City Taxicab Fares Vary, Campus Inquiry Discloses

By John Durbin

Apparent inconsistencies exist in fares charged by Carbondale's two taxicab companies, according to an SIU student.

The firms—Yellow Cab Co. and Home Cab Co.—have asked the Carbondale City Council for permission to increase their rates. A special committee headed by Councilman Joseph Ragadale will hear evidence presented by the companies as soon as it is compiled.

Gus says if there was a cash market for shop and mud, SIU could furnish enough to pay off the national debt.

SIU Student Fined, Placed On Probation

An SIU student pleaded guilty Thursday in Jackson County Circuit Court to a theft as a result of his unauthorized use of a University car.

States Attorney Richard Richman said Charles E. Syihla, 19, Brookfield, was placed on probation for two years, fined $250 plus $15 court costs and ordered to make restitution for $1,600 damage incurred to the vehicle.

SIU Security Police said the car driven by Syihla without permission left Interstate 57 about 7 miles north of Benton, Oct. 30, 1967.

Edward James, manager of the Yellow Cab Co., said that his company charges an additional fare ranging from 75 cents to $2 on more than two or three parcels per passenger. The exact amount is determined by the size and amount of extra pieces of luggage or bags. The amount charged is left up to the discretion of the driver since no definite scale is set up in advance.

William Reid, owner of the Home Cab Co., was out of town and unavailable for comment but a dispatcher, Vivian Farmer, said additional charges are made for extra baggage. She said the charges range from $1 for a small trunk to about $3 depending upon the size and number of parcels.

George Fleerage, city attorney, said city ordinance 1327 which covers the Regulation and Operation of Taxicabs in the city of Carbondale makes no mention of whether baggage, bags, and packages may be charged to the passenger's fare.

Fleerage stated that the present system of assessing fares is in accordance to the number of passengers and zones.

Student Union Meeting Draws Small Crowd

The Student Workers Union meeting held last night in Purr Auditorium was greeted with little response as eight student employees attended.

A five member planning committee was formed and they are scheduled to meet this afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Student Government office of the University Center. All students interested in joining the union are asked to attend.

Ray Lenzi, student body president, was scheduled to address the meeting on the future of the union. He declined to give his talk because of the small attendance. He said the "across the board and ten cent pay increase may have satisfied the students and resulted in such a poor turnout."

Lenzi went on to say that he talked of a possible student union may have been a factor, not if the only one, in the student pay raise to a $1.15.

Only 10 Per Cent Granted

Scholarships Go Begging

SIU had 2,500 tuition and fees scholarships available last year through the Illinois State Grant Program but only 250 were granted, according to Charles Gray, assistant coordinator of scholarships.

Gray said the primary reason for not granting the primary reason so few were granted was that the deadline for last year was strictly enforced and five months earlier than this year.

In order to be eligible, SIU students must be citizens of the U.S. residents of Illinois, not on academic or disciplinary probation for the coming year, full-time undergraduates not presently receiving a state scholarship, and able to demonstrate financial need.

Gray said this program excludes those on state teachers, military, SIU, and state vocational rehabilitation scholarships.

To apply a student must fill up a questionnaire at Room 211, building B at Washington Square. The questionnaire must be returned before an application can be submitted.

The application, once completed, must be forwarded by the student to the state and be post marked on or before the Feb. 1 deadline.

Gray said many students at state colleges and universities overseas who are eligible do not know the scholarships are available.

Student Cyclist Hurt

In Collison With Car

An SIU student was reported in fair condition Thursday afternoon after the motorcycle he was driving slammed into the side of a car on W. Mill Street.

Roland N. Halliday, 20, Norwalk, Conn., was going west on Mill Street when his cycle hit a car driven by K. V. Chandrasekharaj, 304 1/2 E. Hester St., which was heading north crossing the intersection from Stevenson Arms Dormitory.

A spokesman for Doctor's Hospital said Halliday was being transferred to a St. Louis hospital.

Carbondale Police Officer Mike Deming said Halliday had a concussion and added, "Had Halliday not been wearing a helmet, the young man would have lost his life."

Chandrasekharaj, also an SIU student, was issued a ticket for failure to yield the right of way.

Hearings Due on Campus Station

The Student Senate has moved to hold public hearings on an AM closed-circuit student radio station and will have a station budget drawn up for consideration.

The internal affairs committee of the Senate will hold hearings on Friday at 7, 9, and 11 a.m. With the start of the 1047 hour, DNB 1.0 am, and the 1027 hour, the senate will hold public meetings on the first and third Mondays of each month.

The Senate will also pass a bill Wednesday establishing a permanent structure of committees designed to speed up Senate business and eliminate the necessity for many ad hoc committees.

A bill to abolish the requirement that senators be in the student government office five hours per week will be read again next week for possible action.

The Senate sent to committee a proposal to appropriate $150 for Free School operations, a bill to conduct a contest to design a new University seal, a bill to require the publication of Senators' office hours, telephone numbers and addresses monthly and a proposal to compensate the student Housing Commissioner.

A letter from Anthony Gianelli, acting coordinator of student activities, was read which criticized the Senate for an unorganized system of requesting expenditures, which are channeled through Gianelli's office.

Gianelli said that in the future he will not authorize expenditures "unless there is a direct tie item in the budget."

He cited the example of expenditure requests for Free School when there is currently a deficit in the budget for such expenditures.

City-Senate Meet On Common Points

The Carbondale City Council and city officials will meet with the Student Senate to discuss common points of interest at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Ballrooms of the University Center.

Student Body President Ray Lonzii said the meeting is open to all students.

Police Find Prime Suspect
In Saluki Exchange Robbery

Carbondale Police Chief Jack Hazel said a leader in the Saluki Exchange robbery is in custody.

Hazel said the suspect was identified from a composite drawing made by state police from the statements of four witnesses who said they saw the middle-aged woman at the time of the robbery.

The robber was described as a very pale complexioned woman, about 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 125 pounds and having a wrinkled face. She was dressed in a green jacket.

Narcotics Charge
Yields Guilty Plea

Christopher J. Tullier, 18, Park Forest, entered a guilty plea Thursday in Jackson County Circuit Court to a charge of illegal possession of a narcotic drug.

Tullier was an SIU student at the time he was arrested Nov. 22 after SIU Security Police found a pipe and marijuana in his room at Boomer Hall II.

Judge Peyton Kuncz placed Tullier on probation for three years, fined him $300, and ordered him to pay $50 court costs, according to State Attorney Richard Richman.

Gov. Kerner's Riot Commission

Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, chairman of President Johnson's National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, says the commission's report, due early in the spring, "Will not be toned down," and we hope he is right.

The vice chairman of the group, appointed after last summer's urban riots, Mayor Lindsay of New York, says the report will be "completely honest, realistic and thoroughly readable," and we hope this is also the case.

There have been rumors that commission staff members were beginning to come up with analyses that would lead to recommendations at variance with Administration policy in an election year. These will have been prompted to some extent by changes in the commission's work schedules. When the commission was organized at the end of last July it was given eleven months to make an interim report, with the final report due in a year. Now the final report is to be completed by March 1, with publication hot later.

There might be a substantial reason for speeding up the conclusion of the commission study, especially as it deals with short-term efforts to prevent a recurrence of riots. But it is a little disquieting to find Gov. Kerner hinting strongly at a news conference that the commission might decide not to suggest a figure as the sum needed to combat riot-breeding ghetto conditions and asserting that, "To some the report won't go far enough; to others it will go too far." Does this mean it really will not say anything?

The weekly magazine "Commonweal," reports that the commission has been "hastily scrapped" because the conclusions of field-level investigators were becoming incompatible with White House political views.

These investigators, a writer in the magazine said, felt that no significant recommendations could be made unless the spending of at least an additional four billion dollars annually was contemplated.

Regardless of its merit, the report is not likely to contain much in the way of revelation; conclusions in the ghettos are pretty well known.

The answers are not very difficult to arrive at, either; for the most part they boil down to money. The commission could perform a vital service if it took the facts available, formulated a really effective (and undeniably costly) program, and then acted as a lobbyist to sell that program to the Administration and Congress.

If it tries to do that, its labors may be worse than useless, for they may merely give an official excuse to a policy of doing nothing.

Doctor Refresher

BURLINGTON. Vt. (AP) -- Today's doctors are usually too busy to attend refresher courses so the University of Vermont College of Medicine has brought the courses to them.

The college has initiated a two-pronged program to keep Vermont's 480 physicians up to date on advances in their fields.

One part of the program consists of a series of early morning television programs. The second is a combination of seminars, symposiums and question-and-answer periods conducted by a rotating team of two physicians, a nurse and various technicians. The use an airplane in reading every part of the state.

Dr. Welch said he hopes the Vermont program will lead to a New England-wide effort.

Letters to the Editor:

Cabs May Deserve Rate Hike

To the Editor:

The owners of Carbondale's two taxi companies have asked the city for permission to raise their fares and correct what they feel are some inequities in the present fare structure.

At a hearing before a citizens' advisory committee considering the matter, the owners said that they are not earning a satisfactory return on their investment and that if they cannot get a rate increase they may have to take cabs off the streets.

The owners have asked for a flat rate increase to help defray what they say are increasing costs of doing business. They would also like certain changes made in the rate structure concerning charges for luggage and packages.

The owners said that people frequently fill cabs with packages, luggage, wet laundry and boxes. The cab companies make no charge for these extra items.

The owners would like to charge extra to those who have more than two packages, bags or boxes. The owners also told students who go shopping in groups and then send one student in a cab with everyone's groceries, and of other people who load cabs down with baskets of wet laundry and still pay only the regular fare.

Anybody who has ever used cabs in big cities such as New York or Chicago knows that Carbondale has exceptionally good cab service.

If the owners can present documented evidence to the committee of rising costs then they should be granted a fare increase without delay.

Weak Criticism

To the Editor:

The Jan. 17 article by John Durbin entitled "Snow Hazard," shows his compassion for the life and limb of his fellow students who run the gauntlet of broken bones to get to and from classes.

It also shows his total unawareness of the problems involved in the removal of snow and ice on this campus.

In his attempt to be witty and to departed from what he assumed knowledgeable frame of reference and attacked a group of men who are for the majority genuinely interested in the health and safety of our faculty and students.

The article states, "SU's snow removal team, if there is one, has been unable to keep many of the treacherous walkways across campus cleared."

Yes, Mr. Durbin, there is a snow removal team, someone who leaves the warmth of their rooms to venture on campus last weekend can attest to.

They are a group of 80 men of the Grounds Maintenance Department, many of whom worked to 12-hour Saturdays, half day Sundays, and began at 5 a.m. Monday to their very best to clear the thoroughfares and pathways of ice and snow. This is a somewhat monumental task considering that it snowed all on three of these days.

The job is still being on and will continue until all the snow is cleared.

If the brunt of your attack need be leveled somewhere, let it be at the administration who might provide the manpower and equipment with their limited funds. I'm wondering if Mr. Durbin swept his own sidewalks.

Britain: Like Flowers They Die

By Antero Pietila

In the light of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's decision this week to practically end Britain's role as a world power by accelerating the withdrawal of all British armed forces from the Far East and the Persian Gulf, it is hard to think that the following incident took place only little more than five years ago.

All began from an address delivered to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point by Dean Acheson, Secretary of State from 1949 to 1953, and the then adviser to President Kennedy. One passage especially caused much irritation in the Tory-ruled Britain.

"Great Britain has lost an empire and has not yet found a role. The attempt to play a separate power role—that is, a role apart from Europe, a role based on a 'special relationship' with the United States, a role based on being the head of a 'Commonwealth' which has no political structure, unity, or strength and enjoys a fragile and precarious economic relationship by means of the sterling area and preferences in the British market—this role is about played out. Great Britain, attempting to work alone and to be a broker between the United States and Russia, has seemed to conduct policy as weak as its military power. H. M. Government is now attempting—wisely, in my opinion—to re-enter Europe, from which it was banished at the time of Plantagenets."

This criticism of Britain's sacred cows, especially because it came from an American, roused heavy seas. The prestigious Institute of Directors sent Harold Macmillan, the then Prime Minister, a letter in which they described Acheson's remarks about Britain as "a calculated insult to the British nation."

In his reply to this letter Macmillan himself claimed that "in misunderstanding" the role of the Commonwealth in world affairs "Mr. Acheson has fallen into an error which has been made by quite a lot of people in the last 400 years, including Philip of Spain, Louis XIV, Napoleon, the Kaiser, and Hitler."

This happened in December, 1962. Since then much has happened and in 1965 Mr. Quintin Hogg (formerly Lord Halsham) wrote this somewhat nostalgic account for "Foreign Affairs":

"Our gold currency is paper. Our empire is no more. No more are we the leading—in some continental markets almost the only—industrial nation. The two-power navy which sailed to Jutland belching smoke from her coal—or, latest innovation, oil-fired boiler rooms—is as remote as the fleets of Nelson or of Drake, one, in under half a century, 'with Nineveh and Tyre.' Our aristocratic class system is a memory, the middle class industriousness is a collecti on of regrets and castles which opened to the public, remain stuffed with the boarded treasures of the past."

When he was in Washington only a week ago, British Foreign Minister George Brown was urged by Secretary of State Dean Rusk to do his utmost to prevent any deep or sudden withdrawal from the Far East.

Drastic cuts in government spending were rumored in London already before Christmas as such measures were seen as the only way to prevent inflation and to benefit from the devaluation of the pound. After President Johnson's decision to act on the dollar and curb investing abroad these cuts became still more necessary.

So U.S. monetary restrictions backlashed to the effect that Britain's cancellation of the order from General Dynamics Corp. of 50 F-111 swept-wing bombers will add more than one billion dollars to the American balance of payment deficit. But this is not all; the United States has to assume more responsibility in the defense of regions east of Suez when Britain pulls her forces out of there by 1971.

Mr. Wilson asserts that his government is to continue aiding Commonwealth nations in Southeast Asia through a joint air defense system for Malaysia and Singapore and training personnel. But that is like trying to improve bad wine by mixing a droplet of choicest vintage: it only increases your dissatisfaction,

Rudyard Kipling, poet laureate of the days of glories and victories of the British imperialism, once wrote:

"Cities and Thrones and Powers, Stand in Time's eye, Almost as long as flowers, Which die, But, as new buds put forth To glad new men, Out of the spent and uncon sidered Earth, The Cities rise again."

No longer does Union Jack fly all over the world, no longer has 'Britannicus sum' a magic echo. Mr. Wilson's decision to withdraw British forces from the Far East leaves the United States there as the only Western power that really has power.

This fact should lead to certain revaluations of the American foreign policy in the Far East. A host of questions must be answered anew:

Is the present approach realistic enough?

Is it really in the best interest of the United States, in the light of future commitments, to continue the expensive war in Vietnam and seek a military solution that, even at its best, is likely to have only a limited regional significance?

Or is it better to strive to negotiation table even at the risk (or at the probability) of another Yugoslavia?

Which of these choices is a better way to contain China, and can she be contained in the log run without formally recognizing her?

Governor Sets Education Meeting

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 17—Gov. Otto Kerner has called the initial meeting of the Commission to Study the Role and Needs of Non-Public Higher Education in Illinois for Jan. 25 in his Chicago office.

The Governor will meet with the five commissioners at 2:30 p.m. to initiate the study and to discuss the basic purposes of the commission. Following the meeting he will host a reception at the Sherman House in Chicago to give the commissioners an opportunity to meet many of the leaders in private and public higher education in the state.

"Our state has been fortunate in obtaining the services of such distinguished educators for this important task," Gov. Kerner said. "We need their careful and objective thinking to consider the role of private colleges in Illinois as they relate to state government, to the public institutions of higher learning, and to society as a whole."

After completing the year-long study, the commission will make its report to the Governor, the General Assembly and the Board of Higher Education.

Jacobian, Flynn to Discuss Vietnam in First of Series

Two University professors will discuss Vietnam at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Davis Auditorium of the Wham Education Building.

H.B. Jacobini, professor of government, and Bernard C. Flynn, assistant professor of philosophy, will deliver the first of a series of four lectures concerned with resolutions to be introduced at the Model U.N. in February. Jacobini specializes in Southeast Asia and international law and has published books and articles in both fields. A second edition of his "International Law: A Text" will be issued in March.

Flynn, who received his doctorate from Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, teaches phenomenology and existentialism.
Students Blinded Under LSD
Proved to Be Doctor's Hoax

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) -- Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond P. Shafer branded Thursday as a hoax, and completely fabricated, the strange story of six Pennsylvania college students for 20 months while staring at the sun under the influence of the drug LSD.

It is never happened, Shafer told a hastily summoned news conference. He immediately repudiated the man who first said it did.

The governor said the case, clouded since disclosure a week ago in the kind of psychodrama trance LSD readily induces, was an invention of the New York Times Aug. 53, Pennsylvania's commissioner for the blind since 1959.

Recruiting Dispute Erupts
At Chicago Circle Campus

CHICAGO (AP) -- Campus police broke up Thursday afternoon a shouting and physically frustrating rally involving an estimated 200 students at the Illinois Chicago circle campus where opponents of the Vietnam war battled the operation of a Marine recruiting booth Wednesday.

A university spokesman said the trouble Thursday began after a group calling itself "The Committee to End the War in Vietnam" set up a booth with the university's permission. Another group assemblled at the booth, the spokesman said, and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." Police were called when an ensuing argument became noisy and then violent. One man was hurt and no one was arrested.

The university said the names would be referred to the faculty senate subcommittee on student discipline for "possible action."

The action could be suspension or probation.

Most of the demonstrators said they were members of Students for a Democratic Society.

U.S. and Russia Reach Accord
On Disarmament Treaty Draft

GENEVA (AP) -- The United States and the Soviet Union jointly submitted to the nations of the world Thursday a comprehensive draft for a treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

The draft, a milestone in five years of hard East-West bargaining, was sent to the 17-nation disarmament conference by its American and Soviet members.

The men, Adrian S. Fisher of the United States and Alexei A. Borechkin of the Soviet Union, reached final agreement Wednesday night after an article dealing with control procedures, the most disputed point in their back-and-forth bargaining.

A previous American-Soviet draft submitted Aug. 24 left article 3 blank because of Russian insistence that the International Atomic Energy Agency should be the only body responsible for verifying compliance with the treaty.

The final compromise version meets demands by West Germany and Italy that the European Atomic Energy Organization -EURATOM- a body linked with the European Common Market, also could have a role in controlling the treaty.

Officials of the West German government in Bonn said the draft "contains a large number of positive changes that take into account the reservations expressed by non-nuclear nations."

In Brussels, a special meeting of the North Atlantic council thanked the United States for its efforts to get agreement on a treaty draft. One authoritative source said Roger Selydow, President Charles de Gaulle's representative on the council, expressed his personal appreciation of U.S. efforts but emphasized that France did not intend to sign the treaty.

The main threat the treaty is designed to meet is the acquisition of atomic and hydrogen weapons by industrialized nations which already have a nuclear potential. These include West Germany, India, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Italy, Egypt, South Africa, South Korea and Canada.

The United States and the Soviet Union have long been agreed that if any new nation acquired nuclear weapons this might cause a chain reaction leading to an uncontrollable arms race throughout the world.
Vietnam Peace Talks Deadlocked

An AP News Analysis

New word from North Viet­nam strongly suggests that speculation about peace talks has reached a dead end. The indications are that only a sudden and dramatic change of heart will produce a break in the stone wall.

The United States insists that any halt in the war of the North be followed promptly by talks that have a chance of being productive. North Vietnam refuses to offer such assurances.

The latest statements from Hanoi indicate its stand has not changed appreciably from the position outlined a year ago.

This is the sequence:

On Jan. 28, 1967, Hanoi said there was "no agreement," after the Americans had "unconditionally stopped air raids and all other acts of war" against North Vietnam.

Eleven months later, Dec. 29, Foreign Minister Nguyen Van Trinh said that talks "will begin immediately", and that there was a "change from 'could' to 'will'".

On Jan. 4, the Associated Press quoted Trinh as saying that there was no reply for two weeks, and then came a message from the press information department of Hanoi's Foreign Ministry. It said: "In reply to your Jan. 4 cable, please refer to the Jan. 16 interview of Mai Van Bo."

Bo, stationed in Paris, in Hanoi's chief representative in Western Europe. In the interview he indicated that the change from "could" to "will" was a matter of semantics. He referred to the "change from the conditional to the future" in Trinh's Dec. 29 statement, and then said a French interviewer: "It is obvious, and one does not have to be an expert on semantics to see, that the declaration of Jan. 28, 1967... has thus been made perfectly clear by his remarks of Dec. 29."

The suggestion in this was that there had been no change.

The impression that no real change was intended was strengthened by yet another Trinh interview broadcast this week by the news agency of Communist Bulgaria, BTA. Trinh told the agency's Hanoi correspondent that "on Jan. 28, 1967, we clearly pointed out that there will be talks" after the Americans stopped bombing and acts of war against the North.

This statement also used the word "will" instead of the "could" reported a year ago. But then it added: "The DRV government has made clear its 'four-point stand which accord. ... with the fundamental principles and main provisions of the 1954 Geneva agreements on Vietnam and with the political program of the National Liberation Front."

This was a repetition of a hard, all-or-nothing stand. Trinh made it sound even harder by adding: "The question arises for the U.S. aggressors in Vietnam whether to accept defeat as it is at present or a greater one, it is up to them to choose. The more obturate and warlike the U.S. imperialists are, the heavier their defeats."

Control Commission Visits Cambodia

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The International Control Commission has visited the area in Cambodia where American correspondents reported finding an abandoned Viet Cong camp. The visit took place almost a month after the original report.

There were conflicting versions Thursday on the results. The governments of two nations represented on the commission, India and Canada, declined to give the investigators' findings.

Poland is the third nation of the UN delegation to visit the area.

The Cambodian embassy here said the ICC investigators made the visit Dec. 11 and found no evidence to support the correspondents' mid-November report of an abandoned camp in the area of Mitmot, four miles inside the Cambodian border.

In Western Europe, an informed source said an ICC report was in preparation for Britain and the Soviet Union, cochairmen of the 1954 Geneva convention which produced agreements following defeat of French colonial power in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

This source said the ICC report concluded that a camp was indeed, found, but that it was deserted and thus it was impossible to say positively that it was a Viet Cong installation.

The correspondents' report had a hearing on subsequent discussion of the question of "hot pursuit" of Vietnamese communists across borders and into the sanctuary of neutral territory.

Convo Sees ‘In White America’

Play Traces Negro Progress

"In White America" was presented at the University Convocation Thursday afternoon by nine students of the Theatre Department's Touring Company. The play portrays the Negroes struggle for freedom in the United States.

"In White America" was written by Martin B. Duberman to illustrate the progress the American Negro has made in civil rights. The play emphasized major Negro problems and advancements from slave trade days up to the present. The cast included three Negroes. Each student portrayed various characters, some for and some against the Negro cause.

All theatre majors are required to take a practicum. They have a choice of going on a fall tour or doing a summer stock show in New Salem. The course carries 12 hours credit.

This group has toured 23 cities in and out of Illinois. The play was received with mixed response due to the nature of the subject. In M刚tessico, however, they got a standing ovation.

Efforts Lean Toward Semantics

polite Conversation Neglected in Talk, Books

Polite conversation, an art which must be learned, is on the decline, according to two members of the speech profession.

Indicative of the fact that speech has become such a problem in society, W. H. Auden, 1967 recipient of the National Medal for Literature at the Smithsonian Institution, stated in a recent article that "Both in conversation and in books, people today are only too ready to take their clothes off in front of total strangers."

Ralph A. Micken, chairman of the Department of Speech, said the art of conversation has been greatly neglected and has generally disappeared. People today, Micken continues, should not be surprised by this situation.

Instructors have stopped taking of the art of speech and have directed their efforts toward semantics, thus moving farther away from the art of conversation. The end result of this shift of emphasis, Micken believes, is to put the individual on the defensive and to discourage conversation.

It might be concluded, Micken said, that the speech profession itself is responsible for the downfall of conversation.

The implications to be found from this downfall in conversation are already being observed, he said. The individual is turning away from conversation and devoting his efforts towards television and other pursuits. Reliance upon leadership is becoming more and more the vogue, said Micken, with the individual remaining in the background.

Micken believes that conversation can be taught and that the speech profession must replace conversation to its rightful position within the arts rather than to continue looking on it as a science.

Vietnam Educator to Be Chosen for Training

A Vietnamese educator with potential will be trained at SIU to do bigger things in his country, possibly become a college president.

Leaving for Saigon around March I will be John E. King, SIU professor of higher education, who said Vietnam was chosen because "that's where the chips are down, and because of SIU's involvement there, it was felt this was the most important place we could go."

King will spend several weeks confering with representatives of the U.S. Agency for International Development and members of the SIU team that has been training Vietnamese people to become elementary school teachers and augmenting the training of teachers since 1961, and is currently preparing educators to become normal school professors. The job is done under contract with AID.

The group will screen candidates selected by South Vietnam's Ministry of Education. The one chosen will obtain from six to nine months on the Carbondale campus in a program designed to provide active administrative procedures and practices through observation, discussion, and participation.

Also, King will take part in a study to determine the needs of an SIU program that will be most helpful to the trainee when he returns home.

SIU was one of 18 American universities chosen by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education to prepare a foreign educator under an AACTE program financed by AID. Each university was given the choice of country from which to select its participant. Vietnam was chosen following conferences among Dean Elmer Clark of Education, Dean Oliver Caldwell of the Division of International Services, Ken August Brunner, chairman of the Department of Higher Education, and King.

Clark said selection of Vietnam was considered important because "education in Vietnam may hold the key to what happens later, especially when our military forces leave."

Latin America Called

Anthropology Crucible

Milton Altschuler, assistant professor of Anthropology, discussed "Social Anthropology in Latin America" in the first of the winter series of Pan American lectures, "The Latin American experience has been a crucible for the testing of many anthropological theories," Alt schuler said. "Almost anything that one does as an anthropologist in Latin America will be a major contribution."

He said the average American fails to communicate when he goes to Latin America, not only on the language level. Altschuler said the failure to communicate is due, first, to a difference between the North American and Latin American ideas of individualism; and, second, because a North American keeps a person "at arm's length" both literally and figuratively when he speaks with him.

Altschuler distinguished between nine major cultures in Latin America, "Each of which," he said, "may be broken down into an infinite number of subcultures."

According to Altschuler, "If there is anything that anthropologists have added to society it is culture." He added, "The Latin American experience has proven that man may distinguish and determine his own culture as he chooses."

Altschuler delivered his lecture last Wednesday night in Morris Library Auditorium.

Student Personnel Lecture Date Set

Elizabeth A. Greenleaf, associate dean of students at Indiana University, will lecture at 4 p.m., Monday in Davis Auditorium, Wham Education Building, on the "Current Concerns for Student Personnel Workers."

Miss Greenleaf, coordinator of Student Activities at SIU in the early 1950s, and currently president of the American College Personnel Association, is professor of higher education at IU. Her special responsibility has been the coordination of counseling and activities in the University's residence halls system.

Wichita Seeks Revenge For Last Year's Rout

A revenge-minded Wichita State invades the Arena Saturday afternoon to take on the Salukis in a regionally-televised contest scheduled to get underway at 12:45. The game will be blacked out in the Carbondale area due to NCAA restrictions.

The Shockers still recall vividly a meeting between the two schools last season when the Salukis blasted them 77-55 on Wichita's home court. That loss was one of only eight suffered by the Shockers at home since the 1961-62 season.

WSU Coach Gary Thompson has high hopes for his team despite a mediocre 6-6 mark during the early campaign. "I feel we have made great strides during a busy schedule," he said. "There isn't a player on our squad who doesn't believe we can win the Missouri Valley Conference title."

His team currently holds a 3-2 mark in MVC competition.

Looking to Saturday's game, Thompson commented that his scouting reports indicate that SU is basically the same type team as last season. "Although it does not have the overall power," he said, "it is still quick and a tough defensive ball team."

"My reports also indicate that the Salukis are relatively short, but very vicious on the boards," Thompson added.

Wichita is led by 6-5 forward Ron Washington who is currently averaging 19.9 points per game. His season high came in WSU's 97-67 win over Mississippi State when he scored 35 points. Also high on the list is Washington's running mate at the other forward slot. That's Warren Armstrong who is averaging 19.7. The 6-2 senior currently ranks 10th on the all-time WSU scoring chart with a total of 1,053 points during his playing career.

Gymnasts Aim For Michigan State Victory Tonight

SIU gymnasts are working on improvement in hopes of defeating Michigan State University in the Salukis' first home meet at 7:30 p.m., today in the Arena.

The Salukis have two victories to show after defeating Illinois and Iowa State in the Iowa meet. Southern scoring went down from Illinois meet in five events.

Southern's point total dropped by 4.48 in those five events, and had it not been for an increase of 1.30 points in the remaining two events, the final tally of the Iowa State-SIU meet would have been close.

The biggest drop against the Iowa State Cyclones came on the trampoline, where Southern scored a total of 25.70 between its three entrants. The three, Dale Hardt, Joe Dupree and Skip Ray, had scored 26.95 in the Illinois meet. The biggest drop was by Hardt who scored a 9.0 at Illinois but fell to an 8.2 at Iowa State.

The Salukis also fell .5 points in vaulting which might have been expected since Hardt, Paul Mayer and Pete Hemmerling all scored above 9.0 at Illinois. Against the Cyclones, only Mayer scored above 9.0.

The three other events in which SIU's performance dropped were parallel bars (.35), still rings (.25) and high bars (.15).

The Salukis did show an increase in floor exercise and side horse.

Floor exercise gain was a nominal one, .33 of a point, but the side horse increase was .95. While no one at Iowa scored better than a 9.0 in side horse, the scores were all close as the Salukis had the top three finishers.
