Hammond outlines fee study reports

By Chuck Hildreth
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Dean of Student Relations Ed Hammond outlined to the Student Senate Wednesday night the study and activity fee surcharge that he submitted to the Student Senate Committee Friday. Hammond said he had no representation on the Senate committee, and he presented the report to the Senate, he said, because of implications for students' financial future.

Hammond said student government and the Graduate Student Council should administer their own activity fees and that a budget presented to the Board of Trustees should be a combined effort of both groups. He said this would enhance the likelihood that the Board would approve the budget.

The recommendations of the subcommittees would create activity fees from student government and athletics and would divide equally the athletic fees going to the stadium fund and athletic operations, Hammond said.

He said the recommendations are an attempt to stabilize the fees which he said was "one of the best in the country."

Concerning the problem of funds for a new stadium or remodeling McAndrew Stadium, Hammond said he favors combining the Student Welfare and Building Trust Fund (SWABF) with the stadium fund.

The money from both funds is needed to build a new recreational-stadium facility and a new student service facility.

Local Chairman of the Graduate Student Council representative to the Student Fee Committee, and John Stanley, an undergraduate representative, presented a minority report of the athletic fee recommendation to the present football stadium.

The report stated that what SIU needs is a recreational facility that would become an intercollegiate athletic building.

Red Wagon
is granted

The Carbondale City Council Tuesday night approved the granting of a temporary city contract to the Carbondale Transit Co. (Luster Red Wagon Lines) so that the line can operate without approval of the Illinois Commerce Commision ICC.

The ICC ordered the bus line off the streets Jan. 6 because it had not applied for a Certification of Public Necessity. The only alternative a public transportation company to ICC is that the council makes a municipal contract.

Richard Brahman, owner of the line, told the Council that he has encountered several obstructions to his operation. The lines operated only two days before the ICC stop order, Brahman said.

The Council approved the contract so that Brahman could return to operation, because of what Mayor David Keene calls a "desperate need" for bus service in Carbondale. The contract will allow operation while the ICC considers granting the proper permit. It will call for no expenditure of public funds.

The ICC has set Feb. 2 as the hearing date on Brahman's application.

Searching for a future

More than 1,000 students visited display tables and talked with representatives of more than 20 companies at Wednesday's Career Day activities in the University Center Dining Room. The program, sponsored by the Society for the Advancement of Management, was attended by professional representatives from participating companies and agencies. Speaker for the program covered the present rate of unemployment as one of the factors that must be considered in interviewing.

Student workers get 15 cent pay boost

By Pat Sallie
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

All SIU student workers will be earning an additional 15 cents an hour as of Jan. 31, according to Richard DeJarnett, assistant director of the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

The raise will be effective in the March 1 paychecks.

The across-the-board increase, which raises the minimum wage from $3.60 to $4.00 an hour, is in accordance with the new federal minimum of $3.80 that goes into effect Feb. 1.

DeJarnett said that an insufficient increase in this fiscal year on funds available for student salaries has resulted in a $1.40 per hour decrease in the number of hours a student can work in one year, from 17 to about 15 hours per week.

He explained the shortage of funds results from a disproportionate cut in the federal minimum wage as compared to the amount of state funds available.

Student work did not come under the federal minimum wage requirements until a few years ago, DeJarnett said, but all jobs handled through his office are now covered by it.

Previously, he said, raise increases and student salary funds had been "pretty proportional."

Funds earmarked for student salaries, which come from the state government, outside agencies and the university (auxiliary funds) total almost $2 million. State funds supply 50 per cent of the total, and the other sources take up the other half, he said.

DeJarnett said the decision to cut working hours was made in preference to giving raises only to students now earning less than the minimum of eliminating 400 student jobs. He said the decision was the fairest, since students who worked at SIU for several years and were receiving $3.60 an hour "wouldn't be at all happy" to have a student who just started work receiving the same wage.

The student work office now has a maximum work allowance of 26 hours a week for students. DeJarnett said, and the office is "not inclined to question" unless the student continually works 28-36 hours a week. DeJarnett said his office also plans to stop students from building jobs in more than one department. The move, which he said will take place in the near future, will affect about 200 students.

Some student job cutbacks have resulted from the lack of funds. DeJarnett said, but there are "a lot of students out there" who want jobs.

Cook County represented

Ogilvie to appoint trustees

By Nick Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An informed source in Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's office said this week that Ogilvie will appoint a resident of Cook County to the SIU Board of Trustees before Feb. 1.

The source said Mrs. Frances Dawson of Evanston is one of the candidates. Mrs. Dawson is a Republican and a former legislator who was beaten in a bid for a seat at the University of Illinois Board of Trustees.

The source did not want to be identified, indicated at least one of the three present Board members whose terms have expired will not be reappointed.

The six-year terms of Board members F. Guy Hitt of Benton, Merion Lockard of Mattoon, and Lindell Sturgis of Metropolis expired last March.

There has been speculation that two of the Board members, Hitt and Sturgis, will be replaced. Hitt has said he does not want to be reappointed and Sturgis, who said he was unwilling to serve at 85 years old and in ill health, the governor's spokesman said that Ogilvie wants the SIU Board to have a geographic base and reflect the state's industrial and agricultural economy. Ogilvie has rejected the idea of an intercollegiate athletic building.

Mager replaces Gruny as SIU legal counsel

By University News Service

The appointment of T. Richard Mager to serve as legal counsel for the Carbondale campus has been approved by the SIU Board of Trustees. He will start Feb. 15 and replace C. Richard Gruny, who is to serve full time as counsel for the SIU board.

Mager, 37, now is legal counsel for the Board of Curators for the University of Missouri-Columbia. A position he has held since 1967. From 1964 until 1967 he was assistant counsel and prior to that was engaged in private law. He is a native of St. Louis.

Mager is a member of the executive board of the National Association of College and University Attorneys and chairman of its committee on the exchange of legal information. He received his degrees from the University of Missouri-

University.

Gruny, who has moved from the Carbondale chancellor's office to join the staff of the Board of Trustees, said he had known Mager for several years and believed he was the best qualified man available for the position.

An SIU senior, Stanton J. Bond of Carbondale, Ill., has been given an opportunity to pick up 15 quarter hours of credit while working for the city of Carbondale.

Bond, a speech major with a concentration in public relations, will work full time under the direction of Carbondale City Manager William R. Schmidt, in a three month internship program in municipal government public relations.

Bond's duties, Schmidt said, will be to work to improve both the internal and external communications processes of city government agencies. "We need to get more complete information on our programs to our employers and to our bosses—the people," Schmidt said.

Who is 'Paul' Layer?

In the past year, SIU has added more than just a few pages to its scrap book of bad publicity. Last May, students were left with a sour taste of twisted 'pride' in their school devotion every printed word concerning SIU, in the form of the Editors. The Wall Street Journal in its Jan. 13 edition saw fit to feature SIU in a triple headlined, 30-plus inch story about the lack of love between University students and Carbondale residents.

Once known for its endless parties and fun-loving student population, SIU has taken on a whole new identity. If the usual is to be believed, SIU is everyone's university—the epitome of institutional strife in a changing world of higher education.

The bitterness between students and natives, lack of enthusiasm or pride and resentment of last May's closing are all problems that "seem far beneath the surface," according to the article. The students at Lincoln Junior High have even been prohibited from entering the SIU campus because of the bad influence campus 'hoodlums' seem to exert on them.

Ironically, the article appeared on the day of Carbondale's first "town meeting," an open forum where complaints of citizens and students were to be aired. Ironically. In a town full of anonymity, the small turnout of about 100 was hardly an embittered group, nor was it a vocal one. One city resident who attended the meeting said the majority of the audience consisted of young people too polite to air their grievances.

The inconsistencies are numerous. Selecting and interpreting the correct "facts" is a subjective task, but the word of a paper that quotes as vital a source as SIU's chancellor "Paul Layer" be taken literally.

Steps have been initiated recently to cut back on spending at SIU. The majority of the cuts taken directly involve the students raising tuition, cutting back on student work, loans and scholarships. What cannot be understood is this method of choking the student to save the school.

Olson explains views on University Senate

To the Daily Egyptian:

In a closed meeting of the Carbondale Faculty Council Nov. 17, when the Task Force on Governance made their report, I stated that I could not support their proposal and that I would vote against it and counsel others to vote the same. Since that time I have not found any reason to change my view. The attempt to rush a vote at a time generally inconvenient to the faculty further raised questions about the desire to provide an opportunity for the faculty and others to understand fully the significance of this document and the power the faculty will be turning over to others.

The fight to win a postponement of the vote was successful and it is hoped that the faculty is studying the proposal carefully. At the Dec. 9 meeting of the faculty, we were assured of a concentrated educational program to acquaint the faculty with the document. Apparently this will be paid advertisements which consist of one-sided views of the document and the document itself. No equal opportunity has been given to those who wish to present opposing views. It has also been suggested that the various units within the University call upon the members of the Task Force to meet with the faculty to discuss the document.

If the members of the Task Force perform as in the past, no direct answer will be given. You will be told to vote for the University Senate and then, once it is operational, amend it as needed. But who will amend it? The University Senate is the only one with the power to make amendments. The only one with any authority to come to the rescue of any of us will be the Board of Trustees.

Assurances have been made, both oral and written, concerning the amending procedure and the University Senate's role in departmental programs. The very fact that we must rely on assurances, rather than the document itself, proves that it is a faulty document. Any group that is involved in budgets can, and I am sure will control programs throughout the document.

Eligible voters must register by Jan. 25

To the Daily Egyptian:

Jan. 25 is the cut-off date for registering to vote in the Feb. 23 city primary. As a candidate for mayor, I am writing this letter to encourage all eligible voters of Carbondale to register to vote. This includes not only townpeople but students as well.

Students, if you have lived in the state of Illinois for one year, in Jackson County for 90 days and in a city precinct for 30 days, you are eligible to vote in Carbondale. You can register at the Carbondale City Hall, the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro, or at the Student Christian Foundation on Jan. 20 and 21 between 9:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Remember that you have the right to vote on town issues, get involved and register today. I also encourage the townpeople to register to vote.

In conclusion, I would like to assure the townpeople that students do not want to take over Carbondale, we only want a more active voice in the affairs of our community. Remember to register before Jan. 25 and vote Feb. 23.

The Western falls on good times

By David Daly

Daily Egyptian Special Writer

The Westerns have again fallen on good times. Any successor to the wholesome and humorous "The Ballad of Cable Hogue," "Tell Them Willie Boy is Here," "Two Mules for Sister Sara," "The Cheyenne Social Club," "There Was A Crooked Man" and "Rio Lobo" is a season to remember. Their, of course, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" won more Oscars than any other film last April. It also was nominated for best picture but lost to "Midnight Cowboy" (no western) "True Grit" earned the Oscar for best actor for John Wayne, who was also nominated for the number one box-office attraction of the previous year. And although Sam Peckinpah's "The Wild Bunch" didn't win anything, it was nominated in two categories and should have been nominated as well for one of the best editing jobs since "The Great Train Robbery.

Gogolath traps young men

By Arthur Hoppe

Northwest Features

Once upon a time in the country called Wonderland, they needed young men to clean out the Gogolath's cage. It was an awful job.

It was dirty and dull and demanding and downright dangerous. For quite often the Gogolath ate up young men who had been foolish enough to clean the Gogolath's cage. Moreover, the pay was only a pittance. It was an awfully awful job.

Yet for a hundred years and more the young men of Wonderfuland had actually volunteered for the job. "Somebody's got to do it," they would say, shuddering their shovels and marching off to work.

And the bands would play and the flags would wave and the young men would shout:

"Huzzah, for our brave boys!" So everybody was reasonably content.

But the Gogolath kept getting bigger and bigger. And dirtier and dirtier. More and more young men were needed to clean out the cage. Fewer and fewer volunteered.

For one thing, most young men had come to realize what an awfully awful job it was. For another, the pay was still a pittance.

A young man could make two times as much being a dentist, twenty times as much being a doctor and thirty times as much being a plumber—all jobs that were sanitary, stimulating and supposedly safe.

The Elders of Wonderfuland were aghast. "Why, this is the most important job of all. Somebody simply must do it. But who?"

There was an idea. "We are giving you a patriotic choice," they happily told the young men, "two years in the Gogolath's cage or five years in jail.

There's no doubt that the Western is in fine form these days. After a drought of three or four years when most of the covers spread to speak with all their strength in their teeth, the most popular genre in the American cinema is again justifying its reputation. Between them, "Bull Durham" and "The Wild Bunch," "True Grit" and "Crooked Man" should (by my calculation, at least) be nominated for half a dozen Academy Awards next April and maybe even win one or two. Certainly the Westerns have provided better and more consistent entertainment in 1971 than all the skin flicks and tear gas romances combined.

John Wayne's fist flies

Take "Rio Lobo." We've heard them all before—Howard Hawks' tough-talking heroine, the rasping voice of John Wayne, the salty, wisecracking old timer who shows up the young 'uns when the bullets fly. The plot doesn't much matter; it's the scene that counts. When a man reaches around the corner of a ranch house and John Wayne's fist flies into the frame, we are tempted to cheer. Part of this reaction is a throwback to the death of Old Values. "The Wild Bunch" when we bood the villain and part of it is simply our appreciation of a well-turned stereotype, presented with style.

So what if that punch was telegraphed via comic book? It's a tradition that harks back to the days when the children burned insects while "The Wild Bunch" rode in or the moment in "Rio Bravo" when the bad guy hiding out in the room above gives himself away by dripping blood into the good guy's beer. These moments are the true measure of a good Western.

There are some people who maintain that changing styles in the Westerns reflect changing moods in American society. Thus "High Noon," with its black shirt and a shoot-out on Main Street, was about McCarthyism and the Cold War. (The actual application of this theory is too complicated to explain here.) And when we began suffering a series of "long, hot summers" after the Kennedy assassination, citizens flocked to see Clint Eastwood, Lee Van Cleef and company gun down mobs of villains on the Italian range.

Old West being 'Vietnamized'

More recently—say since Lyndon Johnson retired and the Paris peace talks began—there has been a noticeable trend in Westerns toward celebrating and even lamenting the death of Old Values. "The Wild Bunch" were unemployed soldiers of fortune. The Professionals had lost their profession. "Bull Durham" was a social critique. The Sundance Kid were forced to try South America for action. Richard Widmark retired early on Edmond O'Brien in "The Death of a Gunfighter" says that the Old West is being "Vietnamized."

But sex still keeps its distance. The closest we get to it in "Rio Lobo" is when Wayne plucks up to find Jennifer O'Neill sharing his blanket beside a camp fire:

"Why didn't you try a blanket?" asks Wayne, pointing to his handsome young sidekick.

"You're, uh, more comfortable," answers the girl with a smile.

Women rarely enter picture

The basic elements of the Western remain man, horse and gun. Indians might enter the formula but seldom women. This is male chauvinist country. The hero might be persuaded to say "yes" to his girl when the gunsmoke has cleared away but very little else.

I'd like to settle down. John Wayne tells the young woman in "El Dorado," but I have a man's work to do.

Of another heroine, this one in "True Grit," he remarks: "She reminds me a lot of me."

What Westerns are doing, however, is to experiment with the classic recipe. saturate it and turn it upside down. With great success, too! That is the beauty of a picture like "There Was a Crooked Man." If there were no conventions, Joseph L. Mankiewicz couldn't twist them.

John Sims is a special assistant professor of psychology at Southern Illinois University Carbondale. The University is offering a Summer Study Tour of Europe, which will cost approximately $1,250 and will run from June 21 to July 4, 1977. The tour will include visits to international laboratories in seven countries and will offer opportunities for undergraduates and graduates. The study tour is being offered by the Academic Services of the University of Illinois at Carbondale. Applications are available at the office of the Admissions Office. The closing date for applications is March 1, 1977. The study tour will be conducted by six members of the University's academic staff. The University's Academic Services will be responsible for the selection of the participants and for the arrangements for the study tour. The University's Academic Services will also be responsible for the evaluation of the study tour. Fear causes U. of I. Board to decide not to raise tuition

CHAMPAIGN, III. (AP) - The University of Illinois Board of Trustees balked today on a proposal to raise tuition. One board member said the Board of Higher Education's recommendation for the tuition increase had "positive overtones."

It was a reference to student riots at the university's Champaign-Urbana and Chicago Circle campuses last year.

The tuition increase recommendation was referred by the Board of Trustees to its finance committee for consideration and report to be taken up at the board's February meeting.

The recommendation called for resident students to pay one-third the educational cost—$466 a year at Champaign-Urbana and $540 at Chicago Circle and Chicago Medical campuses.

SIU Board to have new appointments

He said that Ogilvie, who is appointing or reappointing 17 people to governing boards in the state this month, is looking for younger men and women, and also blacks, to appoint to state boards.

He said there are presently 40 "serious candidates" for these posts and he indicated there would be many new appointments.

The source would not comment on the possibility that Sturgis would be replaced. He did say, however, "I assume that we're talking about candidates that there will be some replacements. I will assure you that someone from Cook County will be appointed to the SIU Board."

He said he expects the screening of candidates to end within the next 10 days and that Ogilvie will act before Feb. 1.

Governance vote to end for grads

Thursday and Friday will be the last days that SIU graduates will be able to vote in the referendum for the University Governance proposal. Graduate students may vote at the main entrance of the Communications Building. Thursday and the main entrance to Myers Library on Friday. The polling places will open from 9 a.m. until 11 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. each day.

RFD used to mean 'revenue' to farmers

When the United States inaugurated Rural Free Delivery in 1890, many farmers regarded the mailman as a federal newspaper and complained that he deprived them of an excuse for going into town to exchange gossip at the county post office.

That's right. Eckert's does have the best pork in town. Why? Because it's raised in our own facilities, and cared for to the most exacting requirements. And all this is supervised by Wayne. Eckert, a specialist in pork breeding and former president of the Illinois Pork Producers Association. Wayne works only for us, supplying only the best pork so you get more meal for your money! And with all our meat it's produced and cut in our own packing house.

We really believe we have the finest pork in town. And we want to prove it to you. So Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be giving tiny samples of Eckert's finest country style pork sausage cooked right in the store.

And you can buy it right there with it.

Family thrives at city expense

NEW YORK (AP) - A welfare mother and her four children were discovered living at city expense Wednesday in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, the internationally known and expensive Park Avenue hotel. Mayor John Lindsay ordered the suspension of whatever was responsible.

Human resources administrator Donald B. Grimmer ordered a formal inquiry into the affair, involving Cleola Rainwater and her children, Barbara, 18, Alton, 15, Victor, 12, and Charles. Mrs. Rainwater lived in the $72 a night quarters at the Waldorf for a month and then said the family were supposed to live on a portion of their own.

The family was moved into the Waldorf after they were removed from housing accommodations at the Manhattan Beach Hotel in Brooklyn. When it is unable to find other accommodations, the welfare department customarily puts relief clients in hotels, although not normally of the Waldorf's reputation.

Court raps rowdies

WASHINGTON (AP) - Justice William O. Douglas spoke out sharply Wednesday against defendants who bring strong and violent bar fights to the courtroom and defy judges.

Douglas said it is in the Western tradition that a courtroom be a hallowed place of quiet dignity as far as possible from emotions of the outside world.

The justice denounced courtroom "vulgarity" as he delivered a unanimous opinion for the Supreme Court that condemned a defendant's personal attack on a Pennsylvania trial judge.

The defendant, Richard A. Mayberry, on trial before Judge Alfred A. Fink in Allegheny County Criminal Court in 1966 for a arson break, called the judge a "dirty son of a bitch" and a "tyrannical old dog.

High rises Blackout hits dorms

A power failure knocked out electricity early Wednesday evening at Bishop Tower and University Park, the largest on campus dormitory complex. A spokesman for SU's Physical Plant, said that all lights and power were affected in all buildings in the two areas with the exception of Allen, Boomer and Wright halls.

Minority reports backs remodeling

The failure started dinner service at the cafeterias in Griffin and Troubridge halls. Power was restored at the scenes and most students were expected to have power restored by morning but there had been no indication of the cause of the failure.

Arab peace report denied

CAIRO (AP) - A Cairo report that the Palestine guerrillas had abandoned their stand against peaceful settlement of the Middle East conflict brought a denial Wednesday from a member of the guerrillas' ruling Central Committee.

The Palestine revolution is continuing the armed struggle for the liberation of the whole Palestine, said committee member Ibrahim Bakr.

The Central Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization acts as the overall command of the guerrilla movement in the Middle East.

Bakr added, however, that the Central Committee's commitment to fight on "should not interfere with Egypt's efforts to remove the consequences of the 1967 war as long as they do not infringe on the rights of the Palestinians and restrict their struggle.

The Cairo report was in the semi-official Egyptian newspaper al-Ahram.

Volunteers fight to save birds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Thousands of housewives, hardworking retired workers and young people waded into the biggest oil slick in San Francisco Bay history Wednesday to try to save thousands of oil-covered birds.

Spreading out over miles of golden beaches, the volunteers tossed straw on the floating oil and used pitchforks to load the oil-soaked straw onto trucks.

They also manned numerous centers set up to clean and care for the birds. The giant spill, estimated by the Coast Guard at between 500,000 and 1.9 million gallons, spread along 50 miles of Pacific Ocean coastline from Pt. Reyes to below Pacifica, leaving dead birds, fish, shrimp and other marine wildlife in its path.

C'dale drug traffic reaches new high, IBI head claims

By Chris Matonac
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale and SIU combat one of the major drug traffic centers in the United States, C. Lowell Southern, head of the narcotics division of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI), told the Carbondale Rotary Club at a meeting Wednesday.

Southern, who was a 1961 graduate from SIU, said that many of those arrested by the IBI agree to the magnitude of drug traffic at SIU.

Southern estimated that 100 persons have been arrested on drug charges in Carbondale in the past year. He said that some drug users have been arrested, but major emphasis of the IBI is against pushers.

The number of pushers at SIU has been on the increase in recent years, Southern said. He added that there were virtually no drugs at SIU when he attended, but even heroin is a problem now.

Arrests are usually made after an undercover agent purchases drugs from a pusher, Southern said. He said he considers undercover work to beinvalid because drug pushing is unethical. He said that many students and students' parents have requested the IBI's help in arresting drug offenders.

Southern said that although most drug use is increasing, use of LSD seems to fluctuate. He said, however, that every time an agent has brought in to be analyzed what is thought to be mescaline, it has been found to be LSD.

The IBI is currently preparing a curriculum guide on drug education in addition to its police activities, Southern said. He said that up to this time, drug education efforts have been uncoordinated between school districts. He said education is necessary to slow down the drug problem.

CSC meeting tonight discusses fee study

The Graduate Student Council (GSC) will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Student Activities Meeting Room on the second floor of the University Center. The meeting will discuss a present fee study by the Student Fee Study Committee.

Applications and written tests for graduate applicants and possess supervisory abilities according to Thomas.

Anyone having questions concerning the IBI should contact Charles McCann, Lake-on-the-Campus boat house at 452-3076 from 1 to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Lifeguard tests offered Saturday

Applications and written tests for students interested in and qualified for Lake-on-the-Campus lifeguard positions will be given at 1:00 p.m. Saturday in the University Center.

The jobs are for spring and summer quarters. Tests and applications should be completed by 3:30 p.m.

Clarence W. Thomas, assistant coordinator of the Student Activities Office, said there are generally 24-26 lifeguard jobs to fill. He said he prefers to have a "good number" apply.

Talent sign-up Thursday

Thursday night is the last day for students to apply for an appearance on Audition Night, set for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the University Center Roman Room.

SIU students with any kind of talent will be welcome to perform in a coffee house atmosphere both nights, according to Artie Miller, a member of the University Center Programming Board which is sponsoring the event.

Miss Miller said Thursday that over 18 acts have filed applications to perform.

Applications may be picked up at the Student Activities Office on the second floor of the University Center.

SIU psychologist writes book

A new book that relates educational measurement to its everyday use, "Evaluating for Decision-Making in the School," has been co-authored by Donald E. Beggs, associate professor in the SIU Department of Guidance and Educational Psychology and an associate dean of the Graduate School. Beggs collaborated with John W. Hick of Northwestern University.

The text is designed to be a bridge between practicing educators and the quantitative researchers, statisticians, and test experts in education.

Lab animals put in 'vivarium'

By University News Service

For the first time in a course's age all of SIU's research animals are under one roof.

That includes the cats, rats, mice, rabbits, dogs, frogs, monkeys, crayfish, etc. all that SIU scientists use in experiments to get away from the results of frustration to the cause of cancer.

New home for the menagerie is the entire ground floor of the Life Science Building II, opened in December. Before then, animals had quarters scattered all over the Carbondale campus, so were the physiologists, zoologists, botanists, psychologists and microbiologists who also have moved into the new building.

The Central Animal Facilities cover 17,000 square feet of space whose dominant motif is tile, stainless steel and glass. Around this ground floor core in the new building are other specialized animal quarters more directly involved with specific departmental research projects.

Head man for the central operation is Edward Timmons, a doctor of veterinary medicine who came to SIU last fall from Israel to be topic at Society speech

Dennis Prager, national spokesman for and a consultant to the Center for Russian Jewry and the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, in Lawson 141.

The talk, which is sponsored by the Shalom Society, will relate to the Middle East, according to Yaron Yaron, spokesman of the local organization Tarsi also said.

The talk will try to broaden understanding of Middle Eastern countries, especially Israel. We are not completely political and religious, he said. "We will concentrate on much more than conflict." He said they will show films, promote special trips to Israel and in the future have small discussion groups.

Prager is a graduate student at the Russian and Middle East Institutes of Columbia University, and received his B.A. from Brooklyn College in History and Middle East Studies.

For some animals, the best includes "astronomical" lighting cycles—artificial illuminationbrightens and fades in a day-night rhythm.

Timmons, a Maryland native, thinks the centralized facility at SIU has the potential for being one of the nation's best, outside of those at large medical school complexes.

All incoming animals go first into a quarantine section where they are held anywhere from a few days to perhaps three months, in the case of some monkeys. Dogs get a three-week stay in quarantine for conditioning, physical examinaions, and health shots. From there they go to quarters set aside for specific species.

Timmons has the job of maintaining rigid health standards in the SIU "vivarium," which means that preventive medicine is at the top of his priority list. "Research animals must be treated as any other scientific tool, clearly defined and standardized."

When an animal is under stress it becomes an uncertain variable as far as research is concerned," said Timmons.

All cages are served daily for food and water, and bedding materials are changed at least once a week.

But the heart of Timmons domain is in the cage-washing room, with which—hey says—he would be out of business in a minute. It's equipped with a walk-in washer in which whole racks of cages go through a wash, rinse, steamflush and optional live steam cycle for up to an hour. Every cage in the house goes through it at least once a week.

Federal regulations provide that all warm-blooded research animals get nothing but the best and the facility is inspected monthly.

Gregory Battcock, an art critic, painter and teacher, will speak in a public lecture at 11 a.m. Thursday in Shryock Auditorium in connection with the exhibition of art at the school of Fine Arts.

Battcock is a regular contributor to Art in America and has edited two critical anthologies of contemporary art and cinema.

Battcock will speak on "The Aesthetics of Rebellion: Failure of Gregory" or "The Homestead Art." Jim Sullivan, chairman of the art history program in the School of Fine Arts, said that Battcock is involved with the impact of media on public consciousness and is trying to get art out of the museum and plug it into the mainstream of life.

Battcock is an associate professor of art at Paterson State College in New Jersey.

Sullivan said Battcock will encourage audience interaction during the Thursday night speech. Battcock will be meeting formally and informally with students and faculty during his stay at SIU.

Indian, Eskimo modern crafts being displayed at Home Ec

An exhibit featuring the contemporary basketry of American Indian and Eskimo craftsmen is currently on display in the Home-Economics Building lounge.

Sponsored by the Department of Anthropology and University Museum, the exhibit contains 50 samples of authentic artistry, utilizing four techniques of basket weaving.

Bill Shaver, preparator of the exhibit, commented that the craftsmanship is "artistically and technically good. "Many of the baskets show a high degree of skill and artistry in keeping with tribal tradition," said Shaver.

"In old Indian tradition you couldn't go down to the supermarket for materials," Shaver added. "They had to make their own utensils."

The collection was organized by the Southern Plains Indian Music and Crafts Center under the U.S. Department of the Interior. It will be in the Home-Economics Building lounge until January 31.

Included are an Incaque corn husk mask, a waterproof wicker basket made out of honeysuckle, by Cherokee, and a coiled yucca plaque from the Hopi.

Leasure to talk in Jackson, Tenn.

By University News Services

Keith Leasure, chairman of the SIU Plant Industries Department, will be the speaker for a meeting of the Tennessee Chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America in Jackson, Tenn., Friday.

He will discuss "Soil Conservation and Today's Problems."

Leasure, a specialist on pesticides, is a native of Sadie in Vermillion County, III. He has been on the SIU School of Agriculture faculty since 1968.

Before coming to SIU he was on the University of Tennessee faculty for eight years.

Festival to show food, art, music from abroad

By John D. Towne

Daily Egyptian Special Writer

Once a year for a week long foreign students on the SIU campus blend their culture and present "International Festival."

This year the International Festival will be Thursday through Tuesday, a week of culture blending, singing, dancing, speaking, exhibitions in drawing, and international buffets.

Clarence Hendershot, assistant director of International Services Division, said, "We are trying to get the total campus to give a little attention to international students."

"They see these students around, but not often in their native costumes. It is an opportunity for them to see each other in a cultural exchange which is to illustrate and demonstrate their culture," Hendershot said.

Howard Trivers, SIU's Diplomat-in-Residence, will initiate the festival with a public lecture on "Specimen Attractions Foreign Policy: Myths, Situational, and Vietnam." It will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Lawson Hall 221.

Trivers, who received his Ph.D. in philosophy from Harvard, served in the Foreign Service from 1941 to 1945. He is currently a specialist in central, northern and eastern European affairs.

The remaining part of the festival will be held in the University Center ballrooms. From 6 to 11 p.m. Saturday, international exhibits, an international cafe with refreshments from around the world, Persian calligraphy and illustrative art exhibits are scheduled. Muhammad Masood Javadi, a design student from Persia, will demonstrate the skill of calligraphy, while Abdurrahman Adayruss, a student from Indonesia, will draw charcoal portraits for charity.

The international students will combine their talents Saturday to present "Revue Internationale," which will feature entertainment from their homelands.

Ohio State meet a big one for swimmers

By Emont J. Schwartz
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

From freshman to swimming coach, Ray Esch, Buckeyes sparked a moment of relaxation to savor last weekend's action.

"We won well," he said. "But you know something, the training didn't indicate that." Esch knew his team was strong.

The meet in Oklahoma was on a three-day championship format which afforded the swimmers time to get more rest.

Esch sighed the rest factor plus the fact that the trackers were in "better condition and able to hold up better," as some of the reasons for the Buckeyes' winning victory.

On Saturday, final day of competition, Buckeyes put points on the board for Southern.

"I think that Saturday's performance was a reflection on the quality of the team," Esch said. "They were relaxed and confident. No one was tense. I was really pleased with how they competed." Esch also said that the only pressure that the trackers were under Saturday was their own. "Their own pride put the pressure on them."

At this point the subject under discussion turned from Oklahoma to Ohio State University to be exact. This season's version of Buckeye swimming is sporting a 3-1 record with the lone loss coming at the hands of super swimming power Indiana by a score of 46-53.

Esch calls the meet with OSU one of the biggest duals of the season.

Last season's Buckeyes raced to a 74 record which was good for fourth place in the Big Ten. They also finished 10th in the NCAA championships.

OSU was hit hard by graduation last year, but they still sport an impressive crew headed by Jim Backen, Mike Finneran and Reed Sloan.

Finneran was an NCAA finalist in the one and three-mile diving, while Slavin finished fourth in the 100-yard freestyle.

The encounter with the Buckeyes means a lot to the swimmers, according to Esch. "We feel that if we don't beat OSU our dual season meet won't be a success."

Mike Shoop wins title

Mike Shoop won the Tournament Week bowling title last Thursday after wrapping up a 2,730 pin total for six games. Jeff Mazzarelli placed second among the top 16 finalists with a total of 2,178 pins.

John Stevens came in third place followed by Bob Gurik, John Zimbal and B. J. Trokey. The finalists were picked out of scores of bowlers who entered the tournament last week.

Many of the bowlers will also compete for the intramural bowling championship this semester.

The race officially began Monday, but three-man league play began Sunday. The winners of the three-man and co-ed leagues can compete for the intramural trophy near the end of the quarter.

All bowling action will be conducted on the University Center lanes.

Indiana State cagers crush Evansville Aces by 95-72

Indiana State's Sycamores had no trouble disposing of Evansville in a non-conference basketball game Tuesday night at Terre Haute, Ind.

The Sycamores opened up a 50-30 half-time lead and went on to defeat the Purple Aces, 95-72. A frustrated Evansville offensive effort fell apart before a tight ISU man to man defense that forced Evansville to make risky shots they didn't want to take.

Cook injury makes defeat double loss

By Emil J. Schmitt

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

This past weekend, the SIU wrestling team traveled to East Lansing, Michigan, to face Michigan State, champions of the Big Ten wrestling club. SIU lost the meet 9-8 but of greater importance, it cost Long the fact that his team may have lost the services of Jim Cook.

The 134-pound junior from Decatur injured his knee in a match between Illinois and Northwestern and had to default.

"That's Jim Long, Cook can't bend his knee due to ear- silage damage. "If they operate on him, he may be back by the first of March," according to Long. As far as Cook is concerned, his injury comes at a most in- fraudulent time. According to Long, Cook was "at the point where he was getting a good deal of improvement, but the injury could cut back on this improvement, and he could be stalemated."

"He needs experience and time under pressure which he will not get in the hospital," said Long. "Long said Cook's place could be taken by either moving a weight class down or by using backup man Steve Jones, Lawrenceville.

"There are four things you can substantiate the impact of this muscle," he said. "Quickness, execution, smartness or a lack of mistakes."

"And we have to wrestle this way regardless of who we are up against in the ring," Long said.

The Salukis will host a triangle meet with Ohio University and University of Illinois, a Big Eight competitor, Saturday in the SIU Arena.

Missouri will visit the Arena Wednesday before SIU takes another road trip.

Ball State?
It certainly wasn’t supposed to be much of a game. Ball State was supposed to come in, put up about two or three minutes fight before letting nature and SIU—take its course and about a 48-point win.
It just didn’t work out that way.
As a matter of fact, if Nate Hawthorne and Greg Starchard hadn’t pushed nature’s arm a little bit, SIU might have ended up losing its 12th game in seven seasons in the SIU Arena.
As it turned out, Ball State’s Jim Regenold fouled Starchard with about a minute to play and Starchard converted on a one-and-bonus situation to put the Salukis up by two and Nate Hawthorne was fouled when he was rebounding Regenold’s second shot to give him two shots which he made to win the game, 79-77.
“That’s the story of this game,” said Ball State coach Bob Gottschalk. “We played good ball but got blown out in the end like with Bowling Green.”
Gottschalk’s crew was hardly “blown out” of the Arena—point, it looked like just the opposite was going to occur.
Hitting the first nine shots they took, the Cardinals raced to a 29-6 lead before the Salukis realized where they were.
SIU settled down a bit after it recognized the friendly confines of the Arena and began a brilliant comeback which took them to a tie at 30 all.
“I think you have to give our kids a lot of credit,” said SIU coach Paul Lambert. “We didn’t play great ball but we did play well, considering that Ball State played an excellent game.
“We’re admittedly not a very good university in conference play, so Ball State was not a very good game to play. We’ve played some fine basketball.
That hurt us in the end, was strength. The kids just kept pushing it up there and didn’t have enough strength to respond when they missed. You just can’t keep those Hoosier kids from shooting, I guess,” smiled the Cards’ coach.
Both coaches gave much credit to Ball State’s Regenold—who has been leading the Midwestern Conference in scoring—as the player that almost won the game for the Cardinals.
“He doesn’t have real great speed or height,” marveled Lambert of the Ball State sharpshooter, “but he does an exceptional job of using a pick to get inside and score.
While Ball State surprised most of the writers and spectators, it didn’t surprise Gottschalk.
“I told them before we left that we weren’t going to win 110-115 but that we might win 105-108,” said Lambert.
“As a prognosticator, the man was not far wrong.”
Lambert also said that he was happy to see signs that Greg Starchard is emerging as a shooting slump which he has been in of late.
As Lambert was walking away, he could see that Greg was beginning to hit in the second half. He got five of eight from the field.
SIU meets Kentucky Wesleyan, nationally ranked in the AP small college poll, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the SIU Arena.

Second Thoughts

By Mike Klein

Eight years, three cities

I learned two or three years ago to live each day as it comes, but never to the week.
These are the words of famed Silas Silas professional athlete. They represent the insecurity of the multi-million dollar business that calls itself football and manipulates men like so many important chess game pieces.
A member of the Daily Egyptian 1966-70 All-Decade SIU football team, he signed with the St. Louis Cardinals as a free agent in 1963 won a starting place as defensive tackle and was named All Pro.
There were four more years with the Cardinals and then in 1968 it was off to the New York Giants which signaled the beginning of the lean years.
New York was so impressed with the former All-Pro that they shipped him 3,000 miles west to Kestrel Stadium and the San Francisco 49ers after one season.

Just another player
At 31, a time when many athletes are just reaching playing peaks, Silas, or somebody thought, was going down hill.
San Francisco placed him in their taxi squad where he was a Monday through Friday football player. There was no Sunday glamour, no TV exposure, no reporter’s questions like had become just another player.
With four weeks in the 1969 season remaining, San Francisco began running into problems at defensive tackle and Silas was activated and he’s been on the club’s active roster ever since.
At the age of 30, however, he is still playing behind a man five years his senior, Charlie Krueger.
A proud man, who describes himself as a “tenacious player,” Silas does not intend to set around keeping his fingerprints close to the wall one day, especially about next year. But there are also words of realism.
“I think if I get a chance to play, I could make All Pro again. But Krueger is a good potential All-Pro and I don’t really see myself beating him out.”
What I do see is that in time he will retire and then I’ll get my chance to play.

After nine pro years, Silas credits football with teaching him self-discipline and has some concrete opinions on the sport in general and Sunday’s Super Bowl in particular.
About Sunday’s game which could have made either $7,500 or $15,000 richer had San Francisco beaten Dallas, Silas said. “There’s truth in what a lot of people have been talking. I’m on the game I know the players. And I picked Dallas to win the Super Bowl.”

Namath couldn’t have known

Joe Namath predicted Baltimore by a field goal. Now you can’t tell me that Joe Namath knew they’d get a field goal in the last five seconds.
WhenSilas began his professional career, there were 14 National Football League teams. And the American Football League was just a practical joke on the folks like George Blanda.
History has seen the two leagues merged, there are currently 26 teams and talk of expansion to 32 within the decade.
But the quality of play Silas maintains, hasn’t suffered.
Now, good athletes have been given an opportunity to be good, and the different in the players and the guy that goes home is just a halftime, Sometimes just the flip of a coin.
This is the reason enough to live each day as it comes but never by the week.
