Morris backs new deconcentration study

By TRACY VOSS

Morris County Clerk John R. Clear has endorsed a study being conducted in substantial part by the county's own employees. "This will provide a comprehensive view of the work of the clerk's office," he said.

The study, conducted by the firm of Daniel J. Kelly & Associates, is being done in cooperation with the county's own task force. The study is part of a larger effort to reorganize the county government and reduce costs.

Clear said he is confident the study will provide a fair assessment of the work of the clerk's office. "I believe it will be a fair and impartial study," he said.

The study is expected to be completed by the end of the year. Clear said the results will be used to make decisions about the future of the clerk's office.

"We're looking at all options," he said. "We're not making any decisions yet, but the study will provide a solid foundation for making those decisions."
SIU professor heads national education unit

By University News Service

Keith McNeil, associate professor and educational psychologist at SIU, was elected chairman of a national special interest group at the annual meeting of the American Educational Research Association. McNeil, a member of the SIU Department of Human and Educational Psychology who attended the meeting, was named to a one-year term as head of the special interest group in multiple linear regression. He came to SIU in 1967 after obtaining his Ph.D. at the University of Texas. He is co-author of the book, "Research Design in the Behavioral Sciences: Multiple Regression Approach," and co-editor of "Readings in Educational Measurement:"

At the convention last week, McNeil organized a symposium on multiple linear regression which was chaired by Donald L. Beggs, associate professor in guidance. Beggs also co-authored a paper with James Nighswander of Springfield, who obtained his Ph.D. here last June, and participated in a presentation in research in research and Black American studies.

Others from SIU who participated at the Convention were: John Deutschmann, assistant professor, presented a paper in conjunction with Art Horne, doctoral student; Glenn H. Brack, assistant professor, participated in a symposium on the topic of teaching aids.

About the picketing at Penney’s

Our new store in Carbondale is being picketed by the Retail Clerks Union. As their signs indicate, we "...do not have a signed Union contract with Retail Clerks Union Local No. 736..."

There is a very good reason for the absence of such a contract—the Retail Clerks Union does not represent our employees and does not claim to represent our employees.

Moreover, our employees have not indicated they wish to be represented by the Retail Clerks.

This is the employees’ right.

Consider a few additional facts in this matter:

1. The pickets are not J.C. Penney employees. They are hired by the Retail Clerks Union. Our employees are NOT on strike.

2. J.C. Penney employees are on the job serving their customers.

Our employees have the right to be represented, or not to be represented by the Retail Clerks Union, as the employees see fit.

We will support our employees in the exercise of that right.

We seek your support in requesting your continuing patronage. We believe this cause to be just, and in the best interests of our employees.

Faculty book to be revised

The SIU Faculty Handbook is undergoing revisions by Chancellor Robert G. Layer to meet the needs of the changing University Administration, said Philip H. Olson, chairman of the Faculty Council's Subcommittee on Faculty Work.

Olson said the Faculty Welfare Subcommittee recently asked the Chancellor's Office to make revisions to the handbook.

The new Faculty Handbook, he said, is outdated and the committee recommends the faculty should have to rely on guidance from the handbook to meet their needs of the faculty to contact Edward Falter at the Chancellor's office.

The faculty handbook, an informative pamphlet designed to orient new faculty, cannot be completed until sometime next fall quarter, Olson said.

Nepalese ambassador to talk at SIU Thursday

Kul Shekhar Sharma, Nepalese ambassador to the United States, will give a public lecture on "Nepal and the International Relations," at 8 a.m. Thursday in Lawson 141. The address is sponsored by Southern Illinois International Relations Club and the Nepalese Student Association.

SIU sponsors an educational project in Nepal, which occupies a strategic position between China and India. There has been an exchange of professors and about 15 Nepalese students currently are studying at SIU. Nepal's "National Day" is to be celebrated Friday.

Ambassador Sharma received a master's degree in economics from Lucknow University in India in 1947. He held a number of legislative positions, including secretary to the Parliament. Between 1961 and 1966 he served as permanent secretary for a number of ministries. He was chief secretary to the Nepalese government from 1966 to 1969. He has traveled widely in Asia, Europe and the United States, and was Nepalese delegate to a number of international conferences including the UNESCO Education Ministers' Conference in Tokyo in 1961.

"COULD YOU DEMONSTRATE?

Some people are interested in a trip like this, and would like to know how to do it. If you had something to show, could you do it for the group?"

WHAT ABOUT YOU?

"You could demonstrate for a fee with a ticket sign or a gift. Your Life would be enough."

U. School closing practical

The proposed closing of University School is simply a matter of practicality. The precedent for such action was set in 1866 when the Illinois Board of Higher Education refused to grant funds to expand the school as an innovative laboratory facility. As a result, the SIU Board of Trustees closed the high school in 1867 and junior high in 1906.

As it is, the elementary school is basically an elite service for a small group of 170 children of faculty and students, giving these children what amounts to a private education at a cost of $1,500 in public money for each child.

The need for the school as a laboratory for research and student teaching purposes has declined as SIU has expanded its educational programs to 75 public schools with the same opportunities for research and innovation.

In fact, funds for these programs, according to the College of Education, are easier to obtain through public school programs.

If the University School is closed, area public schools should have little trouble taking in the 170 pupils.

Furthermore, it seems totally inappropriate that, while SIU is short on classroom space and instructors, University School should be used for children who could be handled through the public school system.

The 20 to 25 professional people assigned to University School could be used elsewhere in the college, teaching prospective teachers and administrators.

The first step is always to clean one’s own house, which is exactly what the College of Education is proposing.

The SIU Board is merely being asked to provide the broom and it should do so.

Slushy streets produce sadism

It must be nice to drive a car during the winter. Despite rain, snow, ice and puddles, you enjoy staying warm and dry inside your car.

If you’re a motorist with a sadistic bent, you enjoy something else too—soaking hapless pedestrians by whipping your mighty street machine through the puddles of slush on the road.

Friday’s wet snowfall turned the streets into streams of mud and water. It also brought out the beast in Carbondale motorists who harbor some kind of sadistic streak toward people who walk the sidewalks.

The sight of a pedestrian getting an unwanted bath from a passing car became common, and decidedly unnerving Friday. It’s no fun getting a faceful of street slush, not to mention the mess on your clothes.

Perhaps Carbonville motorists just don’t think about slowing down when passing a pedestrian. Others seem to take great delight in deliberately veering closer to the defenseless walker, a practice that is hardly understandable and the most frightening.

A Carbonville ordinance prohibits inconsiderate driving which presents a danger to persons or property. Law officials say this is difficult to enforce in the case of “splatters and soakers,” as intent must be proved.

The most reasonable solution would be for a driver to slow down on a slushy street when he sees a pedestrian ahead. A little consideration would be nice for walkers who have enough hazards to contend with already.

Students should form parking committee

To the Daily Egyptian:

I would like to support Michael Althoff’s call for a student committee to change SIU’s parking system.

The Committee for Due Process staff and faculty has initiated several lawsuits to force the university to a systematized and fair parking system. The split-off from the outcome of these actions may or may not change the system for students but I think we should be prepared to form a student committee to take unified action just as the faculty committee has.

I urge anyone whose registration is being held or who is being harassed in other ways by the University for traffic violations, to send his name to Michael Althoff, graduate student in psychology.

SIPC ‘dilettantes’ should change title

To the Daily Egyptian:

I would like to recommend that the SIPC change its title to VFSS (Young Fascist Social Society). These dilettantes love to snicker while in the process of their intellectual pursuits. Where closed minds meet, you will find the VFSS babbling, babbling and bleating themselves in typical medieval fashion.

Reference is naturally to the lecture by Joseph Buttinger Feb. 4. VFSS members like lectures sponsored by the Vet Center best because they are all concerned Asian scholars. And besides, which all these friends go. A Vet Center lecture is almost as good as going to a closed meeting of Asian scholars" where a good deal of "objective" intellectual discourse takes place.

It’s getting so that the only place a person can go on this campus to hear a lecture on Vietnam is the VFSS meetings. Fascist dilettantes rarely babble, blather and bleat at their own meetings.

Vet sees same things but in different light

To the Daily Egyptian:

I’m glad that John J. McCann (Feb. 4 article) has gotten a chance to go to Vietnam and see a small part of the war to which he is so violently opposed. I was there in 1969 as an infantryman, or “grunt,” and squad leader with the First Marine Regiment. I say what John McCann saw but perhaps a little more and in a different light.

Unfortunately, whenever a large group of American GI’s are put in one area, there are usually bad effects. Even in the U.S. military base towns in our own country, the GI culture never has been the greatest. So although the guilt for some of the wrongs which have been done where large numbers of our troops are stationed in Vietnam are not forgivable, perhaps they are understandable since that happens even in this country. But if U.S. troops remain in Vietnam, maybe some of their faults could be corrected and the country would stay out of the reigns of communism. Perhaps then that little girl, who now wonders what peace means, would not have children of her own who would someday wonder what freedom means.

Welfare, pest control top Bevirl top list

Editor's Note: This round-up of news and commentary on actions and issues presented Tuesday by Daily Egyptian is contributed, as reported by Editor-in-Chief Fruit and Chuck Hertelhorst as an exchange with Waukegan in Illinois government, as By Cathy Spoona and Chuck Hertelhorst

Tom Bevirl, the Democratic candidate for Carbondale township supervisor, has announced that his campaign plan will form the establishment of a township rodent and pest control program. He also said there is more room for efficiency in the administration of the township assistance (welfare) program.

Richard E. Richman, Jackson County state's attorney, nominated Bevirl, former administrative assistant to the student body vice president at SIU for nearly three years. The primary elections are scheduled for April 23. As township supervisor Bevirl would also be the ranking member of the County Board of Supervisors.

Bevirl said he was interested in stopping illegal dumping, littering and poaching in both the county and townships he would be concernew with areas such as those located on the north end of town" which cause radio and television interference with that area of Carbondale.

Bevirl said the proposed guidelines are needed for a more efficient administration of the compensation.

The guidelines, he said, would enable township welfare offices to provide welfare cases more efficiently and courteously.

A board member, Bevirl said he would "completely support" a county medical health program and a "one-price" pest control program which no one could pick up service.

Bevirl has been a consultant to the Carbondale rat control program. He will graduate from SIU in March.

In response to the theme of last weekend's mock UN--The Third World--I would like to pose the following question:

Is concern for the Third World ever ignored by the so-called freedom program of journalism and mass communications specifically for "Vietnamese military veterans and auxiliary civilian personnel who have already completed a bachelor's degree with distinction in a recognized university in Vietnam as well as the United States" Training in the establishmen, maintenance, and control of the mass media for enlist military personnel who have completed objectives of the Vietnam and Tho-Ky dictatorships and genocidal policies of the U.S. military against their own people. A program hypothesized by the Journalist: School "as the basis for the development of a democratic system of mass communications. A program for the Vietnamese Studies Center "tailor-made" to fit the demands of AID-promoter of U.S. hegemony throughout the world.

The Pict program engages with those and others serving military regiments in Brazil, Argentina, Nationalista, China, Thailand, Indoneisa and others indicate that it is a tragic insult for SIU to conduct a conference dedicated to the peoples of the Third World.

Selfishness, hard work make system even better

To the Daily Egyptian

Let me begin by giving two of my basic convictions.

First, regarding what many people claim, human beings are almost always selfish. Second, the American Dream, which has made this country great, tells us that anyone can get ahead by hard work. That's the only reality we really go to SIU to get a better job, make more money, be a better house and more expensive clothes, etc. No ethics, please. Thirteen percent.

Since last May I have been very upset by emotional, irrational students who talk about food cooperatives, medical cooperatives, free clothes and other ridiculous things. All men have the right to vote but the best in clothes, food and medicine is not a right. If you want better food, clothes or medicine, go out and get it. I hope you will survive it. That's what the American Dream is all about.

Mostly I'm upset about the Public Interest Corporation. This threatens the best of the system in the world. If you don't have money, be to obey the law. I have no sympathy for the 40 students arrested last May. All of those arrested, especially those without money, acted irresponsibly. It is only just that they accept the consequences. Fortunately, most Americans still act like responsible citizens.

One last word. People get emotional and moral but my view of man is correct. That's why the PiC and the other things have failed. We perceive ourselves as we are and we continue to make a great system even better.

Editorial on Stevenson requires special label

To the Daily Egyptian

I'm glad you included Paula Musto's commentary on Sen. Adlai Stevenson's thoughts on federal estate revenue sharing as an "opinion. Perhaps you should have labeled it "Republican."

Many people realize there are miles of red tape required in any federally funded program but there are often good reasons for this and such is also true of state and local programs as well. In most cases.

The Illinois senator may not fear so much the loss of federal control of federal funds as such, as he may fear the possible increase of potential for the use of funds that is inherent in any government program that is not tightly controlled and closely evaluated.

If a reporter such as Miss Musto wishes to see a federally funded program that is as good for the people and which is looking for ways to do more, she needs look no further than the Legal Assistance Foundation of Southern Illinois (formerly the Legal Services Bureau). Some regional control is maintained for this program but it is under the direction of the federal government. Of course a program such as this must have some autonomy within each local agency.

You might give some attention to this outstanding program as (I know you have in the past) and suggest that Miss Musto use the valuable space in the Daily Egyptian for more varied purposes than quoting political rhetoric thinly disguised as a true acceptance of the principle of "power to the people."

'Salty' thoughts shake grounds foreman's faith

To the Daily Egyptian

Today my faith was thoroughly shaken by Dana Brinkley's thoughts on the "abundant" application of salt to the campus to prevent ice. I have always believed in our educational processes until I went back and discovered that a person has attained the degree of student senior at SIU without acquiring such basic knowledge as the effect of the "abundant" application of salt to any portion of the good earth.

What with the constant and almost hopeless policies of our environment and our biological world, such as summer starkness, cigarette, pipe and cigar smoking, wholesale use of insecticides and chemical fertilizers, wholesale urbanization and traffic, etc., etc., etc. to live now Dana Brinkley wants to saturate the earth with salt. Come on now, Dana Brinkley, you just gotta be kidding. Please tell us that the Daily Egyptian has erroneously omitted the punch line from what is intended as a "longer-in-check" letter.

Incidentally, Dana Brinkley, did you clear the ice off your front step this morning? Before the day was far spent, the good men of the grounds maintenance department had cleared 30 miles of campus walk.

Stevenson finds U.S. Senate ‘tempestuous’

By Lester Bell
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Adlai E. Stevenson III’s headquarters in the Senate utfall has befuddled the young senator and has no one to conceal it.

Leaving shore-advanced, smoking a thin black cigar, looking professionally camped, the former governor told an interviewer the Senate under the best of its usual procedures was a bewildering place for a young man.

"But I may have arrived at one of the most important positions in the history of the Senate," said the Illinois Democrat, "a position not to be concealed."

When he speaks of "national Democrats," he means the senators in the "mainstream" with their discussions of national politics. This rules out most Southerners, in his estimation, because they "tend to focus on politics of the institution."

Stevenson’s national Democrats are the ones fielding presidential aspirants, but he believes an interest in a speculative ticket pairing him with Vice President Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota at the top. "First," he says of such a pairing, "I am flattered, but I have no such ambition. I only want to be a good senator."

Looking ahead to the next presidential contest, Stevenson doesn’t think it will be like 1968. "The Democratic approach shares the same convictions, I don’t think the party will be divided. The same positions (of 1968) won’t be there. The differences will be personalities."

And any differences that do arise can be reconciled in the primary system and within the convention.

Does he believe Mr. Nixon will be a one-term president?

"I’ve learned politicians are unpredictable," he said, "I think he is vulnerable on the issues. Even if the war is over and the economy persists, he will be vulnerable on other issues."

Stevenson said there is a sense of "growing bewilderment in Illinois, in the country’s course. Illinois in any calculations, is a key state."

The late Paul Powell’s $200,000 cache did not impress him. Stevenson said, adding that the affair has taken on many aspects of a "Kinsale Cup" comedy.

He said Powell’s inordinate devotion to racecards should not be taken as indicated "conflicted" economic interests.

Stevenson somewhat ruefully conceded that his vacation and avocation have been curtailed.

"I like the land. I like to grow vegetables, I clip wood, plant trees and go biking with the kids. The farm is an Illinois and we’re here Politics is a jealous mistress.

Recognize him today as one of their up-and-coming political politicians."

Stevenson’s national Democrats are the ones fielding presidential aspirants, but he believes an interest in a speculative ticket pairing him with Vice President Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota at the top. "First," he said of such a pairing, "I am flattered, but I have no such ambition. I only want to be a good senator."

Looking ahead to the next presidential contest, Stevenson doesn’t think it will be like 1968. "The Democratic approach shares the same convictions, I don’t think the party will be divided. The same positions (of 1968) won’t be there. The differences will be personalities."

And any differences that do arise can be reconciled in the primary system and within the convention.

Does he believe Mr. Nixon will be a one-term president?

"I’ve learned politicians are unpredictable," he said, "I think he is vulnerable on the issues. Even if the war is over and the economy persists, he will be vulnerable on other issues."

Stevenson said there is a sense of "growing bewilderment in Illinois, in the country’s course. Illinois in any calculations, is a key state."

The late Paul Powell’s $200,000 cache did not impress him. Stevenson said, adding that the affair has taken on many aspects of a "Kinsale Cup" comedy.

He said Powell’s inordinate devotion to racecards should not be taken as indicated "conflicted" economic interests.

Stevenson somewhat ruefully conceded that his vacation and avocation have been curtailed.

"I like the land. I like to grow vegetables, I clip wood, plant trees and go biking with the kids. The farm is an Illinois and we’re here Politics is a jealous mistress.
Fera, Fischer examine office

Nick Fera, an SIU student, said that if he is elected mayor of Carbondale, he will be a fiscal manager again at SIU for nine months to a year to determine how much time and money needs to be spent in the mayor's office.

Fera said a full-time mayor may need to spend as much as 60 to 70 hours a week working toward solutions to Carbondale's problems. The mayor would also have to spend the amount of time necessary to work out these problems both in the office and on the streets of Carbondale's problems. He said that if he could not talk to the members of the people, he would be doing his job.

The role of the mayor was outlined by Fera as providing guidance and leadership to all city programs. He said that if he were elected mayor, he would "nail it down" and that if there was anything that would stimulate it. He said he would review the city budget and make sure there were no rac-ous expenditures, such as all the money for Christmas decorations.

"I don't see any conflict whatever between the mayor and the city manager as long as both keep their work on a professional level," Fera said. He added that he thinks the management of the city "has improved 100 percent with (City Manager) Beanland."

Fera cited being liquor community manager as his main role of the mayor. He said that as liquor community manager, he would examine all existing liquor licensees and have them pay the $19 license fee or lose their license. He also believes that Carbondale's growth to determine what kind of people will be able to buy fewer licenses should be issued.

Another area Fera said that he would work is in the issuance of boasting standards in Carbondale. He said that Code Enforcement housing standards should be raised and re-forced, especially rental housing standards.

"Rental housing is a big business in Carbondale," Fera said. "If you're in the business, you must look up and maintain certain standards for your structure. Too many houses are rented that don't meet minimum standards, and often at outrageous prices.

Fera said that change is needed, and that people should look to youth and help improve the situation. He said that if he were mayor, he would do his job.

Hans J. Fischer cites two issues which he said he would give top priority if elected mayor—lack of cooperation among factions in Carbondale. Fischer was housing commissioner under former SIU Student Body President Dwight Campbell and executive assistant to current Student Body President Tom Scher-schat. He also served as a subcommittee of the Carbondale Planning Commission, executive council of the Young Democrats and on committees for the campaigns of Alden Staeven III and Max Grew. Fischer resigned two posts when he filled to run for mayor of Carbondale.

Andreas Fischer cites two issues which he said he would give top priority if elected mayor—lack of cooperation among factions in Carbondale.

"If instruction is now being run as a fire department," Fischer said, "it will pay one fireman at a time.

Fischer said that although a program of goals for Carbondale was taken about 1970, and worked on for several years, as progress has been made, he should be given more on the job. Fischer said that goals and priorities must be determined after getting an idea of what the community wants in a Fischer sized mayoral role.

Fischer said that he would try to set up "bridges of communication within the community." He said that the goals of various groups in Carbondale must be met before anyone must do this. Fischer said that he would spend an average of a day and a half per week in the mayor's office.

Before making any appointments, Fischer said that he would consult the City Council to assist in the process. He said that he does not being done under the current administration.

"The mayor is foolish not to use the help of the City Council," Fischer said. "The Council is a five-man team. Whatever we have new in the ideological program. We need different viewpoints on city boards and commissions.

The responsibility of the mayor is to provide "positive leadership," Fischer said. He said that the positive points of Carbondale must be built up to make the community thrive.

Fischer said that education problems, Carbondale is one of the most fortunate communities south of Springfield.

Fischer was elected to a four-year term on the Carbondale City Council in 1989 and is vice-president of the Carbondale merchants. He operates a private architectural practice, Fischer Associates.

Firm offers 'hair-raising' trip

By Rodney Pender

Accountancy Program director

LONDON (AP) — Bald Britons are shaving their faces in the name of a $600,000 study into baldness and hair on their heads.

The "mindless rush" costs them $500,000, "so we attract the true average of baldness," said Nelson Lakin, the balding bald behind the scheme.

Lakin is a pupil of the Manhattan Co. of London, which makes hydrogen peroxide. The firm is introducing a "while-you-wait" American system of covering baldness by plastic surgery.

Lakin originally intended to run package tours for hair-saloon visitors from the London Times Victor Masse in 1971, he said, but his plan applicants shied away from traveling with other bald people.

"It was plain embarrassing," said Lakin. "The face they knew we were bald, I knew it, I knew it, but they wouldn't take these hairpieces for me. And I emphatically didn't want to empanel in a group.

Foundation provides legal advice

By Harry Schumacher

Student Writer

When SIU's Legal Council stopped giving students legal advice at Dock's, Legal Aid Services took over because the only place where students can receive free legal aid, Gary Kohl, director, said.

"It is obvious that we need advice and assistance, one must not be able to afford a private lawyer," Kohl said. "We also handle a lot of habitual criminal cases, so we are beyond our jurisdiction.

There is very little red tape involved in proving inability to handle what we can handle. We usually take the client's word at face value. If we're really suspicious, we might ask for a Wills form.

Emphasizing that the client has trust in me if he is caught paying his legal situation usually prevents this from happening, Kohl said.

Last month Kohl and his assistant, Douglas Invol, a University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, graduate student, the second time.

"Fifty per cent were students and 90 per cent of these just wanted to talk to Kohl about one of the cases were landlord-tenant problems, with marital and consumer problems second.

Kohl in uncertain about the future of free legal aid. "It appears Nixon is playing games with free legal aid," he said. "The federal government has been holding up funds for Legal Services Division (the opportunity) and it has fired our director and deputy director, so I'm not sure many cases within the Legal Services Program."

He said the reason the government's attitude towards free legal aid is because the Legal Services Division was so successful in winning its cases, most of which were class actions against tenant cases against the federal government.

"The longer I'm here, the more paranoid I'm becoming," Kohl said. "One state governments started buying legal aid funds, but the federal government always over-cede these vetoes, which it has been doing lately."

"We will be doing something. Within the next few month, Congress will decide whether or not to keep the Legal Service Program. Right now our future is uncertain to say the least.

Kohl looks at free legal aid in a social as well as legal context. "If you're what really can be the establishment within the system," Kohl said. "We are an alternative to violence."

"People won't miss us until we are gone," he said, "and then it will be too late."

SGAC to present office amendment

The Student Government Academic Council (SGAC) will present a constitutional amendment to the Campus Senate Thursday night, recommending that the office of vice president be made elective and that no candidate activities be changed from an elected office to an appointed on.

Butt Specter, the current vice president and candidate activities, said under the new amendment, the vice president would be selected by a committee that would study the qualifications of candidates. A statement drafted by SGAC said the popular election of the office has remained the tradition of the office as a political job instead of a highly specialized agency position, and has resulted in the compaigning of unqualified people for this office. SGAC would create a panel of students which were designed to elect student senate executives.

Specter said the selection committee would consist of nine members, seven of whom would vote on the qualifications. Members would include the vice-president of student activities, two SGAC committee chairmen elected from a committee of the whole, two student senators elected from the Senate as a committee of the whole, the student body president, and the SGAC staff adviser.

The student body president and the staff advisor would not vote in selection procedures. The candidate would have to be approved by five of the seven voting members. Specter said confirmation of the position would be made before the end of April, the position and study by the committee selection. He said criteria for the office would be determined by the the committee.

SMC to sponsor rally; demands to be given

The Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) will present a list of demands to SSI students and administration at a rally at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the University Center, Ballroom B.

The rally will be directed at the recent escalation of the Indo-China war and the influence of the Vietnamese refugee.

The SMC demands are as follows:

1. -That the University provide office space and equipment for an office on the campus.

2. -That the Center for Vietnamese Studies at AFROTC be removed from SSI.

3. -That the Daily Egyptian and WEU allot space and time for an open group on campus.

4. -That the University have no nominations on campus, or encourage recruiters for war-related research.

5. -That war counseling services be provided by the University.

6. -That the University not communicate any information about student draft status.

7. -That the University make available transportation to antiwar movements.

Better forests topic of talks

Leisner wants mayor made board member

By Rich Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Hall said that the faculty should stick to teaching and that the Board of Trustees is the lawful agent of University governance. He said, "Faculty must not be permitted to usurp the rights and responsibilities of the members of the Board."

Hall contended that the Board of Trustees should determine policy, that the University Presidents and Vice Presidents should implement the policy and procedures and coordinate resources for the system. Hall stated that the chancellors should implement operations on their respective decentralized campuses.

The final section of the report examines the role of the University Presidents, a position which was suggested by the management consultant firm of Cresap, McCormick and Paget last summer. Hall also recommended that the retention of University House as an official University residence for the System President and guest faculty. Hall stated that to build another structure to be used as a residential residence would probably cost $2 million due to inflation.

SIU aids Brazil university in agriculture

By Gary Shuster, Student Writer

Along with the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), SIU is currently helping in a program of educational assistance and research with the University of Santa Maria, Rio Grande Do Sul, Brazil. The program began last March and is designed to increase the educational competency of the University of Santa Maria's students dealing with the agricultural needs of the area it serves.

This is being done through in-service teacher training workshops, field trips for participants and improvement of faculty qualifications, as well as extension training programs for agricultural education.

Other features are degree-related graduate research programs and the provision of United States post-baccalaureate personnel for such work.

Pilot projects, designed to improve agronomy and veterinary medicine, will be put to work. Increased dissemination of agricultural information will also add to the agricultural education program.

Herbert L. Portz, professor of plant industries and campus coordinator for the program, said the plan was started in 1969 by the University of Santa Maria because the school's administrators felt the U.S. government's educational resources should be used to boost the agricultural production of the area.

The FAO was contacted for assistance, Portz said, with the request that the resulting program be similar to the land-grant institutions of the United States, where the U.S. government granted land to states for the purpose of providing agricultural education through teaching research and extension services to serve that state's school.

Offers change of pace

Summer job guide offered

By Pat Saha

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Penney Wim, a job counselor at Washington Square, can show you more than 200 alternatives for summer jobs.

They are the summer job folders which are available in more than 50 filed offered jobs throughout the United States and in five foreign countries.

The summer job program has undergone extensive reorganization and expansion since it was started in 1968 by Miss Wim and is available to all SIU students, according to Portz.

The average salary for a summer job is more than 20 percent received from the American government.

If students are looking for summer employment should make an appointment with a counselor to review the various opportunities that are available.

The counselors are trained to handle your specific questions and get into the details of the program.

The counselors can provide you with the addresses of people who can help you with your particular needs.

The counselors can also help you with the paperwork that is necessary to secure a summer job.

Britishers urge racial curbs

LONDON (AP)—Each Powell, right-wing leader of Britain's strongest language has employed on the race question once since his "rivers of blood" speech nearly two years ago.

"The explosion which will blow us all apart will be there and the fuse is burning, but the fuse is slower than it had been supposed," Powell warned in a speech prepared for a young Christians in Action group in Croydon, suburbs of London.

Powell charged that Britain's multi-white population has grown, far faster than official figures show. By the end of the year, the population of London alone has doubled and other cities will be up to 40 percent multi-racial and suburbs will be disrupted by racial tensions, unless action is taken.

The 1966 census showed four U.S. counties with a majority of non-white population.
Sewing class stretches dollars

In a sewing class that meets two nights a week at SIU, 16 women and 16 teenage girls from Carbondale's northwest community are learning to sew and thereby stretch their clothing dollars.

The class was organized by Mrs. Maxine Passmore, parent-child coordinator at Attack Memorial Center, Carbondale Model Cities Program. Mrs. Passmore, a former SIU student, is teaching the class, assisted by Mrs. Nancy Rasohl and Sheila Walker, graduate assistant in SIU's clothing and textiles department. Mrs. Thelma Berry, associate professor of clothing and textiles, is serving as consultant.

"We had the women and girls recruited for the class," Mrs. Passmore said, "but the machines we had ordered had not arrived, so we called on the University for assistance. With the help of Anita McGreer, staff assistant at the office of University Services in Carbondale, we obtained permission to start the class at the School of Home Economics.

"The sewing machines still have not arrived, so we are still meeting in the clothing and textiles department laboratory.

"The sewer class sessions, which started Jan. 12 and will run for eight weeks, are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"The younger members of the class range from 13 to 14 years of age, Mrs. Passmore said.

Medical school workshop planned

By University News Services

SIU's School of Medicine has set a three-day workshop for persons who will help the medical school plan for community level health care programs.

The Thursday-to-Saturday session with the invited participants and SIU faculty members is a technique of planning and organization developed in the 1950's by Dr. Kenneth Boulding of the University of Michigan. It is designed to focus the workshop on getting rational answers to common problems.

For their introduction to the theory of logic behind Key Factor Analysis, workshoppers will spend four straight hours each day behind the closed doors of SIU's University Center River Rooms.

Irvon Jarrett, chairman of the Business Division at SIU's Edwardsville Campus, will be overall director.

Rainey said workshoppers will be split into small planning groups of three to five members so it's hoped that they will stay together as planning teams after the workshops session itself.

Similar organizing efforts have been applied together planning teams in the Springfield area, site of the SIU Medical School clinical center.

Rainey said the object of the preparatory sessions is to help participants "learn how to plan.

As part of its Medical School program, SIU has proposed development of a community health care network linked to major medical centers in Southern and Central Illinois.

The Springfield clinical campus also would be a hub for continuing education services for practicing physicians.

He makes dream pipes

By Margaret McEvoy
Student Writer

The New Generation loses points in originality in the use of the slogan “do your own thing.” Marian Mitchell has been doing and perfecting his thing for years—and he’s over 80.

Mitchell is a self-made craftsman whose craft is hand-made pipes.

In the cellar of his home, Mitchell has a make-shift workshop for his pipe production. Against shelves of home-built vegetables and odds and ends of basement clutter, Mitchell puts together his pipes to suit the individual prospective buyers.

“I just don’t make a pipe unless it’s for somebody,” he said. “What I really enjoy is for someone to come by and we’ll tell lies and talk politics while I work. That way if he doesn’t like something we can change it right there.”

By day, Mitchell is assistant to the dean of the General Studies Division at SU. But by night, Mitchell is far removed from the business atmosphere of the office. He dresses in lumberman’s shirt, wash pants, mocassins. And, of course, he smokes a pipe.

In four years, Mitchell has made a couple hundred of what he calls “setting and thinking” pipes.

Mitchell makes pipes for self-satisfaction. He says the beauty of doing such a thing for fun is that “you’re not all caught up with time and money.”

The overhead of such a self-producing trade probably could be quite costly for an unadventurous craftsman. Mitchell, however, says his greatest expense is the hard rubber, rough-moulded pipe bits which he buys from a New Jersey company. The bits cost 11 cents each.

The wood for the bowls is cherry, a strong preference of Mitchell’s because it has what he calls “character.”

“Cherry gives the best smoke and it is a pleasure to work with,” he said. “It is soft to cut, hard enough to hold its shape and the wood doesn’t burn too easily.”

With the aid of a few basic tools such as pocket knife, drill and vise, Mitchell carves out the center of the bowl and whittles a stem out of the cherry wood.

He uses the “trial and error” methods in a search for the right material for the pipe bowl. After a few failures, he finally chose copper, which he cuts from plumber’s pipe. Personalized initials stamped into a well-polished copper bowl have become a standing order for Mitchell pipes.

“If you ever see anyone walking around with a wide copper band on his pipe,” he claims, “you’ll know that’s mine.”

The entire time Mitchell is working, he is puffing on his pipe and conversing simultaneously. He pauses long enough to decide on an adequate stem for the pipe and then once more begins his work.

Mitchell is able to give a fairly precise date and account of the beginning of his pipe-making career.

“I started back in November 1963,” he said. “The reason I recall so clearly is because it was the weekend President Kennedy was killed.

“My father-in-law and I went down to his farm, and cleared away some brush. I later discovered I had lost a good pipe and I went back and found it buried. I also found we had cut down a fresh cherry tree.

“I decided that if the French could make good pipes out of French cherry then Americans could make better pipes out of American cherry.”

Mitchell calls his process “trial and error” experimenting. He has tested different ways of seasoning the wood and has tinkered with various materials until he found what he wanted. He outlines part of his improvement plan as making pipes, giving them away, then watching them for faults. He sums the success of his methods in saying, “I’m turning out a much better pipe than I was two years ago.”

In the final touches of his work, Mitchell uses natural effects. The bowl is trimmed down with a knife to a rough shape and can be left as such or smoothed out to a finer surface.

The wood is waxed sparingly and then buffed “to take all the fiber off and get down to what the natural wood looks like,” Mitchell explained.

The finished product is unique because Mitchell will never make another like it. He guarantees the new pipe owner the quality of his work by promising to replace any of the parts, except the plastic bit, if anything should go wrong.

“These pipes are designed to wear and last,” he says. “There’s no reason this pipe won’t last a lifetime.”

Photos by Nelson G. Brooks

The cherry pipe (upper right) Marian Mitchell drills into a piece of cherry wood to fashion the bowl of a pipe. With a knife (upper left) he carves from the stem with copper band already in place before fitting it into the bowl. Mitchell (right) displays an assembled bowl and stem, unfinished band and store-bought hard rubber bit. The unfinished bowl of the pipe is inevitable. Mitchell (left) smokes one of his products which has a more finished look and which has been polished and darkened by use and age.

Oklahoma Sooners stop Salukis, 29-3

By Ernest J. Schnitt

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU wrestling team has been up to its old tricks all season and they did it again Saturday.

Schnitt wrestled for the Oklahoma Sooners in the Oklahoma State meet. He was defeated by the Sooners 29-3. Schnitt was defeated by Oklahoma's Larry Laugh, 7-3, in the second match of the dual meet.

"I just don't like to lose," said Schnitt. "I scored on his ankle which was stopped by Laugh. "I believe if you work hard in practice it will pay off. When I do well in practice, I also do well in the meets.

Apparently Schnitt has been doing very well in the practice sessions because Schnitt's victory ran his season record to 8-4, second only to Oklahoma's Larry Laugh who has a record of 8-2.

Cawney's loss came to Oklahoma's Larry Laugh, 7-3, and was the Sooners' 14th victory against one setback.

Cawney's victory, which came on a second period escape and two points riding time, may have been a key to the Sooners' winning a match they thought was going to be a tough one.

Lambert: Salukis jelled in January

By Fred Wernberg

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. - The performance of SIU's basketball team has been a mystery to many since the loss to Texas last December.

Hence, when the Salukis upset Indiana State here Saturday, R-42, to say nothing in the conference and deal the Sycamores a serious blow to their hopes of making certain questions were brought to mind.

"For instance, have the Salukis jelled as a team?" asked SIU coach Paul Lambert, in top form after the game, standing in the depths of the ISU Arena, provided an answer.

"I'd say that excluding the Texas game and the last half of the Cragmire game, we jelled when we beat Indiana State last January at our place," he said.

Salukis are now 6-8 in the ISU Arena which gave the Salukis an initial foothold on the conference lead. It was a win which put the first black mark on the Indiana State conference loss column and set the stage for the blood letting which was to happen Saturday.

"Salukis probably played the best they've ever played," said Lambert of his 5-5 team. "All our big men did.

Lambert made a shaved move which paid off when he didn't start Powels in the second half. All the Salukis' big men were in varying degrees of foul trouble and the SIU coach held Powels back until Mauricio Brooks picked up four fouls in five minutes.

Powels came in with three bases and played until he fouled out with about three minutes to go in the game. Lambert substituted Brooks twice incurring two of his three big men in the Knoke for the whole game.

"Yes, acknowledged the SIU coach, "we did plan it that way. We knew that if we had started all three of our big men for the second half in foul trouble, they probably would have all fouled out, so we didn't start Stan."

Lambert said that he thought SIU got all the momentum it needed when Greg Stirrach hit ten straight points in the waning minutes of the first half to leave the Salukas only one point behind at intermission.

"We could have been blown out of there right then," said the SIU coach of the 4-2 lead Indiana State raced to before Stirrach found his mark. "Actually, we had about five key plays and a different man made each one—that's why we won," he added.
Southern's victory over the Huskies in the first game of the series gave them a 1-0 lead going into Sunday's final match. The Huskies, however, bounced back to even the series with a 2-1 victory on Sunday. Stauffer felt that the Huskies played well in both games but were unable to capitalize on their chances. He attributed the loss to the Huskies' ability to convert their opportunities into goals.

Behind Starrick scoring, Poules rebounding

Salukis outclass Illinois St., 97-81

By Mike Klein

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

On the board in SIU's basketball locker room, there is a small newspaper clipping which quotes Mill Weibe, Saluki athletic director as saying, "We'll meet you in basketball." Weibecker made that remark after Southern handed the Redbirds a football defeat last fall.

The meeting came Monday night in the SIU Arena and Weibeck's comment was looking as such as a chicken with no feathers. The Salukis thoroughly outclassed Illinois State in the second half, plastering a 97-81 defeat on coach Will Robinson's 11-4 team.

The victory gave Southern a 4-0 Midwestern Conference and pushed SIU over the 500 mark at 9-4. Illinois State dropped to 3-4 in league play and lost its consecutive conference games.

It was also SIU's third straight win, a feat the Salukis once team has accomplished since the 1980-81 season. Led by Greg Starrick's 32 points and Stan Pate's 14 rebounds, SIU pulled from leads of 50-49 at halftime and 80-74 with about seven minutes remaining for the 16-point victory. Southern's largest lead was 19 points, 78-59, with 46 seconds remaining in the game.

Two other Salukis were in double figures, L. C. Balfield with 22 points and John Garrett with 17.

Southern outlasted the Redbirds for good when Paul Lambert's team scored seven straight points in just over a minute to build a 56-54 lead.

Garrett started the rally with a jumper from the top of the key, building the lead to 80-74.

Then Bradfield sank a short rebound shot from the right side and Starrick hit one of his 10 consecutive free throws for a 14-point lead. Don Portugal missed on the first of a one-and-one free throw basis. Bradfield built the lead to 11 points on a short turn around jumper from the left side.

At that point, it was a cakewalk as the Redbirds were never able to mount a serious challenge.

Southern started out with a flurry of points and after less than six minutes had been played, held a nine-point lead, 19-10.

Illini trample Salukis in state track meet

By Ken Stewart

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — The final event in the Illinois College Relays was nearing an end.

Larry Cascio had vaulted 164 and grabbed first place for the SIU track team in pole vaulting as spectators began to leave the campus. The defending Illinois champion Cascio was entered third.

But Northern Illinois' Greg Clemen- denking followed with a 156-4 jump for four points for the top spot, and the crowd fell into the Huskies' column. Cascio wound up third.

That's how it went for SIU during most of the final day at the track meet.

Southern, defending the team title it won last year, finished second with 133 points. Illinois State finished third with 104 points.

It was one bell of a meet — said SIU coach Lew Harting, but we were not sharp.

I kept the kids up too high for the meet by practicing them and automatic artificial voice. We got to Champaign, it was an off night.

Harting said the fault of the poor showing in the meet was more than the team.

One mistake was working the team so hard in the cold weather recently, he said.

"That adrenaline has to be moving and that's the main factor," Harting said, "because, had the adrenaline gone and they were charged up like we were last year, Illinois was a lot tougher and stronger."

The Huskies grabbed seven first places while SIU took four. The Champaign school also took the top three places in a few events.

Harting said there were at least 10 instances where things went wrong for Southern including the tripping of Ed Sutton in the 400-yard dash that caused his disqualification.

"Ivy Crockett was SIU's top performer, taking the 60-yard dash in 6.3 seconds and the 200-yard dash in 20.3 seconds. But Crockett's performance wasn't outstanding in the 400-yard dash. The sprinter holds meet records in both events."

Southern won the mile relay with Crockett, Bob Moro, Terry Erickson and Sutton. The time of 3:17.2 was seventh fastest of one second from a meet record.

Erickson, who finished second in the 220 yards, finished third in the 440. Rod Jackson edged out the Salukis for first.

Southern was also favored to take the intermediate hurdles, but Fry was given second place by the judges although he and Jackson both finished in 7.2.

As expected in the distance meets, Illinois State also took first and second in the 1,000-yard run and Saluki Glenn Finley finished sixth in 2:15.

Dunker of Illinois won the 800-yard run while Morrow finished second in 1:12.2 and Lino Brusacri took sixth in 1:14.3, both 15th in 1:14.3.

In the two-mile run, Hall finished second in 9:11.4 as Illinois took first place.

Pil Blackston finished sixth in the shot put with 51 1/2 as SIU's Rich Riddle took first.

Northern Illinois took third place as a team with 68 points and another Midwestern Conference team — Illinois State — was fifth with 58.

ISU and NIU had strong teams. Harting said, but they didn't expect any trouble with them in the conference meet in Normal. Indiana State and Ball State will also compete.

Southern will try to put itself back together for the Central Collegiates on the Eastern Michigan University campus Friday and Saturday. The Salukis won the meet last year.
