Black Oak Gives Up Long Life

By Dean Rebefson

A tree grows — then falls in Thompson Woods.

The tree, a large black oak, gave up its long life (after some 140 years) and fell across a pedestrian path in the middle of the woods about noon Thursday.

Although no one was injured by the falling tree, the question comes up: Could this happen more often when students are passing through the woods?

It could, according to two persons with a wide knowledge of the woods, but the chances are—thankfully—quite slim.

Neil W. Hosley, professor in the Department of Forestry, said that the larger trees in Thompson Woods—the tall black oaks in particular—are "deteriorating constantly."

"The black oak's extreme age is 150-200 years old," Hosley said, "and the ones in Thompson Woods are now around 140 years old."

Hosley said, however, that it is impossible to reveal, in most cases, the exact state of deterioration in the larger trees or to foresee when one will topple.

Joe Widdows, physical plant supervisor and superintendant in charge of buildings and grounds, said the fallen oak's root system was rotten. He added, however, that the physical plant employs the service of tree experts "every five years or so" to rough prune the woods, removing dead branches and checking the condition of the older trees.

The fact such pruning, Widdows said, was in 1967. He added that physical plant personnel remove trees which are considered unsafe throughout the year.

"Not one black oak out of 20 in Thompson Woods is totally sound," Widdows said. "We have removed many of them, but it is impossible to say when a particular tree will fall.

The fallen oak was the home of a large hive of bees, which Widdows said would be destroyed to prevent stings from spreading passerby. Those portions of the tree lying across the pedestrian path have been removed, but the main trunk of the tree will be allowed to remain, Widdows said, to preserve the natural state of the woods.

Thus it appears that Thompson Woods is as safe as the rest of the campus for a student strolling through the woods, providing they make that 7:30 a.m. class in the Arena might, however, keep one eye scanning the branches overhead.

Mascot Evading Captors

By Kevin Cole

The dashing redhead who bolted from her escort during the Saluki Tumbles in early May is still a mystery.

Sera, one of six sleek SIU Saluki mascots, has been sighted, a half dozen times since the flight, but has eluded would-be captors, according to Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, Members of the OMEGA Greece, coordinate of the Information and Publicity Department, said would-be captors, according to Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, Members of the OMEGA Greece, coordinate of the Information and Publicity Department, of late have tracked the dog, who descend from the Salukis, the native canine of Persia, to the Saluki dogs at public events.

Sera ran from the auto at the third Saluki meeting, May 11. "We have just about given up on her," Goodman said. "APQ boys searched the area for her at their last meet, asking if anyone had seen the dog, but came up with nothing."

Goodman said "we are not going to hold the APQ boys responsible for the runaway.

The boys are accustomed to handling the four older, more docile Salukis, and when they got this young spirited thing — as Sera was — well, she just got away from them.

The reddish 18-month-old Saluki, who last sighted about a month ago near Old Route 13 west of Carbondale near Midland Inn, Goodman said, to sight the elusives canine is not pleasing, but to capture her is something else. "By the time someone reports seeing the dog and the APQ boys get out to check it, the dog is gone," Goodman said. Alpha Phi Omega fraternity has offered a $50 reward for information leading to the recovery of Sera, according to Goodman.

Despite the gloomy prospects for Sera's recovery, one Carbondale veterinarian said the dog could survive "very well" in the wilds of southern Illinois.

The vet, who asked that his name be not used, said that speed in Sera's greatest asset. "The long legs and slim body would enable the dog to catch or outrun anything around. With her youth and speed and hunter instinct, she could probably survive indefinitely," he said.

Sera was one of two female Salukis presented to President Deily W. Morris in February. Saluki mascots now number five, but only Sera's gift-sitter is young enough for breeding, according to Goodman.

Library Stocked With Law Works

By Nick Harder

According to a recent research study of Morris Library, its section of legal literature contains over 55,000 volumes, 35,000 more than are required by the American Bar Association's guidelines for the accreditation of a college of law.

Located mostly on the fifth floor of Morris Library are more than two dozen rows of 12-foot high bookcases, stuffed to the limits with some of the rarest Illinois legal literature. It is used daily by practicing attorneys in the area, SIU pre-law students, Carbondale city officials and local businessmen.

Included in this collection are the complete national reporter system, the American Digest System, and subscriptions to the annotated statutes of 18 of the largest states and those states surrounding Illinois.

In addition, the SIU law library has the complete statutes of the various states, in many instances going back in time to each state's early years of statehood.

Since 1932, the library has been a selective depository for federal documents and has been subscribing to both depository and non-depository documents on Microprint since their inception in 1956 and 1953 respectively. Most of the American law journals issued by law schools, and bar associations and indexed in "Index to Legal Periodicals" are also available.

Reports of boards and commissions from documents of other states are on file in their entirety.

In a report on the law library's status conducted by Ralph E. McCoy, director of University Libraries, he said that the library support of a law school at SIU would entail some minor expansion in American law and a build-up of the English law section. This, he projected, will likely be accomplished in the next two years.

He concluded that the law collection at SIU, Carbondale, has most of the basic ingredients to support a law school,

SIU President Delyn W. Morris and Dr. John C. Weaver, president of the University of Missouri, have been elected members of the board of directors of the St. Louis Research Council. Their election increases the board's membership to 17 and broadens its representation to include all four of the St. Louis area universities. Morris, president of SIU since 1948, is a native of Illinois. He holds a B.A. degree from Park College (1928), an M.A. degree from University of Maine (1924) and a Ph.D. degree from State University of Iowa (1930). He has been active in college-level education since 1930. Weaver was appointed president of the University of Missouri in 1966. Originally from Illinois, he holds A.B. (1936), M.A. (1937) and Ph.D. (1942) degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Experimental Geography Program Offers One-Term Work Completion

With the aid of "block scheduling," 15 selected SIU students will be allowed to take four geography courses for 16 hours of credit during the 1969 winter term. According to Frank H. Thomas, chairman of the SIU Department of Geography, this will help social studies students and those majoring in and minorin in geography to complete most of their requirements for a concentration in geography.

During the experimental term, students enrolled in the program will not be able to take other courses because they will be involved in geography classes six hours between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Thursdays will be devoted to all-day field sessions and Tuesdays will be free days for study and other activities.

Courses scheduled in the term are: Geography 302 (physical geography), 304 (economic geography), 306 (cultural geography), and 310 (techniques stressing mapping).

Students desiring admission to the program must have previously passed GSA 331 and Geography 300 courses and must have a C average for all college work.

One classroom has been assigned exclusively to the program and the courses will be conducted as a continuing discussion with a series of individual and group activities which will encourage closer student-faculty contacts. Three faculty members will be assigned to the program under the direction of Theodore B. Schmidmeier, associate professor.

Thomas says all interested students should apply to Schmidmeier at an early date. Those selected will be notified before August 15 so they can arrange fall term courses of study to prepare for the experimental quarter. Working students will be required to arrange hours that will not interfere with class and field day sessions.

More Lawyers Needed

The Master Plan Committee for Legal Education in Illinois should recommend in its report to the State legislature that SIU and other pre-law schools be permitted to expand their programs to include a law college.

The committee is responsible for Phase III of the Master Plan for Illinois under the auspices of the Illinois Board of Higher Education. It will deal with the status of professional training in law, social work, and public administration. However, the committee must research and consider the need of the citizens of the state for professional services before they can recommend legislative action.

The need for professional men has always been great but

Court Acts Wisely

The Supreme Court has said that police can search suspects on the street for weapons without doing violence to the constitutional right of the individual. It sees this as an eminently logical decision in the interests of public protection.

But if not murder, the police can claim anyone whose looks offend them up against a wall and search for contraband, nor does it mean that entire neighborhoods of people can be "frisked" on a hunch.

But if an individual is behaving in a suspicious manner, and if the police have reason to conclude that criminal activity may be afoot, then a carefully limited search of suspect's outer clothing to find weapons is permissible. It also seems entirely sensible. The work of a policeman is often dangerous and the goal of that work is to prevent crime as well as to bring people to book after the commission of a crime.

Again the court has confounded critics who are convinced that it is consistently soft on crime and the police. It is simply not true that all the jails and penitentiaries and thus handcuff law enforcement. In recent months the court has said that demonstrators cannot clog the highways and community areas, and it has upheld a law prohibiting the burning of draft cards.

Kansas City Star

especially so now. The draft is taking a great many from studies in the professions. Rising costs of a professional education, along with increasing enrollments in undergraduate pre-law curriculums in Illinois, forces this committee to take a close look at the need for more accredited law schools. This also means a possible recommendation for a higher tax rate.

SIU's chances for an expanded law curriculum are complicated by the same intention of the University of Illinois. The problems of the two schools are different, however. The law college of the University of Illinois is fully accredited by the American Bar Association. Southern's program neither leads to a degree in law nor is it accredited. If the legislature decides to expand the law school of the University of Illinois, it will no doubt be a boon to the people of Illinois by providing them with more lawyers every graduation time.

However, the committee should carefully note that SIU has, in the presence of its large law library, a huge untapped source of information to those who would study law. If the University of Illinois receives the nod to expand its college of law, it will no doubt have to increase its facilities tremendously to compensate for the increase in students. If SIU is permitted to expand its pre-law curriculum, the large library already available will make expenditures in that area considerably lower, and many, non-existent. This means lower taxes for library holdings or none at all. This is a factor which the overtaxed voter-taxpayers of Illinois will appreciate.

In its final analysis, the simple need among the population of southern Illinois for lawyers is the most crucial factor. There are 13,384 practicing lawyers in Cook County with only 4,097 attorneys downtown.

Even the committee recommends nothing, but merely presents these facts to the legislature. It must take some action to provide Illinois citizens with enough qualified attorneys to satisfy their legal aid needs.

The committee and the state legislature should soon consider the need of downstate areas for more legal advisors and support an expansion of SIU's law curriculum.

Helping the Inebriate

At first glance the Supreme Court's decision allowing police to continue jailing chronic alcoholics for public drunkenness may seem harsh.

Yet the court's five-to-four decision, close as it was, turned on the issue of what constituted humaneness. The majority agreed that while repeated conviction of alcoholics does not constitute satisfactory treatment of alcoholism, nonetheless they saw insufficient evidence that alternative "treatment centers" would help the inebriate any more.

In the first place, such centers do not at present exist in sufficient numbers; in the second, they would not provide "anything more than slightly higher class jails for our indigent habitual inebriates." The danger of incarcerating an alcoholic intermittently in such a center, until a "cure" is effected, also should not be overlooked. On the other hand, a brief jail term, the court points out, does enable the inebriate to sober up sufficiently to take stock of his situation and seek help.

The majority also was unwilling to agree with the current trend to label alcoholism a disease which destroys the victim's ability to master it.

Surely it would be a greater injustice to the sufferer to have him believe he is helpless, thus stealing from him both the hope of regeneration and the will to gain dominion over his affliction.

It also is not true that medical treatment centers, humanly intended though they may be, offer the only or even the best care for the alcoholic. One should not overlook the great numbers helped over the years by such organizations as the Alcoholics Anonymous, which build upon the qualities of self-discipline and self-knowledge.

Things Happen in Canada Under New Prime Minister

By Astero Pietta

For decades the standard complaint has been that "nothing ever happens in Canada." Then came Expo '67 and the centennial celebrations and the Canadians found out that even in everyday life they could afford to have a little fun. So when the office of prime minister became vacant they chose Pierre Elliot Trudeau to be their official swinger. This week the popularized history continued as Trudeau's youthful canvassers singing the campaign song of Bobby Kennedy secured the Liberal Party a victory in federal elections. Forgotten were the Pearsono and Diefenbakers of the past; Trudeau means Canada now. And this is one of the most spectacular political success stories of any country.

The problem was only in 1965 that Pierre Elliot Trudeau joined the Liberal Party which he had earlier sneered at as "silliness and heresy." He was elected as a member of parliament and later became Minister of Justice. This spring, by the he was mentioned as a candidate for Prime Ministership, Canada's Saturday Night magazine enthusiastically listed some of his credentials, thus answering its own question, "He looks fantastic but will he work?"

ETHNIC BACKGROUND—French and Scottish, the two founding peoples of Canada. Rating: Impeccable.

LINGUISTIC ABILITY—Has to be heard to be believed. Compared with him, most Canadians sound like peasants, in either language. Rating: Formidable.

AGE—At 40, not too young, not too old but, as Goldilocks would say, just right. Rating: Ballelay.

APPEARANCE—Handsome but not in the conventional sense. Sufficiently distinctive for easy political caricature. Looks younger on television than in person. More intriguing in person, judging by common female reactions, than on television. Excellent tired-looking eyes on incident baldness to combat young playboy image. Rating: Perfect.

FINANCES—Independently wealthy but with an almost Presbyterian affinity to conceal it. As a young man, he travelled extensively but made a realistic third-class effort. Although his resources are easily in the$100,000 range, he drove a battered MG around Montreal. When he moved away from his mother's house a few years ago, he chose a small apartment in a good but not opulent block. His clothes are expensive but casual. Neither drinks nor smokes. He went to the South Pacific during the last parliamentary recess but spent at least part of his time reading a 500-page history of the German Catholic Church in the United States. Rating: Dollars and sense.

A month earlier Saturday Night had proclaimed: "What this country needs is a hero in a white horse, a dramatic leader, a De Gaulle to clean up the mess. At least, what this country needs is a tough, no-nonsense Prime Minister with a sense of purpose."

Whether Trudeau was the man the magazine meant is not clear but by election time this week he had, at least, become a hero and dramatic leader. The Liberal's armament of the bobby-socks. He was photographed eating an ice cream cone, diving, dancing, in short, doing everything that politicians had not done in Canada before. Swinger by nature, Trudeau was curly enough to measure his own viewers that he didn't like the name and was rather a HIP "because I am for Honesty in Politics."

Trudeau, who in 1950 founded Cite Libre, an intellectual magazine that exerted influence much beyond its circulation, is a believer in federalism. This means that he is for strong provincial governments and against a strong central government. He repudiates the idea of Quebecians as "Maitres Chez Nous" (master of our own house) which they often express in the opinion that Quebec is not a province like all the others but the homeland of the French Canadian nation and, thus, entitled to special jurisdiction.

In fact, Trudeau has been quite unpopular among the extremists since 1964 when he referred to the Quebecians as "this backward little people." He also wrote, "The truth is that the separatist counter-revolution is the work of a powerless little bourgeois minority afraid of losing province in the twentieth-century revolution."

This is in accord with his opinion that nationalism in general is "reactionary." Sometimes branded as an ideological dilettante, Trudeau, a political pragmatist for closer economic, political and military relations with the United States. This along with his conservative attitude toward welfare programs and tax legislation has made some of his fellow liberals claim that except for civil liberties, divorce and abortion laws, he can hardly be called a liberal.

The toughest and touchiest problem Trudeau faces is the question of Quebec. Daniel Johnson, premier of that province, wants Quebec to have its own immigration policy and distinct representation abroad at international meetings dealing with education and culture. The first conflict after De Gaulle's "Vive le Quebec Libre!" speech occurred when the African republic of Gabon invited Quebec directly to an education conference in that country. Ottawa cut its diplomatic relations with Gabon.

The extremists are ready for action, that was proved Tuesday in Montreal where the celebrations of St. Jean Baptiste Day were interrupted by a rain of rocks. While many left, Trudeau sat still.

The problem of the "French fact" is not limited to Quebec, but throughout the country. The nucleus of the controversy, the question resembles that of the Aaland islands that almost drove Finland and Sweden to war. In the 1920s, speech-speaking inhabitants of the islands wanted a union with Finland, but the League of Nations decided to give the islands to Sweden. Today, the islanders enjoy self-government and special jurisdiction. Immigration from Finland is strictly restricted and it is easier for a citizen of Sweden to buy land on those islands than for a Finn. At the same time, however, the Swedish-speaking population in the mainland, which is also bilingual and where both languages can be used in official business, is rapidly decreasing.

Jean Jacques Martin, professor of constitutional law at the University of Montreal: "My view is that there will always persist a degree of uncertainty as to the future of the French fact in Canada. Fool-proof formulae that would guarantee this, by two hundred years hence, the French fact will still remain in America are impossible to find. They don't exist."
Agreement Possible

U.S. Eyes Talks With Soviets To Slow Down Missile Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States declared itself vastly encouraged Thursday by Moscow's endorsement of talks on curtailing a race and sought quick Soviet agreement on a place to begin meetings.

State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey gave the U.S. response within hours of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's Moscow speech which U.S. officials called "a possible advance toward accord on a mutual cutback on missiles and antimissile systems.

"The Soviet government is prepared to engage in discussions on this question" of restricting offensive and defensive nuclear systems, Gromyko was quoted as telling the Supreme Soviet, Russia's highest legislative body.

Washington strategists rated the speech as the first Soviet pronouncement—public or private—of readiness for the long-sought negotiations.

President Johnson proposed unilateral missile reduction to the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference as long ago as 1964. The Soviets showed interest when Washington began prodding them with increasing frequency but they have yet to set a time and place for talks.

By way of judging the Soviets for a specific follow-up on the Gromyko statement, State Department officials said the American ambassador to Moscow, Llewellyn Thompson, may take the initiative with a call on the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Another point of U.S.-Soviet contact on the question may come soon at Geneva, where U.S. and Soviet negotiators are slated to meet several days in advance of the scheduled July 16 reopening of the general disarmament conference.

The U.S. argument for a bilateral cut by the two atomic superpowers on their missile competition goes like this:

—Each country already is spending enormous amounts on long-range nuclear rocket systems and each has the power to destroy the other.

—The development of antimissile systems-missiles which can intercept missiles—would spiral the arms race to new and incredibly costly levels.

The Soviets have deployed some antimissile protection around Moscow and some other points. The U.S. Senate has just authorized a construction start on a $5.5-billion small-scale missile defense system which could eventually lead to a $40-billion-plus full-scale antimissile defense.

State Department analysts are reluctant to speculate publicly on what prompted Gromyko's remarks but the pinch on the Soviet economy from already-heavy arms outlays is believed to be one factor.

LONDON (AP) — James Earl Ray said Thursday that he killed Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Fighting extradition to the United States, Ray pleaded innocent in a London courthouse.

Ray, 40, and his legal team said that he was waved through a 'seamless' police operation and that he bore no grudge against the Reverend King.

Under questioning by his court-appointed British attorney, Roger Frisby, Ray declared in a soft, reedy drawl that he was 'distressed' to hear such and that he bore him no grudge.

"Did you kill Martin Luther King, sir?"

"No, sir," the prisoner replied.

Chief Magistrate Frank Milton later adjourned the hearing until next Tuesday. It is expected to be completed then.

Ray went back to prison.

British lawyers retained by the United States told Milton of witnesses to the purchase of the rifle and of a disabled war veteran, Charles Stevens, who said he heard the fatal shot fired from the common bathroom in the rooming house on South Main Street near the Lorraine Motel.

If the court's decision goes against him, Frisby is expected to appeal to a higher court on the ground that King's assassination was a political crime, for which Britain does not permit extradition.

Frisby electrified the court by summoning Ray to the stand for a six-minute unaudited appearance.

Ray was formally addressed as Ramon George Sneyd, the alias under which he is held here on charges of ordering King on a forged Canadian passport.

He sat rather than stood in the witness box to make a lease of a target in any attempt on his life and Scotland Yard detectives clustered around him in a human screen. This was the exchange:

Frisby: Did you kill Martin Luther King, sir?

Ray: No, sir.

Frisby: How can you any kind of grudge against him?

Ray: No, sir.

Frisby: Do you know Martin Luther King, sir?

Ray: No, sir.

RAY FIGHTS EXTRADITION; Denies He Killed King

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Red-gloved police wearing riot-control equipment halted a protest march supported by the late Martin Luther King's brother four blocks from City Hall Thursday, arresting about 40 demonstrators and injuring 15 others off the street.

The Rev. A.D. Williams, King here, although police said a shot was fired during his life, arrived in an automobile just as police confronted the marchers but drove off as several of the protesters hurried to his car.

King, who says he is expanding his role in the civil rights movement, spoke to the marchers who were protesting the dismissal of 211 city garbage men who fled after a wildcat strike for more money May 7 shortly before the demonstration began.

Police wearing riot helmets and carrying nightsticks halted the march, they said, when it became evident the protesters were headed for City Hall.

Police earlier had warned that such a march would not be permitted.

Several hundred persons lined the streets as two police squads of about 15 men each took up position on the street, arresting across the thoroughfare shoulder-to-shoulder.

When the marchers declined to stop, police began arresting them. The bulk of the group dispersed moments after the front line of marchers was taken into custody.

Resource Center Serves 500 Negroes

By Inez Barcher

The Carbondale Employment and Resource Center, set up last summer in the heat of racial riot threats, has reached a new peak of beginning.

"I think that we're just now beginning to serve our purpose. We're just starting to show meaningful progress," said Elbert Simon, director of the agency.

More than 500 applicants have been served by the center since its beginning Aug. 1, 1967 and about half the number have been placed on jobs in the Carbondale area.

"We feel that now we can move toward accomplishing the goals we started with," Simon said.

The Employment and Resource Center grew out of an emergency meeting of black residents of the northeast section of town and Mayor David Kene and other city officials.

At this gathering the presenting black delegation told officialsthat the major grievances of the group was the lack of employment.

District attorneys, police, and threats of violence, the mayor and officials readily okayed the establishment of the job information and placement agency housed in city hall to serve primarily jobless black residents.

From January through May of this year, the center placed 86 persons on jobs, 54 of whom were at SRI, "in May the largest number of black workers was placed at SRI through a cooperative program with the university. Thirty-three workers were placed on jobs at SRI in the following areas: Physical Plant, housing office, Learning Resources Service, Vice Presidents Office, Demographic Service, Woody Hall, Morris Library, Dean of Student's Office, Data Processing and Housing Business Service.

Their positions, some of which are on-the-job training, range from janitor, mail and maintenance laborers to secretaries, card punch operator and clerical workers.

"When we started we didn't have the full cooperation of the city, the University or area businesses," Simon said. "The University in particular,"

Trial Postponed

In Murder Case

The murder trial of a former SRI cheerleader and Carbondale resident has been postponed in Cook County Court until May 2.

Mrs. Dorothy Sykes Mason was scheduled to appear Tuesday in the Circuit Court to face charges of shooting a Chicago man Jan. 21.

Although the Cook County state's attorney's office said the case probably would not go to trial on the new date, summons to witnesses in the case have been out sent with that date.

Campus Bus Times Revised

A revised intercampus bus schedule to Southern Acres will be effective Monday.

Buses will leave Southern Acres Monday through Friday at the following times, 7:30, 8:30: 10:30 and 11:30 a.m.; and 12:30, 1:30, 2:30, 3:30, 4:30, and 5 p.m. They will leave Harwood lot at 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m. and noon, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday buses will leave Southern Acres at 9 a.m., 1:30 and 7 p.m., and the Harwood lot at 12:30 and 3 p.m.

The weekend buses will be routed past the corner of Washington and East Main Streets.

Holiday Schedule Set

For University Center

The University Center will be open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., July 4.

If the beach dance is moved to the Roman Room in the center, use of rain facilities will remain open until midnight.

The office, bookstore, check room and cafeteria will be closed all day.

Shryock Seeks Graphic Prints For Exhibition

Burnett H. Shryock, Sr., dean of the School of Fine Arts, is directing a program of acquisitions co-ordinated between the Department of Art and University Galleries. He was instrumental in starting the permanent collection during the W.P.A. years of the 1930's. Recently the University funded permanent acquisitions to enlarge the collection.

A major goal of the program is to secure original prints forming a study collection surveying the history of graphics for students of graphic art and general studies. The collection would be displayed, for the public, on the Carbondale campus.

Herbert Pink, chairman of the Department of Art and a printmaker of long experience, is working with Dean Shryock and Evert Johnson, Curator of University Galleries, in the assembling of the collection.

Recently the University has acquired an unusual collection of original drawings, watercolor sketches, colored engravings, etchings, intaglios (etchings of early printing) and a page from a 16th century French Bible illuminated with artist's designs. The leaves are original and many date from the 15th and 16th century.

Not much is known about the collection and a considerable amount of research, classification, and appraisal remains to be done on various items. However, faculty and administrators in the School of Fine Arts who have examined them believe that some of the pictures may be of relative rarity and value.

University Galleries will present some of the new acquisitions in a preview exhibit in July.

Campus ‘Saviors,’ the Ambulance Drivers

By Nick Harder

There are six men at SIU to whom many persons sometimes turn for their lives. They work at all hours with no time off for holidays yet draw the normal student's salary.

These men are familiar with danger and death. Classroom study may be knowledgeable about LSD trips and delivering babies. Their training and experience may mean the difference between life and death.

They serve everyone: profes sor,hippie, athlete or just plain student. Each customer gets the same careful attention.

There are only six such men at SIU—they are University ambulance drivers.

For almost two years, the University Health Service has employed six students as round-the-clock emergency ambulance drivers. Each man works a separate shift and pays $25 to $30 a week.

Anyone connected with SIU is eligible to use this service for $1.25, a small fee compared to private firms which charge upwards of $20.

Originally students didn’t have to pay a fee, but this resulted in many unnecessary calls. The fee discourages many students from using the ambulance as a taxi service.

The ambulance supervisor and a driver himself is a 25-year-old Army veteran, Gary DeHaven. He began driving the ambulance in January, 1967, and was promoted to his present position six months later.

DeHaven is proud of his drivers and their record. He points to the possible hazards involved in driving and assisting the orderly who rides with drivers.

Though the primary job of each driver is to get the ambulance to the emergency and back, it isn't as easy as it seems.

The big problem often is locating the patient. This sounds simple, but considering the number of city streets and their often meandering nature, just getting somewhere can be a challenge.

Then there’s the matter of time. Most calls are not a life or death nature, however, improvement in the ambulance is in medical skills. The others, still studying medical techniques, have had training in the Armed Forces.

Driver Jack O’Deal served in the Coast Guard’s highly regarded air-sea rescue. Bob Prince spent four years as an Air Force hospital corpsman. Bill Beyer was one of the elite Army paramedics, and John Bailey served as a Health Service orderly.

The types of calls that drivers must answer vary from headaches to heart attacks. A recent independent study by DeHaven lists the calls as 40 per cent injury reports; 60 per cent illnesses, and 25 per cent transfers to other hospitals.

DeHaven says the Health Service is the only ambulance service in the area using an airplane to transport patients to distant hospitals. One University doctor, Richard Lee, serves as pilot.

Most calls, according to DeHaven, fall in the gastro-in testinal classification. This includes appendicitis, food poisoning and—somewhat aces.

DeHaven is pleased with the overall operation of the service but is careful to point out the drawbacks. According to DeHaven, the SIU ambulance is well-equipped with medical aids, but the vehicle itself needs improvement.

DeHaven says the ambulance is the only one in the area equipped to administer first aid. Most other services, says DeHaven, are primarily concerned with transporting the patient from the pick-up scene to a hospital.

Another feature is that the SIU Health Service always sends two men with each ambulance—the driver and an orderly. DeHaven says that the SIU Student Accepted By Atlanta Symphony

John Latta, graduate student in the Department of Music, has been accepted to sing with the Atlanta Symphony, Georgia. Latta, from Mt. Vernon, will also study voice under Conductor Robert Shaw, former director of the Robert Shaw Chorale.

Although other ambulance firms try to send two men, more often than not, only the driver goes.

The SIU ambulance is also equipped with a two-way radio. Some services only have one-way communication and sometimes none at all, says DeHaven.

Further, the service is the only one in the area to use plastic-inflated splints. They are quick to apply, the pressure is firm and even, they are transparent and they can be easily washed and reused.

The ambulance also has oxygen, and the stretcher can be easily extracted from the ambulance, pushed and reinsettered by one man.

DeHaven says that despite all the equipment, the purpose of the service is sometimes partially defeated by the "imperfect vehicle."

"The wheelbase is too small," says DeHaven, "and the ambulance rocks too much."

Long Expects Success From SIU Grapplers

By Dave Palermo

Linn L. Long, the recently named successor to Wrestling Coach James Wilkinson, isn’t giving an inch when it comes to SIU wrestling next fall.

One of the top wrestling coaches in the nation, Long compiled a total record of 82 wins, 57 losses and two draws in eight years of leading the University of Colorado wrestling team at Boulder. He will expect the same excellence at Southern next season.

"I was champions," commented the personable Long. "I believe in first class wrestlers from the beginning of the season to the end. I figure that’s what makes a championship team."

"We should work hard to give the school, the community and the surrounding area a wrestling team it can be proud of," continued the veteran coach. "If you get fellows who want to be champions and are willing to work, you’ll have a good wrestling team."

Long believes in what he calls a Spartan training program in which each wrestler gives 100 per cent at all times. "I know of no one who sacrificed something and was not better off after doing so," said Long.

Wilkinson, who announced his resignation during the spring, is one of the finest wrestling coaches in the country, I think the wrestling program at Southern will improve greatly," Wilkinson will one day stand in an administrative position. "He will have more time to work with the team, while I was involved in out-side activities."

Wilkinson, besides leading the Saluki grapplers, was the president of the NCAA Wrestling Coaches Association and worked with adult classes in self-defense. He was also one of the leading figures in the attempt to organize a wrestling federation.

The fact that the recently-passed athletic expansion program will offer more financial aid to Long and his wrestlers had little to do with his decision to coach here.

"Even before the expansion program there was more aid here than at Boulder," Long explained. "I’m a firm believer in the fact that participants in my program, because of the hard work they must put in, deserve as much scholarships and financial aid as they can possibly have because of the great demand out on them."

Long was hesitant to cite any changes that may occur when he takes over next fall, adding that a person’s coaches according to his personality and that all differ in their techniques. As a collegiate wrestler at Colorado, Long was the Big Eight runner-up three straight years in the 130-pound division. He was also voted the outstanding wrestler of the Oklahoma AAU tournament in 1958 and represented the U.S. against the Russians in dual competition the same year.

SIU may have lost out in poundage in the recent exchange of wrestling coaches, but in quality has lost nothing. Jim Wilkinson (left) who resigned the post last spring to accept an administrative position, is primarily responsible for the building of the program while Linn Long, (right) his successor, is tabbed as one of the finest coaches in the country.
