Bush knew 'some time' ago of spy allegations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Soviet diplomat suspected of spying for the Soviet Union was placed on administrative leave a month ago but was let back into the State Department with a guard several times, the department said Monday.

In a related disclosure, President Bush said he has known about allegations of espionage against Bloch "for some time, and from the minute I heard about it I was aggreed."

The FBI has said Bloch, 54, had unauthorized contacts with the Soviet Union, though no charges have been filed against him. State Department sources who asked not to be identified have told United Press International a compromising of security had occurred and Bloch's identification as a Soviet contact has been a devastating setback for the Foreign Service.

The department's Bureau of OPR was notified last week of the matter, and the FBI was notified on Monday. OPR is the department's Bureau of Investigation.

Margaret Tuttle confirmed Monday that Bloch had been placed on administrative leave June 23 and relieved of the pass permitting him to enter the State Department building. Nevertheless, she said, he was allowed back in several times to remove personal possessions, to close out a credit union account and to attend a seminar on East-West issues just last week.

Each time, Tuttle said, he was escorted by an agent from the department's Bureau of Security.

"At the seminar, he was introduced as the man in charge of the office dealing with U.S. contacts with the European Economic Community," Tuttle said. "Kimmel said that was his own description of his duties and that he had not done with the department's authorization.

Bloch, who lives in Washington, D.C., arrived Sunday night at his daughter's home in Chappaqua, N.Y., and FBI agents kept a vigil around the home. Police said Bloch left the home about 11 a.m. EDT Monday in a car with a woman believed to be his daughter.

According to published accounts, Bloch's alleged involvement was discovered months ago when he was videotaped giving a briefing to a Soviet intelligence officer in Paris.

The 1980s have brought more female into higher education and the University is no exception.

According to a report released by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, female enrollment in all levels of higher education has been steadily increasing.

The University's Institutional Research and Studies compiled the number of male and female students every semester. During the spring semester of 1988, there were 8,763 female students enrolled at the University. This number includes undergraduates, professional and graduate students.

In the fall of 1988, the number of female students increased to 9,364, but during the spring of 1989 the number went down slightly to 9,155.

Carol Kimmel, member of the SIU Board of Trustees, said during the previous spring semester of 1989, there was an increase in female enrollment. The decrease in female enrollment dropped by 20 percent between semesters is not a major setback since enrollment in general decreased.

"Every year has its ups and downs in male and female enrollment," Kimmel said. "On the whole, SIU has a steady increase and that's something to be proud of."

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said the University also does well in the number of minority and female students.

"I've heard that the University is about as good as it can be and the students are in high school to get them thinking about coming to SIU," Pettit said. "We need to concentrate on the female and the minority students who aren't as..."

Chinese scientists walk out on international conference
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Two Chinese members of an international scientific conference walked out of the conference's opening session Monday after Soviet human rights activist Andrei Sakharov criticized them.

Sakharov, speaking at the Pugwash Conference on Science and World Affairs, a forum for providing governments with technical advice on disarmament and other issues, expressed "regret" over recent events in China and earnestly excused the actions of the Chinese government and we must find a way to "politically demonstrate this attitude," Sakharov said through a translator.

Troops in Rangoon calm after political unrest
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Thousands of troops manned roadblocks and patrolled streets in Rangoon as the Burmese capital started to cut off international communications yet calm following the arrests of opposition political leaders, diplomatic reports said Monday. In Bangkok, about 30 Burmese students waving placards and shouting anti-government slogans marched on the Burmese Embassy demanding the release of the leaders of the National League for Democracy who were arrested Thursday. All telex and telephone communications with Burma, cut by the military government following the arrests, remained out of order Monday, international operators in Bangkok said.

Bush meets senate leaders; defends budget
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush pushed his defense program to Senate leaders Monday and defended spending large amounts on the B-2 stealth bomber as the proper way to protect the United States and bolster the nation's hand in arms control negotiations. With Congress opening debate on a $305.5 billion defense appropriation bill and the fate of the $7 billion stealth bomber program — Bush Monday called key senators from both parties to the Oval Office to push his blueprint.

Arafat: Shamir pursuing talks with PLO
ROME (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has held "secret meetings" with PLO supporters in the occupied territories and authorized recent talks with a PLO official in Austria, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat said in an interview published Monday. Shamir spokesman Avi Pazner said, "Mr. Shamir did have contacts in the past few weeks with non-PLO Palestinian leaders" from the occupied territories but he denied Israeli officials met with representatives or supporters of the PLO, which Israel considers a terrorist organization.

Corrections/Clarifications
Alan Cohn was 63 when he died and he obtained the Croesman collection of James Joyce for Morris Library. This information was incorrect in Thursday's Daily Egyptian.
Sharon, Finian McLean's daughter, played by Linda Sue Mosher and Og the Leprechaun played by Clay Huskey, dance together during a closing scene of Finian's Rainbow.

Stand-out performances include Linda Sue Mosher as Sharon, who brings both charm and spirit to her role; Clay Huskey as Og the Leprechaun, who captivates with his athleticism and comedic timing; and Finian McLean as Finn, who brings a heartwarming performance that sets the tone for the community spirit of Rainbow Valley.

The play features several children in singing and speaking parts, and the local talent, along with adult roles, gives the production a sense of community involvement. The cast, under the direction of Kelly McTigue, delivers convincing performances, making the characters relatable and the story compelling.

Jersey Kennedy, a former University student and flight instructor, is set to leave the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for a new job as a flight instructor at a private aviation company. Kennedy, who was previously a flight instructor at the University of Illinois, said that he was drawn to the new job by the opportunity to teach more pilots how to fly.

Kennedy, who has been teaching aviation for over a decade, said that he looks forward to working with other pilots and learning from them.

Letter's mockery is product of anger, belittles African-American interests

I would like to respond to the article, "One-act plays do injustice to actors, playwrights," by Garry Trudeau, published on page 3 on July 29, 1989. I enjoyed a good meal for the price.

The writers and the actors may have received some good food. The next time a play like this is presented the audience might be detracted. From now on, I may hesitate before buying season tickets. — Betty McNelly, Carbondale.

Opinion & Commentary

Claiming debt shows unwise investments

LEAVE IT TO a federal agency to take over a job already being performed by another government agency. In this case, the U.S. Department of Education has decided it will exercise its statutory power to collect debts owed to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission. Never mind that the ISSC already does the same thing. The loans at issue are the Illinois Stafford Loans, formerly the Guaranteed Student Loans. The federal government will be trying to collect loans from some 10,000 debtors. These people represent less than 2 percent of those who borrowed money between 1966 and 1984. An ISSC spokeswoman referred to these people as the "hardcore" of student loan debtors.

RENEE BROOKS, manager of agency relations for ISSC, said the ISSC can garner wages of state employees, have the Internal Revenue Service send tax refunds to the agency and withhold state income tax refunds in order to pay off the debt owed to the state.

But Brooks said that these methods for collection do little good for those who are on welfare or incarcerated. In short, the state finds it difficult to collect debts owed by people with little or no income.

Brooks said the government will contract private collection agencies to help them collect the debts but wondered what else they might do to collect the debts that the state government is not doing. She pointed out, however, that the federal government would have more assets at its disposal than the state alone.

WHILE IT IS almost certainly true that the federal government could bring more money to bear on the problem, it would seem more cost effective for the state to supply money to the state so it could employ a collection agency. It makes little sense to spend more money for collection than the amount collected.

We are all for forcing the payment of money owed to the state and federal government, but another bureaucracy would seem only to muddy the waters. The federal government will be trying to collect loans from some 10,000 African-Americans for wanting to get closer to their beginnings. Maybe the concept of finding one's cultural identity is a game to you, Mark, but it is a very serious matter to African-Americans. You have some inkling of who your ancestors were. Most African-Americans don't. The traditions, concepts and artistic abilities of our ancestors were taken away by those who used our ancestors to make a buck.

I have no problems accepting you as a man with the same civil rights as I have. I have no problems accepting you as an equal human being as far as intelligence, spirituality and so on. I do, however, have a problem with the underlying tone of your letter. — Maurice E. Bryant, radio and television.

One-act plays do injustice to actors, playwrights

MARK BEAUCHIEF, I'd like to thank you for writing another thought provoking letter, you've helped make a dull summer of "Letters to the Editor" more exciting.

I'd like to quote from your letter: "A refusal to recognize my deep European roots would severely offend my Caucasoid heritage."

Mark, your letter shows that you know something of your cultural identity (whether you really care, I don't know). You know your ancestors came from Europe. You might be able to trace your ancestry from a peasant to a king or warrior.

African-Americans can't do this. Why many of us try to fancy the culture we do have. This is why we create groups such as the Black Teachers Caucus, the Black Affairs Council and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It is why we call ourselves "African-Americans."

Mark, I don't know you but I think you display a certain arrogance in trying to show mock concern for your "European roots." I think that behind this concern lies anger — anger at African-Americans for wanting to get closer to their beginnings.

Maybe the concept of finding one's cultural identity is a game to you. Mark, but it is a very serious matter to African-Americans. You have some inkling of who your ancestors were. Most African-Americans don't. The traditions, concepts and artistic abilities of our ancestors were taken away by those who used our ancestors to make a buck.

A fire that started in the mechanical room of the college's Tuxedo building is under investigation.

"I am a strong supporter of the right of free speech," Simon said. "If someone wants to burn the flag, then let them burn it. But they can't do it in the face of law, and that's what these are." Simon is a member of the Illinois State Society, and the Tuxedo building is the site of a recent protest by the group.

"But burning the flag is another matter," he said. "It's not only a violation of the constitution, it's a violation of a national monument."

The bill upholds the current statute making desecration of the flag a federal crime. The provision has been in place for at least three years.

Under the statute, a person can be convicted and punished regardless of the content or political statement behind the action of desecrating the flag. Simon, however, does not want to go as far as to propose an amendment to the Constitution, which he says would be "a little bit too strong." He doubts that anyone else wants to make the right to speak the law.

"We should not rush into something like that," Simon said. "I believe we can correct this matter with legislation."

Four hearings are scheduled to present arguments either pro or con on the matter, with two in August and two in September. Then the matter will go to the U.S. Senate floor for a vote.

Jody Watley, “Larger Than Life,” MCA Records

On her follow-up effort to her commercially successful 1987 debut album, Jody Watley is not only looking for a new love but a new way in life’s twists and turns to her advantage.

National Golden Gloves Champ prepares to fight

OKLAHOMA CITY - Mike Tyson said he'll be ready to do whatever it takes to live up to his high billing.

"I'm going to be ready to do whatever it takes to live up to my high billing," the 23-year-old Tyson told The Daily Egyptian.

"I'm not here to make enemies. I'm here to make friends. That's what boxing is all about. The man who can't make friends, he can't win."

Tyson, 23, is the national Golden Gloves champ. He is in town for the next two weekends to train for his July 29 bout with world lightweight champ George Foreman.

"I'm going to be ready to do whatever it takes to live up to my high billing. I'm going to be ready to do whatever it takes to live up to my high billing."

Dan Marino reports to Dolphin camp

MIAMI (UPI) — Quarterback Dan Marino is taking back remarks he made last winter that he thinks about playing for another team, but he insisted Monday he expects to remain a Miami Dolphin.

Marino told ESPN's Pete Axthelm during the post-season that he had thought about what it would be like to move, and it was widely interpreted as a desire for a trade.

"At the time there were rumors," Marino said as he reported to Dolphin training camp. "I told Ax that I think every player thinks of playing for somebody else, and a lot of people added their own words.

"Anyway, I didn't get traded so I guess it didn't mean much," he said. "I'll be playing for the Dolphins."

Although he led NFL passers in yards gained with 4,404, Marino had an off year by his standards last season as the Dolphins struggled to a 6-10 record. Marino's worst since Coach Don Shula took over in 1970.

His quarterback rating of 80.8 dropped more than eight points from the year before, and he fell to second on the all-time list behind San Francisco's Joe Montana.

"It's hard to say, but I think I've had better years," he said. "I think I learned a lot as far as taking advantage of certain situations.

He admitted, that at times he forced the ball more than he should, particularly to Mark Clayton, who was having a career year as a receiver.

"There were times late in the season I would tell Mark Clayton to get open because I'm going to throw it to you. Sometimes it worked out, sometimes it didn't."

As he enters his seventh season, Marino is hoping for more team success also.

"Last year was my most frustrating year. Six-10 isn't very encouraging," he said.

"You have to know when you go out on the field that you're going to win. Last year, we were sort of unsure of ourselves. That has to change if we're going to be a contender."

The Dolphins were buoyed during the offseason by the acquisition of several free agents, including linebacker E.J. Junior of Phoenix. The first-round draft selections of Florida State running back Sammie Smith and Florida State quarterback Louis Oliver also boosted spirits.
Large crowds at British Open give event atmosphere

TROON, Scotland (UPI) — Win after win, but Carl Calcafeccia, but he's after bigger goals.

"A Ryder Cup win means more to me," he said.

Harvey to play in gold-medal game

Olympic Festival serves as tune-up to the 1992 games

By Kevin Simpson

SUU-C sophomore basketball standout Tony Harvey, member of the North squad at the United States Olympic Festival, will play in the gold medal game Wednesday evening.

The game will be held at 8:30 p.m. at Lloyd Noble Center, located on the University of Oklahoma campus, in Norman, Oklahoma.

The North team, coached by Michigan State's Jud Heathcoate, lost to the West squad, 86-84 in Monday's game.

The high scorer in Monday's game was Kenny Anderson, a West squad with 19 points.

Anderson will attend Georgia Tech this fall. The Portland, Oregon, native was led by Corey Williams of Oklahoma State, who had 15 points.

Harvey scored 2 points, pulled down four rebounds, but was whistled for two personal fouls in 16 minutes of playing time.

Harvey's best outing in the tournament came Saturday afternoon against the East squad. He pulled down five rebounds to go with his 4 points while playing 16 minutes.

Harvey received the Missouri Valley Conference Freshman of the Year award and was voted to his school's all-newcomer team after averaging 6.9 points, 2 rebounds and 2.6 blocks per game for the Salukis in the 1991-92 season.

Players in the competition consisted of incoming freshman and sophomore players from around the country.

Five players on the North team include Oklahoma's Jeff Vanatta, Pat Graham, North Carolina-Charlotte's Henry Williams, Oklahoma State's Byron Houston and Missouri's Anthony Poeller.

The North managed to advance to the championship game on the strength of two earlier wins against the East squad and week-end sides.

Basketball is just one of the 38 events at the festival, which gives college basketball a taste of the Olympic spirit.

The festival is designed to accustom players to foreign competition in preparation for the 1990 World Championships and the 1992 Olympic Games in Barcelona, Spain.

Harvey was selected as the Freshman of the Year in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"We broke it on the chin, but this was a lot more physical than the last one, particularly the final game," Steve Montez, the team's player-coach, said.

"The Salukis lost all three of their matches, the first because teams had missed a day off, which led to the Western team taking a win in the 15-18 game.
