long on humor, and has a moderate amount of charm. Nick Nite plays Lucas, an ex-bank robber, who opens the savings account at a Washington bank on the same day Perry, played by Martin

Film Review

Short tries to rob it. Naturally, the police assume Lucas is partners with Perry. And naturally, Perry is really an innocuous guy who only robbed the bank to get money to pay for a special school for his seven-year-old daughter, who is extremely withdrawn and has not talked since her mother died two years ago. In the film industry, it is an axiom that if it first something succeeds, remake it. The reason why the plot does not seem original is because it is not. When "Three Men and a Baby," based on a French comedy, was a commercial success last year, it spawned a trend of rehashing French comedies. "Three Fugitives" is the latest to try in on this fad. Charm is supposed to be the drawing card of the film. It is not. Humor, however, is.

ROLLA, Mo. (UPI) — A professor of English at the University of Missouri-Rolla claims he has discovered what may be the last lines of poetry ever written by William Shakespeare.

W. Nicholas Knight saw a Shakespeare bibliography published in 1911 containing the evidence for attributing eight lines of verse to the English dramatist. Knight, who previously discovered the seventh and eighth known signatures of Shakespeare, has submitted a paper presenting his evidence to The Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C.

The lines were discovered by Nina kans as consulting a copy of William Jaggard’s "Shakespeare Bibliography at SIU-C's Morris Library. "Jaggard is known for having listed over 700 pages of books relating to Shakespeare and often is consulted for libraries for purchase," Knight said. "He also was interested in identifying, collecting and selling authentic Shakespeareana."

Regulations on guns should aim for safety

Since a convicted felon murdered five children on a Stockton, Calif., playground this month, some in the news media and other gun control advocates have jumped into a predictable "I told you so" mode.

Ignoring what everyone knows: people kill people, not guns, and that when guns are criminals in the only people who use them as guns will be the criminals. These weapons infringers on the American right to own and bear arms have attacked the National Rifle Association for its opposition and have required a wait period before purchasing a firearm.

Larry Bozic, owner of Bitter's Army Surplus, sells and advertises AK-47 assault rifles, the fire arm used to kill the children at the playground. Bovic said he is well aware of the regulations that was in place at the time that the gun was used in the playground shootings, but he felt no resistance about continuing the ad.

Indeed, Bovic said the "leftist media's" fixation on the incident has fueled copycat crimes with the weapon.

He also said that the outcry against semiautomatic weapons is baseless, the ease with which they can be converted to automatic weapons doesn't hold water because other kinds of rifles and pistols also easily can be converted to automatic weapons.

In order to legally own a firearm in Illinois a firearm owners identification card must be issued by the State. To be issued a FOID card the applicant must never have been convicted of a felony.

However, there is no national law requiring a government check of criminal records before buying a firearm. There should be.

Surely even groups like the NRA must agree that this type of background check would prevent incidents such as the playground shooting in which the man has an extensive criminal record and the one last year in Winnetka where the woman who committed the murders had a history of mental illness.

Even IF the check did take a few days, it would not decrease sales of guns locally or anywhere. Besides, even NRA members have kids on playgrounds who could be the next victim of a gun-wielding maniac.

There is no legal requirement that where added gun control laws are in place, freedom is curtailed, where does it stop?

Pretty soon, people who once armed themselves to the teeth will have to settle for the hips.

Letters

Reader 'appalled' by gun ad

After hearing about the attack of innocent children in Stockton, Calif., I am appalled that the advertising staff of the Daily Egyptian is running an advertisement for the same weapon that was used in Cali.

It is the right of any company to advertise any product in any newspaper, but can't the paper select which is printed. I'm not complaining about Bitter's putting the ad in, just the limited space allotted for the advertiser in the ad. Surplus probably bought the ads before the incident, but why at this time, run the ad for a rifle that is only made to kill people. It is a great feeling to know that someone who lives next door to you can buy this rifle and ammo at such a bargain price.

The DE should have asked Bitter's if they would remove the ad, or change it. It is the right of the paper to run the ad as written in the ad, but the paper should also try to screen them. I am a member of the National Rifle Association, but this firearm should not be advertised to the general public. Very Blanks, sophomore, undergraduate studies.

Viewpoint

Everyone should pack pistols, it's the American way of life

Donald Kaul
Tribune Media Services

I imagine the National Rifle Association, the gun seller's lobby, is pretty proud about what happened in Stockton, Calif., a couple weeks ago. You know, when that gunman walked onto a playground with an AK-47 assault rifle and began to shoot the children playing there. The NRA won't express its pride in public, of course, it would be quite tasteless of them to express its pride in public, of course, for these massacres. We should be more than enough to suppress its images of smug satisfaction.

The incident, as much as any of recent months proves that the gun control movement is winning. It showed that it is still possible for any red-blooded American lunatic with a week's wages to get his hands on pretty much any firearm and with any way his diseased imagination finds qualms. Keeping that possibility open is the NRA's reason for being, and the only criterion by which I feel a swell job it's been done.

If we can't make a crotching savage wait two weeks to buy a machine gun while he checks if we're expecting for murder, how can we put him in jail?

I've said that if we expect murder, we should have a national law regulating the Constitution.

I've said this before, but let's say it once more, with feeling. The NRA has this country's most important interest in making it politically impossible to discuss the issue of gun control. We should be talking about ways to reduce the number of guns in our society and limit this type of weapons and ammunition available to those who are the target of shooters and sportmen.

Instead, the NRA has got this country arguing about whether we should be selling machine guns, assault weapons, armor-piercing bullets, and semi-automatic rifles, to win a minimal check of the background of a gun purchaser.

It's harder to catch a man and personal check in this country than to buy a gun.

The NRA would have us believe that its main preoccupation is the protection of the constitutional rights of people who wear those big guns. That they can be used to keep their privacy with the funny handles or who people enjoy "harvesting" the occasional cow. Not really. Those people have no stake in stopping the legalization of armor-piercing bullets or mass murder weapons, gun registration, and assault weapons, which is all that's left. What is in issue is the right to make money selling guns, as with as many as possible and without regard to what these weapons, Jesse James, terrorists, criminals, it's all the same to your friendly neighborhood gun dealer. Which is why the innocent blood spilled in Stockton must have given the NRA lobbying's such a warm sense of accomplishment. If you can't stop a murderous wacko like that from getting his hands on a semi-automatic weapon, you can't stop anybody — and that's the way the NRA wants it.

Well, if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. I've decided to accept the basic NRA position that gun control is futile. Our gun policy has been hostage to the gun sellers for so long that they are now an armed and can no longer aspire to a sane national attitude toward guns. There are too many guns in the pipeline and our attitudes toward them are in thrill of Clint Eastwood movies.

So I'm going to get a gun. And I'm going to learn to use it. Yes sir, I'm going to keep it by my bedside and wait for the odd smurk in the middle of the night. When I hear it, I'm going to creep downstairs, fire off one shot and, and should there be a mysterious shadow that passes through my backyard I will open up and I will give it to him. I just hope it's not my son.

Hey, I feel better already.

Just thinking about having a gun has made me feel better. Maybe after I get good with my past I'll go out and get me an assault gun and find some other arrested adolescents to shoot up in a way that I could take it hunting, and kill white hoods of whatever color and give the most to the poor, of course. I'm liberal.

But the Stockton massacre was the school daydreaming situation that I never would have gotten out of hand if those teachers on the playground had been armed. And if the NRA had its way, they would have been Happy shooting.

Tax refunds slowed by filing errors

By Daniel Wallenberg

Many students who file income tax returns expect refunds, but not all students will get the refunds as quickly as they would like according to information released by the Internal Revenue Service.

Some returns never make it to the service center for processing because of incorrect addresses or postage.

Students should expect to wait at least eight weeks before worrying about a lost tax return. To avoid long waits before should be followed.

Some returns are a few file their tax forms, with existing clients. Only a that can help.

Filing early suggested by director

Pamela Britton, financial aid director, said many students will fill out their tax returns as soon as possible.

It is much easier to complete financial aid forms when accurate information is available and students are encouraged to guess at figures on their returns, Britton said.

However, Janet Finnerty, public information director for the IRS's financial aid department, said, if it is necessary to rush in the returns right away, just keep them handy.

She recommended giving priority consideration for campus-based aid, students should also fill their tax returns.

Financing income taxes can be a trying time for anyone, but for most students the burden lies on their parents.

'Mississippi Burning' falls below expectations

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

It's no trick to make people hate the Ku Klux Klan. Show enough scenes of Klan violence, and most audience members will be on the edge of their seats in outrage.

Film Review

"Mississippi Burning," a heavily touted Oscar favorite that has finally come to Carbondale, turns out to be a film that relies heavily on shocking its viewers with repeated examples of KKK burnings and burnings in order to evoke a cry for justice.

But at the end of the film when justice has been done and you're smiling in satisfaction, ask yourself what "Mississippi Burning" was really all about.

It's certainly not about blacks, and it's not about the Klan. Yet it uses both groups to tell the story of erupting racial violence in the rural South in the 1960s.

The film, "inspired by actual events," is writer Chris Gerolmo's fictionalized account of one of the largest FBI investigations out of proportion to its outcome.

When three civil rights workers disappear in a small Mississippi town only days before the 1968 elections, poor southern blacks have their homes and churches burned and are repeatedly terrorized by the Klan while Dafoe's floundering team of investigators fail to protect them.

Of course, the offbeat tactics of Hackman's character make the only headway in the investigation out of proportion by bringing in dozens of federal agents and armed troops, and escalating the story of erupting racial violence in the small Mississippi town.

Predictably, by the end of the movie, Dafoe has learned to trust the wisdom of his experienced partner. He even puts Hackman in charge of finding the men responsible for murdering the three civil rights activists.

In "Mississippi Burning," (Orion Pictures), the Ku Klux Klan waits for church to let out before attacking a black congregation. Here, young Aaron Williams (Daneil McCrory) prays for God to end the violence that is killing his people. This is one of many violent scenes portraying the racial tensions of the 1960s.

Real life burglar halted by "Vice" star Don Johnson

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Actor Don Johnson, who plays Detective James "Sonny" Crockett in the "Miami Vice" television series, stopped a burglar in a hotel room where he and his fiancee, actress Melanie Griffith, were staying, police said Monday.

Detective David John­son, 34, no relation to the actor, was later booked by Los Angeles police on suspicion of burglary, Hayes said.

"The man was injured in the incident," he said.

National Supermarket applies for time extension

By Jackie Spilker

The Carbondale National Food's Supermarket's application for an additional time extension before beginning construction on an addition to the building addition will be reviewed by the City Council at its April 7 meeting. The National Food's Vice President for Real Estate requested a two-year extension before construction begins on the present zoning expansion is due to expire in Feb. 1989.

Vice President Peter Bohling said construction on the expansion is scheduled to start this spring, but he would not comment on any delays.

The proposed expansion will increase the store's size to 50,000 square feet with the addition of a salad bar, pharmacy, floral shop, video rentals and liquor store.

In a memorandum to interim City Manager Jeff Doherty, Director of Community Development Donald Moity said his staff supports a one-year time extension opposed to National Food's two-year request for the start of its expansion.

The Zoning Board of Appeals approved National Food's request, for a 12-foot setback along the south property line instead of the Planned Business District's required 30-foot setback.

The setback is intended to keep buildings from getting too close to each other. Moity said.

Since the zoning variance will become null and void if construction of the addition does not begin within one year of the approval, Moity said the time extension should be "fixed in with the variance." Councilman Keith Tushan said National Food's "can always come back and reaply for another extension if it does not begin construction in one year."

The Council has granted four time extensions for the expansion project, with the last extension granted Feb. 2, 1987. "We are a friendly bunch of people, so they can always come back," Tushan said. Councilman Richard Morris said once the east-west couple has been established, it will be easier for National Food's to determine how long it will be until it begins construction.

The approval of an east-west couple and lack of water pressure have stalled construction on the expansion.

Until the addition of a water line on Walnut Street behind National Food's, the store did not have enough water to operate the sprinkler system.

Speculation over the position of the east-west couple also halted construction plans.

Brenda Way who was trained in ballet from an early age at New York's School of American Ballet, grew up to form the Oberlin Dance Collective-San Francisco, a modern dance company that far removed from ballet.

"Modern dance defines what's not ballet," Way said in a recent phone interview. She said modern dance began the 1920s as entertainment and had some connection to Vaudeville.

"It had feeling and a lot of passion and it had nourished in America," she said. Modern dance isn't technical like ballet, she added.

"The transition from ballet to modern dance wasn't difficult because she's still doing what she wants to do. Whether it is ballet in the 1940s or modern in the 1960s, "dancing is about art."

She said there are two kinds of artists. One uses private imagery in their dance and the other is responsive to the world. A reflection of life's feelings is what she said gives to the choreographer.

"It's about the death of a friend's child or a simple like are examples of the way Way does as founder and artistic director of ODC.

ODC is made up of athletic dancers who portray the delicate reflections of life in an indelicate way.

"There is an affirmative athletic physicality about what we do," Way said. The distinction is made in the roles that the dancers play on stage, she said. "Who you can be in the work is as broad as what you can be in the world."

Two dancers from the Oberlin Dance Company exhibit their style. The company will appear Feb. 7 at 8 p.m. at Shryock Auditorium.

ODC will begin Shryock Auditorium's Celebrity Series spring season at 8 p.m. Feb. 7.

The program begins with "Second Wind" a look at social dance and romantics. "Second Wind" is one of many events planned for just pennies a point.

Steinberg cleared of murder, convicted of manslaughter

NEW YORK (UPI) — A jury Monday acquitted university lawyer Joel Steinberg of murder, convicted of the lesser serious charge of first-degree manslaughter in the beating death of his illegally adopted daughter — a case that became a national symbol of child abuse.

Steinberg, 47, who would have faced life imprisonment if convicted of second-degree murder, could be sentenced to up to 25 years in prison for manslaughter, making him eligible for parole in eight years and four months.

The verdict came after eight days of tortuous deliberations in which jurors clashed over evidence, the trial, Steinberg's lover, and whether he killed 9-year-old Lisa Steinberg, his adopted daughter — a case that became a national symbol of child abuse.

Hagerman said the university Programming Office administration for having indirect control of SPC. "Are they (chairpersons) representing the students or UPO?" he said.

SPC has been in violation of this particular RSO regulation in the past, but action against it was delayed because of internal SPC problems and fading interest in the subject. In other CIA business, impeachment recommendations for Sen. Jehad Hamden began in addition to an impeachment petition for CIA member Sen. Arvo Burnett. Hamden is being impeached for malfeasance of duty, which means missing meetings in a semester without a proxy. Burnett has also missed too many meetings, but because of his seat on the CIA, a petition with two-thirds of the senators must be collected before impeachment proceedings can begin.

Three other USG senators have recently resigned, bringing the total vacant senate seats to nine. Three new senators are to be seated this Wednesday night at the USG meeting.

Shepherd voiced concern of the possible ineptness even an assistant professor would experience in such a position. "I think the college needs a very strong leader at this time," he said. "He's going to have to deal with some heavy budget decisions that will have to be made soon." Advertisements for the position will be placed in trade journals, and Shepherd encouraged schools and departments throughout the CCFA to send announcements to universities nationwide.

A search committee for the new dean has not been finalized yet, as some constituency groups haven't disclosed an elected member. These include the Graduate Council, the Graduate Professional Student Council and an undergraduate and graduate student from within the OCFRA.

Applications for the position of dean of the CCFA will be accepted until March 15. The projected appointment date for the dean is on or before July 1.

Women overcome illnesses to capture second at invite

By Paul Pabet
State Writer

The women's indoor track team showed that a little determination can overcome a world of illnesses.

The Saluki runners went into the Missouri Invitational on Saturday with 12 of their 26 team members side-tracked with the flu.

Coach Don DeNoon said that their second-place finish was a success, considering the number of ailing runners.

"I'm pleased with our performance, taking into consideration the number of points we lost due to illness," DeNoon said. "I'm real proud of the kids who were sick and ran anyway, it shows how bad they want to win.

The Salukis were led by the Illini Graduate School Conference triple jump champion Christiana Philippou. Philippou finished first in the "triple jump and third in the long jump with distances of 39 feet 1¼ inches and 19-1½ feet, respectively."

"Christiana had an outstanding meet," DeNoon said. "The girl she beat in the triple jump has already qualified for the NCAA's."

Senior Kathy Raske and sophomore Michelle Sciano also had strong performances. Raske sprinted to a first-place finish in the 50-meter hurdles and ran a career-best to take second in the 200-meter dash. Raske's 200-meter finish was a pleasant surprise for DeNoon.

"Kathy was a big surprise for us in the 200," DeNoon said. "With her time I think we have the top three conference times for the 200-meter."

Sciano, who raced for the first time since early December, placed second in the 600-yard dash in a time of 1:27.8. DeNoon believes even better days are ahead for Sciano.

"She has so much potential to be a great talent," DeNoon said. "A little work and she could be unstoppable."

The Salukis had a number of other top performances including Dora Kyriacou, first in the 200-meters, Donna Griffin, third in the 5,000-meters, Lisa Judascak, third in the mile run, Pam Davis, third in the 800-meter dash, Angie Nunn, third in the 400-meters, and Jane Schmacber, third in the 1,000-yard dash.

"DeNoon's frustration over the flu epidemic is evident."

"If we were healthy we would be winning," these meets instead of taking second or third," DeNoon said. "We are losing 20 or 30 points per meet because of the flu."

"We're pretty sick right now," DeNoon added. "I would rather have it (the flu) hit us now and not at conference meet."

DeNoon said that his team needed him. "I think we have the top three conference times for the 200-meter."

"We're going to condition and prepare, we will let the rest take care of itself."
McAndrew's vision led to milestone

By Troy Taylor

Illustration by Mike Daley

Only the late William McAndrew, founder and architect of all things Saluki Athletics, could truly appreciate the significance of the outcome of Monday’s game at Illinois University’s 1,000th men’s basketball milestone.

It’s been 46 years since McAndrew’s passing, yet the achievements of his tenure remain in retrospect.

Since the 1969-70 season and 966 wins have passed since “Mac” left his coaching and teaching position at Lawrenceville High School to start a physical education program at Southern Illinois Normal University.

Then-President Henry William Shryock had personally selected McAndrew for the post after the most successful high school coach could coach teams that would “gain some bad publicity for the school.”

McAndrew was a driven individual. He single-handedly started football and basketball in 1922-23 on the gridiron and 6-6 in the cage.

As the program grew, he increased his involvement. Essentially, he was introduced when he joined the armed forces in 1918 during World War I, no intercollegiate athletic events were held that season.

McAndrew was required to serve as an officer and as a result, could not continue the teams. Several replacements were then hired, and the program continued in name only.

However, except for the Great War and a short leave to earn a second degree, McAndrew never gave up his basketball coaching duties.

During his first five-year stint as head coach, he had only one outstanding team, the 14-3 club of 1917-18.

Upon his return from the service, he inherited from interim coaches Fount Lodge and William Warren a 10-3-1 team from 1919-20. In 1920-21 McAndrew’s first season back that same team went 10-9.

The basketball program’s first season captured three milestone victories during McAndrew’s tenure. In 1928, the Maroons won No. 100 minus star Clyde Crawshaw, who was out with a bad knee, with a 30-17 victory over Mayfield, Mo.

No. 200 came in 1935, on a team led by future Maroon coach Lynn Holder.

When McAndrew left Carbondale and satisfied the oft-cited, "If you can’t beat ‘em, join ‘em," Smith’s act must pull into the press box.

Secondary director, Jim Vill, called in the press box.

Gerald Veach went "wild," scoring 10 points with the McAndrewers — as they were called — to a 32-20 victory over rival Cape Girardeau. Seven years later, in a similar win over Cape Girardeau, it would be said; "A victory over Cape is always hard to gain and always deserves a special notch in the athletic history at S.I.U."

No. 300 came in 1942, at the end of the football season.

Salukis rally on road to beat Redbirds

By David Gallant

The Redbirds are - so much for the opposing threat of a perfect Redbird Arena record.

Carbondale won the game 4-0 on its new floor, Illinois State was humbled 4-17 on Monday night as the Salukis won the mystery of Normal’s latest monument.

For SIU-C, it is a double-date in the record books. The win marks the 1,000th in the 74-year history of the basketball program at the University.
