Official Post Changes Confuse Status of 11
In Demonstration Case

By Brian Trenck

The status of the 11 students who allegedly participated in an unlawful demonstration against Army recruiters continues to be unclear.

According to Willie Moore, chairman of the Carbondale Faculty Council, Chancellor MacVicar told the council on Tuesday that he will be unable to reach a decision on actions that were taken prior to his becoming chancellor.

The council passed resolutions at both of its last two meetings urging MacVicar to suspend disciplinary action against the 11 students.

The original disciplinary action was announced when letters were sent to the students notifying them that they would not be allowed to register for classes in the fall without written permission from the new Chancellor’s office.

The letters, dated July 1, were signed by Vice-President Ralph Ruffman, who was formerly in charge of student and area services.

Two students involved in the matter have voiced disatisfaction with the treatment they have received from the University over the matter.

Michael Hartly, 23, a senior in English, said that he and his friends talked for over two hours with MacVicar on the subject. Hartly said MacVicar allowed him to register for classes in the fall, despite the fact that he refused to sign a statement requested by the Chancellor.

Hartly noted that he has also filed an appeal to have the record of the disciplinary action stricken from his record.

Lee "Buck" Driscoll also said he has requested an appeal of the disciplinary action taken against him. Driscoll said that while he admitted to being present during the time of the demonstration, he did not link arms or encircle any of the recruiters.

per cent in the discount rate, cutting it to 5 1/4 per cent.

The change applies at the start only to the Minneapolis area, but such changes normally are extended eventually to all other parts of the country.

A meeting of black and white students, each representing various factions on campus, with Chancellor Roberts, W. MacVicar and Paul Morrill, assistant to President De Vito W. Morris, ended Thursday afternoon on a note of mixed opinions and frustration.

The frustration, however, was not so much due to the racial rift but rather, the failure of the administration and the students—black and white—to understand one another.

Questions which were brought up by the students and administrators included the expulsion of the six black students who allegedly participated in the May 8 disturbance at the home

It's A Dog's Life For Jaques Nobonbon

By Rita Caldwell

Who is Jaques Nobonbon? Believe it or not, Jaques is a dog, and only one of many dogs with unusual names discovered by Mme. Jean Plunkett while doing research for her master's thesis in the Department of Home and Family. Mrs. Plunkett, who was trying to discover if there was a relationship between a family's socio-economic class and the type of dog it owned, uncovered other unusual pet names such as, Charmaine, Abe Goodwin, Francis and Princess Gandaria.

Mrs. Plunkett says she chose such unusual subjects for her thesis because her pet had been researched very little. Dogs were chosen as the main subject of the thesis entitled "Pet Dogs and Socio-Economic Class," because, according to Mrs. Plunkett, there are more pets in the American family than children. She was amazed to find some families had seven or eight dogs, she said.

A questionnaire distributed by Mrs. Plunkett to about 100 sixth grade children of middle and lower economic classes asked them if they had a dog, what kind of dog it was, and how the dog privileged it had at home, and the family's reason for owning a dog.

As a result of such research, Mrs. Plunkett said she found fewer differences in the types of dogs owned by middle and lower class families than one might expect. The more prestigious dogs, such as the poodle, were found in both economic classes.

Mrs. Plunkett's research showed that the higher the economic class the more money was spent on the dog, the more privileges it was allowed, and the more likely the family would be accepted as a member of the family.

In the lower economic class, dogs had fewer groomings by a professional, and less of a chance to visit the veterinarian if he became ill, than dogs belonging to the higher economic classes.

The majority of children agreed their family bought their dog for companionship, and that they preferred small dogs. Other large ones, Mrs. Plunkett found that most dogs were acquired because the families "just liked animals."

Mrs. Plunkett said she enjoyed the rather unusual pet names she found among both classes, and jokingly added, "I may write a book about dog names."

Peter O. Rompler, operations editor of the SIU Crime Study Center for the Study of Crime, De-leinquency, and Corrections, presented a paper to the group, emphasizing the use of volunteers on a regular basis in correctional institutions.

The material is from a handbook the SIU Crime Study Center is preparing for the international association. Publication is expected in October.

Discussion in the Daily Egyptian policies in relation to coverage of black student events on the campus centered around three areas.

The black students wanted a black student column included in the Egyptian with pertinent details to be worked out by a black student leader who was not present at the meeting Thursday.

The black students also said they would like to see more coverage of black news in general, more information on black history and culture included in a full page of the campus newspaper.

The Egyptian representative at the meeting said that in order for more accurate, more interpretive stories of black news events to be possible, it was necessary to encourage more black students to enter into the SIU Department of Journalism. There are presently five black students who contribute to the Daily Egyptian as reporters, staf members, editorial writers and general office help.

After Chancellor MacVicar left following the two hour meeting, Morrill remained for further discussion at the request of the students and came under fire on several topics.

Morrill stressed that any opinions he gave were strictly those of an individual and could in no way be construed as opinions of the president's office.

When the black students asked about the possibility of reinstating the six expelled black students, Morrill said, "Speaking personally, I don't think President Morris will allow them back in at this time."

Morrill defended Morris and the president's actions vigorously. He said that both the black and the white students at the meeting were mis-informed and this led to incorrect conclusions about the expulsion incident as well as other matters concerning the actions and policies of the SIU president.

The Daily Egyptian
Drinking Problem

Those who have been calling our society "sick" might have been referring to the high rate of alcoholism in the U.S. Much has been said about the alcoholic in America. But the tragic story of alcoholism has mostly been restricted to the afflicted and those immediately affected by him. Little has been said about the effect of alcoholism on the nation's economy.

One of the more conservative estimates claims 700,000 problem drinkers are employed in non-agricultural industries compared to about 100,000 alcoholics in agricultural industries. The Billion Dollar Hangover, written by Carr, Calcino, Mudd, and Carmela M. Coppolino, M.D., mentioned that the alcoholic employee loses an average of 8 weeks annually because of alcoholism and two days more than others employees for health reasons.

The accident rate among alcoholics is usually twice that of his co-workers and his productivity line span is reduced by an average of 12 years.

Time lost by alcoholic employees is about 400,000 days a year. This is not including those employed in the country and other industries. The time lost cost of pension and disability programs.

The burden of failure does not necessarily mean a failure of society or the industry where he works. It is the obligation of society and business to do all that they can to help the alcoholic and treat his disease. Treating the alcoholic would relieve the social and physical suffering as well as the economic loss.

Why Equality?

With all the talk of civil rights and women's rights, why don't we see more women in office? If there were no sexism, why do we still have them working for men to support themselves and their families? Is it because we don't want to see women in any position of power? That is the question.

Certainly the rights women have won for themselves have been earned. The right to vote, the equal of men rather than inferior chattel. However, there could be too much of a good thing.

Newspapers are trying to show that they are not allowed to the top in the professions. No woman has ever appeared as a major executive. No woman would be elected president. Why should they want the honors and nervousness that go with those jobs?

Women, striving for equality, want to be regarded as people, not women. At least this is what they say they do. Actually, there are probably very few women who would be a bit happy if they are not noticed that they are women.

Nor would they feel they were being treated right if men did not open doors for them, help them on with their coats, pull out chairs, and other little considerations. If they got the equality they are seeking, however, these niceties would vanish.

It's a good life to be considered special - a little less work and a lot less worry, and in need of protection and tender loving care.

Women should be careful of too much equality; they could lose their superiority.

Public Forum

The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current issues. The opinions expressed by the students, faculty and staff are not necessarily those of the student newspaper staff and by students enrolled in journalism courses. We reserve the right to express our opinions in letters, which must be signed and include the writer's name and address. No letters will be considered longer than 300 words.

Letter

To the Daily Egyptian:

I was fortunate in obtaining your July 17 issue of the Daily Egyptian. However, I was very disappointed in its content. I'm referring specifically to the letter written by John Silvers, titled "Property of a Swift," which was reprinted by the Daily Egyptian and appeared on page 4 of that issue.

I've been serving in Vietnam for almost 11 months and I hardly consider myself a rapist or an assualter. I must tolerate indirect, general accusations, such as the one contained in Mr. Schertz's letter, then I'd rather be referred to as a defendant, because that is the job I am trying to be accomplished. I volunteered to come into this country after being stationed in Germany for only one reason—to help defend the future security of my loved ones.

Schertz's letter was brought to my attention by another member of my squad, and I don't mind saying I was embarrassed to claim the Daily Egyptian as my hometown campus paper. I assume that Mr. Schertz has never in his misinformed life set foot on Vietnamese soil. If he has, he would realize very quickly the need for our being over here. I'm sure that he would also refrain from stating fellow corporations against the men who are doing a fine and enduring job during this crisis.

Please let us know that we are not animals!

If you have read my letter this far, then I thank you for your patience. I'd like to ask a favor of you, I realize that the public must be informed of the truth, partly through the Daily Egyptian, but please print facts not fiction, especially when dealing with a soldier's life.

And advise Mr. Schertz to join the Peace Corps to keep his mind occupied with real, useful thought. Then he won't have time to be menacing the thoughts of students, faculty and residents of Cardonelle.

Hijacking a Boon to Air Travel

By Arthur Hoppe

Stock in Fly-by-Night Airways, Inc., soared twelve points on Wall Street with the announcement of a dynamic new advertising campaign aimed at "accident-proofing the positive" in air travel these days.

Fly-by-Night, which pioneered psychologically-palatable air travel, tops its newsworthy fully equipped with boots and whips and a fleet of liquor for every passenger, unveiled its hard-hitting "hospital for the special passenger preview.

Most dramatic, perhaps, is a single television spot showing a plane load of ecstatically happy passengers listening to this announcement over the loudspeakers. "Buenos días, señoritas, esta es nuestra nueva campaña," says the captain, speaking.

The spot winds up with the message: "For an exciting mystery trip to somewhere, Fly-by-Night, the Nation's most frequently hijacked airline!"

"By acounting the positive," said Banbury Croft, Fly-by-Night's promotion director, "we see hijacking becoming the greatest boon to air travel since the invention of the double martini. It appeals to that which motivates today's air traveler—most the spirit of romance and adventure."

Fly-by-Night has scheduled a series of full-page newspaper ads to stress this theme. Typical is one headed: "Do You Really Want to Go to Tahiti?"

"Who does?" asks the text. "Well, then, just step aboard one of Fly-by-Night's regular-hijacked flights for Dubuque and an all-expense-paid Caribbean vacation may be yours."
Two Games People Play

By Antero Pietila

1. Making Something Happen

In last week’s issue of the New Yorker, William Whitworth sketched the profiles of Charles Kuralt and William Whitworth. They were the “good guys” in the story, and that “bad guy” Crowlote and his CBS crew were accused of “U.P.I.-style writing.”

Everybody in news business knows that that kind of writing will give you cancer. It is based on the age-old conviction that the United Press International line is too reminiscent of a cow bell. Whitworth collaborated on this thing for a paragraph and quoted an NBC News acceptance of an offer to accept wide screens and “It’s very often a standoff in substance and picture. It happens in exactly the same way at any time. And at times they choose to lead with, for instance. It kind of boils down to adjectives—making things seem black and white, worse or better than they are.

A lot of their stuff must be read in the same way as the Los Angeles Times. That is, take the adjectives out and see what it really means.

Kuralt was more than an excuse for Hunley Brinkley’s poorer Nielsen ratings lately; in any case this paragraph undoubtedly came to mind last Saturday.

Charles Kuralt then opened the CBS evening newscast with words: “Something big seems to be developing between Washington and Moscow.” He then went on to report an estimated audience of 100 million viewers that Lyndon Johnson was planning a visit to Moscow but didn’t know exactly how it could be arranged protocol-wise.

And so the game was on again. Whether it was Kuralt who started this time or somebody else is secondary; now it was up to everybody to join the fun. To those who didn’t know the game it can be cold that this is a game that can be played—and usually is—whenever you don’t have anything more important in your newscast. It could be called “Make Something Happen” and one of the basic rules is to play it safe.

So now that the GOP convention was over and everybody was still a bit uncertain about what happened in Miami or whether anything really happened, this was an ideal time. Kuralt’s “scoop” was only a logical follow-up to an item in Newsweek’s “Pieroscope” several weeks earlier predicting that Hubert Humphrey would be on the opening flight of that direct air route between New York and Moscow.

Of course he was not. But last Saturday it was safe to take a chance again and predict that something big was developing.

After all, it wasn’t like that nobody knew and everybody knows how Lyndon Johnson has been forewarning the Russians for months and months. Slowly, surely, someone had to act. And so something would really develop from your prediction you could always claim that you had the first, or at least, the best, trump-card-in-order.

In any case between Saturday and Tuesday, this writer does not know. Maybe Kuralt’s “scoop” found its way to several other newscasts and many columns in print media. Maybe not. On Tuesday night, however, it was in the new again, this time on ABC.

John Scali, a good reporter and a good player only once did he forget the rules and was then expelled from Moscow Tuesday pondered on what had been said on a competitive network four nights earlier. The moral: if you miss something you consider a scoop, consider it foiled.

The game is likely to continue for a while now. If President Johnson on his “expected” rope to Moscow then ends up in Texas you can always send Dan Rather along. After all a “French Journalism Review” study shows that only 30 per cent of the “Pieroscope” items in Newsweek end in the predicted way, but nobody has studied yet how the Kuralt scoops end.

Following this really fun, the only thing I miss is L.C. Thaler, whom I have never met but who is one of the seven miracle stories of the journalistic world.

Thaler is a political analyst in the U.P.I.’s bureau in London. If you are an editor, each Sunday night you can count on him for a headline story. He seems to have fantastic “reliable contacts among sources,” as he calls them, in London. Each Sunday night he manages to come up with a new civil war in Communist Europe. Even those foreign-sounding places are exciting ones and quite difficult to top. But once you spot them you can fully appreciate his contacts. He always scoops everybody else. And from London,

He is “a rather respected writer,” as Unipress once told me, no wonder. Everybody who can produce a daily headline copy for a Monday morning issue is the.

2. The Numbers Game

The Vietnam peace talks in Paris are now in their fourth month. After several coffee and tea meetings it’s the old number game again.

In San Antonio on September 29, 1967, President Johnson said: “The United States is willing to stop aerial bombardment of North Vietnam when this will lead promptly to productive discussions.”

In San Antonio this Friday (his time or again in the New Yorker."

The increase of his bombing has varied from 2,000 to 20,000. That North Vietnamese units have always been the backbone of this kind of warfare.

This withdrawal looked like what President Johnson has called “restraint” but once again we can notice that things are not what they look like but as you see them.

Since the San Antonio forecast was presented and after the negotiations began in Paris, lots of water has run in the Potomac.

William Westmoreland has been kicked upstairs and the U.S. forces have won that incredible victory at Khe Sanh. That in reality was one strategist’s victory over another. Now the confidence that there may still be a military solution to the Vietnamese war is on the increase again.

So what has happened in the recent weeks is a clear stiffening in the U.S. attitude. It was only consequential that the enemy has been hardened not as an act of restraint but as a sign that the enemy is building a massive new offensive.

Press reports ranging from The New York Times to the Christian Science Monitor and the Los Angeles Times have openly questioned the truth of President Johnson’s claim earlier this month that the North Vietnamese infiltration last month hit a new high of 30,000. They have questioned it because other official estimates in Saigon have varied from 20,000 to an unprecedented low of 2,000 a month.

As Beverly Deepe, one of the prettiest and shiest correspondents in Saigon commented, “President Johnson said that North Vietnamese infiltrators flowed into South Vietnam at a record level of 30,000 men in July, but he did not add that allied units have been unable to find them.

Maybe it is somewhat unfair to doubt so often the sincerity of the spokesmen of the Administration. But what David Kraslow and Stuart H. Loory of the Los Angeles Times write in their new book, “The Secret Search of Peace in Vietnam,” certainly does not increase one’s trust in this Administration’s ability to distinguish a dove from a blimp.

From the very beginning it has been obvious that the prerequisite for meaningful talks is the cessation of the bombing of the North. That the bombing has not been halted during the past weeks’ lull or restraint can only increase the sinister thoughts that the genius of domestic politics in the White House is holding a trump-card in order to help Hubert Humphrey beat Richard Nixon.

Were this the case, the ultimate irony may be that it may be too late for Humphrey as well as for the talks.
Investigation Initiated

Helicopter Crashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board has demanded 14 bulldozers as part of the price for returning an American landing craft and its crew of 11 Americans and one Cambodian woman to U.S. jurisdiction, the State Department said Thursday.

The demand was made in a note Cambodia sent to the United States through the Australian government.

It was the first time Cambodia has formally requested bulldozers although Prence Nordheim, a statement from a Cambodian chief of state, has made the proposal informally at news conferences and in magazine articles.

State Department press officer Carl Barrch said he could not discuss the U.S. reply to the note from Sihanouk until after it had been sent.

However, official sources confirmed against any speculation the United States would meet Sihanouk's request for bulldozers.

Coupled to the Cambodian request for the construction equipment was a demand that the United States acknowledge its responsibility for the alleged massacre of 14 Cambodian villagers in Savy Ang on June 29 including women and children in a helicopter attack along the Vietnamese frontier.

The United States has never acknowledged responsibility for the attack.

"I will not release those Americans or the landing craft until as long as the Americans refuse to admit that they have murdered my people and refuse to indemnify us for the Cambodian killed in Savy Ang on Aug. 8," Sihanouk said.

2 Tornadoes Sighted, Cause Minor Damage

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A tornado passed over St. Louis and St. Louis county Thursday afternoon, and touched down in several places causing minor damage. No injuries were reported.

George Brancato, chief meteorologist at the St. Louis Weather Bureau, said the tornado dissipated as it moved over the Mississippi River. Union Electric Company said about 2,000 customers were affected by a outage in University City. Scattered crew was on the ground in St. Louis for a brief time. The tornado was first spotted in the area of the Kirkwood. It moved over Ladue, University City and then across north St. Louis toward the river.

Brancato said the tornado producing storm moved northeast over Madison County, Illinois. Numerous accident were reported in the area. Power was out in the area. The storm moved out of the area.

A second tornado was reported seen west of St. Louis 2 hours later but it apparently did not touch down.

15 States Challenge

Seating at Convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — The seating of nearly 20 per cent of the delegates and alternates to the Democratic National Convention is under challenge.

Walter Posen, counsel to the Credentials Committee, said Thursday, challenges from 15 states to the credentials of approximately 1,000 delegates and alternates are an all-time record.

At a news conference, Posen said New Jersey Gov. Richard J. Hughes, chairman of the 11-member committee, has taken steps to assure that all contestants receive fair play.

Posen said "the credibility of the entire convention is at stake." In one way the challenges are handled in hearings starting in Chicago Aug. 19.

The major issues to be re-solved were listed by Posen as: 1) whether the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote rulings apply to a national convention; 2) whether dele-gates can be required to pledge loyalty to the party ticket; and 3) whether delegations are representative of the relative strength of both racial and ethnic groups and the relative strength of competing candidates for the presidential nomination.

The 15 states from which challenges have been received, in the order of the Credentials Committee's scheduled hearings, are Mississippi, Tennessee, Wash-ington, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Connecticut, Ohio, Nebraska, Georgia, Alabama, Wisconsin, North Carolina, New York, Michigan and Indiana.

Posen said a standing sub-committee of the Democratic National Committee will sit in on the hearings of the Credentials Committee and, after listening to the testimony, will draw up a temporary convention roll.

Delegates on this temporary roll will be seated at the out-set of the convention. The subsequent recommendations of the Credentials Committee with respect to contested delegations will be subject to approval by the convention.

Many of the challenges involve claims by supporters of Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota that they have restored adequate representation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Credentials Committee and the seating of nearly 20 per cent of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention under challenge.

The Credentials Committee, said Walter Posen, counsel to the Democratic National Convention, that Thursday challenges from 15 states to the credentials of approximately 1,000 delegates and alternates are an all-time record.

In a news conference, Posen said New Jersey Gov. Richard J. Hughes, chairman of the 11-member committee, has taken steps to ensure that all contestants receive fair play.

14 Cubans Flee, Seek U.S. Asylum

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP)—Fourteen Cubans fled to the United States Thursday aboard a police-like bus that skimmed the waves of the Florida Straits in eluding radar nets.

The refugees, including four armed men, requested asylum after landing at Homestead Airport, 200 miles north of Varadero, Cuba, where they said their flight began two hours earlier.

Aboard the plane were five men, three women and a teen-age boy.

All were granted asylum and taken to Miami's Freedom House for questioning and a wait resettlement in the United States.

A woman who did not give her name said everyone but the pilot hid in a sugar cane field near the Varadero airport Wednesday night and boarded the Russian-made yellow bi-plane when it taxied to the end of the airstrip shortly after dawn Thursday.

"We said good-bye and took off," she told police. "We were afraid we would be followed, but there was no pursuit."

During the 90-mile crossing of the Florida Straits between Cuba and Southern Florida, skinned the waves on three occasions.

Angel Ricardo, the 20-year-old pilot, said he worked as a crop duster in Cuba and supposedly was beginning a dusting flight when he picked up his passengers and headed the Copt AN2 aircraft to Florida.

Rudolph Wanderon, port au feur, Macao, told authorities he flew at altitudes between 15 and 30 feet in order to remain undetected.

Phone Cable Severed

At Nike Missile Site

CHICAGO (AP)—FBI agents were investigating Thursday gunshots damage to telephone cables leading to a Nike missile site and the Glenview Naval Air Station.

They Illinois Bell Telephone Co.—struck by electrical workers since May 8—said at least 20 bullets sliced through the above-ground wires serving the installations northwest of Chicago.

A Bell spokesman said the shooting was the latest of more than 230 incidents of equip- ment sabotage since the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers went out on strike.

The major outstanding issue between Bell and the union has been the body of a wage increase.

In recent days, however, negotiators have been trying to come to an agreement on back-to-work arrangements when the strike is settled. There has been no word of progress in this area, either.

Black People May Boycott Elections, Abernathy Says

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, launching a convention with shauer of "Soul Power," said Thursday Negro voters must boycott the presidential election this year unless there is an acceptable candidate.

"It may be that as black people we will have to have a blackout of the presidential election," Abernathy said a cheering crowd at the opening of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's annual convention.

Abernathy, successor to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as SCLC president, brought the crowd to a roaring ovation and was besieged by excited supporters. When he ended his lengthy speech by urging the delegates to speak out on issues of poverty, racism and war.

Abernathy said: "The black vote this year will hold the balance of power.

It said he would be decisive in the South and, "I intend to preside over it."

At Benton Mine

3 Killed in Explosion

BENTON, Ill. (AP)—An explosion followed by a hail of fire killed three persons shortly before noon Thursday five miles near Logan one mile east of Benton.

Most of the 150 miners employed on the day shift were not touched by the explosion.

The dead were identified as David Asher Walker, 45, of Royalton, and James Neal, 46, of West Frankfort, both miners; and Charles Collins of Crystal Lake.

Collins was a field serviceman for Kinematic Corp. of Barrington, which manufactures feeders.

One miner, Robert Boyette, 44, of West Frankfort, was treated at Franklin Hospital for superficial burns over most of his body. He earlier had been reported in critical condition.

Witnesses said the explosion occurred at the bottom of a coal conveyor loading system and blew the body of one man 50 feet into the conveyor superstructure which protrudes above the ground.

Another body was found under- ground lying against a concrete wall.

The mine is operated by Freeman Coal Co.
SIU's Data Processing Program

Expects to Attain 150 Enrollment

When the first classes were offered in the data processing program at SIU's Vocational Technical Institute in January, 1965, four students were enrolled this fall.

The two-year program in electronic data processing leads to an Associate in Technology degree and has become one of the most popular of the 23 programs offered by VTI.

One reason for this popularity has been the tremendous growth of the field of data processing. In 1967 there were about 100,000 computer programmers in the country. By 1970 there will be an estimated 500,000.

According to James A. Robb, chairman of the faculty, VTI has the "best equipped computer training facility in the state."

The VTI program prepares students to become programmers and applications analysts. Programmers must first solve problems themselves. Then they prepare a series of instructions, called programs, and feed them into the computers. The computers store the information and are then able to solve the same type of problems, but many times faster.

Two options are offered in the electronic data processing program at VTI, business data processing and industrial data processing. Each option includes enough background courses to provide the student with a basic understanding of the field in which he will work.

The courses are problem-oriented. Each time a new concept is presented, students are immediately given problems to solve using the new concept. "Nearly all our courses are combination lecture-lab," Robb says.

Iranian Student Accomplishes Marriage of East-West Art

The marriage of Eastern and Western artistic techniques and theories leads an Iranian artist at SIU to create art works reflecting features of the time.

The world is full of problems brought about by technical advance, Siroom Malek, of Tehran, observed, "It is the artist's responsibility to create art works which can bring mental and emotional relief to people who are tired of the world's problems."

A graduate of the University of Tehran, Malek is not satisfied with looking back and copying what has already been done in art in the Middle East country, He wants to see and study Western art firsthand and to combine it with Eastern techniques.

Summer Groups To Present Music

The Department of Music will present an evening program of music by the Summer Male Ensemble and the Summer University Choir at 8 o'clock Aug. 22 in the University Center Ballrooms.

Robert Kingsbury will conduct the ensemble in works by Handl, Hassler and Croce and the choir in works by Bach, Vittoria, Brahms and Burt. The accompanist will be Susan McClary.

The male ensemble will be accompanied by a string quartet for which Kingsbury scored the music.

Peace Corps Seek Teachers

The Peace Corps is seeking volunteers for a special teaching program which will begin training for Peru this fall.

Twenty-two volunteers are needed with advanced degrees in education or with B.A.'s in secondary education. Peru also wants 16 Peace Corps Volunteers with degrees in elementary education.

For additional information contact Robert Arellanes, Peace Corps, Room 816, Washington, D.C. 20525.

Artist and His Art

Preparing an exhibition of art works, Siroom Malek from Iran, works on an ink painting in his studio. Most of his works reflect a rendering of the traditional Iranian painting in an abstract Western style.

Iranian Student Accomplishes Marriage of East-West Art

The art student came to the United States in July, 1965. During the first two years, he spent most of his time studying English. He was a student at Los Angeles City School of English for Foreign Students prior to enrolling at the State University of Iowa.

When he visited SIU during the Easter break this year, he said he was impressed with the international atmosphere on the campus. The school has 800 international students including 75 from Iran. More important, he said, the Department of Art provides graduate students with individual studies, where they can study, think, and work freely. Malek began his study at SIU this summer.

Formerly a creative designer for an advertising company in Tehran, Malek's paintings show the characteristics of the influence of Western abstract style and traditional Iranian technique. Many of his works have been exhibited. Three of his paintings were bought by the Museum of Arts at Venice. Another three are now in the Museum of Missouri.

He plans to have an exhibition at SIU in September.

Peace Corps Competition Announced

Gov. Samuel H. Shapiro has announced that the annual competition for entrance to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy will begin with the Dec. 7 administration of the College Entrance Examination Board tests. These examinations will be given in over 3,000 test centers.

Arrangements to take the prescribed CEEB examinations should be made by the applicant through his school guidance counselor prior to Nov. 2.

Gov. Shapiro emphasized the opportunity offered qualified young men who choose this four-year course which leads to a bachelor of science degree and a commission as an officer in America's oldest continuous seagoing armed service.

"Appointments are made on a nationwide competitive basis; there are no separate quotas for states or districts and no special categories," he said. Young men who are interested may write for details and application forms to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. 06320.

Rugged Cross Country Schedule, Coach Says

Tough and rugged are two words that describe SIU's 1968 cross country schedule, according to coach Lew Harzog.

"We'll be very young and none of them will have any Oscar Moore experience," Harzog said. "But we've been pressed to win even one meet.

Only one runner on the cross country squad will be an upperclassman this fall. The team will participate in seven dual meets and five other meets this upcoming season. "There's not one guy on any team to say that particular one will be the stiffest test of the season," Harzog said. "All of them will be tough.

Headlining this year's home schedule are dual meets with Illinois on Sept. 23 at powerful Kansas on Oct. 12 and Murray State on Oct. 9.

"Illinois will have one of the best teams in the history of the school," Harzog said.

"Kansas is always good, but maybe hurting if Jim Ryan runs in the Olympics. Murray has two real good boys. One was ineligible last year and I think he'll be ready this fall.

SIL photo to participate in the Illini Intercollegiate Championships, which are open to all colleges and universities of III., making its first appearance in that meet since 1951.

"Any way you look at it the going is good this fall," Harzog said.

The complete schedule:

- Sept. 14, at Miami (Ohio)
- Sept. 21, Illinois
- Oct. 5, at Kansas State
- Oct. 12, Kansas
- Oct. 15, at Southeastern Missouri State
- Oct. 19, at Western Illinois
- Oct. 26, at Tennessee, Knoxville

Gilchrist Chooses Evansville

Frank Gilchrist, a candidate for quarterback on SIU's varsity football team, has decided to transfer to the University of Evansville for the Fall quarter.

"He indicated to me that he wanted to attend Evansville to be closer to home and so he could spend more time working for his business," Coach Dick Towers said. "Of course, I told him if he intended to play for them."

As a freshman quarterback, Gilchrist carried the ball 41 times, gained 149 yards and lost 91 for a net gain of 58 yards or an average of 1.4 yards per carry. He passed 58 times, completed 18 and seven were intercepted. He gained 240 yards and threw two touchdown passes.

Did Retirement Talk Lead to Silas’ Swap?

By Dave Palermo

Sam Silas, SIU’s contribution to the professional St. Louis Cardinals football team, is wearing a new uniform— that of the New York Giants. The change of scenery may have prevented his retirement from the game.

Silas, popular with his teammates, was reportedly unhappy with the Cardinal organization during recent years, was contemplating retirement before the trade, according to informed sources. He was not seeking enough action with the Big Red and was traded for a 1970 draft choice.

Following the 1966 season, the Giants traded for a man who had anchored the Big Red defensive line as a tackle. He was named to the NFL’s All-Pro team. He had been with the organization for five years before his move to New York was announced Wednesday.

"He wasn't happy with St. Louis," his wife said Thursday. "He wasn't getting to play as much as he thought he should. He had thought about retirement for a few years but I didn't think he was serious.

"He's pretty excited about getting traded to New York."

Football Practice To See Changes

Football practice will get underway for SIU gridiron at the Little Grassy training camp on August 30.

"We" concentrate on conditioning the first three days," said Coach Dick Towers, "and then we’ll put on the pads."

After the first three days, Towers and his staff will start work on the Salukis top problem—coming up with an offensive line.

Towers has also decided to change some fundamental routines the Salukis have used in previous years.

"In the past, after spending all of our early practice time going over fundamentals, we’d wind up with only a week to get ready for our first game," he said. "We’re not going to do that this year. We’re going to start preparing for our first game on the first day we can put on the pads. We know our personnel a little better this year, and they’re further along, so we can dispense with a lot of the fundamental stuff."

The opens its 1968 season September 21 at home against Louisville.

so am I, St. Louis Vice-President Bill Bidwell told him New York needed a tackle and they wanted Sam.

Dr. Frank Adams, head of the Student Work Office where Silas was employed as a counselor during the summer, reported that the veteran tackle had mentioned possible retirement recently.

"Sam said there was a good possibility he would retire after this year," Adams said. "He said he thought this would be his last season, and was considering not going to the Cardinal’s summer practice.

"Sam wanted to get in enough years to draw retirement pension (five years)," Silas, 28, is a five-year veteran of the NFL, not necessarily old as far as Pro football players go.

Silas, along with veterans Joe Robb, Don Brunmm and Silas, 28, is a five-year veteran and Chuck Walker, combined to give the Cardinals one of the most devastating pass rushes in the game. Despite Silas’ prominence on the Big Red defensive team, Bidwell feels that Silas’ absence for a few games won’t affect the Cardinals.

Bill Dew called the trade a "logical move."

"We feel we’re well protected with young players in the interior line, and Sam was expendable," he said.

Coach Charley Winner reportedly said that Fred Heron, a rookie lineman, had won Silas’ job and that New York was one of the few places that Silas would like to go.

"Sam wouldn’t like sitting on the bench," Winner explained.

Silas has come a long way since his graduation. He was signed as a free agent and quickly made good with the St. Louis club.

Financially, retirement wouldn’t affect Silas a great deal. Working on his doctorate, Silas owns property at 306 N. Marion, where he lives and houses 13 students. He also works as an investment consultant for Old Heritage Life Insurance Company.

Nevertheless, Silas likes professional football and, according to his wife, wants to play the game as long as possible. A good year at the eastern city could keep Silas in the game for a while.
