HEW OKs Affirmative Action

By Mary E. Gardner

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare has formally approved the SIU Affirmative Action Program, President Warren Brandt announced Tuesday.

The program conforms to the format approved by HEW, "assuming good faith implementation of the program," stated Kenneth A. Mines, HEW's civil rights office in Chicago, in a letter to Brandt dated Oct. 19.

The five-volume blueprint spells out the University's commitments to providing equal employment opportunities regardless of race, color, ethnic origin, religion or sex. It also covers non-discrimination policies in force within the University as well as guidelines set by SIU to cover outside business operations such as construction and purchasing.

A Revised Affirmative Action Program was submitted to HEW for review on February 2 after the original program was rejected last December for non-compliance with HEW standards.

The SIU program is one of fewer than 10 in the Midwest region that has been approved by HEW's civil rights branch, said Mary Helen Gasser, affirmative action officer. Another 80 colleges and universities across the nation have submitted plans that await approval, she said.

An Executive Order of former U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965 set up standards for eliminating discrimination against minorities and women in government programs and federally financed operations.

"The existence of an approved Affirmative Action Program is only one of the several independent requirements facing SIU with the Executive Order," Mines stated.

"It is, therefore, distinct from the requirements of the board of directors or the fact of actual discrimination or the fact of actual use," the letter continued.

Acceptance of SIU's program by HEW is subject to review by the Office of Federal Contract Compliance, although there is no way of knowing at this time when that review might be done, said Hollis Merritt, executive assistant to Brandt.

The University now has six discrimination suits pending, said John Huffman SIU legal counsel. At one time, there were 10 suits against the University, he said.

The suits are before Maris Canul-Amaros, Antonette Appel, Geleta Heilpern, Dolores Muhle, Jean Hay and Thomas Muhlen, said Dick Hugerson, legal counsel.

Forest "Rusty" Lightle, SIU-C student trustee, Tuesday criticized President Warren Brandt for his decision to appoint a majority of the board of directors of the Student Attorney Program and labeled the move "offensive."

The program provides for a seven-member governing board with four student-appointed members. Brandt, argued at last week's Board of Trustees meeting that since the ultimate responsibility for the operation of the program lies with the University, he should be allowed to appoint a majority of the members.

In a prepared statement, Lightle said Brandt's request "makes the assumption and is predicated upon the notion that students are somehow irresponsible and unable to fathom the complexities of their actions. That to me is an offensive notion."

Lightle said he feels Brandt's appointments would be "just as likely to result in unprofessionalism, to poor judgement which can result in heavy liabilities."

Brandt said he made no allegations or insinuations that students would be inappropriate.

"That's fantasy on Rusty's part and he knows it," Brandt said.

Pointing out that other student attorney programs in Illinois do not require administrative control over the governing boards, Lightle said, "Of course, as well as myself, have to wonder whether the use of the argument of 'institutional liability' is a guise and pretext to exclude students from the governing board of a program which students and student-athletes have developed and fund."

Brandt said he is not attempting to exclude students from the operation of the program.

"That has no relationship to anything I said. It's make-believe on his (Lightle's) part," Brandt said. "He was there (at the board meeting). He heard me call for student participation. He knows I have worked hard for this program."

Lightle said the board was unaware of Brandt's objection to the composition of the board of directors until a week prior to the meeting although he said he does not consider the action a delaying tactic.

"I said, 'I don't think they (the administration) haven't gone out of their way to expedite getting the program in full operation.'"

The six pending suits are those of Marisa Canul-Amaros, Antonette Appel, Geleta Heilpern, Dolores Muhle, Jean Hay and Thomas Muhlen, said Dick Hugerson, legal counsel.

SALEM-Authorities are continuing their search Tuesday night in this area for the remaining escaped convict from Marion though hampered by conflicting reports of the man's whereabouts.

Still missing is Dennis Dale Hunter, 26, the youngest of five men who escaped from the Marion Federal Penitentiary Friday night. He was serving 15 years on charges of kidnapping.

Henry Michael Gargano, 43, the fourth escapee to be captured, was taken without a struggle Tuesday, five miles west of Bloomfield, Ill., by Greene County sheriff's deputies.

An Associated Press report quoted Illinois officials and FBI agents as saying Gargano was captured walking along railroad tracks near a lumber yard about five miles from Bloomfield.

Police were alerted by a woman who became suspicious when Gargano asked for a drink of water.

 Bars to receive fine for drinks on street

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale bar owners are now subject to a fine if they are caught allowing opened alcoholic beverages to be taken out of their establishments, according to a city ordinance passed Monday night.

The ordinance was passed during a special formal session of the Carbondale City Council held prior to the regular council meeting and goes into effect immediately. As a result, patrons of the City Attic in Womack, both the person caught with the open liquor and the bar owner responsible for allowing it to be taken outside will be subject to fines.

For example, if a person purchases a six-pack of beer from an establishment and then opens a can or cans while outside the bar, the bar sold who sold the packaged beer would not be subject to fine. However, the person who bought and opened the beer would be liable for fine.

The new law is a start at reducing the problem of drinking in the streets, particularly on South Illinois Avenue and the Carbondale City Council, Councilman Hans Fischler following the passage of the ordinance. He added, however, that the council sought to take a look at changing of the liquor designations so that a liquor licensee be permitted to sell packaged goods.

The ordinance was originally part of one that would have allowed bars to sell beer and whiskey from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m., but the council ordered Womick to draft a separate ordinance for liquor provision.

The vote is scheduled to vote on the extended hours ordinance Monday. The vote was tabled last week because Mayor Neal Eckert was not present to vote on the ordinance and council members indicated a desire for the council present to vote on the issue.

The RPPC has $400,000 to spend for equipment for the co-recreation building, he said, and it is spending 12 percent of that on seven golf machines.

"This is such a large percentage of our available funds that the student workers will get from the machine is worth the expense," Beyer said.

Barbara Tally, executive assistant to Beyer, said she plans to introduce a resolution at Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting asking that the seven machines purchased by the RPPC's proceeds for the purchase of the machines. In May 1975 the RPPC approved plans to purchase three Golf-O-Tron machines, a type of computerized golf simulator which allows a person to practice a round of golf in a 500-foot area, said William Beyer, RPPC chairman.

"The committee thought this would be an activity that would appeal to a large number of students," Beyer said.

The decision was also based on a student survey taken in 1969, Shanklin said.

Disabled students start counter-petition drive

By Nancy Landis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Better Ways, a group of disabled SIU students, will next week begin to collect signatures countering a petition which protested parts of Specialized Student Services Office that was presented last week by presidential candidates Tuesday.

Better Ways, headed by Better Ways president, said the group is concerned with a petition submitted Oct. 7 to SIU President Lakey E. Nizon, by Herschel N, a disabled graduate student.

Herschel's petition protested the transfer of Silas Singh, assistant to the dean of student services, from his position as coordinator of Specialized Student Service, the lack of assistance for Ibrahim Khattab, Specialized Student Services researcher, in acquiring another bus to transport disabled students; the lack of disabled student employment at Specialized Student Services; and the placement of Specialized Student Services under the Student Services Office rather than under Om- budden Office direction.

Herschel's petition received 1,000 signatures.

She said that the statements made by Herschel are unfounded totally.

Ervin said she added that the petition is in defense of the Specialized Student Service office, which will see to it that Herschel credit and awareness to the office.

Ervin said the petition got second place in "that job's being well done," she said.

Ervin said that Ron Blesor, who replaced Silas Singh as coordinator for the physically impaired, is "doing more than the part" in the office.

Blesor is a student, for the surplus of attending to help disabled students and for support of disabled student groups.

Ervin said that the petition is in defense of the Specialized Student Service office, which will see to it that Herschel credit and awareness to the office.

Nixon tax conspiracy charge dropped

CHICAGO (AP) A conspiracy charge against Ralph G. Newman, accused of plotting a nationwide tax break, has been dropped at the request of the Watergate special prosecutor's office.

Newman, president of the Chicago Library Board and a Lincoln scholar, is still charged with two counts of lying to government agents in connection with the Watergate break-in.

Hewitt asked the court to drop the charge so that the case would be "more manageable," distributors of the Student Center, housing areas and other campus areas and submitted to Brandt next week.

Faculty Senate approves equity model

By Lesere Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU Faculty Senate Tuesday approved an equity model recommending eliminating disparities among three of the school's colleges. The proposal, which was sent to a recent meeting of the Faculty Senate, operates in the same way as the process used to determine the status of the Faculty Senate and the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee.

The new model, if adopted, would eliminate inequities resulting from past racial or sexual discrimination. The equity model, instituted in 1974 by the Faculty Senate, relies on collecting data from the School of Medicine, which operates under the appropriate channels and the board and its legal council should point out the inequities.

Grievance procedures are needed, said the Faculty Senate, recommending that the Faculty Senate and the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee would be interested in determining the equity model procedures.

The Senate's salary, rank and tenancy committee is still in the process of completing a tenure document which will replace the former document, said the Senate. The Senate has received a copy of the document and the SIU Board of Trustees and By-Laws.

According to board statutes, the president of the university is supposed to preside over all meetings of the faculty, but the president's operating papers for the senate exist existed before the recent amendments were approved.

Rabin, representative of the School of Medicine, said the operating papers should submit to the appropriate channels and the board and its legal council should point out the inequities.

Faculty members involved with the process of completing a tenure document, said the Senate, will include the Faculty Senate and the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee.

Department chairmen would be entitled to a full equity and/or the Department chairmen will examine the institution, said the Senate, in determining the equity model procedures.

It required the ratification of the Senate, said the Senate, in determining the equity model procedures. It has been suggested that the Department chairmen will examine the institution, said the Senate, in determining the equity model procedures.

The Senate would then be interested in determining the equity model procedures. The Senate has received a copy of the document and the SIU Board of Trustees and By-Laws.

Faculty poll gets large response

Herbert Schaefer, Faculty Senate president, said Tuesday that 72 percent of the ballots in the collective bargaining referendum have been returned, and that he expects the total number to exceed 75 percent by Wednesday's deadline.

Schaefer reported to the Faculty Senate Tuesday that 72 percent of the ballots in the collective bargaining referendum have been returned, and that he expects the total number to exceed 75 percent by Wednesday's deadline.

The Senate declined to set up a special meeting to discuss the results of the non-binding referendum.

Earle Schibb, representative from the College of Liberal Arts, said, "I don't see that kind of urgency. After waiting some 50 years for this to happen (full bargaining), the difference between October and November doesn't seem like much to me."

Albert Kent, representative from the School of Engineering and Technology, said he felt a special meeting should be called if the total amount of faculty members will be the favor of one or another. The collective bargaining exceeded 50 percent.

A motion was defeated to allow the senate's Executive Council and the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee to decide whether to call a special meeting. The Executive Council still retains the power to call a special meeting, the senate's committee chairman, said.

The conference of the state's 31 campus faculty will be asked the board to recognize their collective bargaining unit next month. The board met Tuesday, which is two days before the Board of Trustees meeting.

SALEM—By 2 a.m. Tuesday, this town of 6,200 had settled into an uneasy slumber. After all, the convicts still being hunted by local, state and federal officers through the woods. About 30 FBI agents, state troops, deputies, sheriff's deputies and police were running the roads looking for Henry M. Galloway, who had escaped from Marion County Jail.

Three pairs of shoes and a pair of pants were taken from a home near the Salem area. The convicts have so far eluded capture by the largest dragnet ever to cover Southern Illinois.

Their cohorts, Maurice Joseph Phillips and Charles M. Rabin, were back in Marion Federal Penitentiary, after their four-day ill-fated escape. Phillips had talked about the maximum security prison. Comedian's ax
By Jim Ridings
Editorial Page Editor

The recent furor over the "pulling" of the comedian for all-ages during the Parents' Day dinner show may be justified, but it is misdirected.
The Parents' Day committee members claim that the coverage concerning their censorship of comedian Bob Shorr in the middle of his act was overplayed and unfair in light of how well other acts were performed. But the other acts went so well, why do they think their sugary promotional descriptions of a routine event should overshadow something as unconventional as cutting off an entertainer in the middle of his act? The parents members who pulled the comedian offstage used poor judgment and little tact. Aside from questions concerning possible free-speech violations involved, the main question that arises is that if the committee had five months of planning, why didn't they know what kind of a show the comedian were presenting?

If the comedian's brand of humor was inappropriate for the Parents' Day audience, as expressed by the committee chairman and the vice president of student affairs, why did the committee not insure that their act was something that actually would give the audience what they wanted to hear?
The fact of the matter is that, despite five months of planning, the committee did not have itself together and did not have a notion as to how Shorr's act comprised. The planning committee showed the same ineptness that has traditionally characterized Student Government and Activities Council Center Programming, activity ticket sales procedures and many other SIU programs.

Shorr in the middle of his act showed little more intelligence than hiring the unknown comedian in the first place. Certainly the parents and students attending the dinner were in need of "protection" from what the self-proclaimed censors felt was profane. An unfortunate incident could have been avoided if those in charge had used a little more tact and judgment and had let Shaw finish his routine. Then, any criticism would be directed at Shaw by对象 his objecting to his act. As it is, the criticism rests mainly with the Parents' Day Committee, who should be hiring an act which they know nothing about, and later showed further stupidity by pulling the act in mid-performance.

Attorney control
By Jerie Jayne
Editorial Page Editor

At last Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting SIU President Warren W. Brandt objected to having only six presidential appointed members on the student attorney program's Board of Directors while there are four student-appointed members.
The criticism is misdirected to say the least. It appears to be more of an attempt at administrative control than student-managed programs.

Student Body President Doug Diggle has worked on the board with many other student government members. The student body is running the program with about $19,000 collected from the voluntary $1 per student per semester fee.
The Board of Directors will serve as a search committee for the student attorney program. After selecting the attorney they will formulate the program's budget, set policies in cooperation with the student attorney and have the authority to fire the student attorney.

Brandt's argument centers around the Board of Trustees right to dismiss the student attorney's actions. On this premise he claims there should be a majority of presidential-appointed members on the Board of Directors.

Instead of Brandt being worried about having equal representation on the board, students should question whether presidential-appointed members should be on the board.

The board is overworked with minimal liability for the SIU Board of Trustees. Diggle said Brandt asked for representation on the board. It was granted in the hope that Brandt could more easily obtain a practicing attorney from the Jackson County legal community.

The student attorney will serve as an ex officio member on the board. With two other representation on the board what more could a student-appointed member add to legal knowledge of the body and provide legal support to the attorney?

The student attorney program is student initiated and student approved. They should have the right to an attorney who will represent those who paid their $1 fee. Under such circumstances should any more presidential-appointed members be allowed to serve on the board of directors.

Male consciousness raising may dispel societal myths
By Mary E. Gardner

Various female consciousness raising groups on campus have received a good deal of exposure in the media. Most everyone knows the groups exist and many have joined. But there is a relatively unobserved male consciousness-raising group also, which has been run for about a year by Jerry Hemstock from Human Sexuality Services. A significant amount of time, says Hemstock, is spent on reevaluation of the stereotyped male sex role as a reaction to the women's liberation movement. It seems some men are uncomfortable with the lack of the old cut-and-dry roles. Male roles obviously require change to complement the change in the females' roles in society.

Male consciousness-raising groups are needed to help men understand that they needn't be exactly what society socializes them to be, and to convince men that they need not live up to the stereotypical John Wayne image they were brought up with.

After all, if women are beginning to realize they don't always have to fill the "feminine" role they were taught, then why should men continue to believe they must live up to the "macho" role image? Indeed, how can they under the circumstances?

With many Women voicing unhappiness with their roles in life, men should have the opportunity to throw off some of their burdens. There really is no reason why men should feel compelled to "bring home the bacon" and furnish the sole support for their wives when women are fully capable of taking care of themselves.

Some men are experiencing difficulty relating to liberated women, their attempts to treat these women in an old fashioned manner just don't make it any longer.

Men certainly have valid complaints with their given roles. (This is not to be construed to mean that women don't have justified grievances.) There has been enormous pressure by society to force men into competitive and aggressive roles. It is not considered socially acceptable for men to show their emotions. They must be able to take charge of any and all situations, with error-free judgment in quick decisions. Is this realistic?

Men have been forced into jobs they have no interest in solely for the purpose of supporting a family, which society has determined they must do. Is this any better than the sorry lot of women?

Change has always been difficult for society. But it must not be taken for granted that society's values are correct merely because they have been dominating people for generation upon generation. "Society" is a human invention of convenience. It is a self-imposed regulation of people and must not be placed in a position of worship so as to totally ignore reevaluation.

Self-imposed regulations can be changed when the majority no longer serve the purpose for which they were instituted. Regulations which dominate society and thereby hinder its operation must be changed to better fit the needs of human beings in that society. The structure of society in which all men work and all women remain at home is no longer necessary. Women can now avoid perpetually pregnancies. There are few jobs which require the physical characteristics of men. Just as evolution questioned the Biblical theories of creation, so must human beings question the values of society rather than blindly following their predecessors into a circular succession of ignorance. All human beings have freedom of choice, even though they sometimes do not recognize and utilize that freedom. Men must learn to choose to do things not because society said thus-and-such is the "manly" thing to do but because a particular course of action appears to be the best to take.

If male consciousness raising groups can enlighten men to this fact, then many more such groups are needed.
Great student activity fee rip-off goes on

To the Daily Egyptian:

In the Oct. 1 edition of the Daily Egyptian appeared another enlightening discussion with Mr. Bruce Swinburne in which he tried his best to justify his students' activities fee. In fairness, Admittedly, his task is a difficult one. After all, the facts are all down in black and white computer printouts of Account No. 30-572-18415 which has gone by many names, mostly recently "Vice President for Student Affairs-General Fund." But, as he puts it, most of the reservations are most interesting, especially in light of statements made in the above mentioned article.

Mr. Swinburne says that though Student Government represents the student body it has its priorities, so does Student Affairs-Government. "Sometimes these two priorities are in conflict because sometimes our (Student Affairs') perceptions of activities that would benefit a greater amount of students are left with limited funding." In plain English, this means that if the Student Senate decided that certain activities were not in the best interests of the student body and decide not to fund them, and Mr. Swinburne feels just the opposite, then he maintains that a till must exist from which to draw. And, as we all know, that till consists of funds made up of undistributed student activity fees. students' money.

This viewpoint appears to be highly paternalistic in the sense that a vice president knows better than the students what is in the students' best interest. For one disagree. I do not feel that an expenditure for a luncheon for "Women of the Moose" in late 1971 (a novice example of a lot of students' money.

Somehow, I would have preferred that the money had been in the students' hands instead.

Perverted comedian

To the Daily Egyptian:

Last weekend I had my mother and my aunt down for Parents' Weekend. We went to the football game and then over to the Buffalo Tro. We thoroughly enjoyed the day.

Then came time to go to the Student Center where an orchestra played and a comedian planned to entertain the parents. The bell rang, and the doors opened.

I don't really want to list the topics he joked about. You can only think it would be a perverted comedian. I couldn't believe this University could offer such entertainment to our parents. What kind of parents do they think we have? Is this how they show their appreciation for all the parents have done? If that is the way of showing it, I don't want anything to do with it. I got up and left before the act was even completed. I was embarrassed and ashamed of SIU in such an act. I think better be an investigation into what kind of people SIU has running such events as Parents Day.

Doug Schmidt, Freshman, Construction Technology

His food was cold

To the Daily Egyptian:

A week ago Saturday evening, my parents, who came down for Parents Day, my brother and I and date had reservations at Tom's Place which is north of DeBolt.

We arrived and were greeted by the host who, after a 30 minute wait, seated us. After we finally ordered our dinner, we waited an hour and a half before our food came. This seemed quite ridiculous. I advised them a Saturday evening and anything we went would be crowded, but if Tom's Place does not have long wait hours, I would think they wouldn't try and crowd everyone in and make them wait an hour and a half for their dinner.

Censorship unfortunate

To the Daily Egyptian:

All too often a program is planned in which a large number of students and faculty sacrifice many hours of hard work and time. However, as the case may be, there are going to be certain parts of the program that encounter difficulties.

Unfortunately these are the incidents that stand out in the public's mind. So was the case in censorship concerning the College of Liberal Arts' homecoming entertainment program Saturday night. However, I feel I must state that I believe the overall program should be remembered as a success.

I would also like to say that Toby Peters, the President of the Student Body and of the Student Affairs Committee, and the Lectures Committee contributed to a program I believe can be described as outstanding. The parties involved deserve much praise for their effort.

David J. Parks, Lectures Committee Chairperson, Sophomore, Journalism

University doesn't live up to its objectives

To the Daily Egyptian:

I have found that the stated ideals of this university are in direct contrast with the realities of the university system. Instead of talking in generalities about the difficulties of dealing with the parking division or housing office, allow me to illustrate this inconsistency within the system through personal experience.

Buy the record

To the Daily Egyptian:

Stewart Cohen's letter (Daily Egyptian Oct. 8) showing his disappointment with the Fleetwood Mac concert struck me as being hilarious until I realized he was serious. Cohen felt "gypped" by the failure of Fleetwood Mac to play certain songs he was particularly fond of and came up with the brilliant idea of contacting performers to play certain songs.

First of all, Cohen can't take into consideration (or was not aware of) the many personal changes that have occurred in Fleetwood Mac over the years. Why should they want to play three or four year old songs written and sung by former members? If Cohen had been familiar with the band's current make-up and material, maybe he wouldn't have been so disappointed.

The idea of forcing a group to play certain songs is completely ridiculous and would be offensive to any artist who is serious about music. Performers are under no obligation to the audience to play particular material while they might not want to perform for a variety of reasons. One person's opinion of what constitutes the "best" work of an artist is not necessarily the same as another. Shouldn't the choice of material be left up to the performers who know their own work best?

I'd like to suggest to Cohen that if all he wants out of a concert is his own idea of a group's "best" work, he might save himself some money in the future by staying home and listening to the records. For most of us, hearing a live musician playing what they want to play is enough.

Stanley J. Crouch, Sophomore, Marketing

Inconsiderate to dogs

To the Daily Egyptian:

I am sick and tired of students who are trying to "look cool" by having their dog-friends follow them around campus. If perchance they do keep the dogs, how many do not, then I see them growling, howling or barking at everyone who passes, and often blocking pathways with their owners.

What business do these inconsiderate dog owners have dragging dogs to an overpopulated like SIU? I've had many pets and animal friends in my life and believe me, animals do not prefer crowds of humans shuffling here and there. If these students do not have decent homes for their dogs, then they shouldn't have them. If they do have homes, why don't they quiet harassing their dogs and their fellow students by having them here?

"THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MOUNTAIN"
The science and humanities departments at SIU will offer jointly a new program that will explore man's relationship to his natural environment.

The program, Environmental Studies, will begin next spring with a series of four courses dealing with scientific and humanistic considerations of the environment, according to Lon Shelby, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The first phase of the program will consist of two courses covering biological, physical, and chemical aspects of the environment. This phase, coordinated by Stanley W. Freeman, professor of biology, and Clark Ashley, professor of botany, will be taught by a team of scientists. Phase two will consist of two courses dealing with environmental problems from a historical perspective, with emphasis on the development of the world's group discusses writing

A women's discussion group is meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday's at the Women's Center, 401 W. Freeman, to read, discuss and offer suggestions about writing.

Marcie Daskin, center program coordinator, said group members bring poetry, plays, short stories or prose they have written for the group to discuss. "We are a supportive group," she said. The meetings are "to bring women writers in the area together for discussion and support," she said. There are about eight women presently in the group.

The group, open to any woman writer, has been meeting about a month. Tentative plans include inviting speakers to talk on how to get published and different types of writing, she said. She also said the group is considering inviting someone who is already published to talk to the group.

The science and humanities departments at SIU will offer jointly a new program that will explore man's relationship to his natural environment. The latter courses will be offered fall semester of 1979. "This interdisciplinary program of study probably would not be offered at a university whose various departments are less flexible in their thinking," said Lon Shelby who praised faculty members in developing a fresh, comprehensive approach to studying the environment.

The new program will be open to all undergraduate students on an individual course basis or as a minor course of study. Shelby said.

"Fall Talks" schedules art discussions

A series of "Fall Talks" are scheduled at 7:30 p.m. every Thursday in the Heritage Room to discuss the arts and related areas. Each gathering is a meeting of people from a variety of departments on campus who have an opportunity to communicate their own ideas and ask questions concerning particular topics for that evening. The coordinator of the "Fall Talks Series," Lou Quanstance, a graduate student in art and philosophy, said, "The value of these discussions seems to lie in the interchange which is encouraged, and the diversity of ideas expressed."

This week's topic, "Ideas in Sculpture," will be presented by Thomas Walsh, associate professor from the Art Department and four graduate sculptors.

Other presentations in the Fall Talk Series concern multimedia, philosophy, theater, religion, music, communication, dance, painting, art and science, and the cinema. The continuance of the Fall Talk Series depends entirely upon faculty and student enthusiasm in that it exists independent of campus or any departmental sponsorship," Quanstance said.

The series is free and open to the public.

Large yellow posters displayed around town and on campus list specific dates and locations of each talk.

For further information, call the Office of Student Activities.

Feminists discuss theology

Feminist theology was the topic discussed during the first meeting of "Theology from a Woman's Point of View," a course sponsored by the SIU Free School and Wesley Community House held Monday evening. Most of the time was spent discussing tools for the group in terms of the men's expectations and formulating questions to be discussed at later meetings.

Lynn Mulden, group organizer, said the group would be a "discussion and exploration of theological questions from a woman's viewpoint." Mulden, a Wesley staff member, attended a conference this summer called the "Campus Ministry for Women." About 15 women attended the first group meeting which will continue through November 17. One man also attended the meeting but was asked to leave because the group felt he would be a hindrance to open discussion.

Questions for future discussion include interpretation or dominance, how the Bible can apply to women's consciousness, the history of western and eastern religious, Christian woman in the future, why God is always pictured as male, Greek and Roman goddesses and creation stories.

The group, which is closed to the public, is tentatively planning a seventh meeting Dec. 1 to share ideas formulated in the group with the general public.

Put a hold on it says Bo

Chicago (AP) — "There’s too much holding going on in college football and it’s not right and it’s not fair," said Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler Tuesday.

Schembechler, speaking to the Chicago Football Writers on a telephone hook-up, let the whole nation know when he was asked to compare middle guards of Tim Davis of Michigan and Paul Moty of Northwestern.

"They are very similar," he said. "Both have the big smile and shoulder strength and they’re both exceptionally quick. But there won’t be many of them around.

Women’s tennis team takes second place at state tourney

By Scott Burnside

A second place finish by Sue Briggs enabled the women’s tennis team to tie for the runner-up spot last weekend in the first Illinois State Tournament held at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston.

Sue Briggs, from Bondville, and the Western Illinois, as both squads totaled 1 point, only two behind winner University of Illinois.

According to the latest tennis coaches poll, Illinois received the good draw in the doubles tournament and took advantage of it.

There were four good teams in the bracket, and they should have been separated. Illinois was in the bottom bracket and said Briggs finished second to Western Illinois, Jean Coberly, in an almost identical rank of tournaments at Milliken University two weekends ago.

Coberly won the championship match over Briggs, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4. Briggs got to the finals by winning four straight matches.

Ald said, "Both Briggs and Coberly are strong players. Sue’s game is more on the baseline, while Jean rushes the net. Sue’s server was broken in the last set when she couldn’t pass Coberly or effectively get back in the game when Jean began rushing the net.

State tournament rules only allow two team entries in both the singles and doubles competition.

The other Saluki singles entry, Rhonda Garcia, was eliminated in the quarter-finals by Illinois’ Barc Davi, 78, 6-2. Davis went on to finish third in the singles competition.

The Saluki’s double best finish was by Shaw Dennis and Meg Hayes, who lost out in the quarter-finals. Shaw Dennis and Sue Copkay were eliminated in the second round.

Some 12 universities and colleges were entered in the two-day tournament. Next year, this tourney will be held at SIU, October 8-9.

The varsity team, sporting a 1-2 dual season record, will travel to Illinois State Friday and to Eastern Illinois Saturday to complete its fall schedule.

Closest thing to win just like kissing sister

By Mark Kaslowski
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Nobody wins in a tie game. A tie is like kissing your girlfriend through a screen door. A tie is like kissing your sister.

These are only three of the commonly used comparisons. Because the results of a sports contest, not the item of clothing a man may wear around his neck.

In reference to the 1975 edition of SIU football, a tie may be described as the closest they've come to a win in five games.

In Saturday's game against Illinois State, SIU coach Doug Weaver was booed by some 14,000 Redbird fans when he sent field goal kicker Ken Seaman into the game. SIU ahead 17-14 in the fourth quarter.

The reaction was a natural one since the homecoming crowd seemed to be one of whether a tie is better for morale than a loss, when a team has yet to win a game.

Weaver was criticized by some for going for the tying three points rather than the winning touchdown.

Weaver admitted after the game that he didn't feel satisfied with the tie, but he had no doubts about the decision to go for it.

"We went for the tie because we fought back in the fourth quarter and wanted to come away with something," said Weaver.

"We came here to win, and we didn't.

But we didn't lose.

"The decision on whether to go for the field goal or six points depends on how the game goes, what I know about goal line defenses, our team and what happens inside the 10-yard line," Weaver iterated after the game.

Weaver's argument was a good one. On the fourth quarter touchdown drive covering 83 yards in eight plays, the drive nearly stalled inside the five-yard line.

It took four plays inside the five before quarterback Leonard Hopkins squirmed and slid through the line for the touchdown from the four.

Kazually speaking

"We didn't get to try the field goal, either," he continued. "We have to run our offense like we know we can and show everyone that we know we can win."

Daylight disappears quickly for SIU's Leonard Hopkins as East Carolina defensive end Kent Willford closes in. In a 42-yard touchdown run two weeks ago. Hopkins has played the best football of his career the last two weeks. (Staff photo by Chuck Fishman)

Change in SIU huddle may have had hand in tie

By Mark Kaslowski
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

People in love do it. The Denver Broncos do it and now the football Salukis are doing it.

Beginning with the first offensive series in Saturday's game with Illinois State, the football Salukis held hands in the huddle.

The gaiety of a ring-around-the-rosie game did not exist. The football team was proud and intense about the new huddling method.

Senior wide receiver Irv Moore was credited with introducing the digit holding to the on-the-field conference.

Moore said when he went on the field it seemed like the other players and he were not together.

"It makes you relaxed," he said. "It makes you feel like you have somebody beside you."

Senior defensive tackle Steve Weatherby had a slightly different version of the origin.

"He said he was nervous and wanted to hold somebody's hand," Weatherby joked about Moore.

"The idea was you can't move unless you have 11 people together," Weatherby said. "You've got to have everybody working together."

The spur-of-the moment idea apparently paid off as SIU received the opening kickoff and marched 79 yards in 12 plays for the touchdown.

The defense also seemed to be inspired as they held the Redbirds without a first down in a 17-play scoring segment.

"We were trying to make everybody come together," said John Dismuke, a starting running back who gained 44 yards rushing in the game.

"It's like unity. We were trying to get our minds together," he said. When we hold hands, we showed each other we had confidence in each other."

Marvin DeVoiler, starting center, agreed that it showed unity. "It's like everybody was pulling together as one unit rather than as individuals."

Although it wasn't until the Illinois State game that the players started putting their hands together, freshman defensive back Kevin Woods said "after Long Beach State we felt we were really coming together as a team. We just really do it for ourselves."

Jay Fields, a reserve center, said he thought the idea was a good one. "It makes you feel like everybody's strength is one person. We feel more unified."

Doug Weaver admitted the first time he saw the hand holding was in the game.

"I was glad to see they have some initiative for something like that," Weaver said.

Moore and the other Salukis interviewed said they will continue to hold hands in huddles for the remainder of the season and have gone as far as to hold hands in practice.

SIDELINED QUARTERBACK MANN ANXIOUS TO RETURN TO LINEUP

By Dave Wieczerzak
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Gary Mann, the most frustrated Saluki of them all.

SIU has not been able to escape the ranks of the winless this year and Mann is one guy that might have made a difference, if he were playing. The 18-year-old sophomore from Mt. Vernon broke an ankle the last week in spring football practice this year and has sidelined ever since.

"I don't like it a bit—I hate it," Mann said emphatically when questioned about having to watch the football games from the sidelines. "During practice I throw to the split ends and the tight ends. At away games I usually sit in the stands, but I can pick up things by watching. At home games I'm on the sidelines as a ball person," he added with a chuckle.

"At least I'm down on the field then—but I can't wait to get back."

"No doubt Saluki coach Doug Weaver would like to have the 5-foot-11, 194-pound Mann back in the lineup also. He was the starting quarterback all through spring drills this year and looked like he would be perfect for the wishbone offense.

Mann would have filled the role of the running quarterback and possibly given the Salukis a stronger attack.

This replacement for Mann, better known for his passing than running, has handled the crucial quarterback spot adequately and is near the top of the Murray Valley Conference in total offense.

Hopkins has rushed and passed for 394 yards and four touchdowns for 325 total offensive yards for a single season set in 1971 by Brad Pocanost.

"I think it's a good offense," Mann remarked. "It's new and everybody just has to get use to it."

Mann, who admits that "Leonard is a better passer" does not think the offense will have to look to the air more, although that's where the Salukis had most of their success against Illinois State.

"The running offense is good. We have mixed the passing in," he said. "You can't go to passing all the time because that would take away from the triple option. We have an awful lot of talent at running back. Defenses can try to key on Leonard, but they can't key on an option."

Mann had little to offer in the way insight on the tie with Illinois State this past weekend, saying, "We didn't get the ball back as much as before. Their defense played pretty good. You have to give Illinois State credit."

We just have to put things together," he continued. "We have to run our offense like we know we can and show everyone that we know we can win."

In an effort to make the team feel better, the defensive unit for SIU held hands in the huddle during Saturday's 17-17 tie with Illinois State.
