Arabs Move Troops Toward Israel

CAIRO (AP) - Troops poured out of Cairo Wednesday toward the Israeli frontier. Syria and the United Arab Republic placed their armed forces on full alert against what they profess to see as a military threat from Israel.

As troop movements in both Syria and the U.A.R. continued, dispatches from Israel said the people remained calm. Israel has threatened Syria with military reprisal for acts of sabotage in frontier regions. Syria is reported to have called up some reserves.

The troop movements were accompanied by a flurry of government and diplomatic activity in Cairo.

The U.N. Peace-keeping Force in the Gaza Strip-separating the U.A.R. and Israel-has been warned to withdraw immediately beyond the Egyptian-Israeli armistice line to escape danger, the authoritative newspaper Al Ibrahim said.

The request was forwarded to U.N. Secretary-General U Thant, in New York. He immediately asked Cairo for clarification. A U.N. spokesman said Thant was concerned by the Middle East situation.

In Gaza itself, Ahmed Shukairy, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, told a mass rally the organization "will keep sending commands into occupied Palestine, contingent after contingent, to destroy and burn!"

Student Elections Held Today

Martino, Ava, Action Party. Student government will use the results of today's plebiscite as an indication of student opinion concerning the textbook rental system.

Larry Bockman, chairman of the Campus Senate adhoc committee on textbook rentals, said the survey would influence either the retention of the present system, a change to a system of complete textbook sales or a continuance of the present system for freshmen and sophomores and area services for both campuses. The affirmative response fell still more, to 44 per cent.

The results showed that male officers responsible for both campuses are added the disadvantage increased.

"I interpret this to mean that on both campuses the faculty wish to have the greater degree of autonomy," Kenney said.

Kenney thought that the survey findings would be a useful guide to the administration in planning for the administrative structure of the University.

The opinion study was made independently by the Faculty Council. President Delaney W. Morris, upon learning of it, actively participated in the planning of the survey, however.

Inept Student Government Fails in Major Function

Student government announcement that students would get the "opportunity" to vote today on the wisdom of increasing rental or sales. It was only yesterday that referendum voting was widely publicized.

Warm Weather Spawns Wrecks

Mid-May usually marks the beginning of the annual surge in tire blowouts. It also marks the beginning of summer driving habits.

Light Weather Warms the Nation

In accordance with the national weather instructions on how to operate your vehicle, Americans would be a little more careful at the wheel. Every day driving habits will increase this awareness. The figure will go up this weekend.

Public Safety

Public safety workers are constantly increasing their vigilance, and the upsurge of travel in Illinois and the United States has heightened the nation's capability to control traffic and the hazards of students to the breaking point.

In an effort to help curtail an increase in vehicle accidents, Gov. Otto Kerner has declared May 21 through 28 as the "Warm Weather Warms the Nation's Students" campaign.

The IC plans to discontinue the weekend excursion fare of $3.80 making all fares from Carbondale to Chicago $18.50. ICC approval of the change will be requested between May 1 and 7.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's office in St. Louis referred all letters of protest to the Kerner Commission, headed by Alan S. Boyd, Secretary of Commerce and Transportation.

We believe that the students of the area should voice their disapproval of the change, as it is only freezing the students to the breaking point.

Lyle Gohn, SUI coordinator of student activities, said he believes that students will not minor the extra $4.70 to go home during the term because that is the student's right to self-expression at that time. However, Gohn added, a suggestion was made that the student government consider increasing the discount during the quarter break in order to make it more attractive.

Although the controversial Coleman Report obviously represents a great deal of work by members of the commission, we conclude that the report should be taken without the danger of students.

Little Noise From Big Deal

Students Can Protest Proposed Fare Hike

Students who are upset over the proposed fare hike can protest by writing to their senators and representatives in Congress.

Participants Comment on Free School

About the Story

The Daily Egyptian recently assigned a team of reporters to examine the Free School at SIU. They talked to administrators, organizers of the Free School, and students who attend the Free School's classes. Some of the reporters also attended Free School classes and gave their impressions of the movement. Today's story is the second of three, the third will appear in Friday's Daily Egyptian.

Free school at SIU claims to be an institution of, by and for students.

It began in September, 1966, by a group of students interested in "escape from large lecture halls and the impersonality of instructors. The informal atmosphere, free school gained support from Student Government.

Courses offered include poetry, poetry, civil rights, folk singing.

Students may learn or teach the sessions, without attendance or opinions on the success of free school differ among the class members.

"I was first attracted to the free school by curiosity," said Terry D. Peters, freshman from Belleville.

"Then as I became more involved, I decided that it was a worthwhile experience," he said.

Paul N. Angier, a sophomore attending Free school during fall quarter because of his frustration with his regular classes.

"I feel students will get more out of free school because of the informal atmosphere," Angier said.

Peters said the future of free school was very slim. The school is not leader and organizer of the school is leaving and the school may lack leadership, Peters said.

Knowledge of free school varies.

John Bundy, freshman from Marion who is majoring in pre-law, said free school "discusses controversial issues," but he was not sure of other activities.

Bill Kelley, a senior from Chicago, Chicago, said that he "didn't know what free school is." A freshman from Lebanon, Marty Benson, who is majoring in interior design, has "seen the posters and that's it."

Some of the students, such as James Burns, junior from Northbrook, said that "there just isn't any worry in free school, and without worrying about grades and assignments I can learn more," he said.

Regular SIU courses require more than grades and assignments rather than allowing the student to learn. The calm atmosphere of free school gives me a chance to think more," Kretsch added.

Some students attending Free school say the small class sessions allow them to participate in class discussion more. Because of the size of most regular SIU courses, students are hesitant to ask questions. Attendance of a free school class might be the deciding factor.

Kretsch said too much time is wasted in regular classes. He cited a speech course he had as an example.

"Too much time is spent watching 30 other students give speeches throughout the term," Kretsch said. "In my free school speech course we mainly discuss the techniques of speech and the only time speeches are given is when students volunteer."

Robert J. Leonard, a senior from New York, attended a speech class showing films of Adolf Hitler's power of persuasion. "I went to this class because I am a history major interested in films about Hitler," Leonard said.

"You can't argue with statistics," said Diana Voss, a junior from Kankakee majoring in special education, when asked if she felt poverty had a direct effect on her life. The feeling appeared mutual among several of the students attending the SIU free school class on poverty.

Diana Voss, junior from Kankakee who is majoring in special education was encouraged to attend the free school sessions on poverty because it offered her a chance to exchange ideas with people who are concerned one way or another, with a concern of hers.

Fere Winton, graduate student from New York City, said he felt the free school was a good chance for people to express themselves, especially with something so "pertinent today locally, nationally, and internationally," as poverty.

John and Marilyn Egypt, a married couple attending the Saturday afternoon workshop at the Student Christian Foundation, commented on the freedom of the course.

Black, a graduate student in psychology, said that the open discussions in small informal groups create more interest and awareness in the students.

"There's a lot of discussion, a lot of popular interest," Black said. The criticism is constructive. The course itself demonstrates things that are hard to find in books or hard to understand from books.

"Psychology courses require a great amount of my time," he said, "and since assignments on the guitar are on a personal basis and not compulsory, I can learn at my own pace without fear of losing credit."

Kretsch said she could not afford to further her education if it were not for free school. She attends the guitar workshop and the free school philosophy courses.

The knowledge she is obtaining now will help her later when she can afford to get her degree in philosophy, she said.

Some similarities between the free school classroom session and SIU classes exist:

Subject interest in free school is comparable to 300 level SIU courses in a student's major.

Students take interest in what is being discussed. In SIU classes, the students are interested in content of the major but not the whole that they voluntarily chose.

In free school classes, interest is high because the students come to class with the subject matter is of their own choosing.

In both types of classes, attendance is usually sporadic--approximately 12 to 14 students.

Student dress is nearly the same for both types of classes.

Similarities between SIU and free school classes are few.

The main difference in the subject matter is taught.

For SIU classes, the instructor is knowledgeable in the subject he is teaching. He has a college education and is a professional instructor.

The lecturer for an SIU class is an "instructor," for a free school class, he is a "co-ordinator."

The co-ordinator for the May 3 free school class was a 19-year-old sophomore who had not picked a major. His knowledge in the subject under discussion was questionable. There was no planned, organized program which really tried to educate the students with facts and information needed to know, Kretsch said.

The free school session was very basic and left open for students to express their own opinions. They decided the course the program was to take and the subject matter to be discussed. The class was more of a seminar and left the impression that any knowledge a student wanted to gain could be found in a formal SIU classroom session.

Free school is built upon individualism, according to the founders. The class members are attempting to learn. At the same time they are challenging contemporary society through education. They have a quest to know.

Student Trailblazers Cut Many Problems

By David Margulies

Ah, yes. The pioneering spirit still exists at SIU. Just look on campus. Note how each pedestrian blazes his own trail across campus, usually missing the sidewalks in favor of the grass.

One need not be as good at tracking as Tonto to follow the trails. With the tramp, tramp, tramp of 18,000 students (that's 36,600 feet) they are easy to spot.

Campus architects, who are in charge of the sidewalk planning for the campus, have not found a solution to the problem. One reason is that traffic patterns change constantly.

Students just don't always walk in the same place each year. As new buildings open up, or as the registrar changes the location of classes, new traffic patterns emerge.

Aside from that, says Associate University Architect John F.J. Lonergan, "Every student is a different individual. You can't predict where he's going to walk."

One suggestion often made is to just let the students walk where they choose on a sea of grass, and then put pavement where the trails emerge.

This, says Lonergan, doesn't work. The idea was tried at Thompson Point. As the travel patterns of the residents changed the sidewalks were not used and the pedestrians were back to walking on the grass.

Another idea is to pave the shortcuts. No again, says Lonergan. People will just shortcut the shortcuts, and you would wind up with an all-concrete campus.

The biggest problem, according to Lonergan, isn't so much the shortcutting during the spring and summer, but student trail blazing during the winter after a snowfall.

The students walk on the snow and injure the grass underneath. In the spring, said Lonergan, SIU winds up with a trail in the grass where the students walked.

Lonergan's office has no solution to the problem. Workers are putting up fences at some strategic areas, adding sidewalks to others. The old trick of spreading manure, which Lonergan opposes, has long since been given up as dirty pool.

Anyway, Lonergan says that SIU's problem isn't really that bad. "We have far less cross-over walks than other schools have to suffer with," he declares.

Apparently there is no solution in sight. SIU has yet to resort to "Keep off the grass" signs. Perhaps campus keepers are afraid students might trip over them on their way to class.

Russia Requests Paper by Engineering Professor

A technical paper written by William C. Orthwein, professor of engineering at SIU, has been sent to the Institute of Chemical Kinetics and Combustion in Novosibirsk, Russia.

The paper, "Rotational Invariance of Maxwell's Equations," was sent at the request of the Russian Academy of Science.

Orthwein, in charge of mechanics of solids at the School of Technology, said the paper was published in 1964. He said it was originally done in regards to measuring electro-magnetic fields outside space by instruments contained in orbiting satellites.

According to Orthwein, his theory can also be applied to measuring the electro-magnetic fields of rapidly rotating stellar bodies such as stars, moons, planets or atomic particles.

Orthwein added that the Russians have also requested a later paper on the same topic.

Texas University Student Snipers Kill Officer

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A rookie policeman died of a gunshot wound Wednesday in a battle between officers and student snipers at Texas Southern University, the state's largest Negro school. Three other persons suffered wounds.

Police said more than 1,000 rounds of ammunition were fired.

While police questioned 488 students arrested during the four-hour dormitory siege, city and school officials sought to discover what led to an outbreak.

Patrolman Lewis R. Kuba, 25, was shot during an assault by some 100 fellow policemen on the dormitory from which students were firing guns and hurling crude fire bombs.

Kuba's widow is expecting their first child and the couple had moved into a new home only Tuesday.

While police questioned the students jamming the available city and county cell, trying to pinpoint the gunman, Welch met with the Police Chief Herman Short, the district attorney and the school administration.

Tuesday had been an unusually heavy day of protest actions in Houston, a total of 64 arrests were made in separate demonstrations at a city dump Negros want closed and at a suburban junior high school where 14 white and Negro students were expelled for fighting.

Students 'Fast' for Food Drive

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—More than 1,7000 students at the State University unit here turned thumbs down on a fried chicken dinner Tuesday night—and the chef didn't blink an eye.

The fast, organized by the Sigma Tau Beta fraternity, raised over $1,300, that will be sent to a United Nations committee taking contributions from a nationwide "Student Food for India" drive.

For every missed meal Tuesday night, the university food service donated 75 cents.

University Plans Interim Use
Of Former Baptist Foundation

The Baptist Foundation building and connecting dormitory which will be vacated by mid-August, are not part of the Carbondale master campus plan, Rino Bianchi, assistant to the vice president of business affairs, said. Therefore it will come down, he said.

Because of the tremendous demands on space, SIU will probably keep the present building and make temporary use of it for a few years, Bianchi continued.

The building does not lend itself to classrooms, because of the small area of each room, Bianchi said. The University would retain the building for office or research space, he added.

As of now there are no assignments for the building, Bianchi said. Until SIU gets possession and investigates the structural soundness of the building, the University will not be able to determine how it is to be used, he added.

No major renovations would be made because of the short-term use of the building, Bianchi said. Minor renovations, consisting of painting, and adding fluorescent lights and electrical outlets, would be made to allow SIU to use the building for a few years, he said.

"We'll wait to see what happens to University school to see what space can be used from there," Bianchi said, before a decision is made about the Foundation building.

Disability Facilities
Rate High at SIU

SIU is one of the top 12 in the U.S. in terms of facilities for handicapped students, according to a new book on opportunities for the handicapped.

The dozen schools listed meet all six 'convenience' features on a checklist compiled by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. They are on-campus housing, ramps, public restrooms, reserved parking and modified toilet facilities.

Other schools on the list are San Diego State, University of California at Riverside, Texas A&M, Oklahoma State Technical Institute and the University of Puget Sound.

The book is 'Your Handicap - Don't Let It Handicap You,' by Sarah Splaver, and published by Julian Messner, New York.

Tennis Means Work, Travel, Challenge to Al Pena

By Linda Whyse

For more than 18 years a certain young man, now an SIU senior, has been raising quite a 'racket.' He's Al Pena, from Bogota, Colombia, one of the top U.S. collegiate tennis players. Except when traveling around the nation to stump other tennis players, he's right here at SIU studying marketing.

At the age of 12 Pena was the National Boys Champion of Colombia and Canada. At 17 he was the Junior Champion in Colombia. After a knee injury, which kept him off the courts for four years, Pena came back to be ranked among the top five tennis players in Colombia and reached the national semifinals there in 1962 and 1964.

Spring is the biggest season for college tennis, although tournaments and meets are scheduled throughout the year. Pena has won many of these and usually travels to one or two meets a week, sometimes more. His record at SIU is 17-0 in 1964, 19-2 in 1965 and 14-0 this year.

Pena commented that tennis is one of the most time-consuming sports when one is working to obtain a certain level of achievement. "You have to practice several hours a day all year round if you don't want to lose your skill," he said.

At the recent Oklahoma City Invitational in which five schools competed Pena said the average time on the court was six hours a day.

Pena stressed that one of the biggest problems in tennis at Southern is that there are no indoor facilities.

Many good players are reluctant to enroll at SIU because of this, since it is important to practice throughout the year. Pena and other players here try to overcome this by training in the Arena during the winter.

"Tennis is a challenging sport in many ways," Pena said. "It's a great opportunity to travel, to meet all kinds of people and to become personally acquainted with them," he added.

As to how he got started with tennis he said, "My father is a tennis nut. He started teaching me when I was about seven."

Pena will graduate in September and, after playing in two tournaments this summer, will enter about four tournaments in Europe. He has been offered a pro teaching position for $20,000 a year but has turned this down to go to Europe and return in October to work in St. Louis.

Athletics Rally as Predicted

KANSAS CITY (AP)—When the Kansas City Athletics were fighting to stay out of the cellar a week ago, Manager Alvin Dark predicted “our young club will stay up” and we’ll be playing .500 ball by the end of the season.

The A’s reached the .500 level two weeks ahead of Dark’s schedule and took over undisputed third place at 14-14. Kansas City hasn’t been either in first place or out of it high in the American League standings since 1963.

Four years ago under Ed Lopat the A’s were 18-14, in second place on the morning of May 16. That year the club skidded under .500 in mid-June and finished 13 games out.

“I knew our young pitchers would be fine as soon as the weather got better,” Dark said, “They just needed more work to get sharper. It’s not just our pitching, though. We’ve been hitting, playing together, making some real good defensive plays.”

Nine days ago, the A’s were in last place with an 8-12 record, Chuck Dobson, struggling with a 7.31 earned run average, was a key pitcher to win them only two early runs in his last 13-2 innings. Now Krause, pitching in hard luck with an 0-4 record, has won three of his last four. Odum is getting in the groove.

Rick Monday, the club’s 10th new, is hitting .351 in the last 10 games and is tied with Danny Cater for club lead in runs batted in. He smashed three home runs in that span.
Salukis' Opponent Unnamed

There is still some speculation on just who the Salukis will play Sunday at the SIU field in conjunction with Old Timers Baseball Day. St. Louis University is scheduled to play SIU on Sunday but the Billikens may not be able to show up. Won't?

Goldsmith's Hardware

181 S. Illinois

Goldsmith's has always given you dividends in good appearance, and from May 18 to May 22 Goldsmiths is giving you special dividends in value. Just to keep the above check and bring it in. Goldsmith's will honor it toward the purchase of any suit at Goldsmith's. Also dependent upon the forthcoming decision are proposals or hoped-for new facilities, such as a larger football stadium, new track, a much needed swimming pool, indoor facilities and a recreation building.

The decision will come only after a lot of public pressure and the decision will take into account the overall financial status of the University. This means, in the end, it's going to be a long time before there is a decision made.

The question is: does the administration feel that SIU's athletic program is keeping pace with the growth and development of the University?

And, if not, does the administration plan to make an adjustment to bring them into proper proportion?

SIU is not large enough, nor is it plagued by anonymity. For these reasons its athletic department cannot claim, as John Bangs' Little Eifman Cougars do, that 'I'm just as big for me, as you are for you!'
