Pumps race to avert water rationing

By Dave Idata

Carbondale may have averted a severe water shortage Thursday night by putting three pumps into emergency service at newly completed Cedar Lake, according to City Manager Carroll Fry.

Fry said the city will work at full capacity in a race to fill the city reservoir before consumption makes water rationing necessary. Fry said. Who wins the race will be known Friday morning, Fry added.

The decision to start pumping came at the end of a special 24-hour meeting between city public works officials, advisors and representatives of Nutty & Pautler, contractor for the Cedar Lake project.

Whether Cedar Lake water would flow to the rescue of the rain-starved city was "more a legal question than anything else," according to Bill Boyd, director of public works.

Fry said that Cedar Lake is "the last line of defense," adding that there are many other factors that affect the city's water supply.

When the water crisis became known, SIU had no formalized plan of action at hand, Bobby Lee Marlow, superintendent of buildings and maintenance, said Thursday. He conceded that a plan several years old may exist, but added that he has never heard mention of it.

"The University would cooperate in any way the city would ask us," Marlow said.

There are many ways to conserve water on campus, Marlow said. But most measures would result in inconvenience or discomfort, he explained.

Air conditioners, which use water-cooled condensers, could be shut off, Marlow said.

William R. Norwood said he was surprised—and glad—to be nominated by Gov. Dan Walker to fill the vacant seat on the SIU Board of Trustees.

Norwood, a former SIU quarterback and now a United Airlines pilot, was nominated by Walker last week to fill the seat vacated by W. Victor Rouse, who resigned in January. The nomination now goes to the Illinois Senate for approval.

Norwood, his wife Mary who is also an SIU graduate, and their two children live in Elk Grove Village. In a telephone conversation Wednesday night, Norwood said he was first informed of the nomination "a couple weeks ago." Before that, he heard rumors "from my immediate family," he was being considered for the seat, he said.

If Norwood attends the September board meeting as he plans to, it will be his first during this year with a fully staffed board.

"I'm not sure whether the senate has to confirm my nomination before I can serve on the board," Norwood said. "I'm going on the assumption they do."Norwood says he doesn't anticipate problems in attending the board meetings despite his job. Since the board only meets once each month, he can work his flight schedule around the meetings, he said.

When asked what the goals of SIU should be, he said he hasn't "yet come up with priorities, but is "in the learning process right now."

"As a trustee, it pays to know more about the situation at SIU than I know right now. Three or four months from now, I'll have some ideas," Norwood said.

Norwood attended SIU from 1955-59 on a football scholarship. He was third string quarterback his first year, and was varsity quarterback the next three years. He was the first black quarterback at SIU.

Graduated from SIU in 1959 with a B.A. in Chemistry, Norwood later served in the U.S. Air Force attaining the rank of captain. In 1965, he became United Airline's first black pilot and the second black pilot on a major airlines.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Thursday rejected both a mild strip mining control bill favored by segments of the coal industry and legislation backed by environmentalists that would phase out the practice entirely.

In refusing to adopt either of the two competing proposals, the House paved the way to vote on another bill. The new bill drafted by the House Interior Committee, would impose national environmental controls on the surface mining of coal. Similar legislation has been proposed by the Senate.

By a 256 to 156 vote, the House refused to substitute for the committee bill the milder proposal sponsored by Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif.

Hosmer charged that the committee bill was so restrictive that it would seriously cut U.S. coal production at a time of increasing energy demands. His substitute would have permitted strip mining wherever mining companies could demonstrate that the land could be restored when they finished.

Hosmer's bill was supported by the American Mining Congress but strongly criticized by environmentalists and backers of the committee bill.

Then, by a 335-69 vote the House also rejected a proposal by Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W. Va., that would have phased out strip mining entirely—within six months in mountain areas, 18 months in relatively flat areas and 54 months for large strip mining operations west of the Mississippi River.

Hechler said that continued strip mining would bring to the West the same strip-mine scarred landscapes typical of the Appalachian region.

He said the nation should concentrate efforts on finding better techniques of deep mining.

"Strip mining is a temporary prosperity. It impoverishes people and enriches only a few," Hechler said.

The vote rejecting both the Hosmer and Hechler proposals came as the House entered its second day of debate on the controversial legislation.

Nixon's impeachment predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The House Judiciary Committee will begin voting Thursday on a ranking Republican lawyer predicted Thursday that the committee will recommend impeachment of President Richard Nixon when it votes next week, sending the case to the full House for a possible vote to impeach the President.

The lawyer, Rep. Charlie Wiggins, (R-Calif.), said that a Thursday afternoon meeting between House Republican leaders and the 17 committee Republicans showed that about four of the GOP committee members would vote against recommending impeachment of Nixon. Wiggins said that if even eight or nine members would vote for such a recommendation, the full 435-member House, including himself, are currently undecided.

He said the committee will take formal action against Nixon that week.

Wiggins said that the House will vote against impeachment by a 440-60 vote margin.

He earlier had predicted all committee Republicans would oppose recommending impeachment.

Wiggins said that the Judiciary Committee will Thursday a new tape transcript will be released. The lawyer said Nixon was held in connection with a "hush-money" payment to Watergate break-in defendants.

But later he said the transcript will be held as part of the case may open in a portion of a conversation between President Nixon and former White House aide H.R. Haldeman.

The committee decided to suspend the tape recording of the conversation but Nixon refused to provide the tape of the committee. The transcript was released May 30.

He said Nixon did not provide any tapes to authenticate the transcript and said that Nixon followed or followed the excised portion of the transcript as covered by the transcript. The conversation between Nixon and Haldeman lasted nearly an hour.

St. Clair said the partial transcript showed that Nixon told Haldeman the day after July 75,000 was being sent to the Rep. Howard Hunt Jr. that blackmail would "not be paid" to Watergate defendants.

St. Clair quoted Nixon as saying legal payments to support the defendant's families would be proper but that payment of hush money would be improper.

In San Clemente, Calif., Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the transcript "destroys the theory that the President was involved in a conspiracy to destroy justice by the payment of hush money or blackmail money to Mr. Hunt.

Rep. Jerome Walde (D-Calif.) declared, however, "it is the most arrogant and arrogant contempt toward Congress and the committee that has occurred in the entire proceedings. The hearings which began with exclusion of transcripts and were made with the unedited transcript of all, it shows the over-run continues."

He said he thought the effect of St. Clair's action was to let off some awful lot of members of the committee.

Rep. George Danielson (D-Calif.), said St. Clair also delivered to the committee what appeared to be an altered version of notes by former White House aide John K. Ehrlichman.

The handwritten lines by Ehrlichman on a meeting with Nixon about the special White House investigation unit known as the Plumbers' covered only about 700 lines.

Danielson said, while similar notes are not delivered to the special prosecution ran about 1,300 handwritten lines.

The low bid for the repairing and remodeling of the women's rooms of the Lincoln Junior High School submitted by a local contractor, Cardonale, was tentatively approved by the Cardonale elementary school board Thursday evening.

The Williams bid of $14,884.14 was 40 per cent higher than the cost of the $9,886.70 submitted by the district as a $7,360.55 estimated budget of the district.

The board recommended that Superintendent Laurence W. Martin and district architect J. E. Plum carry negotiations with the Williams company before the bid receives final approval.

Tentative budget OK'd

A tentative budget for the 1974-75 school year was approved by the Cardonale Community High School (CCHS) Board of Education Thursday.

The budget will now go on public display at least 30 days until a public hearing is held at 7 p.m. Sept. 1, in the school gym.

During the display period, board members will have an opportunity to examine the budget and the board can make revisions in it. Citizens can make suggestions at that time.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover on three occasions cited Henry A. Kissinger as directly authorizing wiretaps on government officials and newsmen according to evidence released Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee.

In separate memos dated May 12, 1970, Brig. Gen. John N. Mitchell "on May 12, 1970, Brig. Gen. Kissinger "directly authorized the wiretaps placed on the five targets." Mitchell was deposed by the Senate Intelligence Committee on taped conversations of six private discussions he had with Kissinger during 1969 and 1970.

Kissinger denied under oath during Senate hearings on his nomination for secretary of state that he ever directly authorized any wiretaps placed on 12 officials and four newsmen in 1968 and 1970. Some of the Hoover memos were previously published and further questioning of his role prompted Kissinger's threat to resign unless he was cleared in a new investigation by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Welfare rolls now job lists

CHICAGO (AP) -- Welfare recipients will be employed by 13 community agencies to help other welfare families with budgeting problems, state Public Aid officials said Thursday.

A department spokesman said the program will serve more than 5,000 welfare families for six months at a cost of $647,000. It will employ 130 persons.

Betty Laddy, coordinator of the project, said the purpose of the budget counseling program is to give practical help to welfare families.

All-American Green Bucks

To the Daily Egyptian:

The honorable mayor was shaking hands and smiling his toothiest smiles outside the room where the city council meeting was about to be held. He had every reason to be cheerful. The city had just made close to $200,000 in windfall profits by refunding its sewer and water bonds.

In the meeting the mayor would soon call to order, the money from the profits would be distributing to local organizations provided they met Internal Revenue requirements. Those requirements that the bond issue was not supported, and city funded or directly controlled by the city.

"I like that's what I call All-American city management." Dr. George Corny, former councilman, said as he grabbed the mayor's hand with his right hand and plastered a "Green Bucks" sticker on the mayor's lapel with his left. "Thanks old sport," the mayor said as he dismissed Corny with a toothy grin and stepped inside to call the meeting to order.

"Here, Here," the mayor said. "The task before the council tonight is to distribute the money recently dropped into the city's lap to noble organizations with worthy intentions." The mayor was interrupted by the city attorney. "Let me remind you, Mr. Mayor, that every minute wasted in distributing these monies is jeopardizing the sale of the city's bonds."

"Well then, why don't we just give it all to the Green Buck organization and be done with it?" one of the councilmen said. A murmur of whispers came over the crowded room. Who? What? Who? Then Dr. George Corny stood up and came forth to address the council. Bowing his head, Dr. Corny began. "Mr. Mayor, friends, council friends, allow me to explain. Green Bucks is a private organization whose purpose is none other than to make private investments with public funds. We have no hidden motives."

Then Dr. George Corny stood up and came forth to address the council. Bowing his head, Dr. Corny began. "Mr. Mayor, friends, council friends, allow me to explain. Green Bucks is a private organization whose purpose is none other than to make private investments with public funds. We have no hidden motives."

Corny was cut short by the city attorney: "Corny can you wind this up? The council doesn't have a whole lot of time for this matter." Corny thanked the council, bowed again and returned to his seat.

The only woman on the council took the floor and made the first move on the measure. "I think there is a great deal to be said about the integrity of the people on the board of Green Bucks. How can we go wrong backing people of such unassailable character. Why don't we give them most of the money?"

It's 10 past 11," the city attorney reminded. Another council member spoke up. "I would like to see the money go to public organizations that have been struggling for years instead of to Green Bucks, a group that was formed only days ago apparently just to receive this money. However, just to show that I am capable of speaking things up, I second the councilwoman's motion that Green Bucks get the majority of the funds."

So it came to pass that Green Bucks became green with envy. Other organizations that got less became green with envy. And still other organizations got none and became blue with rage.

Basic research needed

To the Daily Egyptian:

Since my recent letter has caused two faculty families living on West Walnut to take up pen and ink in defense of the value of their property and, of course, their artistic sensibilities, a reply to my critics seems timely. I suggest Kay Sanders should have read the front page of the Daily Egyptian on July 4 before being hit by the iconoclast. When an interest group seeks publicity and is misrepresented, as apparently happened on this occasion, it surely causes its audience to search out the truth rather than except the public statement.

This applies particularly to Brent Locke Riley, who criticizes me not for thorough research the subject, whilst she herself has apparently failed to take even this elementary step. Her claim of superior knowledge, though pompous, is possibly correct, but her letter simply demonstrates that knowledge is no substitute for analytical ability.

Whilst I am prepared to admit that the historical research has some validity, Riley is so blindered by self-interest that she can't, or won't consider the effects of the now-successful petition.

Under the new zoning ordinance existing multiple dwellings are allowed to continue as such, but no single family dwelling may be converted to multiple occupancy. However, multiple dwellings can be converted to single family housing, and hence, over time, changes of ownership must be expected to steadily diminish the supply of student housing.

It renewed my faith and made the world seem a little less rotten on that Blue Monday to know a stranger would stop and offer to stay with me because I was sick, even though she was, in our truly American way, rushing to a dentist appointment.

Once again, much thanks—you brightened up a really horrible day, and it's great to know you cared.

200 to 300 cattle die of anthrax in East Texas

By Associated Press

National Guardsmen manned roadblocks Thursday and cattle vaccinations were ordered in a seven-county buffer zone around Falls County, Texas, as authorities sought to keep an anthrax outbreak contained.

The outbreak, which started June 23 with one dead cow and then spread rapidly to 300 to 300 cattle.

Authorities said they believe the outbreak is contained, but it could break out again at any time in the unvaccinated cattle. The near-drought is ideal for multiplication of the spores which cause the deadly disease.

The eastern half of Falls County in Central Texas is quarantined and National Guardsmen stood at 42 roadblocks in the area. There were no questions from the guardsmen as they spoke to Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Two cattle deaths were reported Thursday in Falls County, but Dr. J. F. Sousa, a veterinarian, said neither was confirmed as anthrax.

Meanwhile, officials in Oklahoma lifted restrictions on cattle from Texas except for those from Falls County and the seven buffer counties.

The Oklahoma embargo was ordered Wednesday when it came from Sulphur Springs, Tex., died in Oklahoma, more than 1,000 miles north of the Texas outbreak.

But Oklahoma health officials said Thursday anthrax was not confirmed in the 10 deaths. Texas officials meanwhile said the 10 cattle had been traced to seven areas in East Texas at least 125 miles from Falls County.

State and federal officials are quick to say the Texas outbreak is contained, but they do not want to discourage ranchers from vaccinating their cattle.

"I get colds whenever I hear these local ranchers say they think it's about over," said Dr. Wilson Boaz, a veterinarian in Falls County.

"All the roadblocks in the world can't stop the epidemic until the soil conditions change," he said.

The problem is the hot, dry weather across Texas and the Southwest. Anthrax spores, hidden in the ground, are especially dangerous during a drought. Grazing slowly and cattle crop it close to the ground, letting spores enter through the mouth, nose, or other openings.

The plans are described as a "real prime for anthrax" by Dr. Gerald Gwinn, Kansas Animal Health Commissioner.

Dry conditions aren't confined to Texas, this summer's winner J. Mulheren, a USDA official in Washington, said livestock producers in West Texas, Southwest Oklahoma, eastern New Mexico and parts of Colorado south of Denver should begin vaccinations.

"There is no apparent danger to consumers from the anthrax outbreak. Cattle which are vaccinated cannot be slaughtered for 42 days. Federal and state meat inspectors have been alerted to make sure not recently vaccinated cattle are processed.

"Vaccination is a key problem in controlling anthrax. For a variety of reasons, many ranchers don't want to vaccinate their herds.

Texas officials say there are still some 'viable' Falls County ranchers who haven't vaccinated. Those ranchers may have waited too late, because it takes 10 to 14 days for anthrax vaccine to become effective after inoculation.

"If these people want to get out of the cattle business, doing nothing with the vaccine will get them out of it as fast as possible," said Dr. J.B. Young of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

He said enough vaccine has been located for everyone because laboratories had more in stock than originally estimated.

Kansan wins Quill award at convention

The editor of The Miami (County) Republican of Pawla, Kan., was named the 1980 Golden Quill Award winner Thursday night at the 45th annual convention of the International Society of Weekly Newspapers and Student Editors (ISWNE), being held this week at Pere Marquette Park near Galveston.

Phil McLaughlin received the award for his editorial titled "Tourism Blues." The editorial took the state governor to task for defending Kansas as a tourist attraction.

McLaughlin concluded his award acceptance editorial writing, "Kansas isn't a tourist attraction or an adventure in the exotics. It is just a pleasant place to live for a small number of people who believe that life shouldn't be an accelerating kaleidoscope of regimented events. Its justification, if it means so much, lies there."

An editorial written by an Illinois weekly newspaper editor, K.L. Monroe of the DeKalb Daily Chronicle, was among the top dozen editorials chosen for the award.

School of Journalism faculty members Richard E. Stegman and Edgar Tunn were judges for the award. The ISWNE, which maintains its headquarters and business office at ISU, will conclude its conference Friday.

General Motors beset by union strike threats

By The Associated Press

Labor relations continued to beset General Motors Corp., as the United Auto Workers raised two more strikes last week to bring to 14 the number of walkouts taken by 28,000 GM employees already idled because of strikes.

A strike by 7,200 workers at GM's Lansing Delta Plant Assembly in Lansing, Mich., which ended its first week Thursday with no settlement, was still trying to settle contract issues and grievances. The walkout had cost the company $5 million since 15,000 GM supplier plants to be idled.

Another 5,700 workers continued a strike that began June 28 at GM's Denver assembly plant in St. Louis. There was no change in the talks.

A vote at the firm's Doraville, Ga., facility remained hung up over the strike of a Canadian frame supplier. However, GM's 3,200 Georgia assembly workers (including those scheduled to resume work Monday) were not involved in the talks.

General Motors miners walk off job in protest of strip mining bill

INDIANA (AP) -- About 1,200 Indiana miners walked off the job at three White House-ordered assembly plants in protest of a strip mining bill passed by Congress.

Officials of the United Mine Workers (UMW) District 11 at Terre Haute, Ind., Local 417, said the walkout at three West Virginia plants, that they felt would force the closing of surface mines in Indiana.

A union official said Wednesday's unauthorized strike affected about 1,200 miners in the northern one-half of UMW District 11 in western Indiana.

Herschel Fagg, District 11 president, said the unauthorized strike was to protest the endorsement of the committee bill by Arnold Miller, the national UMW president.

The miners of Indiana felt they should come out and protest and let the public know how they feel about the pending legislation," Fagg said.

"It is to show we are against, legislation we felt could close down surface mining in Indiana."

William Beeman, president of the Indiana Coal Association, which represents all of the major coal companies in Indiana, said Indiana operators and miners are supporting a bill by Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Ill.Cal.

Both Fagg and Beeman made a mutual declaration against the committee bill several weeks ago and both support the Honner bill. (The Honner bill is tough, but the operators feel it will permit mining," Beeman said.

"It allows the states to enforce their own program. If a state has no mining laws, then the Federal government can intervene. In Indiana the laws are tough and we've got good reclamation laws," Beeman said.

Another 260 workers were laid off at the Chevrolet point axle plant in Buffalo, N.Y., as a result of the walkout.

In Loudon, Tenn., workers were expected to vote soon on a tentative settlement at the Ford Delco plant, more than a visit to the surface mining issue at the walkout.

Meanwhile, the IAW said Local 32 received a five-day notice of GM's key Guide Lamp Division plant at East Peoria, Ill., threatening the walkout next Thursday if a localGM settlement is not reached. The factory produces headlamps and mirrors for GM car divisions.

Another 200 workers were laid off at the Studebaker plant in South Bend, Ind., earlier this week.

The IAW said members of the local UMW were not able to contact GM officials about the walkout. The factory supplies telesets and broadcast parts for the assembly lines.
Black studies faces deferral on degree

By Joyce Thomas

The Black American Studies' baccalaureate program, scheduled to go into effect this fall, will not meet the fall deadline, Clifford D. Harper, director of BAS announced.

Harper said that the proposal is its second draft and is in the dean's office. "We won't know anything until the undergraduate committee has read it," he said. "Hopefully, we'll have it approved by the 7th of July.

When completed, the BAS baccalaureate program will offer students five courses of study. Harper said. Four of these deal with social welfare, crime and delinquency, family management and education.

The fifth, which Harper termed the "Pure Black American Studies approach," will consist of a four-year degree in Black American literature which may be accompanied by a professional degree.

What a student would acquire with a degree in BAS and a professional degree is the ability of understanding the Black community that will enhance his skills," Harper said. A lawyer with a background in BAS will be better equipped to deal with the various people in the Black community," he said.

Harper has been director of BAS since June 1, 1973. At director, one of his first courses of action was to get BAS listed with Cooperative Human Resources. Prior to this BAS was an independent unit and reported to the vice-president's office.

The BAS department now offers about 25 courses covering the areas of child and family, psychology, sociology, literature, theatre, administration of justice and history.

Most of these courses have an average of 15 to 20 students enrolled and a proportionate number of students are not black, according to Harper.

The department plans to offer several new courses during the upcoming school year. Some of these courses will include child and family, African history, and at least one course in administration of justice as it relates to blacks, Harper said.

"We don't assume we can deal with all problems dealing with blacks," Harper said, "but we do have expertise in some areas."

BAS is staffed by seven faculty members. Unlike many other departments, BAS has been relatively unaffected by the university's cutbacks. The director said two staff members have been cut due to insufficient credentials. This occurred before December, he said.

When asked about the status of the BAS program, Harper remarked that it would be difficult to say because BAS programs have been relatively new. He added that to his knowledge, no agency has assumed the responsibility of raising these departments as is done with older, more established ones. "I feel that this department is as good as any other," he said.

Harper said he was unfamiliar with the rumor of a new director being appointed to BAS. He did say that he had applied for and received a Rockefeller Fellowship, which he will begin taking advantage of Sept 1.

As assistant director will be appointed, Harper said, but added that he did not know who it would be. "We will develop as we have been," he said. "I will still be responsible for what happens and I anticipate no problems and no changes." Harper said.

Services held for TV star shot on show

SESTKA KEY, Fla. (AP)—As the pop song, "I Don't Want No Tears in the End" echoed across a sandy beach, a memorial service was held Thursday for talk show host Chris Chubbuck, who fatally shot herself during a live television broadcast.

Later the ashes of Miss Chubbuck, 29, were scattered over the Gulf of Mexico.

Miss Chubbuck shot herself Monday afternoon during an interview program, "Sanctuary Digest," being broadcast by WFLY-TV, an ABC affiliate in nearby Sarasota.

The service, the first since Miss Chubbuck had wanted it. They selected the songs because the singer was one of Miss Chubbuck's favorites.

Several batters, one in a bikini, stood and watched the sincere ceremonies, while two vacationing, swimming a few feet away.

Waves lapped at the white shoreline behind the lectern which loomed amid palm trees and lifeguard stations.

This is a remembrance of her in thoughts and music," said the Rev. R. Tom Reason of the Presbyterian Youth Council Ministry.

Margaret Chubbuck, the dead woman's mother, gazed at the doleful scene. It was a mourners joined in reading a psalm.

At the time of her daughter's death, Mrs. Chubbuck said, she had been terribly depressed andJonek had no friends.

Rules hit officer, instigate divorce

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit police officer Eugene Caviston was granted an appeal in divorce proceedings to spend more time with his wife. So he's getting a divorce.

Police regulations require officers to live in the 17th, but the Cavistons reside in suburban Farmington Hills.

"I am so tired of working nights," said Mrs. Caviston. "I feel it is my right to have my husband spend more time with me and the kids in the daytime."

Soviet-American marriage means facing many hurdles

By Lynne Olson
Associated Press Writer

MOSScow (AP) — Sergei and Diane Ignatiev are finally husband and wife, after three months of waiting for permission during which the former University of Illinois coed lost her job, he was beaten up and both went through bureaucratic pressures.

Why was it so difficult to get married? She Ignatiev feel it was because he's a Soviet citizen and she's an American.

They are not unique. Numerous Soviet-American couples have run into similar difficulties with the Soviet government during the past few years because they wanted to wed.

In May, U.S. Ambassador Walter Stoessel said in a cable to the State Department that Soviet authorities "have gone to extra lengths to permit or delay" such marriages.

The conclusion of the cable was that the RGB, the Soviet secret police, had a "relatively free hand" to prevent Soviet-American marriages.

Mr. and Mrs. Ignatiev unexpectedly and suddenly received permission to marry in the Central Palace of Weddings on Tuesday, but they have an even bigger hurdle to surmount after their hurried wedding.

The former Diane Nemec, 22, three months pregnant, must leave the Soviet Union a week from Monday while her 36-year-old bridegroom remains behind.

Mrs. Ignatiev said that before she leaves she will write a letter formally inviting Sergei to live in the United States, a requirement for a citizen who wants to leave the Soviet Union to join relatives.

Neither new law is optimist of quick permission.

"One can never tell," Sergei said. "It may take a year, maybe two weeks."

"It may take lots of years," Diane interjected in a gloomy voice.

Dow Jones rises as market shifts

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed to post its second straight advance Thursday but was moving downward at the close.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up nearly 14 points at 2 p.m., finished with a gain of 4.22 at 990.73.

Gainers outnumbered losers 918 to 511 among the 1,778 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume expanded to 13.90 million shares from 11.32 million Wednesday.

The NYSE's composite index of close to 1,500 common stocks was up 10 at 45.82.

Brokers said the market's early climb was fueled by speculation among some investors that the Federal Reserve might be planning to relax its tight-money policy a bit. But traders moved in to take profits at midafternoon after the government reported that the nation's total output of goods and services had dropped at a 1.3 percent annual rate in the second quarter, after allowing for inflation.

It with the second straight quarter of decline in real Gross National Product—which constitutes a recession as some, but not all, economists define it.

Evans Products was the most active NYSE issue, down 7/8 at 6. U.S. Steel was up 1 3/4 at 46, touching a five-year high of 47 during the session, to lead a broad advance in steel issues. Most companies in the industry which have reported on the second quarter so far have posted good-sized profit gains.

On the American Stock Exchange, Texas International lost 1/4 to 51/4, at the top of the active list.

The Amex market-value index rose 1/2 to 79.90.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 72.81, up 10.

Landmark destruction angers Lloyd Wright

OAK PARK (AP) — The 84-year-old son of the late famed architect, Frank Lloyd Wright, was overseeing the restoration of his father's home Thursday amid a lift of causing and criticism.

While touring the project, the white-haired Lloyd Wright, just as his father used to be, launched an acid-tongued attack condemning the wreckage of architectural landmarks.

The elder Wright designed and built the house in 1896 and raised six of his seven children in it for the following 20 years.

The house—now ahead of its time in design and part of the Chicago area's architectural history—has been bought for $150,000 from a private owner by an Oak Park preservation group.

The nine-room shingle-style house, which includes a studio and an octagonal room, constantly underwent changes when the senior Wright lived there. He made the house as he developed new ideas.

The younger Wright, also an architect, is the designer of the Hollywood Bowl and homes of many millionaires.

"This can become one of the greatest cultural centers on the face of the earth," said Wright, as he led a group of officials through his boyhood home.

Central plains bake with heat

By The Associated Press

Hot temperatures baked the Central Plains Thursday as general and sometimes fair skies extended across much of the nation.

Early afternoon temperatures climbed to the 100-degree mark in the eastern half of Nebraska and northeast Kansas and readings well into the 90s were common in parts of the Dakotas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Widely scattered showers were light with rainfall generally under one-tenth of an inch.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 88 at Grand Island, Neb., to 91 at Arecia, Calif.

Carey calls for revocation of Daley's broker's license

By Kathryn Johnson

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP)—The sleek white NS Savannah, the world's first nuclear-powered merchant ship, lies moored in its home port like a ghost.

Tied up at the waterfront docks with the curving skyline of historic Savannah as a backdrop, she sits in limbo like a sleeping giant which could come alive at any time.

Powerless now, it is kept running at a minimum level. The water chemistry is being maintained in the reactor so that it doesn't corrode and the reactor could be reactivated.

Devoid of human activity except for two men who watch the vessel and keep the machinery running, the $85-million ship waits while the federal government and City of Savannah figure out what to do with it.

Mauk said the conviction of Wills is "just one aspect of a much broader investigation" involving both the test taken by Daley and other examination procedures.

Judge Ryan reached the verdict immediately after closing arguments.

Gordon H. Casey, another former insurance examiner, testified at the trial that Wills made alterations on the Daley exam in the kitchen of Casper's Springfield apartment two days after Daley, 26, took the test.

Sentencing of Wills was scheduled for Sept. 7. He faces up to 10 years in prison on each of three counts of perjury.

Only atoms, 2 men stir on Savannah

The government took the ship out of service in 1976 for several reasons. There was a problem getting specialized crews; the cost of operation was excessive and a Commerce Department spokesman said "most of what could be learned from the operation of the vessel had been learned."

The ship's nuclear reactor, deep inside, contains radioactivity, although the fuel element has been removed, and the ship cannot go out to sea or into a harbor.

President Eisenhower conceived the idea of the merchant marine vessel to demonstrate the peaceful uses of the atom. The ship was launched in 1962 amid fanfare and has traveled more than 90,000 miles to foreign ports.

The ship belongs to the U.S. Maritime Administration, but the city leases it for $1 a year. It is not equipped for any other use than considering a proposal for a tourist attraction to be known as the Eisenhower Peace Center.

CHICAGO (AP)—The insurance license of one of the world's most powerful brokers, Edward H. Daley's son, should be revoked because he failed an examination of his father, a Cook County judge said Thursday.

Bernard Carey, Daley's son, had evidence disclosed at the trial of Robert Wills "to establish truth that William Daley fraudulently obtained his insurance broker's license and that his license should therefore be revoked."

The examiner, convicted of perjury on Wednesday by Circuit Judge Daniel J. Ryan, was accused of denying to a grand jury in March that he was working on William Daley's state insurance broker's exam.

Daley testified as an expert witness in the grand jury investigation. Carey said newsmen will turn over the evidence and transcript in Wills' case to the state's attorney's office in Sangamon County, to Fred A. Mauk, state insurance director and to Atty. Gen. William J. Scott.

He described the case as a "raw display of political cloud" and vowed his investigation was not over.

Mauk has the statutory authority to require Daley take another exam to determine his competence as an insurance broker, a move that would allow Carey's testimony to be taken in the history of the department.

He said, however, he will wait until the new exam and investigations by the Cook County grand jury are completed, that the Cook County grand jury investigation is completed.

Ehrlichman says President indicated 'after-the-fact approval' of Ellsberg job

By Donald M. Hathberg
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman told a grand jury last week in the Plumbers case that President Nixon had indicated his approval of the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, according to evidence released Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee.

Ehrlichman testified as part of an impeachment investigation into Nixon's role in the Watergate scandal.

The evidence was released in a transcript of testimony given by Ehrlichman, who was the former White House counsel under President Nixon. The testimony was given in response to a subpoena from the House Judiciary Committee, which is investigating possible impeachable offenses against Nixon.

Ehrlichman said he was present during a meeting in early 1972 where Nixon was briefed about the break-in, which took place at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. Ellsberg was a former military analyst who had released a classified report on the Vietnam War to the New York Times.

Ehrlichman testified that Nixon had said he was aware of the break-in and had not objected to it. He also said that Nixon had indicated his approval of the break-in.

The House Judiciary Committee is expected to release more evidence in the coming weeks as part of its investigation into Nixon's role in the Watergate scandal. The committee is currently considering articles of impeachment against Nixon for his role in the cover-up of the Watergate scandal.
'Buster and Billie' mixes slop, sensitivity

By Michael Hawley

DEER LODGE, Mont. (AP)—Rogar Caryl, a disfigured, disoriented Missouri man, is on trial for the murder of a woman who was slain by a drunken youth.

The 18-year-old former Eagle Scout who had been shot almost at point blank in the face by a drunk driver in 1954, will face the jury on charges of second-degree murder.

A 22-year-old woman who was hanged from a tree outside the courthouse was identified as Linda Adelman, a former Eagle Scout who had been hanged from a tree outside the courthouse.

She was the only woman in the city who was known to have been hanged from a tree outside the courthouse.

Art's group planning plays, concerts, shows

The Southern Illinois Community Arts Association is being formed to develop community-sponsored activities in the performing arts.

The summer-organizational program will bring together persons from Southern Illinois communities in conferences to provide ideas and assistance for trying new performing arts productions. Full activity of the program is slated to begin in September.

Director of the Community Arts Association (CAA) is Callahan of Carbondale. Callahan is currently completing his second year at SIU.

Community Arts Association plans to develop a touring theater called the Southern Illinois Community Company by performances. By this group will assist communities by raising funds to help finance their local programs.

Towns, county-western music concerts and variety shows are programs that may be presented.

Financing the Community Arts Association is the Southern Illinois Community College Public Service Consortium, with additional financial support from private sources. Application for funding is being obtained from numerous foundations.

Community colleges presently active in the consortium are John A. Logan College, Kaskaskia College, Lincoln Trail College, McLean County College, Shawnee College, Southern Illinois College and Wabash Valley College.

Small cars: it costs more to spend less

DETROIT (AP) — New car buyers are victims of an apparent price trick. They cost more to spend less.

That's because luxury, option-packed automobiles have escaped the price boosts that hit the smaller, less-expensive models.

A two-door Cadillac Eldorado with optional extras, for example, costs in less—only 3 per cent more than it did four years ago. And that includes extra safety and control features that weren't available at the start of the 1971 model year.

A two-door subcompact Ford Pinto with popular options is 57.7 per cent more expensive than the $2,178 it cost four years ago. Last year the same Pinto cost $2,226.

Overall, car prices have risen at about one-third the 74 per cent rate for products between January 1, 1969 and April of this year, according to the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Imports have jumped in price even more than the American small cars because of higher inflation abroad and revival of the dollar in 1971. A typical Volkswagen Beetle cost $1,875 at new-model introduction in the fall of 1970—$27.70 cheaper than the Pinto. Today it's 46 per cent to $2,790.

The general pricing strategy employed by auto makers during the period has been to limit big percentage increases to smaller cars. That is where the demand is and thus the profit. In 1973, small cars domestic and imported, comprised in per cent of the 14 million sold. Small car demand reached a peak in January at the height of the fuel shortage scare, capturing 54 per cent of the market before leveling off later that month.

Auto executives predict the small car market share will average 51 per cent at the end of the current year and could hit up to 52 per cent within the next two years or so. The increases in small car prices cover all companies.

Industry analysts say that pricing pattern is the result of two major factors prices control and unrealistically low prices of imports during the early 1970s.

The auto companies were under controls throughout most of this four-year period. As a result, some analysts explain, they were limited in how high they could raise the average prices.

The more small car prices increased, the less big car prices could be raised. This created a spillover effect on overall currency exchange rates.

Each of the major U.S. automobile producers listed prices this model year three or more times. Controls were removed from the industry last December.

Track meet set for young, old

The Mid-Summer All-Comers Track Meet will be open to persons of all ages at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in McAndrew Stadium. The meet is being co-sponsored by the SIU department of men’s physical education and the Southern Illinois Roadrunner Club.

Ron Knowlton of the Roadrunners said any interested people from the Southern Illinois area are welcome to enter the meet, the only rule of its kind in the area.

Events will be held for young and old alike, including a 25-yard dash for kids, four and under and the Masters Mile Run, open to those 35 and older.

Other events will be the high jump, long jump, softball throw, mile run in age groups for 11 and over, 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, two mile run and the 440, 880 and 2 1/2-mile runs.

Age groups will be divided into eight categories for most events. Six and under, seven and eight, nine and 10, 11 and 12, 13 and 14, 15 and 16, 17 and 18 and an 18 and over “open” division will make up the age groups.

A 25-cent entry fee will be charged to those over six years of age. Ribbon awards will be given to first, second and third places in all events.

Knowlton said that 18 people have already agreed to officiate the meet and if successful, the meet would become an annual event. He also said the officials of the meet would try to finish in time for the All-Star baseball game.

Pirates blank Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Reuss scattered eight hits and the Pittsburgh Pirates, taking advantage of two errors by Dasty Baker on a key fifth-inning play, beat the Atlanta Braves 4-0 Thursday night.

Loser Ron Reed retired the first 12 batters before Willie Stargell singled to start the fifth. Then Richie Zisk singled Stargell to third.
