Once roommates at SIU

New dean, Dick Gregory old pals

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Harvey Welch Jr. and Dick Gregory were Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity brothers and roommates in 1964 at SIU. Both were sports stars, Welch in basketball and Gregory in track.

Gregory went on to become famous and successful as a comedian and notorious as a civil rights activist and war protester. He has been arrested numerous times for civil disobedience and once was fined $100 for using profanity language to a policeman.

Welch became an Air Force officer. He went on from Air Force ROTC and Army Air Services at SIU to begin a 30-year career in the Air Force that will end next month when he retires with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Harvey Welch has been chosen SIU dean of student life.

The new dean said he and Gregory have kept in touch since their college days.

"Still see Dick on occasion," Welch said. "He came and visited us when he was speaking at Wolford University.

"So we're really on a first-name basis. He let me in on the ways we did. All of us follow a course, but we think we can do the most good." Welch is currently chief of special education programs at the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio.

"It's always good to come back where you've been before," Welch commented about returning to his alma mater. Welch received both his bachelor's degree in education in 1955 and his master's in education in 1956 at SIU.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said he was impressed with this year's search committee.

"Dick (Welch) had a tremendous amount of support. All of the deans endorsed him, as well as student government," Swinburne said.

Welch is the first black to be appointed to the post of dean of student life at SIU.

"I'm sure that this is the highest post that a black person has been appointed to in student affairs," Swinburne said. (Continued on Page 2)

U. Forum organized now, says new head

By Gary Marx
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"We're organized now," Richard Musgraves, newly elected president of the University Forum says.

Musgraves, supervisor of the Central Research Shop, the Forum representative of the Civil Service Employees Council, was elected and Forum by-laws were approved at a meeting May 15.

Other officers elected were Inge Rader, Administrative and Professional Staff Council representative, vice president; and Shirley Dalcher, Civil Service Employees Council number, secretary.

The new president said he hopes these organizational steps will bring more constituency groups into the Forum. The four of the University's eight constituency groups have not sent delegates to Forum meetings.

The University Forum is composed of representatives from the Civil Service Employees Council, Graduates Students Association, Administrative and Professional Staff Council and the Black Faculty and Staff Council.

The civil service employees and the administrative staff groups gave the Forum until July 1 to get organized before withdrawing their delegations, Musgraves said.

"The University Forum is just a place for the constituencies to get together and talk about different campus problems to find out how everyone feels about it," Musgraves said.

He said there are other ways constituencies hear from each other.

"President Brandt's weekly luncheons with the constituency heads are good but small. Gregory is in track. I think enough detailed information, gets back to the members in the groups," Musgraves said. "The other way is for one group to formally request feedback from another, but this is too cumbersome for the Forum.

The University Forum has had a problem getting some constituencies to join. The Faculty Senate, Graduate Council, Student Senate and Deans Council have declined to send delegates to the Forum. However, Musgraves said Doug Diggle, student body president, has said he will discuss participation in the Forum with the Student Government's executive council.

Musgraves thinks some of these constituencies associate the University Forum with the defunct University Senate.

The University Forum was organized in its embryonic stage last October by former University Senate president John Hanley.

"I had heard from Terry Mathies, representative from the Graduate Student Council, in serve as president until the Forum became a reality," Musgraves said.

Some constitutions believed the University Senate was too large and unwieldy and "no way to run a university," Musgraves said. "The Civil Service Employees Council felt they dropped out of that organization."

"The Forum is not related to the University Senate," Musgraves said. "We are not a replacement for it. We are a forum and Webster Student Government is a meeting place for open discussion. That's what we are."

Another reason some constituencies have not sent delegates has been fear that the constituencies would lose their voice if their representation would be diluted by a vote-taking organization composed of a number of constituencies, he explained.

"There is, then, the administration will interpret a vote taken in the University Forum as the opinion of the University community, but this is not the case," Musgraves said. "We certainly say something if the administration tried to do this."

"No way do we want to tread on anyone's toes," Musgraves said. "The Forum was not made to supplant any constituency's business or opinions."

Musgraves said that as a matter of policy majority and minority opinions should be heard in any vote taken during University Forum meetings.

He said he anticipates other campus constituency groups will want to get involved once it is understood what the Forum is doing and what it stands for.

Downstate representatives expect passage of bill to split SIU campuses

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Two downstate representatives are split in their opinion of the possibility of the bill that passed the Senate Friday and is now before the House to grant autonomy to SIU-Edwardsville.

But they agreed that an unusual alliance of legislators from throughout the state probably will allow the bill to pass.

Rep. Horace Calvo, D-Granite City, who is sponsoring the bill in the House, was optimistic that the bill will pass there.

"We really haven't had time to go over the bill. I would think the sentiment in the House is similar to that of the Senate, where it passed easily," he said.

The bill, sponsored in the Senate by Sam Vadabalanke, D-Edwardsville, failed to receive a three-fifths vote when it was first introduced there a few weeks ago. On its second attempt, a vote of 37-10 gave the bill the two-thirds vote than it were needed for approval.

"We don't know if there are going to be any problems (with the wording of the bill). We could always correct it with amendments," Calvo said. "With an educated guess, I'd say yes, it should pass."

Rep. Vincent Birchler, D-Chester, chairs SIU Board of Trustees Chair man Ivan Elliott's opinion that to grant SIU-E a separate board would open the door for a number of board creations and splits in Illinois.

"I believe that a good look should be taken at the bill at this time," Birchler said. "If we let Edwardsville have its own board, the first thing we know we'll have more boards. I'll have to see what the people in my district have to say.

Birchler represents the 68th District, which includes Carbondale.

Birchler said he feels that the bill will probably pass in the House.

"There's no way to pick a pattern in the voting. This session there are more people voting independently than before. There are times when you have up north team up with people down here. My own feelings are that it will pass."

Birchler added that the measure will probably get the support of representatives of upstate districts who want to propose similar bills for educational institutions in their own districts.

"I'll pass will allow SIU-E to establish its own seven-member Board of Trustees on July 1, 1976, which in ef fect would give that campus budgetary and governing autonomy from SIU-C."

Brandt to release effective date for salary raises

President Warren W. Brandt said he will make a statement this week concerning the effective date for salary increases for University employees.

Brandt said the exact date may vary for different employe groups. He declined to comment on a report that the effective date would be January 1. The report has it that $5,311,000 in salary increases to faculty, staff and civil service employees earlier than the first day of the new fiscal year, July 1.

Brandt said he will send letters to University employees explaining the increases this week.

Under previously announced plans, salary increases will average 8 per cent for faculty and staff and 11.2 per cent for civil service employees. This is an over-all average salary increase of 6.42 per cent.

The raises will be awarded on a sliding cost of living scale and on the merit basis. The sliding scale will range from a 2.4 per cent raise for the lowest salary level to a 2.4 per cent raise for the top salary level. The remainder will be awarded on the merit basis.

Recommendations for merit increases in faculty will begin at the department level and will be channeled through the deans' offices before going to the vice president for academic affairs and the president.

Welch was picked twice to the Intercollegiate Conference (ICC) all-conference team when the CIAIC was formed. The ICC was made up of teams from seven schools in Michigan and Illinois, including NTU, EU, WIU and ISU. Welch was a member of the ICC first and second teams for two consecutive years.

Welch’s record was impressive. He averaged 14.5 points per game and scored 1,221 points in 160 games. Welch was first in free-throwing percentage in the conference.

tin City gave refugees drab view of U.S.

By Gary Marx

Two rows of bunk beds stretched from one end of the Qonset hut to the other. The men, sleeping in their own separate bunks, made no attempt to socialize. There were no curtains partitioning the quarters of the various military units stationed at Camp Pendleton, where they lived in large community tents and waited in food lines that stretched for nearly a quarter-mile into the hot Southern California sun.

"The children had to wait in the lines, but in our home we could take food back to the living area," Sang said. "But we all got used to it.

Oanh, Sang and Khoang’s four-year-old daughter, though this was the American way to get fed. "At our first meal here," Sang related, "she asked, ‘Daddy, why are we not making lines?’"

She continued, "The marines did a good job setting up the camp. They tried to make things easy and we shouldn’t expect too much. Whatever it is, it’s better than in Vietnam."

She also praised the American forces for their work at the camps.

Ngo, Trung and Sang’s mother, does not speak English. "This is a strange world for her," Sang said. "She thought the refugee camp was the way it is all over the United States.

It was 21 days after they arrived at Camp Pendleton before they got to view the scenery outside the camp and went by bus to Los Angeles to catch the flight to St. Louis. Sang was impressed with the four-lane highways.

"I was amazed at how Sang related how well her mother gets along."

"One day we went to the store and another family stayed at home to do the cooking," she said. "But we forgot to tell her how to turn the stove on. So when we came home, she grabbed a neighbor by the hand and had her show her how to use the stove. She does very well communicating."

The family members that arrived in the United States first was Dung and Loan, Khoang and Sang’s eight-year-old daughter who attended her first day of second grade at the Unify Point School south of Carlsbad. Monday, Sang said the children like the United States very much.

Sang worked for the United States government for 11 years in South Vietnam. For the last seven years she was an employee relations specialist for the Civilian Personnel Office of the U.S. Army, which served over 10,000 people. She said she was told that the U.S. government would help her find employment with a federal agency in America. She didn’t know what job waiting for her. Sang said the Vietnamese refugees who worked for private American companies in Southeast Asia were given jobs in the United States and a quick clearance from the settlement camps along with the dependents of American citizens. But she said that was the American way.

"I don’t think they would be able to give us all jobs. It would mean too many people resettling now," Sang said.

Sang worked as a volunteer for the International Rescue Committee at Camp Pendleton, helping with the received applications for and by sponsors and interviewing with sponsors. The lack of people willing to accept the moral obligation of becoming a sponsor is one of the biggest problems facing the refugee camps, she said. Many people who apply to be sponsors turn down because they want the refugees to work as cheap labor. Some are looking for maids and cooks and mistresses, she said, and this caused fear among the refugees.

Another problem with the refugee camps is the crowded quarters, which are time consuming, Sang said. The CIA, FBI, State Department and the Department of Defense all must make security checks before the refugees leave the resettlement camps.

"We would not have left the camp as soon as we did if we government did not want us to work for the people who worked for the U.S. in Vietnam," Sang said. "We had to receive clearance before we could work for the U.S. over there."

Sang and Trung have a sister and a brother-in-law still at Pendleton waiting for clearance by two of the agencies. She said the majority of refugees have not left the camp and she thinks they “will probably be there a long time.”

Sang said the family hasn’t thought very much about the future. Dung said he would assist with as much as he could and those to stay in Carlsbad. The family is relaxed now.

The climate here is just like Saigon—hot," Sang said. "When we first arrived, Oanh and Loan wanted to know where the snow because they remembered a picture Sang sent us.

"There are very friendly people here," the family of four said. "Carlsbad is nice, quiet and we like it very much. We are lucky."

The family stayed in one of the 40 Qonset huts on Guam for eight days before being shipped to Camp Pendleton, where they lived in large community tents and waited in food lines that stretched for nearly a quarter-mile into the hot Southern California sun.

"The children had to wait in the lines, but in our home we could take food back to the living area," Sang said. "But we all got used to it.

Oanh, Sang and Khoang’s four-year-old daughter, though this was the American way to get fed. "At our first meal here," Sang related, "she asked, ‘Daddy, why are we not making lines?’"

She continued, "The marines did a good job setting up the camp. They tried to make things easy and we shouldn’t expect too much. Whatever it is, it’s better than in Vietnam."

Civil Service Council seats new officer slate, members

David Reed, General Accounting, said Friday that the city’s Civil Service Employees Council will conduct its annual elections Monday. Reed is a resident of Murphysboro and received his bachelor’s degree in accounting from SIU.

Other officers selected at the Counci’s May meeting were Lee Hester, vice-chairman; and Jean Marko, secretary. Hester works in the Botany Department and Marks in the English Department.

Six new members of the council were also seated at the meeting. They are Alwin Morrisey, Physical Plant; Geraldine Kelley, University Programs; Wilma Morgan, Physical Plant; Bonnie Stubble, Payroll, and William Nolan, Physical Plant.

Members were also appointed to University committees. The membership and their committees are: Don Martin, General Accounting; and Mr. Marks, Joint Benefits Committee.

Some retailers to close Friday

If you have trouble finding stores open on Monday’s Memorial Day, you may have better luck Friday, but don’t count on it.

Some of the city’s businesses were closed for the federal observance Monday only as the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce said Monday was the traditional May 30 state holiday.

The general banks were open and uniform in their observance of Memorial Day. Carbondale and Murphysboro banks were closed Monday but the banks in Herrin, Cearsville, DeQuin and Marion will close their doors Friday.

Most office units will comply with the state observance Friday. Only the police and Fire Department will be open that day. County and state offices will also be closed May 30, but federal offices will be open.

All Southern Illinois schools will be closed Friday, except the offices of SIU which will be closed.

The confusion stems from the 1971 congressional action which changed the date of many federal holidays to the nearest Monday. Most states, Illinois included, did not pass comparable laws.

Brandt to receive MSU alumni honor

President Warren W. Brandt will be given a Distinguished Alumni Award at the commencement ceremony June 7 at Michigan State University, where he was graduated in 1944. Michigan State also will honor the governor of Hawaii, George R. Ariyoshi, Class of 1940, as a distinguished graduate.

Brandt received the bachelor of science degree in chemistry from MSU.

Scientology talk open to public

The Scientology Club will present a recorded talk by Mr. Hubbard, scientology founder, on “My Philosophy” at 8 p.m. Friday at 417 S. Illinois Ave. George Furman, executive secretary, said the event is open to the public.

Huffman quits legal post to open practice

SIU Legal Counsel John Huffman will step down from his post July 1 to open a private law practice.

Huffman said Tuesday that he plans to open a law office in Carbondale.

Huffman joined the SIU legal staff in April, 1972, and was appointed legal counsel in September, 1973. He succeeded T. Richard Mager as legal counsel. In May, 1974, he was named assistant vice president for development and services.

Before coming to SIU, Huffman was director of legal affairs at Kent State University.

No replacement for Huffman has been found yet, according to Huffman and SIU President Warren W. Brandt. Huffman said he and Brandt would meet this week to iron out specific qualifications to be used in selecting his successor.

Huffman will continue to supervise the legal office after July 1 until a replacement is found. He said he would also assist the legal staff after his replacement has been installed.

Economic folk tales

Anyone who has glanced at a newspaper within the past year knows that only one word aptly defines the nation's economic situation—loaf.

But after several months of scholarly thought, I have found that we have been thinking in the wrong direction after years of waiting, those of us born since 1946 have an era on which to base our own collection of "poor mouth" folklore.

Most people in my generation are very much aware of what a "poor mouth" is, but in case a few miraculously missed hearing one, a few examples may be in order.

First of all, "poor mouth" stories usually surface about the time someone my age asks for an increase in allowance or mentions being broke to a parent or grandparent. The stories usually start with someone like this: "Tell your dad you don't know what broke!" I remember when I was a kid we were so broke that.

The school could be shut if you had any of the following equal and long-winded tales of poverty during the Depression.

"Do Me.

Whenever I have trouble falling to sleep, I just think back to the days when my dad and I used to say things are harder than '32! Back then we were so poor we used to get up after breakfast and go to bed before supper so we could tell our friends that the only meal we had was breakfast. Why, my pop used to send me out with a five-gallon pail of water and a rock and bring back three squirrels. And, I had to walk five miles every day in snow 10 inches deep just to get to school, the teacher needing to see my arctic family.

On the great things about "poor mouth" stories, is that the less they resemble the truth, the better they are. A story was related to me by a fellow St. S., I doubt if he ever saw squirrels, let alone hunted them. And the one about walking to school got better, because only in the last year I recall the school got a mile further away and the snow got an inch deep. Dad was still alive today, he'd be claiming he walked a distance equal to that between St. Louis and Carbondale in snow.

Even though the stories were boring and perhaps a little over stated I'd call them lies, but my mother wouldn't talk to me again. The tales taught me a strong lesson for the "Great Depression." It must have been a wonderful era because older folks take such pleasure in telling and telling about it. So, it is with reverence and deep humility that I proudly declare 1975 as the year of the "Great Depression." I base this declaration on several facts. First, after reading the "Grapes of Wrath," I caught myself thinking of the book as a sort of predictions that "the Waltons" are eating better than I am. Finally, I read Stefano Terko's look "Hard Times," a series of interviews with people who lived through the "Great Depression," and I said "so what?"

The real crooks, however, came when I thought back to things Dad told me. He was fond of saying that in the '30s the only units were very successful. Has anyone read about Vietnam lately?"

Dad also used to enjoy telling us how no one could afford a car in the '30s. Maybe more people have cars these days, but who can afford a gallon of gas?

The only real problem I can see in the younger set telling "poor mouth" stories is that older folks might get upset and present. And as much as I'd like to try my back one-ompahship, I don't think I could take another "Great Depression.""

So it may be wiser for me to wait a few years before I start spinning my yarns. But that won't keep me from collecting tales right now. After all, I already have a good start. With a few minor adjustments the day when it is safe to call my son aside and say: "Boy, I remember back in '75..."

To the Daily Egyptian:

Please permit an expression of astonishment at the horrendous Latin contained in "Alternative C Design rim" in the May 12 DE and, despite a few phone calls of inquiry and pleading, repeated in the DE of May 13. The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures has been deluged with letters (anonymous and otherwise) and inquiries from faculty all over campus, even from students abroad, as to what said document might mean. Some of us have been sent the word represented by "Ph.D." to be spelled correctly. Others nored the misspelling ""Ph.D." on the envelope which the school and the DE ever addressed. Will others note that at least Ivan A. Elliott, Jr.'s name is a clear forgery, as are probably the other two signatures. Furthermore, there is nothing wrong with the Latin words "permutavit" and "Prasens." The word "permutavit" is unknown to me in any form of Latin, even Vulgar Latin, or in any Romance derivative thereof. The use of prepositions was rather generous, governing cases not found in any grammar.

The DE possesses in its files several of my studies and essays in Latin. (They go would over the heads of most students.) Why not try them? Out of the many, only one was printed, to which you compiled the DE. Your students are quite a switch tactics offering sensational values and then forcing the customer to take something else! One firm, particularly, Record Club of America in York, Pa., was ordered by law to offer cash refunds within 30 days if it couldn't fill an order and - stop advertising "Buy one."

To the Daily Egyptian:

Just a word of warning to others who deal with mail-order record companies. After being continually jinxed by long overdue records and no response to my numerous inquiries, I came across a record in the March 7 Chicago Tribune. The article stated that many of the records were jinxed and switch tactics offering sexual values and then forcing the customer to take something else! One firm, particularly, Record Club of America in York, Pa., was ordered by law to offer cash refunds within 30 days if it couldn't fill an order. And - stop advertising "Buy one."

To the Daily Egyptian:

This letter is concerning Gary DeLosh's column in the May 8 paper. I quote Great Depression, the only certified heroes of the Vietnam War are the expatriates and prisoners that refused to aid and abet this nation's world motives. I disagree wholeheartedly with this statement.

To the Daily Egyptian:

We hope to avert any direct threats to the lives of the students, faculty and government's beliefs, and then accept the government's mistake, and should be looked up to.

Sure, I feel that the Vietnam War was a mistake. But I also feel that a direct mistake. And two wrongs don't make a right.

Wrong on GPA

To the Daily Egyptian:

In regards to my letter printed in last week's DE concerning a possible error in the grading-scale change, I stand corrected and apologize to the administration for suggesting negligence on your part. Conceded the students GPA's were in jeopardy, I looked into the matter last week. My thanks go to Acting Dean of the Graduate School Thomas Mitchell and Chairman of the Music Department John Olmstead who both helped to point out the inconstancy of my proposal and the soundness of theirs.

How one artist looks at another

Editor's Note—Sculptress Fredda Brilliant of Carbondale will return to London early next month to see after the casting of a bust of artist Duncan Grant that she recently completed and which will be housed at the Tate Gallery. This is her account of the challenge of capturing the Grant personality in clay.

By Fredda Brilliant

What I write here cannot, of course, be a biography of Duncan Grant, the last of the “Bloomsbury” group, now in his 91st year. But, like an hour d’oeuvre of caviar and champagne, it will whet the reader’s appetite to know more about him.

Duncan is a great lyrical painter. But after prolonged observation, the strength of his work reveals itself. He is a great innovator. As far back as 1914, he was a master-weaver of tapestry from economist, to poet laureate, to artist critic; E. M. Forster, the drama critic, painting murals in the California Institute of the Arts.

Among the “Bloomsbury” group was Roger Fry, the art critic; E. M. Forster, the novelist; Desmond McCarthy, the drama critic; and his wife and Lord Maynard Keynes, the world famous economist.

After the First World War, he married the great Russian dancer, Lydia Lopukhova, now 85. I must say she’s going on 86 or she might return that I’m trying to make her look old. She is still that lovely child of nature, full of laughter but retaining those typical European traits of rhetoric and repartee that were so in vogue in her time.

Although Lord Maynard Keynes is known to America as the great economist to actors and artists during the Second World War he was the BOSS, heading the Arts Council of Great Britain.

The “Bloomsbury” group was a personalization of intellectuals and cultured youth, adored with inventive thinking. They were the “mod” at the turn of the century, but not the Bohemian type.

Duncan Grant said then, what I am saying all along to students, “You cannot run before you learn to walk.” You cannot distort the human body unless you know the human anatomy.

During the First World War, Duncan was a conscientious objector. He worked instead as a farm-laborer in the fields as long as the war lasted. But in spite of his swollen hands he managed to put in a lot of his own work—after his official working hours. He was also famous for important decor for the Ballet.

There was a certain Bishop Bell of Chichester, who inspired playwrights to write plays for the Church as well as pageants which soon flourished throughout Britain. Among the contributors were Dorothy Sayers, Christopher Fry, John Masefield, etc. But best known of all was T. S. Eliot’s “Murder in the Cathedral.”

During the Second World War the same Bishop Bell was determined to give artists employment. Stained glass windows were vulnerable then, so he commissioned Duncan Grant and Vanessa Bell to paint murals in the Berwick Church. This church is like a tiny bijouterie box holding the crown jewels! And whoever visists Sussex will find this church “a must.” It is about 8 miles from Lewes. The Bishop himself posed for Grant kneeling, to be incorporated in one of the paintings as patrons have been from time immemorial.

On the 90th birthday of Duncan, there were exhibitions throughout Britain and of course millions had a chance to see his work on the television. Even New York held an exhibition of his work April 21-May 3, at Davis & Long, East 40th Street.

One day I hope that Professor Paul Roche, the great poet, great classic scholar and translator who lectured at SIU and was also poet-in-residence at the California Institute of the Arts, will bring over some of Duncan Grant’s paintings from his private collection and explain more about him. For Paul has been closely associated with Duncan for the last thirty years. In fact, it was Paul Roche who knew my work and who invited me to sculpt Duncan.

When I shook Duncan’s hand on first meeting him I remained flabbergasted. Who wants a book? I thought. His personality was not of a man of 90. His skin was lovely but not taut. I somehow visualized him from his self-portrait with the turban as gaunt. But here was a man contrary to what I had imagined.

And work is like a war, I say. Get into it, run for your life and win it! And the more I got to know him the more I admired him. The complexity so well camouflaged that I would have to employ all my armour and ingenuity to find my way through this man’s mind. It was a real challenge to my skill.

Unfortunately, the photo does not do justice to the sculpture. Lady Cairn crooks, the wife of Sir Alex, the master of St. Peters College Oxford, described my sculpture of Duncan without having seen it. She painted his gentle loving voice which, alas, I cannot add in words. There is much strength in his gentleness; as he is in his person, so is he in his work.

During work, I became irritated that my sculpture seemed to embody the expression of the “Mona Lisa!” I complained against myself. But Duncan with so many more years of experience replied: “Once you get the look of ‘Mona Lisa’ you can never erase it.” I then stopped fighting against myself and continued to reproduce what was in him.

When Duncan said of the sculpture, “it is magnificent,” I could not ask for greater appreciation.

When I met Professor John Hayward, the director of Religious Studies, he was so taken with the sculpture of Duncan Grant that he added the following to a letter I had just written to Duncan.

“My dear Mr. Grant, As a friend of Fredda’s, I am accepting her invitation to add a word of appreciation to hers, inspired by a more photograph of your face in clay. There is an almost Shakespearean combination of humor, noblese, wit and wisdom in her work. I think of the idea of this ‘Mona Lisa’ mind of the Duke of Kent in King Lear and Prospero in The Tempest. These comments are the fruit of my passion for the arts and religion built up over the years as a professor of philosophy and religious studies. Bravo to you and Fredda.”

The enigmatic, Mona Lisa-like smile of the Duncan Grant bust (above) worried Ms. Brilliant—until she was convinced it belonged there. The Carbondale artist owns Grant’s 1924 painting “Baptism of Christ” (left, below), a gift from her—and signed that—from Grant himself. Artist and artist critic (above, right) met in the sculpting, when Grant said of Ms. Brilliant’s likeness of him, “It is magnificent.”

The workshop is designed for nurses, speech pathologists, and medical students. Sponsor is the Southern Illinois Health Manpower Consortium.

Charles B. Muchmore, assistant professor in the School of Engineering and Technology, has been elected to a three-year term as national director of the Illinois Society of Professional Engineers. Muchmore, a thermodynamics- and environmental-engineering specialist and former vice-president of the society, took office May 12 at the 90th Annual ISPES Conference in Lincoln, III.

Dent planning for adult diabetics will be the subject of a nursing workshop Thursday at the Student Center. Ruth E. Brennan, associate professor at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Diast Creer, chief of therapeutic dietetics at St. Joseph’s Hospital, St. Charles, Mo., and Elmer Nifenecker, instructor at Peoria Health Department’s diabetic clinic will be the speakers. Sponsor is the Southern Illinois Health Manpower Consortium.

Daily Egyptian staff photographer Steve Sumner was one of 28 students in the annual William Randal Hipp Foundation photojournalism contest. SIU-photography student Wayne Higgs placed fifth, black-and-white category, in a national contest sponsored by Nikon Inc., and SIU students Russell Vaughan and William Grogan received honorable mentions.

David B. Rochelle, WSU-TV director of broadcasting, will serve as chairman of a Biennial essay contest for grade 12 students in the state. The contest is sponsored by the Illinois Association of Broadcasters.

Charles W. Barnerjeas, professor of physics in the School of Medicine and department of physiology, was awarded a $10,000 grant by the National Institute of Health to continue studying possibilities that blood hemoglobin changes its oxygen-binding properties following coronary heart disease. Research by Dr. Barnerjee and Dr. D.A. DeBias of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa., has indicated that carbon monoxide impairs heart tissue healing. Bamerjee and J. Hurley Myers, assistant to the associate dean of the medical school, will be co-investigators in the IHA-financed study.

Wednesday (May 28) is the closing date for registration for the Graduate Student Language Test, to be given June 28. Registration closes Thursday (May 29) for the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) to be given June 17 and 19.

Experts on student work set national convention at SIU

By Scott Burnette
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Student workers will be discussed from paycheck to graduation at a national convention on Work and the College Student to be held at SIU, June 4-6.

The convention will be jointly sponsored by SIU and the Michigan Association of Student Employment Directors (MAUSED) in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education.

Main speaker of the convention will be Roland Keene, professor in the Department of Higher Education, and chairman of the SIU convention committee, said the purpose of the convention is to stimulate the formation of regional organizations such as MAUSED.

Convention officials expect more than 300 persons from all over the country to attend. Registration for the convention which includes some meals and a copy of the proceedings on hard form.

Frank Adams, director of SIU Student Work and Financial Assistance, said Carbondale was chosen for the first convention because of SIU's reputation.

"Our work program here is nationally recognized back to the days of former President Morris," said Adams.

"University Presidents Experience Work, Too," is the topic of a talk to be given by former SIU President, Deway W. Morris during the Thursday morning session. Wednesday's activities will feature a symposium on "The Partnership of Work and Education, chaired by John E. King, chairman of the Department of Higher Education, which will start at 1:30 p.m. in Student Center Ballrooms A and B.

Also on the first day Lee Noel, director of the Midwestern Region of the American College Testing Program, will give an address at 4 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium on "Work and the Retention of College Students."

On Thursday, June 5, six concurrent panels will be conducted in both morning and afternoon at the Student Center, starting at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

At 3:30 p.m. a summary panel will meet in the Student Center Auditorium, where chairpersons will give highlights of their panels' discussions.

At 11 a.m. in the Student Center auditorium, Virginia B. Allan, deputy assistant secretary of state, will give the address, "Women in the Work of Work."

During the 7 p.m. dinner Thursday at ballroom D, John Alden, senior policy analyst for the Office of Education and a representative on the President's Task Force on Labor and Academia, is scheduled to talk on "National Direction on Education and Work."

Three speakers are scheduled for Friday, June 6. At 9 a.m. Deane L. Clarke, Provost of British Columbia Department of Education and former SIU student worker will address the convention on "Work Program Developments in Canada."

The assistant director of placement at Michigan State University, James G. Anderson, will talk at 9:30 a.m. in the Student Center Auditorium on "College Student Employment and Placement."

After the luncheons in ballroom D, Adams will give the final address, "The Challenges."

Students and faculty members may attend any of the panels and lectures. However, a $5 fee will be charged for each luncheon and $10 for the dinner.

Anyone interested in attending either a dinner or luncheon may contact Jeanette Bortz, 2-2201, the day before the event.

Economic lore institute set

SIU's department of English will offer a special three-week Institute in American Economic Literature this summer for area high school and junior college teachers.

The institute, which will begin June 9, will focus on the literature and cultures of three groups—black, Hispanic and native Americans. The purpose of the institute is to encourage the study of the literature and cultures of these three ethnic groups at high school and junior college levels, according to Jewell A. Friend, institute director.

The undergraduate credit will be offered to institute participants, who will meet daily from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m., instruction and discussion will center on the literature and cultures of the three ethnic groups.

Institutes for using the literature in classroom instruction will constitute a significant part of the institute, according to Friend.

The institute staff will include David E. Crenau, history; Arthur L. Dixon, English; Warren L. Manchur, foreign languages and literatures; Joel M. Maring, anthropology; and Dr. Darrel Harper.

Black American Studies, all of SIU, and Mary Ann of Carbondale Community High School.

Local history show to return

"Spotlight on Southern Illinois" will return to television stations WSLU-TV (Channel 1) and WUSI-TV (Channel 16, Olney) on Tuesday, June 3, at 6:30 p.m. The opening show will feature a bicentennial theme, according to producer-director Ed Hauer.

"We will use film footage of Fort de Chartres, the American Bottoms area near the Mississippi River, and the Pierre Menard home," he said. "We picked this area for our first show because this is where the history of Illinois began."

The weekly program, filmed in color, will be narrated by Erv Coppi.

Preparation, enthusiasm make 'Great Teacher,' says professor

By Paul Carver

Daily Egyptian, Carbondale, Ill.

The recipient of SIU Alumni Association's 1975 Great Teacher award sat behind his office desk, just in his office over breakfast when asked about his teaching.

"In the modesty of Edward (Ed) J. Schmidtlein, feels his teaching matters little from other professors."

"To me, SIU, Schmidtlein said he left the accounting profession for education because, "in teaching, you work with the world's greatest inventory—human beings." He has found his work interesting and exciting, and said, and does not regret the move from professional accountant to professor of accounting.

"I sometimes hear from previous students who have been working only a few years and are making more money than I do as teacher. But money is not the reason I started teaching. I get a good feeling knowing former students have become successful, he said.

Prof. Schmidtlein's warm, open personality is apparent as he speaks in a deep voice touched with a slight accent betraying his New York origins. He came to Southern Illinois at the invitation of the College of Business Dean Erwin Rehn. Before coming here, Schmidtlein taught at St. Louis University.

He characterizes his teaching method as one of setting a good example in enthusiasm for the subject, being a prep for class and considering the individual student's needs.

"I try to be as prepared for class as possible. I do not use extensive lecture notes but rather a general outline I can expand on as the class begins. If some humorous anecdote occurs to me, I tell it. But I never go into class with a list of prepared jokes to tell," he said.

Schmidtlein said he teaches both the introductory accounting course required for all business students and advanced courses for business graduates.

"In the introductory course, I would say on the average, two-thirds to three-fourths of the students are not going into accounting as a career. They are going into some other aspect of business—marketing or management—and need to understand accounting but not produce it," Schmidtlein observed.

"I adapt the attitude towards the beginning class of helping persons to assume accounting and understand it rather than trying to force them into producing it," he said.

"I hate to say it and it has become a saying so overworked it almost sounds phony but in reality, nothing comes up accounting better than accounting is the language of business. I try to structure the course so students can learn the rules of the language before having to speak it," Schmidtlein said.

Noting the dry nature of most accounting texts, he referred to his use of class time for discussing articles of interest in the Wall Street Journal and business-oriented magazines.

"I try to bring a copy of the article to class and though usually one or two students may have already read it, they may not have understood it fully. But by class discussion they gain a better understanding of the article," Schmidtlein said.

"I take things from Business Week, Forbes and Fortune magazines too. It may seem like a lot of reading going through all the trade journals I consider it necessary. It goes along with my philosophy of preparing for class as much as possible," Schmidtlein said.

When asked what Schmidtlein received the alumni award of a plaque and $1,000 on May 17, the scholar said he was "fair but firm, dedicated but demanding." Schmidtlein said he noticed no problem striking this balance.

"It is not hard to be fair with the students. I try to spell out the requirements of the course and hold them as much as possible. I work hard and I expect them to work hard. I would estimate about 95 percent of the students attend class on a regular basis. The other five percent come in and out the course successfully. The other five percent come in and out the course successfully."

to succeed in the first place," he explained.

"Feeling most persons need some sort of incentive to do something," Schmidtlein said he gives 14 weekly quizzes to inspire regular class attendance in his students.

"Most of the quizzes are unannounced and if a student is not in class they receive a zero. It provides a little incentive for students to show up in class. At the end of the semester, I drop the low scores and average the remaining 10 as a fourth hour exam," Schmidtlein said. He said he tried to stay away from the "nitty-gritty" of accounting in the first course since persons with main accounts major often find it boring and confusing. In the more advanced courses for graduates, he said he commands a stricter accounting approach.

"If students are costing accounting or managerial accounting, I try to get the students to understand they are not just pushing numbers around to be pushing numbers around. Accounting does not operate like a vacuum. Anytime numbers are moved, it affects people in other areas of the business," Schmidtlein stated.

"In the more advanced courses we look at the effects on every area of the business. How will shifting numbers affect a shapemotor? Will it affect morale and human productivity? We try to look at these things from a real-life point-of-view," Schmidtlein explained.

The furlough for accountants looks good, he said.

"Many students are getting jobs and working two or three years with national firms and then leaving to start private firms as certified public accountants. I assume they wouldn't leave if they thought they might take a cut in pay," Schmidtlein quipped.

Schmidtlein, a Roman Catholic, plans to give one-tenth of his prize money to the church. Religion has affected his teaching in that he feels his life has been shaped by it.

"Religion has helped shape me the man I am today. I don't think I would be the person I am were I not for my religious beliefs. Heavier, I do not think religion enters the class room and I do not minimize any religion in class," Schmidtlein said.

Schmidtlein is married but has no children.

Building progress normal after rain delay

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Building progress is back to normal at three construction sites on the campus after delays caused by unusually heavy rains.

"When we make up the original plans we have to account for lost days because of rain," said Willard Hart, architect for facilities planning.

Jack Moore, project engineer, said that the rain merely forced workers to concentrate on areas not affected by the weather.

"In the case of the recreation center, in some areas we are a little behind, in others we've a little ahead. It's no big thing at this time. It's all coming along pretty well," Moore said.

The $8.2 million East Campus Recreation Complex should be completed sometime in the fall of 1974, Hart said. The complex will include a gym, Olympic-size swimming pool, weight room and eight hardwood ball- type courts, as well as a variety of convertible playing fields for outdoor sports.

Plans for the complex were originally approved during the term of former SIU President Detweil Morris. Construction has been delayed since 1972 because contractors' bids have been over the original $8.9 million ceiling. The $8.2 million bid was eventually accepted and construction began on the complex last October.

Most of the cement exterior walls and hardwood courts have been completed.

An assistant superintendent for J.L. Simmons Construction Co. said that most earth moving work has been done with the exception of digging the swimming pool, which will start next week.

Renovation of McAndrew Stadium is expected to be finished by July 1. Moore said, "Everything will be all set by football season."

The beams supporting the new seats are made of a special steel, called core-tim, which never needs painting due to a protective rust coat. Construction of the new seating was delayed a year due to problems in obtaining the core-tim.

Raymond Arro, J.L. Simmons ironworker foreman, said that new seating, to accommodate 19,000, should be installed in two to three weeks.

New fall course deals with law's effect on people

A new course, "Law in American Society," will be offered fall semester. The course is listed as Liberal Arts 111, Interdisciplinary Studies.

The course will include faculty from the departments of economics, history, philosophy, political science, sociology, psychology and sociology and will deal with the ways law affects people. The course will include discussions, panels, lectures, guest speakers and media presentations.

Some of the topics will include affirmative action, civil disobedience, crime, obscenity and labor-management relations. The class is recommended for students who want to explore how the law works and possible careers in law.

The class will be worth three semester hours and will be taught in Lounge III at 8 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Correction

In an article in the May 2 Daily Egyptian announcing the Health Education Summer Conference to be conducted by the SIU Department of Health Education, a program called "Self Incorporated" was incorrectly referred to as a preview of a fall semester health education course. The "Inside-Out" program is instructional, educational, which can be utilized in intermediate and secondary grade emotional health classes. The programs can be obtained through Southern Illinois Instructional Television Association and the Department of Health Education.

Bids are now being taken for installation of the electronic scoreboard donated to SIU by Pepsi Co., Moore said. The total cost of the renovation is about $2 million.

Cement walls and supports have been poured for the first floor of the controversial $807,000 parking garage near Flower Hall.

When the two-level garage is completed, it will provide parking for 300 blue-sticker cars. A recommendation from the Traffic and Parking Committee to make 180 of the parking spaces available to red-sticker cars has been presented to President Warren W. Brandt.

"On all of the work, it looks to be going all right," Moore said. "Where we were behind, we're beginning to catch up. I don't see any holdups."

Education, physics students honored as top '75 scholars

Two Southern Illinois students—Mrs. Karen L. Hubble of Olney and David R. Hedin of Sparta—received Academic Excellence Awards from the SIUC School of Technical Careers.

The foundation presents a plaque and $500 check to the top-ranking man and the top-ranking woman of each year’s graduating class. The presentation was made by President Warren W. Brandl, Jr., to Mrs. Hubble, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John P. Doeges of Olney, as an honor student at Olney’s East Richland High School and was vindicated of her 100-graduating class.

She completed a two-year associate degree in physical therapy with highest honors in the School of Technical Careers and worked for two years as a physical therapist and before returning to the campus to complete the bachelor’s degree in elementary education.

Hedin, a 1972 graduate of Sparta High School, completed a degree in physics in three years while holding a part-time job on the campus. He was elected to Phi Kappa Phi and Sigma Pi Sigma honor societies, and to the Illinois Beta Association of Phi Beta Kappa honor society. He plans to enter the graduate school of the University of Wisconsin to concentrate on studies in high energy physics. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Hedin of Sparta.

Inmates help instructors

Teachers also learn at Menard

Editor’s Note: This is the last of two articles on a vocational education program operated at the Menard Correctional Center by the SIUC School of Technical Careers.

MENARD—Moral support may very well be the catalyst that turns teaching into a lifetime profession. The job of directing the education program at the Menard Correctional Center has the tables turned on all teachers.

“It was tough starting out teaching in a place like here,” said instructor Tim Givens. “But the inmates gave me all the support and now I feel like their friend as well as their teacher.”

Givens, along with John Zanotti and Carl Bronson, are instructors in the Menard Career Education Education Project, the most recent effort by the SIUC School of Technical Careers (STC) to upgrade prison vocational training.

Inmate vocational training is nothing new, but SIUC has added a novel twist. Three of the ten vocational training areas at Menard are for college credit. Course credits earned while in the institution may be applied to obtaining an associate degree from SIUC.

“This program involves more than has ever been tried before,” said Murunce Dallam, the project director at Menard and associate dean of the School of Technical Careers. “It allows students to earn college credit while learning a trade.”

Dallam said more students than ever are interested in the program and he hopes that funds for a dental technology sequence will be approved.

Zanotti, a 24-year-old mechanical technician drafting instructor, is the “old-timer” on the STC Menard inmate faculty. SIUC graduate from Johnston City taught the pilot course two years ago and is currently working toward a master’s degree in occupational education.

“The first year we had some inmates really just passing time on the campus,” Zanotti said. “But this year, the inmates are here to learn something.

“Givens, 23-year-old native of Murphysboro with an associate degree from SIUC, reflects a dedication that has drawn praise from inmates. If you can just help a fellow—just have one inmate reach out for help—then it’s all worth it.”

Inmates are not the only ones gaining an education at Menard. "I was nervous about teaching at a maximum security prison. But now I have a different perspective and the inmates in my classes are really just like anyone else,” Givens said.

“Sometimes I forget the students are inmates and at night I wonder what they’re doing,” Zanotti added. “Then it dawned on me that they are inmates.”

Givens pointed out that outside construction under way on cattle testing station

Construction has begun on a Beef Cattle Evaluation Station which is slated to be in operation in September in making weight-gain tests of beef bulls to help cattle growers improve their herds.

The station, for which construction costs have been estimated at $100,000, is being built on a University Farms site about two miles southwest of the campus.

James R. Mates, assistant professor in Animal Industries, explained bull calves will be brought to the station at weaning time and be “pit fed,” or “conventional feeding for 40 days. The rate-of-gain and other feed-use efficiency measures will be determined to help cattlemen in selecting bulls for here improvement.

“While we’ll be able to find out which cattle can grow the fastest with the most food,” Mates said, “The station will have a capacity of 72 animals at a time and will conduct two tests a year, Mates said. Test of the first lot of animals is expected to be completed in December.

Cattlemen using the station will pay fees to cover its operational and financial needs.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the facility were held last week with State Senators Kenneth Buzbee, E. E. Barrow, Terry L. Hubble, Mrs. John P. Doeges of Olney, and John Kifflam, Illinois Livestock Association representatives in attendance.

An advisory committee of representatives of the Animal Industries Department, and area cattle producers, will supervise management of the station.

General construction contractor for the facility is J. L. Robinson Construction Co., Carbondale, while the electrical work will be handled by Hugh Bowles of Carbondale. Plumbing and heating by Goldenrod Plumbing.

Area pair win Powell grants

The Political Science Department has announced that Howard Powell, son of the 1975-76 Daisy Powell Memorial Scholarship.

Howard Barry Wesley of Vergennes, Ill., and Barbara C. Leavitt of Olina Grove will receive stipends of approximately $900 each. The scholarships are named in memory of the wife of the late Paul Powell, former Illinois Secretary of State.

Powell, a President’s Scholar, has worked in the Jackson County treasurer’s office and has served as an intern in the state attorney’s office. He plans to attend law school.

Ms. Leavitt, also a President’s Scholar, has worked in the office of the Randolph County treasurer and has been active in political affairs of Randolph and Jackson County officials.

The scholarships are awarded on the basis of academic achievement, financial need, and participation in civic and political activities.

CCHS singers win 2 awards

Sixty-six Carbondale Community High School singers climbed off of two Greyhound buses in Carbondale last week tired but happy.

Sangchet between grueling auditions and from the nation’s capital were four concerts, a visit to old Williamsburg, a cruise on the Potomac River and in general six days of excitement for the students.

As souvenirs, the Swing Choir and general CCHS crew brought back bronze awards from the Festival of National Music competition.

“I’m really quite happy about it,” said Joseph Shiplett, director of the CCHS Fine Arts Department. “The judges were really rather selective.”

The Association of Music Educators and Professional Musicians, which sponsored the festival, gives awards to groups showing a high degree of professionalism, Shiplett said.

“They give a gold, silver, bronze and merit award, but they don’t have to give any at all. Last year they didn’t give out all the awards,” Shiplett added.

CCHS choir members raised the $10,000 needed to make the trip by selling candy, light bulbs and spaghetti dinners. Most of came from donations from the City of Carbondale and various organizations.
City to go war on weeds

Carbondale officials announced the city will soon begin its annual campaign of cutting and spraying weeds along roadways and vacant lots. Bill Boyd, public works director, said the city will cut weeds along roads and city property and also on private lots.

"The city spent about $85 for an average yard of 50 by 100 feet," Boyd said.

The owner will also have to pay any fines assessed for allowing the property to become overgrown. Weeds and grass over six inches tall violate city ordinances, Boyd said.

Boyd said the property owner is billed for the grass cutting when the owner's identity is known. When the owner is unidentified, the property is posted in violation for seven days and property records are checked to determine ownership, Boyd said.

After seven days notice, the yard is mowed and a bill sent to the owner. Failure to pay results in a lien being placed on the property.

"The city must pay $3 for each lien. This is not a money-making deal. The city doesn't break even on grass cutting," Boyd commented.

"The city has contracted both the mowing of public land and the mowing of private land to outside firms," Boyd said.

The Carbondale Mosquito Abatement District will mow the city land and Bill Kelley, a private contractor, will mow the private lots judged as code violations.

Part of Kelley's duties will be to patrol the city looking for lots in violation of the six-inch limit, Boyd said.

A photograph will be taken before the lot is posted as a violation and another will be taken after the mowing is done to show work has been done," Boyd said.

Kelley said mowing would begin within a week.

_Giant City bus riders learn pride in safety_

What happens to children as a heart attack? They panic. Do they know how to handle the situation?

The 250 school children who ride Giant City Consolidated School District buses know what to do thanks to John Boyer, Giant City School Director of Transportation. Boyer, who acts not only as transportation director, but also as school bus driver, said the program to instruct children on bus safety was his brainchild. The program consists of mock drills conducted twice a week on the district's two buses and two vans.

"The bus driver feigns a heart attack daily mile age. (the buses is over 250), the children attempt to help the driver. The entire evacuation process takes 20 seconds. Boyer said.

"When we first started, the kids weren't too enthusiastic," said Boyer, "but now they can't wait for the next drill. I try to keep adding to it, to give it a different angle that will keep interest alive.

"The State of Illinois requires that each school bus have at least two drills per year, not the two per week that Boyer requires. Because of the intensive Giant City program, Boyer says "bus safety comes to the students automatically." In addition to the drills, Boyer inspects the buses every day, and hands out mechanical inspection sheets to each driver once a week.

Superintendent Kuhl will get into the safety act this month when he stops the buses at a random point on their route to inspect them. "We won't do this for the element of surprise," he said, "but to make the simulation more real.

Kuhl said the district plans "to continue the fundamental idea of the program." He added that the program could work for other communities. "The people involved must get their interest involved, it's difficult to bring off."

A new class for spring will be offered to the boys. The new class is a 12-week course that meets once a week and will be taught by Glen H. Middlebrooke. The course will focus on swimming and will be held at the SIU pool. The class will be open to all students who are interested in improving their swimming skills.

Some instructors view physical education as recreational in nature or purely as a means of social interaction, while others view it as a necessary component of the curriculum. Therefore, it is important to ensure that the classes are offered in a way that appeals to a wide range of students.

The new class is expected to be popular among students who are looking to improve their swimming skills. The class will be held on Tuesdays from 2:00 PM to 3:00 PM, and will be limited to 10 students per class. Students interested in registering for the class should contact Glen H. Middlebrooke at ext. 4444.

Salukis impressive in first MVC competition

SIU's entrance in the Missouri Valley Conference spring sports tournament has been a success. The Salukis captured their first MVC title in women's track and field, winning the conference championship.

Track

SIU's track team, which had won the Illinois Intercollegiates a week earlier, breezed to the MVC title this weekend. The Salukis won four out of four events and set or tied records in three events but were defeated by a team of high schoolers.

The win didn't make SIU the state relay team from breaking a record, however. Wichita State's George Halsey and Earl Bigelow teamed for a 1-2-3-4 run, shattering the old record of 4:13.38 set by Memphis State. Halsey also broke the 440 intermediate relay and evening even-

The Salukis captured eight of 12 running events, won four out of four field events. SIU also set or tied records in three events but were defeated by a team of high schoolers.

The Salukis gave the West Texas State crown. The Salukis opened the tournament with a win but were beaten by Tulsa 6-4, and 11-10. SIU finished third in the College World Series, which was their first appearance.

Five Saluki players were selected by the Baseball Coaches of the Missouri Valley Conference all-conference squad.

The Salukis' impressive showing in the MVC competition is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the coaches and athletes. The Salukis have proven that they are a strong and competitive team, and they are expected to continue their success in future competitions.
