Women picket band's name

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

What's in a name? When the name of Rapeman, a Japanese comic book about a vigilante who fights the system, but is portrayed as a good guy, was used by a band to give its persona, some people believe the name is inappropriate. Schultz compared the protest to the controversy that surrounds the movie "Last Temptation of Christ," which received protests for its portrayal of the life of Christ.

Illuminated signs reading "Rapeman, oppression, oppression, women," and "don't know the name, pros, women," about 15 women marched in a circle for an hour in the rain, while the band's music erupted from the bar each time a patron entered or exited.

Matt Schultz, producer of the show and a senior in cinema and photography, said the protesters are taking the name out of context.

"Granted rap music is bad," Schultz said, "but (the protesters) don't know the context."

One of the protesters, Bill Neal, 21, said she was at the concert Thursday night, and wanted to go back to the club to support the band. "I don't think you should be out here picketing," she said.

Schultz said the name was derived from a violent Japanese comic book about a vigilante who calls himself Rapeman. The character Rapeman fights the system, but is portrayed as a good guy, he said.

Schultz compared the protest to the controversy that surrounds the movie "Last Temptation of Christ," which received protests for its portrayal of the life of Christ.

"It's unimportant what is in the name," Schultz said.

By one of the protesters, who did not want to be named, was a better person to represent him than someone who's known him his entire life.

"The attitude that women accept in this town is worse than any name (name)," she said.

Protesters picket outside Two Hearts against the club's booking of the band "Rapeman" Thursday night. Some people claimed the name of the band promoted sexual violence.

A co-owner of Two Hearts Inc., Terry Cravins, addressed the protesters.

"The name of this band is oppressive to me. All I'm doing is honoring a legal contract (with Schultz)."

"I totally agree with what these women are doing," Cravins said. "Some of these women are doing it because they have a feeling this is not right.

When you're the brother of a presidential candidate, you do more than sit on the sidelines and watch the action.

William "Bucky" Bush, the brother of Republican presidential candidate George Bush, spent a wet Sunday afternoon in Okawville, talking with voters and drumming up support for the Republican presidential candidate.

At a gathering coinciding with the community's annual Wheat Festival, Bush answered questions concerning his brother's presidential campaign as well as giving his support to Sen. Ralph Dunn in his race bid for state senator in the 48th senatorial district and to Patrick Kelley, who is running for the 22nd Congressional District's seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Bush, a St. Louis businessman, said he spends four to six weeks per year traveling around Missouri and Illinois to help his brother's presidential bid. "He race in Illinois is expected to be close," he said.

Richard Nitz will testify that he didn't kill Michael D. Miley and testimony will be given to show that Nitz could not have killed Miley. Nitz's attorney said during the defense's opening statements.

"Public Defender Larry Broeking said Friday he will present four points which will prove Nitz is innocent.

Nitz is charged with the April 6 murder of Miley.

Broeking said he would recreate for the jury the day the murder is said to have occurred and "the way he (Miley) moved about." He also made reference to the location the murder is thought to have occurred.

Broeking said the final element of the defense will include Nitz's testimony that he didn't kill Miley.

David Knight, an acquaintance of Nitz's, said he and Nitz played pool on a Thursday at a Carbondale bar. Knight said on Saturday that same week he went to a party at Nitz's trailer.

Earlier testimony placed Nitz at the Kentucky Oaks Mall in Paducah on the Thursday and Friday following the murder. Nitz is alleged to have purchased items with Miley's credit cards.

Knight said he believes they were purchased in that weekend and reports from state authorities indicate the credit card purchases were made on April 7 and 8. Broeking said the trial could end as early as Thursday.

The trial will resume at 9:30 a.m. today at the Williamson County Courthouse.

8 victims of Gilbert discovered

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico (UPI) — Rescue workers Sunday found eight more bodies of the estimated 300 people missing a day after a hurricane-sweeping four passenger-filled buses in the single most deadly blow of Hurricane Gilbert, officials said.

In the northeastern coastal state of Tamaulipas at Mexico's northeastern border with the United States, authorities said widespread flooding in rural areas had isolated an unknown number of people, many were said to be without shelter, food or cooking utensils.

The U.S. Coast Guard sent helicopters on rescue operations to two northern Mexico villages endangered by high water brought on by Hurricane Gilbert.

Gene Maestas, a spokesman at a temporary Coast Guard command post at the Border Patrol headquarters at Cuentro Christi, Texas, identified the villages as Colorado de Arbo, 60 miles south of Laredo, and San Fernando, 60 miles southwest of Laredo, Texas, near the Gulf of Mexico coast.

"There is the threat of a dam breaking in Colorado de Arbo, on people living in a flood," Maestas said.

"Once that rescue operation was under way, we got word of another situation where people were in generally tough shape. The report said 300 people were on their rooftops or in trees at San Fernando, and so we will go there also."

Rescue crews were walking along the banks or in the now shallow waters of the Santa Catarina river in Monterrey discovered eight more bodies Sunday and brought them to the morgue of the Civil hospital, the hospital spokesman said.

Before Sunday's discovery, Nuevo Leon Gov. Jorge Trevino said 60 people had died in the Monterrey flood, and reports from state authorities indicate the credit card purchases were made on April 7 and 8. Broeking said the trial could end as early as Thursday.

The trial will resume at 9:30 a.m. today at the Williamson County Courthouse.

Money hits right chord with oldies

Eddie Money thrilled a rather small Carbondale audience Friday night when he appeared at the Arena to support his new album, "Nothing to Lose."

Concert Review

Money, dressed in blue jeans and a sweatshirt, began the concert with "Two Tickets to Paradise," and then played songs from his new album, including the first single, "Walk or Water."

He received the best response, however, when he played his older, more popular songs, such as "Can't Hold Back" and "Take Me Home Tonight." Including the first single, "Paradise," he played his older, more popular night, ranging from the audience, asking them to clap and sing along.

Money talked about his memories of SUIC, where he first opened up for Styx in the late 1970's. "We showed them who the hell we are," he told the crowd. Money also gave reassures to the title of his new album.

"My wife left me. My girlfriend got pregnant, so I said, 'Hey, I'd better go lose,'" he said.

The group encored playing "Shakin'" and Eddie Money played songs from his new album "Nothing to Lose" but it was his old hits which drew the largest response from a small crowd at the Arena Friday night.

"Everybody Rock n Roll the Place." The encore gave the rest of the band an opportunity to perform short solos on their instruments.

All in all, Money did an excellent job of getting his feelings across while keeping the audience's interest.

The Tull opened to mixed responses from the crowd. The band's lead singer spent much of his time on stage singing on his back, ending the performance by climbing through several rows of the audience, stopping on chairs and people.

Emcee works hard for a good laugh

Student begins career in bathroom

David Romaneli has a job that causes people to laugh at him. Romaneli, a sophomore in speech communications, worked at Zany's, a comedy bar in Chicago on his back, ending the performance by climbing through several rows of the audience, stopping on chairs and people.

With priesthood being Romaneli's first choice as a profession, the whole idea of no sex caused him to quickly re-think his future, he joked. "It always knew I wanted to talk in front of people and it just started to get funny," Romaneli said.

Romaneli got his first start at Jany's, a comedy bar in Chicago.

A teenage comedy competition prompted him to enter, writing his own material the night before the show. Locking himself in the bathroom, Romaneli proceeded to make a tape of the material he had written, "I always knew I wanted to talk in front of people and it just started to get funny," Romaneli said.

Administrators miss punchline on raises

EVERY COMEDIAN knows the value of good timing. A zinger delivered at the wrong time, say at a funeral, can have the wrong effect.

The Board of Trustees must be too busy to watch much television, or would have foreseen the consequences of its actions at the September meeting.

The Trustees tinker was the salary increases afforded President John C. Guyon and Chancellor Lawrence Pettit. If the meeting were a sit-com, the network would have canceled.

Discussing raises about salaries in the middle of a mock funeral for education staged by a small groups of students that wanted to underscore their displeasure with a tuition increase.

THE STUDENTS who demonstrated at the Board of Trustees meeting probably are making too much of the relationship between the tuition increase and the salary increases. But, their wrath should tell the board to carefully reconsider its process for doing out money.

Most employees have at least part of their salary based on performance. Those employees who perform best, can expect the best salary increase.

At SIU-C, a faculty member does not get a merit raise until after performance has been evaluated. That's logical.

In the case of the chancellor and president, though, there has been no evaluation. We haven't seen a list of accomplishments from either the president's or chancellor's offices.

WE DON'T DOUBT the need for the University to keep pace with administrative salaries at other institutions. Administrators are just as likely to jump ship if there is a significantly better financial package offered elsewhere.

While we agree that protecting a crisis point in terms of obtaining state funding, we have to want the best leaders available to lead our battle for the bucks.

And, from what we have seen, Chancellor Pettit has been successful in helping put together a coalition to fight for more money for education. President Guyon has been responsible in dealing with the smaller budget. Both have been the subject of criticism: Pettit for lavish spending at Stone House and the administration's dealing with the collective bargaining issue and Guyon for hiring Jim Hart as Athletics Director.

NEITHER ONE has undergone the kind of review expected of the faculty. We assume they will in the near future.

Only after the review will we know how the minuses and pluses of each administrator's performance last year will balance each other.

While the board plans its calendar for the coming year, we suggest it remember this year's hoopla over salary increases.

Evaluating the performance of administrators before giving them raises, will take some of the sting out of what this year was, for many, an unpopular decision.

Letters

Administrators are flunking

I really appreciate your recent editorials and letters from students (faculty, where are you?) decrying the warped priorities of this administration.

Another example: while enrollment is higher than ever and our introductory courses are full, we have to use fewer films and sacrifice the traditional needs, but in order to minimize cost. This is the result of one of the so-called savings instituted by a former vice-president of this place, now president. This so-called economy measure did not really save any money; it merely transferred the cost to departmental budgets instead of compensation.

What it did do is "redefine" the administration a bit differently now $1 out of $3 is 33.3% of the cost. Notice the new furnishings for the president's office, the expansion of the so-called chancellor's office, and the new $100,000 salary for the former vice-president.

By the way, I thought the main justification for the Chancellor is that he would bring in more money. Why then, does the University have to take the raises out of students through tuition increases? If we could grade administrators, I'd award the chancellor and provost F's with a heart.

Hopes fading for the Green Bras; women choose pregnancy over war

IN RECENT days, three distraught young women have told me that if called to the Army, they will become pregnant.

"And I'll stay pregnant," one of them said. "I've got 35 pounds of fat on me until I'm too old to go." This alone does not impress me. Despite what some shrill female fanatics may believe, I have long admired the new, modern, liberated women that have supported their goals. Although they rejected my suggestion, I believe that ERA could be passed in Illinois by brute force like everyone else does.

And I had assumed that as female-persons sought and won equality, they also would be willing to accept the same responsibilities, as men.

I had imagined an entire special forces army unit made up of the toughest of women. Something like the Green Berets. It could be called the Green Bras.

So, I'm surprised to hear liberated women now saying that if called to the Army, they will become pregnant. Why, I just can't believe that able-bodied female persons are now saying they don't want to serve as GI's, that they will have abortions instead.

Especially those women who so splendidly swear and drink and talk mean and jag and slam the race, yet around and about this mess, as I used to say before I became enlightened, seem to be very touchy.

I had imagined an entire special forces army unit made up of the toughest of women. Something like the Green Berets. It could be called the Green Bras.

And I saw myself baking cookies and fruitcakes and sending them off to Private Pam and Sergeant Jan and Lieutenant Tammy. Or standing at the dock, waving goodbye to their troopship, while singing "Over There, Over There," and "I Won't Sit Under the Apple Tree With Anyone Else But You," and shouting: "Give 'em hell, female-persons."

I was even planning to volunteer to work at a local USO, serving coffee and cocktails and little slice of bourbon to the female GI-persons.

INSTEAD, I now have a frightening vision of millions and millions of young women, ages 18 to 21, lumbering with draft-dodging engagements. An entire baby boom, bought on by the fear of being classified i-a, to collapse of pharmaceutical companies that made the pill.

Oh, I'm disappointed. I hadn't imagined that the same female-persons who hope so aggressively down the street, lives jailing boot-tackling thumping, and voices snarling, could now be saying: "I'm going to stay pregnant." John Wayne never said that. But more than being disappointed, I'm now worried. Although I don't expect this country to get into a shooting war, you never know. And I had counted on today's modern young female-persons to pull us through to victory, or at least a draw.

THE REASON I was coming on the female-persons is that I don't have much confidence in the young male-persons.

My final, flickering hope that America's young males could defend this country against an invasion by, say, the Cuban army, faded a few days ago.

That was when I picked up a newspaper and saw a picture of a group of students at Yale who were holding an anti-registration rally. And in the front rank of the demonstrators was a young man holding a sign that said: "Bombs Is Worth Dying For."

DURING THE anti-war days of the 1960s and '70s, I saw a lot of placards bearing slogans like: "Don't Napalm Babies," "Make Love Not War," "Hey, Joe, We Won't Go," and hundreds of others.

But I never saw one that put it as bluntly as: Nothing Is Worth Dying For.

In a, I respect that young man. He's not trying to kid anyone about moral issues, he's just plain idealism, a love of peace, a hatred of aggression.

He just doesn't want anybody shooting at him, and that's that.

I saw myself baking cookies and fruitcakes and sending them off to Private Pam and Sergeant Jan and Lieutenant Tammy.

Had this kid lived more than 20 years ago, he might have stood up at the Virginia Tech, college of Virginia, as Patrick Henry did, and shouted:

"IF LIFE so dear or peace so holy that you'd be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Foul it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take, but as for me, I will stand with God and if you will not have a man that you can't give me liberty, OK, then I'll take chains and slavery, you know just how it is.

Or in 1778 he might have stood on the British gallows, as Nathan Hale did, and said, as the rope was placed around his neck:

"I only regret that I have but one life to lose, sir, — actually, what I regret is that I'm here. How about probation?"

AND IN 1861, he might have stood through a highly inaugural address, as John F. Kennedy did, and said:

"And so, my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you: ask what you can do for your country. What I wanna ask is, will somebody please go to every country, and ask that, huh?"
Radio club helps contact Jamaica

By Diana Miyelle Staff Writer

The Amateur Radio Club on campus is aiding local people in contacting relatives in Jamaica following the strike of Hurricane Gilbert. The Federal Communications Commission has set aside two amateur frequencies to be used for emergencies and medical supplies only, Kelly Jones, senior in radio and television and president of the Amateur Radio Club, said.

Michael Hoshiko, adviser of the Amateur Club and trustee of its station, said the SW club is not generally geared for emergencies, but it is doing its best to help. He said the messages may take a few hours to a few days to be answered, depending on their destination.

"We pass on the names of the people we are asking about to the designated operator. That operator passes the names to the operator in Kingston," Jones said.

Debbie Lewis, senior in electrical engineering, said she contacted the Amateur Radio Club last week to try to contact her mother in Kingston. Lewis said the club sent the message on Friday but had not received an answer.

"I was able to get through to my mother on Friday night after the phone lines were fixed," Lewis said. "Hoshiko said with these emergencies the people on the other end are so swamped with messages, they try to take the crucial messages first."

Jones said the Cancun frequency had begun taking reports on Friday.

"Some clubs are very organized to help with the emergencies. Our club on campus is a loose-knit group. People in the club have lots of interests," Hoshiko said.

Interested people may get together to do what they can when these emergencies strike, Hoshiko said. "But our club is not really geared for emergencies," he said.
Police dispersed about 500 people from a Lewis Park party Saturday morning, as well as arresting one person for unlawful assembly.

Carbondale, SIU-C and Jackson police were called to disperse the large crowd at BOO E. Grand after they prevented an ambulance from reacting an injured person and created other disturbances and complaints, police Sgt. Bob Goro said.

William A. Bauel, 36, was charged for forging a prescription form to obtain a controlled substance from the Wal-Mart pharmacy, 1130 E. Main, Saturday at 3:30 p.m., police said. Bauel, who resides at 700 S. Lewis Lane, was taken to the Jackson County jail where he is waiting for an appearance before a judge.

The pharmacy's manager refused to comment on the incident.

A Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers night manager chased an unknown man after a window on the east side of the building was shattered at 3:15 a.m., police said. Wendy's is located at 508 E. Walnut.

Nassan Karamzadeh, the night manager, said a 5-foot, 10-inch, man weighing about 220 pounds and wearing blue jeans and a dark shirt was arguing with other customers in the ordering line and was "looking for trouble." After the disruption, the man and two unidentified men left the restaurant and broke the window five minutes later, Karamzadeh said.

Karamzadeh chased the man who created the initial disturbance to Taco Bell, which is across the street from Wendy's, but stopped.

The damage to the window is estimated at $600, police said.

Seven people were charged with underage consumption of alcohol at Sidetracks, 101 W. College, and two were charged at T-Birds' 111 N. Washington, police said.

Democratic party is the "ragtag and faggotry" of the platform.

Unlike the Republican platform, Bush said, the Democrats created a platform with a lot of little votes.

"Now we have to smoke out where they stand," he said.

A good opportunity for this, Bush said, will be during the debate between the candidates, scheduled for Sept. 25.

Bush acknowledged Dukakis' excellent debating skills - having been part of a debate program.

A small group gathered in Carbondale’s Central Plaza to protest a proposal before Congress to provide non-lethal aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. Tom Hinsold, a member of a group calling themselves the Pledge of Resistance, said during the protest Saturday afternoon that any aid to the Contras will “sabotage any chance for peace” in the Central American country.

“If the United States didn’t send money, they (the Contras) would be more willing to sit at the peace table,” he said.

The group is protesting an amendment to the Defense Department Authorization Bill allowing over $27 million in non-lethal aid - food, medicine and clothing - to be sent to the Contras.

The bill was approved by the Senate on Aug. 10 and is in committee awaiting final approval. The bill is expected to be voted on by late September. Fudge for Resistance is protesting the possible addition to the amendment, by President Ronald Reagan, of a military clause that will allow military aid to be sent if the region is found to be in a state of emergency.

To show their dissatisfaction with the bill, the group gathered to drink Nicaraguan coffee, banned in the United States because of an embargo against the country.

Hinsold, along with many others from the group, has visited Nicaragua.

The bill is expected to be voted on by late September.

Age of ancient civilizations determined by living trees

By Lora Roberson

By matching the patterns of tree rings in the wood from sample buildings to living trees, Peter Kuniholm, professor of archaeology and Oriental Studies at Cornell University, has dated more than 2,786 samples dating from the middle to late period to the present.

Kuniholm opened the 1988-89 University Honors Lecture Series Sept. 13 with a slide lecture presentation on dendrochronology, the science of tree-ring dating.

"It's kind of an exercise in pattern-reading," Kuniholm said referring to the science.

Kuniholm described tree rings as being "just as recognizable as a thumbprint on a policeman's bloter."

"IF THE wood of the house did not come from the area, Kuniholm said he would have to go to other forests to try to find a match. If he did find a match, the area would be included in the chronology master that is made for each region.

Kuniholm also described tree rings as being "just recognizable as a thumb-print on a policeman's bloter." Trees usually grow about one ring a year, he said, with thin rings signifying a dry year and thick rings indicating a wet year.

An article in the New York Times! April 1988 issue said dendrochronology was established in 1910 by Andrew Elliott Douglas of the University of Arizona. Recently Justine and water samples to "extend dendrochronology to objects almost as old as the last Ice Age."

KUNIHOLM SAID dendrochronology is rarely used at the University of Arizona and they have the largest dendrochronology lab. Besides figuring out the dates, buildings, Kuniholm said dendrochronology is used to solve chronological problems with history and to understand regional tree-ring response to climatic changes.

Kuniholm did not mention the average life span of particular trees, but he did have a piece of juniper in his collection from Mount Tumulus site in Gordion, Turkey that was 765-years-old when it was cut in 725 B.C.

Kuniholm said tree-dating is the only accurate method for dating objects to the exact year.

His slides included a chart of fertility figurines from the Neolithic to the Bronze age with dates ranging from 4,000 to 2,500 B.C.

1. We started out with a very simple idea.
   To make electronic typewriters and word processors that have lots of great features but are very simple to use.
   So simple you don't have to keep one eye on your typing and one eye on the instruction manual.
   So simple you don't need a degree in computer programming to operate.
   So simple they can even make a confused one-type confusion at the keyboard.

2. We make the simplest typewriter in memory.
   You just may call it the simplest typewriter in memory.
   So many features like a character editable memory you can access with the same flip of a switch.
   Combined with the 16 character LCD display, you can proofread, correct and make changes before you ever put anything done on paper.

Our engineers raked their brains so you won't have to.

At Smith Corona, simplicity is the mother of invention.

Call it ergonomics.
Call it programming to operate them.
Call it simple so simple you've never seen before...
No tangles.
No complicated threading.
No tangles.

Kuniholm said he has used dendrochronology to date historical sites, ancient buildings and prehistoric civilizations in Greece, Turkey, and Yugoslavia. He has just returned from a trip in the Mediterranean with a quarter ton of samples from items like coffins and ship-wrecks.

He is also in contact with the Soviet Union to try and sample their forests and his students at Cornell are still working on samples from the forests in Istanbul, Turkey, the last building that they have investigated.

Kuniholm said he started doing dendrochronology in 1975 in Gordiese, Turkey for his dissertation.

track.

"We started to lay up and let off," Tompkins said. "It was hard for us to pick back up.

"We had trouble with the pass rush and the balls were very effective. We had some key plays in spots, but it wasn't very pretty.

Senior nose tackle Brad Crease concurred.

"We took it to them early, but we got a little satisfied and, 'boom,' they hit the big play," Crease said. "We missed some tackles when we needed to wrap them up and tackle better."

A bright spot noticed by Rhoades was the play of No. 2 quarterback, freshman Scott Gabbert, and the second string offense. Gabbert's group scored the third Saluki touchdown and took the ball to the two-yard line before letting the field goal crew take over.

"They played well," Rhoades said. "It was their time to play."

Gabbert said it was good to get some playing time under his belt.

"It was exciting, but I tried to stay calm," he said. "Everyone was rooting for me to do a good job, so that made my job a lot easier.

"Coach said it didn't matter what the score was, the second team was going in on the third series. He said depending on our performance we might go in again. The guys on the line were amazing."

No. 1 quarterback Fred Gibson said he was impressed with the play of Gabbert.

"Scott had a lot of poise," Gibson said. "That's a big relief knowing the second team offense can come in and do a good job like they did."

teammates, former setter Barb Clark said.

The All-State and All-American status was always secondary to Locke's commitment to the team.

In fact, Locke's best memory as a player was not the individual awards, but having the Saluki capture in her senior season the only tournament championship of her four years.

In accepting the plaque which will hang in the Student Center along with 121 others, Locke said it was more meaningful than any award she had ever received. "It's more personal, because whoever nominated me or supported me for it knew of me as a person, not a list of statistics."

If ever there is a reason to induct someone into a Hall of Fame, it is because they are people, full of emotion and memories. In welcoming, Faber-Graham and Locke, the selection committee made good choices.

Swing through South turns into nightmare for volleyball’s Hunter

By Lisa Wars
Staff Writer

Women’s volleyball coach Debbie Hunter said she is exasperated after watching her team lose three matches this weekend. The team came in third in the four-team Georgia tournament at 1-2. The Salukis lost Sunday to Clemson 15-4, 10-15, 7-15, 16-15.

"This weekend was a coaching nightmare," Hunter said. "We wanted to improve our ball control, but we had too many hitting mistakes." Clemson’s Jen Feeley led with 12 kills and 5 service aces. Amy Vaughan had nine kills and one ace.

"We need to practice as hard as we can and we hope to smooth things out by Friday," Hunter said of the 3-7 team’s upcoming match with Missouri. Statistics were not recorded for SIU-C from the Clemson match.

In the 15-10, 15-12, 9-15, 15-6 loss to Georgia, Lori Simpson led with 15 kills. Nina Brackins was a close second with 14 kills. Beth Winscott had 20 digs. Teri Noble had four aces.

"The seniors were not working out this weekend, so I was steering to other options," Hunter said. "I tried to find the right combinations by inserting new kids into the system. (Debbie) Briscoe and (Terry) Schutheinrich became viable candidates for play sooner (in the season) than I thought," Hunter said.

Lori Simpson was elected to the All-Tournament team. She had 42 kills.

"Lori was strong offensively this weekend, not including the Clemson match," Hunter said. "I thought," she said. "I told them to be patient for many hitting mistakes.”

Salary committee security official, Sub Song, denied any security problem and claimed a customs inspector allowed the athletes to retain their ammunition because of its small quantity. The customs officials said they were unaware of any such permission, leaving the possibility the ammunition went through metal detectors at Kimpo and the entrance to the athletes’ village.

The behavior of some U.S. athletes continued to provoke controversy.

Olympics flowing smoothly despite controversy

SEUL, South Korea (UP) — The Summer Olympics moved smoothly through its first full competition day Sunday with a full in student protests, in Seoul but with early U.S. athletic successes dogged by a security breach and controversy over the behavior of American athletes.

Irina Chibova of the Soviet Union won the first gold medal of the 16-day Games in the women's air rifle. The first U.S. medals came in women's platform diving as China's 17-year-old Xia Yanmei won the gold followed by Americans Michele Mitchell with silver and Wendy Williams with the bronze.

Hundreds of thousands of foreign and Korean spectators crowded around into the sprawling Olympic complexes, site complexes, enjoying brilliant fall weather and the spectators within.

For the first day in a week, Seoul's Olympic city streets and campuses were undisturbed by radical students' protests. The first day of students' protests. The students are demanding democracy in South Korea and charge the Games highlighted a rising tension with North Korea.

But South Korea's massive security forces have suffered no incidents. Officials said three U.S. athletes inadvertently brought 1.8 pounds of pistol ammunition through airport customs and into the heavily secured athletes' residence village.

The modern pentathlon came to them in the event's pistol-shooting course, to declare their legs last week, said team coach Dan Steinman.

Interception ends Murray State drive

Proctor miscue spells defeat

By David Galliannetti
Staff Writer

The Salukis defense had fans at McAndrew Stadium on the edge of their seats in the first half, but made up for the extra stress as the final seconds ticked away.

With four seconds to go and the ball on the 14-yard line, Murray State quarterback Michael Proctor threw the ball into the hands of Saluki inside linebacker Kevin Kilgallon, who jubilantly ran the clock and preserved a 28-21 victory.

Despite the game being the last minute, head coach Rick Rhodes said he wasn't really worried.

"During that last minute I thought we were in good shape," said Rhodes, who picked up his first victory at SIU-C in front of an estimated 22,000 fans.

"If Proctor you never know what is going to happen," he said. "Kilgallon made a great break and had a great catch."

The Salukis' offense scored early and scored often. When the dust of the first quarter cleared, SIU-C had a 13-0 lead. But then Proctor took over.

The Racers put 14 points on the board in the second quarter and sent the Salukis' offense to their locker room with a lead of only a touchdown.

Inductees pay homage to Hall

They expressed their gratitude in smiles and in hugs. They looked to us, while reliving the memories of an era in women's collegiate sports nearly a decade past. But best of all, Sue Faber-Grimm and Sonya Locke shared their joy.

The two could not have been truer to their school as when they accepted induction into the 10-year-old SIU-C Sports Hall of Fame at a brunch in their honor Saturday.

With humility and with elan, they paid tribute to the institution which had offered them a chance to play, and in doing so, paid tribute to themselves.

The induction also included baseball player Jim Dryer. But the star outfielder of the 1971 College World Series runnerup could not attend because he was busy slugging home runs for the Minnesota Twins.

Thus the stage belonged to Faber-Grimm, the first Saluki women's basketball player to have her uniform number retired, and to Locke, the most dominating figure in Saluki women's volleyball lore.

Faber-Grimm is a curly-haired mother of two, Kelly is 3 and Dana is 6 months. She and her husband Dan live in her home state of Nebraska.

"We found that the acceptance speech they begin to fear, remembering how her mother came to see her play in 1981, she said her mother sat with her eyes closed, the whole time, afraid that if they opened, another injury would beset her daughter's career.

Locke twice moved away from the press box and wiped away her tears — first for her mother sitting in the front row, second for her older brother, who was buried by William who died four years ago.

"I knew that if I was to say something about my father, I would be lying," she said. "It wasn't the type to follow me to the press box, but he gave me the encouragement by just being there for me."

Just as Locke's father was always there for her, Locke was always there for her mother.
