Mall owner says Sears may leave

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Sears has threatened to pull out of the University Mall because of a competing property development company. The mall owner is trying to draw them to Marion, an official from the company that owns the mall said at the City Council meeting Tuesday night.

The City Council was prepared to hear the status report of a $2 million improvement project for the mall. What they got was a shocker from Mark Pulliam, vice president of development from Hooker and Associates. "We've decided to up and move elsewhere," Pulliam said.

He said Sears told them of the decision Monday after two years of "good faith" negotiations for expansion of the Sears store.

Pulliam said he is considering a move to the former Pulliam's department store, which was bought by Jeff Doherty.

Pulliam and Interim City Manager Jeff Doherty predicted a domino effect with other department stores leaving the mall if Sears vacates.

"There is a strong possibility we are losing a major tenant in the mall, others may leave," Doherty said. The University Mall "may not be what we know it to be today."

SIU-C gets $46 million for research

In fiscal year 1988, the University asked for — and got — more research money from outside sources than ever before.

Researchers sent out 712 study proposals — 19 percent more than the previous record set the year before.

A student might say "so.

"In essence, we are competing as well as a "wise operator" that gains by increasing the efficiency of its operations and by reducing its expenses.

The federal government gave 665 awards totaling more than $4.3 million and the state gave $63,000. Private sources supplied half the awards but only about one-sixth of the total funds, Hawse said.

Without outside funding, the departments either wouldn't be able to do the projects that require the funds, according to the research, Hawse said.

The number and total value of awards have increased steadily since 1983. That year, the University got 432 awards worth $25.3 million. In 1984, 448 awards brought $80.3 million, followed by $21.9 million from 624 awards in 1985.

"The next step is to identify the second tier of researchers, Israel said. "There's a hole between the two that must be filled."

"Other factors are not seen as as serious in the future as they are now, Simon said."

"I have no idea what the future holds, but we are not able to do as much research as we've done in the past," she added.

Jeanne Simon said she was hesitant to campaign for her husband, before the current University Board of Trustees meets.

SOLDIERS KILL ARAB YOUTHS, WOUND U.S. PHOTOGRAPHER

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinian youths and wounded an American news photographer early Tuesday when violent clashes erupted in the West Bank's largest city, Nablus, following a visit by Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin. One of the slain youths was a 5-year-old boy who had been shot three times. Palestinian sources said. Neal Cassidy, 37, who worked for the Berkeley, Calif., publication Frontline, was wounded in the thigh.

IRAN SHIPS FRESH VOLUNTEERS TO QUIET WAR ZONE

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) - Iran, shipping fresh volunteers to a war zone made quiet by a fragile truce, said Tuesday it is maintaining combat readiness in what diplomats called "carrot and stick" tactics.

Iraq, Iranian strongman Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, in comments over Tehran Radio after a tour of war-devastated border areas, said Iran is "neither in a state of war nor in a state of peace, and the possibility exists that the war will start again."

President: Nationalism could hurt Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) - President Raif Dzindarevic warned at an angry crisis summit of the country's Communist Party leadership Tuesday that militant nationalism could destroy the unity of Yugoslavia. "We are cutting the branch we are sitting on," he told the 165 delegates of the party's Central Committee.

Government, trade union quibble over talks

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - The communist government and the outlawed Solidarity trade union accused each other Tuesday of attempting to torpedo talks on political reforms that include possible restoration of the union's legal status. "It is hard to talk with those who want to hang us," government spokesman Jerry Urban told reporters, referring to the clashes in Gdansk Sunday between police and demonstrators in some of the worst violence in six years.

Major issues unsettled for U.S., Philippines

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Both sides agree that major issues remain unsettled after the United States and the Philippines signed a two-year interim agreement Monday for continued use of U.S. military bases. In signing the memorandum of agreement in the State Department's Treaty Room. Secretary of State George Shultz and Philippines Foreign Secretary Daniel Manglapus said Monday their countries "are keeping their options open" for the future, when the basic agreement on American use of Clark Air Base and Subic Naval base expires.

Experts: Maternity health system needs work

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Nearly one out of three American babies are born to mothers deprived of adequate prenatal care and the "fundamentally flawed" maternity health system needs a major overhaul, medical experts warned Tuesday. A committee of the Institute of Medicine - a branch of the National Academy of Sciences said in a report that just 68 percent of pregnant women obtained timely and adequate prenatal care in 1985, and blamed the low figure in part on the high cost of adequate prenatal care.

Soviets witness destruction of cruise missiles

Firefighters assisted by falling temperatures

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - More than 1,000 firefighters, assisted by falling temperatures and rising humidity, took the offensive Tuesday against a 3,300-acre brush fire that had threatened homes and a wildlife shelter. The blaze was triggered Sunday by a child playing with matches at a campground surrounded by chaparral in the Angeles National Forest 35 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

1909 graduate of University thought to be oldest alumna

By Mike Marcinkowski
Student Writer

May Dorsey, a 102-year-old SIU alumna, says concerns over her health will keep her from attending Homecoming ceremonies this year. Dorsey is a member of the class of 1909 and the University's oldest living alumna, at least by the best guesses of her and the SIU Alumni Association.

When Dorsey attended the school, it was called Southern Illinois Normal University and was primarily used by the state as a teacher training school. The 1908-09 SIU Bulletin lists tuition rates of $12 for the summer term, $10 for the fall term and $8 for the spring and winter terms. It also shows just 31 students in Dorsey's graduating class.

DORSEY DOESN'T get out of her Carbondale home much anymore, but did attend Homecoming 1986 in celebration of her 100th birthday. She has lived in Carbondale on and off since 1896, and as might be expected, has seen a 9.5% change in the town and the University.

"One summer we had 350 students and we thought we were doing great," Dorsey said. Enrollment is now more than 30,000.

One of the first tasks today's student face is locating all the buildings on the five-campus Board of Education.

"All my classes were in Aligned or Old Main," she said, "and the only other structures on campus were Allen Hall, where English was taught, and Parkinson Hall, where science was taught and Wheeler Hall, which housed the library."

THE UNIVERSITY has since added dozens of buildings. But, Dorsey said, it also has taken out a lot of buildings.

"We had classes everyday, five days a week," she said. "Once when my father was teaching at the Bridge School, two or three miles east of town, they had a box supper and hayride to pay for a school bell.

"Well, during the hayride, it started to rain. The driver parked under a covered bridge. That Monday, everybody on the hayride got called to Dr. Parkinson's office. He wanted to know what we were doing out there at that time of night."

A 1908-09 Bulletin from Southern Illinois Normal University describes the 39 community colleges.

"A town of about 5,000, it has three high schools, fewer temptations to idleness, and combines religious and educational privileges in a degree greater than the average towns and cities of 30,000. Carbondale has no saloons."

Dorsey agreed that Carbondale was no party town during her college days.

"MOST STUDENTS went back home to farm and worked on weekends," she said. "We had to do things we couldn't do. We didn't have any fun. We'd take a stroll on campus sometimes on Sunday afternoon, just to see if it was all there. I guess."

After receiving her teaching certification from SIU, Dorsey went to music school in Indianapolis and then taught music to Indiana elementary and secondary schools for more than 30 years. She then returned to her Carbondale home to live with her mother.

DORSEY, WHO has always been single, now lives alone in the house. She attends the Walnut Street Baptist Church, where she enjoys lively discussion class on Sundays. She plays piano for her own prayer group, enjoys listening to music, though the admits that she doesn't know much about "new music."

"Would she attend SIU tomorrow if she had her life to live over?"

"We were just looking for a place to live and the dry expectations."

The UP has been receiving organizing assistance from the AFT and IFT for over a decade, but even now, when our campaign expenses are at their peak, we're no longer to train teachers. The five-year campaign was budgeted at $50,000 per year (according to their own bookkeeping)."}

UP: THE HIGHER EDUCATION UNION

University Professionals, an affiliate of the Illinois Federation of Teachers, is the higher education union in Illinois. The bargaining agents at six of the twelve public universities in Illinois and thirty of the thirty-nine community colleges are all affiliated with the AFT. Because we have had this strong appeal, the AFT has become the organization of choice for the over 1.9 million not even three percent are in higher education while the AFT has 20 percent of its membership in colleges and universities.

In Illinois the IEA, with the exception of five community colleges, does not bargain for higher education, although they desperately want to. Indeed, the NEA and IEA have spent so much on this campaign that the AFT is the only union to be able to get both the University of Illinois and the University of Illinois at Springfield to support the campaign.

Men, Women must Take Back the Night

ARE YOU a lonely male, seeking a stable, loving relationship with a person of the opposite sex? The odds are against you.

For the fact that there are 12,562 males on campus, compared to 8,099 females. Consider these more startling facts:

The University’s campus security office offers advice for women to ensure their safety. The advice covers every aspect of a woman’s life-on campus, while walking, at home and while driving.

Police advice women to deal-both their doors, avoid solitude, refuse to give out personal information to strangers and to be on the alert for “bump backs,” that can help approach the security of a maximum-security penitentiary.

WE SUPPORT these measures. Right now, they are a woman’s best defense against sexual assault. The well-intended male will find his attempts to interact with women virtually thwarted if all these measures are taken.

The facts of rape are more startling than these drastic measures.

Kent State University psychologist Mary Koss studied 6,500 male and female students on 32 college campuses. This magazine reported in March 1987, Koss found that 15 percent of all women reported experiences that met the legal definition of rape.

The 1981 edition of Webster’s Dictionary defines rape, in part, as the act of sexual intercourse committed by a man with a woman not her wife and without her consent, compelling her to submit to sexual intercourse by force or fear, or under other prohibitive conditions.

Cornell University lecturer Andrea Parrott estimated that rape is more common as a way of life in women at two campuses she surveyed. She had been forced into sex during their college years or before, according to Time.

The data collected in 1983 among 830 freshman and sophomores at S1U-C concluded that 12 percent of students believed others had sexual relations against their will. At the same time, 9 percent of women believed that they had coerced sex, 45 percent of the men believed they had coerced sex, and 8 percent said they had used force to obtain sex.

WHETHER THE STATISTICS are entirely accurate is immaterial in light of the atmosphere of fear that prevails the minds of some women. At S1U-C there are Britown, Nickerson, Vansweden, N. W. Transit, self-defense classes for women, the Program for Rape Education and Prevention and a speaker’s bureau sponsored by Women’s Services that offers on date rape and assertiveness training among other topics.

Suzanne Powell, a representative of Women’s Services, said there is little difference in the likelihood of rape, but the threat of rape. Sometimes, she said, women can develop a sense of invulnerability that often helps promote the rape myths that these programs are designed to explode.

“There’s a myth that if I abide by this behavior, avoid dark paths and park only close to lights, I am invulnerable,” she said. “That myth contributes to the belief that if a woman does not do all the things she can to prevent rape, she is somehow responsible if she is attacked.”

WOMEN’S SERVICES supports the theory that rape can only be prevented entirely by changing the attitudes of men. Powell said men have been programmed by society to believe that having sexual relations proves their masculinity.

There is nothing wrong with a healthy sexual relationship, sometimes, the means, such as force, employed in pursuit of sexual relations have nothing to do with a healthy relationship.

There are many false beliefs the women must overcome. Women who participate in rallies, such as Take Back the Night Friday in Carbondale, are often labeled lesbians. The reality is that the majority of rape victims are heterosexual women who are raped by heterosexual males.

For men who do not believe their fellow man is capable of such behavior, the women invite them to participate in the Brother Peace Rally Thursday, which culminates with a final leg of the Take Back the Night march Friday.

Perhaps the women are right. Perhaps men must walk along the march and hear the jeers that come from men in the bars and on the sidewalks of South Illinois Avenue to understand what the women are going through. Perhaps they should be more like Steven, played by Sally Fields’ husband, and feel the kinetic fire of the movie built up to the contest in the end, and if not, this is a story about comedy, and the comics who do stand up, not about competition for laughs.

If I followed DeBo’s reviews, and used them to choose what I wanted to see in the theater (better mood than on video), I would find myself watching movies of any complexity because of DeBo’s lack of common sense. We also realize that she has a responsibility to the readers of the Daily Egyptian to give more than half-hearted reviews. I am not critical of her opinion, just her ability to relate to others what a movie is about. If she cannot accomplish this, perhaps the D.E. should look elsewhere for a movie critic. —Brian Yat­mes, junior, cinema and photography.

‘Punchline’ review misses the point, movie has not had time to ‘bomb’

As usual, utilizing the Recreational Center facilities, we strongly object to the Rec’s new policy of limiting participation in certain events to two lead and two supporting acrobics classes. We understand the reasoning of ensuring our center policy.

However, we do not understand the reasoning for not increasing the space allotted to intramural rec sports, of which we are continuously involved and the majority of the gym.

We ask that whenever the determines which activities will allotted what space take into consideration the number of participants for each activity. It seems a bit cut of out of whack to have 20 or so people using the equivalent of two full-length basketball courts for one hour while 150 or so students use one full-length basketball court. Is it not possible to utilize the facilities at Davies Gym and/or the Arena? Until the new addition to the Rec Center is completed, we asked for the more popular recreations to be allotted more space.

Republicans turn backs on older Americans

I am writing in response to assertions made by the Bush-Quayle campaign with respect to Social Security and the need for severe cuts for older Americans.

I have worked hard on behalf of older Americans and will continue to do so with Governor Bush and Senator Bennett have always supported Social Security and Social Security cost-of-living increases. They understand that many of our older Americans rely on their Social Security check as their monthly income. They understand that our older Americans need the money that Social Security paid into the system. They worked hard to make America a better place to live and we cannot turn our backs on our older Americans.

Unfortunately, the Bush-Quayle team has consistently fought cost-of-living increases to our Social Security recipients. Bush-Quayle have consistently fought measures that would provide better and much needed housing for our older Americans. Lastly.

Bush-Quayle have failed to understand that many of our elderly need catastrophic health care.

That is why Mike Dulakus and Lloyd Bentsen have always been in the White House. They understand the problems and concerns of our older Americans and they will work on behalf of older Americans. Bush-Quayle will not. That is why I plan to support the Democratic team of Dukakis-Bushensson this Nov. 8, 1988. —Bruce L. Nimick, University Heights, Carbondale.

IEA's tactics questioned

I must express my concerns over the tactics used by the IEA in spreading falsehoods and financial information generated by the IEA-NEA in its promotional activities. I would like to address the following questions:

1. Whose dues are paying for the multiple mailings that I receive? Every mailer has a copy of the faculty handbook to which I subscribe.

2. Why must the IEA disclose the entire budget of the local organization? Is the budget not a private matter of the faculty?

3. IEA has proposed that the paper mail will be maintained by the department in order that the faculty is informed of the department's activities.

I cannot vote for an organization that uses wiretapping.

including a respect for the press.

You have to watch the press," Simon said, adding that members of the press corps were always looking for "skilled shots in your closet."

Simon said the search went too far when they began asking questions about the adoption of their son Martin.

"Some things are quite private," he said.

Simon said most questions were fair, but said some were truly off the wall.

She laughed when she said one of the questions asked of her husband was "If you were to come back to earth as a bird, what bird would it be?"

Simon showed she had a mixed reaction for the press and their role in national politics when she opened her talk by asking if anyone representing the media was present.

"You have to make sure there is someone there to record what you said or take a picture," Simon said.

She also said the press was right in their early investigations into the private life of Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle.

Simon described the role of the first lady as being "exceedingly important," and said the wife of the next president should take an extreme interest in the issues.

She also said they should act as the "eyes and ears for the president" when they travel.

Simon said Nancy Reagan's involvement in areas outside her role as first lady takes away from the position.

Simon is presently writing a book about the 1988 campaign which she calls "Code Name Scarlett." Scarlett was the name given to Paul Simon by the Secret Service hired to protect him.

Simon said she hopes to have the book finished soon.

"I'm plotting a fifty state tour to promote it when it's done," she said jokingly.

Faculty tend to get promotions based on publications and it seems easier to publish in new knowledge areas rather than new teaching tools, Haws said. "Very few people get hired by Harvard because they're good teachers," he said. "There is a hierarchy of schools in the United States and schools tend to be graded based on research."

It is easier to evaluate the quality of the research than the quality of the teaching. Which is easier: to grade a student on his compositions or on the quality of his students? "Faculty want to be in an institution that is growing in reputation. Even if John Q. Public sees it (research) as negative, faculty see it as positive. They bask in reflected glory, in a sense." AN ENDSOREMENT FOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

I have been a faculty member (Professor) at SIUC for the past fourteen years, with twelve years spent in service to the Faculty Senate, including two years as its executive secretary. I have also served in numerous committees at this University.

When I came here, the collegial process was a reality, with decisions concerning the mission of the University, its programs and governance, being made by faculty.

The present situation, however, is another matter.

The congealing management growth, with its bewildering variety of bureaucratic "functions" has stripped faculty of any power to implement policies, process grievances and control the distribution of resources at this institution. Respect for faculty is given lip service. The ability of this institution to attract and retain faculty is being compromised by the low morale of faculty at all ranks. A fundamental change in direction is needed.

I and a great many of my faculty colleagues deliberately chose the academic life, rather than the private sector with its greater financial rewards, because we saw in academic values and ethics and a community commitment with our own. To sit by and watch the loss of the intrinsic values that attracted us to an academic career in the first place, is a great betrayal.

I have given a lot of thought to possible remedies and can see only one path, given the present set of circumstances. Faculty MUST be given the legal means to represent themselves and can improve their professional lives. Collective bargaining, as a faculty-run organization, is the only answer at this time. The authority that has been taken away from faculty must be restored in order to preserve the life of this institution.
The 17th annual Miss Eboness Pageant, sponsored by the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, will include something new this year.

The 17th annual Miss Eboness Pageant, sponsored by the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, will include something new this year.

When surveyed, many students said they are against heavy drinking and they don't enjoy it. A student who does drink heavily, Fijolek said, "They have no control over themselves because there is an attitude set to do however they feel is right at the time."

An estimated 25 to 30 percent of University of students have some level of a drinking problem, she said. "There is no way the problem could be either abuse or depression," Fijolek said. People are just beginning to see alcohol as a drug, she said.

The fraternity began preparing for this year's pageant by setting up information tables in the Student Center and residence hall cafeterias on Aug. 28, Knox said. All interested women participated in tryouts Aug. 29, and 12 women were chosen from 15 initial applicants. The judges are conducting interviews with the contestants this week, and will judge the contestants on their poise, talent and character. The other judges involved are: Patricia Black-Clay, president and pre-dental coordinator for the med-prep program in the School of Medicine; Ed Jones, director of housing; Patricia Matthews, housing director; Eurna Hayes Center, and Debbie Walon, director of the Black Affairs Council.

The contest will include an opening gown and talent competition, after which four finalists will be chosen. The contest will then answer a question, followed by the announcement of the winner.

Knox said that an average of 500 to 700 people usually attend the pageant, which is the biggest Pan-Hellenic fraternity event of the year.

Tickets for the pageant are $5 and are now on sale at the Student Center box office. Doors will open at 7 p.m.

Video dance club to party tonight

"Club Coca-Cola," a video dance club currently touring the nation, will begin its party tonight in the Student Center Ballroom. Admission is $5.

"They just want to be making a dime from this!" Every dollar goes to the Special Olympics," Sue Rhine, Homecoming queen title-committee chairperson for the Student Programming Council, said. "Club Coca-Cola" features a 10,000-watt sound system by Panasonic/Ramus, video tape "Joy of Life," helps recreate the high-tech atmosphere of a big city dance floor.

A 200-square-foot video screen and additional films will surround party-goers with Olympic sets of screens. Laser lights, strobes and fog effects add to the illusion of a dance floor fantasy. "Club Coca-Cola" is expected to entertain more than 500,000 college students by the end of the year.

Celebrating its 20th anniversary in 1988, Special Olympics is the world's largest sports-training program for the mentally retarded. Coca-Cola has long been a major sponsor of Special Olympics.

Center wants vocal support to decrease heavy drinking

A goal of Alcohol Awareness Week is to remind healthy people that have strong feelings about alcohol abuse, that alcohol and drug counselor at the Wellness Center said, "A majority of students don't have alcohol problems," Barb Fijolek, alcohol and drug counselor, said. "They have strong feelings about alcohol hidden." When surveyed, many students said they are against heavy drinking and they don't enjoy it. A student who does drink heavily, Fijolek said, "They have no control over themselves because there is an attitude set to do however they feel is right at the time."

In the five years the Wellness Center has co-sponsored Alcohol Awareness Week, some students have grown, Fijolek said.

"Students are realizing that alcohol abuse is a problem they may be directly or indirectly affected by," Fijolek said. "Each year we have gotten more help and interest from student groups."

Student groups are sponsoring several educational and social activities during the week, she said.

Educational activities include a film festival on abuse and alcohol awareness, Fijolek said. Social activities include a fitness craze from 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Recreation Center, she said.

Fraternity members are taking pledges from students during the noon hour in the Student Center for an alcohol free Friday, she said. "Students just sign their names and pledge to not drink alcohol on Friday," Fijolek said.

Housing's Trivia Challenge gets dorm students involved

By Kimberly Clarke

The theme of Housing this year, "Making the grade," was apparent in the Housing Trivia Challenge held Monday at Schneider Tower. Paul Parent, the resident assistant of the sixth floor, said.

The Trivia Challenge started Oct. 3, with preliminary contests held on each floor, Parent said.

Teams of four were formed, Parent said, and each floor competed among itself.

The winners from the floor moved on to semi-final competition in which a floor had to beat two others to move into the championship, Parent, who started the challenge, said.

Five categories—sports, science, music, geography and SIU-C—were used in the contest.

If the question was answered correctly, that team was awarded 10 points, and if incorrectly answered questions were given to the opposite team and they then had the option of answering or passing, resulting in either a loss or gain of 20 points.

Judges for the competition consisted of Parent, three of his floormates and two members of the hall council at Schneider.

More than $600 in donations were given by local vendors, Parent said, which were distributed throughout the preliminaries.

However, besides obtaining a well-rounded background in music, Parent said, "the floor would have had to advance to the championship to win the main prize, Parent said.

Four teams competed in the final match, with two competitions held.

The seventh floor came in first, and the thirteenth floor came in second.

Australian quartet set to perform

The Australian String Quartet will perform Saturday at the Mitchell Museum, Mount Vernon, as part of Australia's bicentennial.

The concert, featuring music by composers Mozart, Borodin and Beethoven, will be part of the Cedarhurst Chamber Music's 10th anniversary season.

The Australian String Quartet has visited Australia, China and several European cities.

The concert will conclude the week-long recognition of Australia, in an attempt to develop a better understanding of the culture and people of the country.

The sponsors for the event are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hannah of Texico, with additional funding from the Illinois Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Tickets for the concert are $6, with a discount for students. For more information, call the museum at (618) 742-1226.

Dukakis' campaign bruised by Mass. legislative session

BOSTON (UPI) — Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, battling in New Hampshire last Saturday to win a place in next month's presidential debate, told his supporters yesterday that he had been tested last week by the first major political fight of the presidential campaign.

"We were bruised," he said yesterday. "The media have watched us closely. We have to be prepared in the future."

But sources close to Dukakis said yesterday that the campaign was buoyed by the fact that Dukakis had emerged as the top choice of the media. "He's doing well," one source said. "He's doing better than we expected."

The source said that Dukakis had been "energetic" and "confident" in his debate with Republican presidential candidate George Bush.

Nov. 8 election, a move widely seen as designed to give Bush a strong front-investor in the White House.

Dukakis said that the campaign's biggest problem was the "negative" press coverage it had received in recent days. "We're not happy with the coverage," he said. "But we're not giving up."

Bush, on the other hand, was described by Dukakis as being "more aggressive" and "more determined" than Dukakis.

"We're not going to be pushed around," Dukakis said. "We're going to fight back."

Bush, meanwhile, was described by Dukakis as being "more confident" and "more experienced" than Dukakis.

Religion plays role in couple's politics

Bush favored: scriptural reasons

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Charlotte Grimes
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

CUMBERLAND, S.C. — To Becky and Larry Wood, government is a God-ordained institution with a particular role:

"Government's basic function," says Wood, "is to keep society safe and orderly so that each of us can live according to our own conscience to best serve our own liberty — and doing little good for others in the process. They do not like such proposals as welfare, and sometimes point to a Scriptural basis for their social philosophies."

THE WOODS are among the Christian soldiers of what has come to be called the "Religious Right," a term of which they are not particularly fond. They are active members of the Southside Baptist Church and the local Republican Party. Wood, an unsuccessful candidate for city council, is an executive program committee man. Mrs. Wood is the Republican precinct secretary.

"I do believe the direction of the country is right for the first time in a long time ... I think it would continue ... under Bush."

— Becky Wood

The Southside Baptist Church is an independent fundamentalist congregation. It tends toward a more tolerant attitude regarding personal behavior and some social issues. In this former textile town, where an adolescent Jesse Jackson chided the church under "segregational" attacks, Southside Baptist Church flock to black members and takes pride in cultivating a corner of racial harmony.

WITH ABOUT 4,000 members and 75 percent of its adult active voters, the church is a formidable political force. Larry and Becky Wood are graduates of nearby fundamentalist Bob Jones University, where they met. Larry, 41, is a former teacher turned real estate broker, while Becky, 37, who has a master's degree in music, is a homesemaker residing full-time with her children ages 6 to 15. He is a lifelong Republican who has never run for political office.

Guyon to speak to GPSC

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

President John C. Guyon will discuss the revised sexual harassment policy with members of the Mass Transit and Professional Student Council at a meeting in the Student Center Missouri Room. The recently revised policy, which defines sexual harassment and the procedures for handling it, has come under attack by some members of the council.

Katherine Black, a Law School representative to the GPSC, stated that the policy gives the president too much power.

The policy allows the president to overturn the decision of the panel without hearing the grievances of the victim, Black said. In other business, the GPSC will consider a proposal to name a new pedestrian overpass, which was built over the Ho Chi Minh Trail, the Susan Schumacher Memorial Bridge, named after a student who was raped and murdered in the area in 1961.

The GPSC also will consider a proposal from representatives of the Mass Transit Committee to form the Saluki Mass Transit Steering and Advisory Board. The proposed board would consist of undergraduate, graduate and professional student representatives, a handicapped student, a Carbondale city official, a vice chancellor and a designee of the president, according to a statement distributed by the committee.

The board's purpose, the statement says, would be to provide a safe, convenient transit system for Carbondale and University students.

The GPSC also will hear information concerning proposed changes in funding for the Day Care Center presented by Nancy Hunter Pei, director of Student Development.

Peas and workbook non-traditionals

By Kathleen Dello Staff Writer

The Non-Traditional Student Services mentoring – or advising – program is different from the regular mentor system because it uses peers, Mary Helen Gasser, director of the office, said.

"It's less formal than the regular freshman program. The mentees don't set up appointments with their mentors," Gasser said.

The Office of Student Development organized the Magic Mentoring Program where faculty or staff members worked with the students who indicated they wanted mentoring.

The non-traditional mentoring program is different because experienced non-traditional students help other non-traditional students learn to adjust to the University environment.

Gasser said her office originally intended to offer the program only to freshman non-traditionals, a group with a high drop-out rate, but ended up doing it for any non-traditionals who wanted to be mentees.

The office asked for volunteers in their last spring newsletter, Gasser said. The program currently involves 23 mentors and 35 mentees, she said.

"They were assigned to each other by the seat of the pants but it seems to have worked out real well. We used interest sheets to match them up somewhat," Gasser said.

Gasser said the mentors told her in a recent meeting that being from a common home situation, such as both the mentor and the mentee are single parents, helps the two get along.

Next time, they'll try to collect a little more demographic information from the mentees," Gasser said.

The mentors meet with their students several hours each week, which also is different from the Magic Mentoring program, she said.

"They meet at the Breakfast Club (in the Student Center Roman Room) or at football games. Some have even invited mentees to their homes. They share social events more than the faculty mentor program does," said.

One mentor, a native of Southern Illinois, took her entire group to Giant City, and showed them strip mines and Giant City Golf Course.

There are 3,546 non-traditional students – slightly more than 33 percent of the campus undergraduate enrollment – at the University, Gasser said.

Her office sent letters about the mentoring program out to about 77 freshmen but more found out about the program and asked the office about it, she said.

"Some of the students need more help. Some think it's nice to know someone is there who has been through it before. They ask how to get through the Woody Hall Shuffles, what classes are good to take and how to find tutors. Mentoring is a comprehensive service to help students learn how to get the most out of their college education," Gasser said.

Non-traditional mentors counsel their mentees on how to deal with stress, balance school and family with work and how to study while not falling asleep, Gasser said.

"It's not intensive counseling but it is peer help. The mentors know enough to refer a student who needs extensive psychological counseling," she said.

Advice to the Drug Worn

DID YOU KNOW?

* ALCOHOL IS INVOLVED IN 50-55% OF ALL FATAL TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS?

- Over the last ten years, 250,000 Americans lost their lives in alcohol-related traffic crashes. 25,000 deaths each year. 500 every week. 71 every hour. 1 every 20 minutes.
- All Americans between the ages of 3 and 34 are more likely to be killed in a traffic crash than from any other single cause. The leading cause of teen deaths is alcohol-related traffic incidents.
- More than half of all Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related traffic crash in their lifetime.

Sierra Club pushes for new legislation on Clean Air Act

By Loris Roberson
Staff Writer

Americans can no longer point the finger at Los Angeles as being the pollution capital of the nation. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, Chicago had an ozone reading of 8 parts per million and Los Angeles had .28 ppm in August, the federal standard for ozone levels is 1.3 ppm. As an estimated 135 million Americans are living in areas which are not meeting the federal standard for ozone acid rain, and air pollution levels a spokesperson for the Sierra Club, an environmentalist group, said. According to a pamphlet published by Sierra Club and titled "Air Pollution: A Public Health Crisis," the petrochemical industry in Texas, Arkansas, and Louisiana spews at least 1,000 different chemicals into the air that may be responsible for up to 10,000 secondary compounds.

THE EPA said that as few as 15 to 45 toxic air pollutants may be responsible for about 2,000 cancer cases per year. Acid rain, which destroyed 4,000 of the nation's lakes and continues to deteriorate the forests. In Illinois, pollution varies considerably. James Gibson, coordinator of the National Atmospheric Deposition Program in Colorado, said the National Acid Precipitation Study said there are many lakes in the nation, including seven in Illinois.

The pH scale, which is 0 to 14, measures how acidic or basic a substance. Jenny Hansell, science information manager for The National Audubon Society's Citizen's Acid Rain Monitoring Network in New York, said, "The NORMAL pH value for acid in water is 6.0 pH," Hansell said, "which means that the lower the pH number, the higher the amount of acid there is in the water. When the pH value is that low, the lakers can be killed, the soil can be killed, and causing fish to die.

"Northern Illinois is representied by Dekalb County, and a site has been there since 1981." Gibson said. The average annual pH values for 1981 to 1987 ranged from 4.6 pH to 4.4 pH. CENTRAL Illinois is represented by Champaign County, and Gibson said a site has been there since 1979. The average annual pH values for 1979 to 1987 ranged from 4.94 pH to 4.53 pH. Ozone pollution in Illinois is measured by the Ambient Air Monitoring Section in Springfield, Bob Swinford, supervisor of air quality analysis, said. Swinford said ozone is the product of complex chemicals reacting to sunlight and high temperatures. These complex chemicals like nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons are emitted by cars, trucks, and industrial plants.

"This has been a particularly bad year for ozone levels," Swinford said.

"WE had many days of exceedences over the national standard. The high ozone levels were probably caused by this summer's high temperatures and little rain. That's the ideal setting for high ozone levels," he said.

Swinford said the Air Quality Standard for ozone levels is 123 parts per billion, and of the several sites in Illinois, Chicago had the highest this summer with a reading of 223 ppb in July. In Central Illinois, Springfield had a reading of 126 ppb in July. Effingham, representing Southern Illinois, had a reading of 112 ppb in June, he said.

In an attempt to alleviate the problems of pollution, in a measure in 1987, the Senate of Blackwell sent the "Vento-Green Letter" to the House of Representatives urging the Congress on Energy and Commerce to reauthorize and pass an updated revision of the Clean Air Act, Laurel Toussaint, conservation chair of Sierra Club's local chapter, said. The letter called for action by the committee in the areas of acid rain, air pollution, ozone depletion and visibility in pristine areas such as national parks, Toussaint said.

Toussaint said the Clean Air Act expired in 1981, but Congress has been extending the act.

ANOTHER PUBLICATION by Sierra Club said the Senate Committee on Environment Works approved a comprehensive rewrite of the Clean Air Act, S.1894, at the end of 1987. But the bill has not come up for a vote on the Senate floor even though 182 members of the House expressed a strong support for clean air legislation by signing the "Vento-Green Letter," Toussaint said.

Melanie Griffin, associate representative for Sierra Club in Washington, D.C., said that Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., is not interested in the bill because it could be detrimental to the coal industry, therefore, he has not scheduled it for a floor vote.

TOUSSAINT SAID the American people want clean air but, "For the past seven years, this country's major air pollutors and powerful congressional leaders have imposed a moratorium of bills which have been introduced to clean up the air."

Toussaint said nothing new will happen with the bill until Washington, D.C., has a congressional session has ended for 1988, but Griffin said he'd be willing to take a vote position to make progress when session opens next year.

"We have over half of the Senate supporting the bill," Griffin said, "and we've had strong visibility. We have a good bill and before we're certainly going to do everything we can."

GRIFFIN ALSO said this summer may have made a difference for people who didn't want to support a new Clean Air Act, "People felt it," she said, "...the other leaders are saying, 'I thought we had a Clean Air Act. What's going on?'"

Councils sponsor dance

Saturday evening, Trueblood Hall will be transformed into an "alternative bar" where students can go for some alcohol-free fun.

Presented in conjunction with National Alcohol Awareness Week and Homecoming Weekend, Saturday's dance is designed to cater to the needs of the under-21 student population.

The event, which is the only university-sponsored dance outside of the Greek system this weekend, is sponsored by Neely Hall Council and the Truck Executive Council.

For a $1 admission, students will be provided with food, drink and a DJ show from 8 p.m. to midnight.

A photographer also will be on hand, taking candid and posed shots, which will later be offered for sale.

"I thought it would be a good idea to provide school spirit," said Neely Hall Council programming chair Lori Tibbits.

Unconscious skydiver saved in falling drama

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) - One of three gray whales trapped by ice was suffering from pneumonia and trying to form a speed star, or "Doonesbury" comic strip, by sneaking into a city newspaper.

The whale was wheezing with ice in its lungs and trying to rest its chin on a shelf.

The whales are 7 miles from open water to the west where they would appear on the open-ed page - not its usual spot on the comic page.

Kienzler said the newspaper "got its" comic strip, but it would not reappear on the open-ed page instead of the comics page.

The site, which has been critical of Vice President George Bush and Republican presidential candidate George Bush, was absent as an opinion page from the State Journal-Register's comic page Thursday and Friday.

"Doonesbury" political strip was "indefinitely suspended while we wait for a response," said Paul Pone, the paper's city editor. "We are aware of it Feinschmidt!

Later in the day Mike Kienzler, the paper's associate city editor, said "Doonesbury" would return to the Journal-Register beginning a "new" daily newspaper to allow the return of the political comic strip "Doonesbury".

"We have dealt with so much inexperience. There are so many questions. A lot of people playing that have never played there before. Also, we had several junior college players who weren't here in the spring so we hadn't even worked with them.

"Since there are people in totally new situations, it is hard to say what level we should be at."

Tompkins said despite their youth, the defense has worked consistently hard to reach the level they have.

Deanna Sanders and sophomore Amy Rakers returning to provide leadership for the younger players. Also returning for the Salukis will be senior guard Tonda Smak and junior forward Deanna Kirkbus, both expected to add needed support.

In the past, team defense has been the No. 1 goal of the Saluki women's basketball team and Scott said this season will be no exception.

"The players here take great pride in their defensive play," said Scott, who pointed out that the Salukis were ranked among the top-five teams in the country in scoring defense (fewest points allowed) from 1985 to 1987.

Scott said the loss of Berghrus and Bonds will give the Salukis a new look on defense.

"Due to our lack of power and height, our inside game will not be as big a factor," Scott said. "We will not be able to dominate inside like we once did.

"I do feel that our outside shooting will improve though, and with our added quickness, we will play a more up-tempo style of basketball."

Scott isn't setting any long-term goals for the team in this point in the season, but she is expressing the confidence in them right now.

"I want them to focus on what they want to accomplish as a team this year," Scott said. "My goal right now is to just get this team to be the best it can be."

"The kids haven't given up all year; they've had that kind of attitude. That is what it's all about, picking yourself up and coming back.

"The biggest problem Tompkins sees was the defenders trying to do too many things right away."

Irish coach concerned with record

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) - Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz Tuesday said it is more important to be undefeated than No. 1 at this point in the season.

"We tried to put in too much, too soon. We have gone back to being simple and will build on that. The kids seem more confident with that."

"Tackling is one of our biggest problems, that is a big one. Really, we need to improve in every aspect of the game."
After coming from the University of Illinois, Wayne Williams, SIU-C's new athletics fund-raiser, has high hopes for the plans of Athletics Director Jim Hart.

Williams reviews programs

By Robert Baxter

Wayne Williams, the SIU Foundation's director of athletic development, has examined various athletic funds and has drawn comparisons of how fundraising efforts here compare with fundraising at the University of Illinois.

"At Illinois we had one general (central) contribution gift fund which alumni as well as corporations donated to," he said. "There I was given a daily list of who contributed and how much. The money was then distributed to each sport accordingly.

"Williams formerly was involved in athletics fundraising in St. Louis and Southern Illinois for the University of Illinois."

Williams said he is in the process of conducting a daily report relating fundraising efforts here at SIU-C.

"With all the different contribution funds available to contributors, it is confusing to tell exactly what is going where," he said.

"Each Big Ten school is composed of a computer people (at the SIU Foundation) that reviews programs and compares, and draws comparisons how they are located in a non-industrial, non-urban area with a small population. Illinois, on the other hand, is located in a metropolitan area (Champaign-Urbana) with an ample supply of business and corporate executives available."

"Williams drew another comparison during his stay at Illinois involving fund-raisers from other Big Ten schools," Williams said. "I have lived in Chicago and being familiar with the area can only help him relate his case to possible contributions.

"When I attended meetings at Illinois involving fund-raisers from other Big Ten schools," Williams said. "I was the graduate of the university in March 1965 of racketeering. Williams said contributions at Illinois were much higher than SIU-C for several reasons.

"Strong tradition in athletics is apparent at Illinois," Williams said. "I don't know if we have that type of following here. Many people at Illinois would call me and donate money just so they could get tickets to football games which were otherwise soldout.

"Thirty-three percent of the contributions were from non-alumni, usually corporate executives willing to pay the price."

"Williams said another disadvantage is SIU-C's isolation from the state's larger cities. Carbondale is located in a non-industrial, non-urban area with a small population. Illinois, on the other hand, is located in a metropolitan area (Champaign-Urbana) with an ample supply of business and corporate executives available.

"Williams said he has supplied the SIU Foundation with an ample supply of business and corporate executives available."

McLain pleads guilty to charges

McLain pleads guilty to charges

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) -- Former Cy Young Award winner Dennis McLain, the last major league baseball pitcher to win 30 games in a season, pleaded guilty Tuesday to federal charges of racketeering and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

McLain, 44, faces a maximum of 32 years in prison as part of a negotiated plea agreement accepted by U.S. District Judge Elizabeth A. Kovach. She scheduled sentencing for Dec. 15.

McLain, who has served 29 months in federal prison on the charges, Assistant U.S. Attorney Erroll Mueller said if McLain receives the maximum 12 years, he could be released on parole after four years and, if given credit for the time served, could be out in 10 months.

In agreeing to accept the guilty plea, the government said it would dismiss extortion and conspiracy charges when McLain is sentenced.

"It's been living hell the way we have been living," McLain said as he left the courthouse with his wife Sharyn and daughter Michelle. "I would never put this family through what I put them through before.

"Whatever happened, happened," he said. "It's time for us to move on.

In the plea agreement, McLain stipulated that the government could prove as part of the racketeering charges a number of criminal acts, including bookmaking, extortion and gambling.

McLain was indicted in March 1985 and was convicted in October 1985 of racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute its war..."
Football coaches relay thoughts on midterm status

By David Galliannetti
Staff Writer

It most cases, mid-season is a time for reflection and evaluation. Salukis coach Rick Rhoades said that may fit some coaches, but it doesn't flow in his game plan.

"I really had no preconceived ideas coming in so I have nothing to compare to," Rhoades said. "The guys have given a solid effort and that's what we have asked them to do. The test for the team and the progress it has made is ahead of us." Rhoades said the second half of the schedule, which will feature five of the top 10 teams in the nation, will be nothing to compare to in the Salukis.

"I don't know what we're going to do about that," Rhoades said. "Defensively, we have to do the little things. Kicking wise we have to get the right balance and consistency goes. There is nothing to compare in his game plan.

"We are still not where we need to be as far as consistency goes. There is really nothing we are doing that I'm surprised at. We need to improve in all aspects of our game, " Rhoades said. "The receivers strength is recognizing their limitations. We work on trying to stretch those limitations but stay within those limitations because it's a process." Defensive coordinator Jim Sperling also reflects Rhoades' comments -- it is hard to evaluate without preconceived ideas.

Equestrian team sticks with sport despite long hours, cost involved

By John Walblay

It must be love. It couldn’t be the hours or the fame, and it’s certainly not the monetary benefits that inspire SU-C’s Equestrian Team.

Steve Medford, a national champion, said, “I quit for a while once, and I didn’t know what to do with myself.”

Most of the riders on the team have been riding since adolescence and the sport has become a part of their life. Still, when the morning and evening practices get to be tiresome, not to mention the individual private lessons the riders are required to take, some question why they continue.

Most of the riders on the team have been riding since adolescence and the sport has become a part of their life. Still, when the morning and evening practices get to be tiresome, not to mention the individual private lessons the riders are required to take, some question why they continue.

At a cold 5:30 a.m. practice, freshman Chris Thomson jokes, “I don’t know... I said myself that every now and again, I’ve just been doing it too long to just stop.”

Another consideration is the expense to the riders, which seems to be the most painful in many eyes.

With two different types of riding styles — hunt and stock seat — the team requires two different coaches, though most of the riders compete in both.

For a rider to participate in both, or more (there are up to 10 different riding styles), it requires the rider to take private lessons the whole year, which is a test of pace and also only uses one hand on the horse.

The stock seat is the western style of riding where the rider, amongst other things, has a different form in the saddle and also only uses one hand on the reigns.

To the eye, besides the dressage, the most noticeable difference is on the rear.

“The rider has to try and keep his shoulder, hip and heel in a straight, vertical line,” Ramsey said. “Ninety-five percent (judging) is on the rear.”

“The equestrian is as emotional, or more emotional (than most sports),” Ramsey said. “By the end of the first week, you’re all very cohesive.”

“Jumping over cavalletti doesn’t look as fancy at the start of the competition, but it’s as fancy at the end.”

The trick is that the horse performs, but how the horse performs, the rules exclusively on the rider’s performance.

“The judge looks for the rider’s ability to get on and work the horse,” Shiplett said. “He likes it to look like you’re just pushing buttons up there. The trick is for the transitions to be immediate.”

The pace transitions vary from walk, trot and canter or lope.

The riders are classified as either a novice, intermediate or open rider, open being the most difficult. The rider is awarded points for his performance that advance him up the level of difficulty.

At the last competition, the team placed first in Friday’s and second in Saturday’s stock seat competition. In stock seat, the team is leading the region by nine points.

In hunt seat, the team placed fourth Saturday, but was assured of its finish for Sunday’s competition.
Scott wants noticeable improvement

By Robert Baxter

Last year, the women's basketball team failed to win any games for the first time in six seasons. The Salukis saw themselves finish 16-11 overall, and tumble to a 1-15 fifth-place finish in the Gateway.

"Last year was the most disappointing season that I have ever been a part of," Coach Cindy Scott said. "We feel we not only let ourselves down, but our fans and school as well. The foundation has been laid at this university for an outstanding women's basketball program, and we didn't feel we lived up to that tradition.

"This year we need to put back into the program what we didn't get done last year," Scott said. In the beginning of last season, the Salukis were ranked 13th nationally and expectations ran high as the team looked to repeat as Gateway Conference champions.

Last year we focused on our Gateway title and postseason play from the beginning of the season," Scott said. "This year we won't make that same mistake. We'll take things one day at a time, one game at a time.

For the first time in six years, the Salukis will face the challenge of rebuilding a team that had 24 of us play two years ago. This year we will the program to the program a new era.

We have five freshmen coming in who I expect will contribute to the program right away," Scott said. "I think this is probably the best recruiting class we have had.

The incoming freshman are Kerri Leigh Hawes of Hartford, Ky., Amy Hartman of Los Angeles, and Bridgette Bonds.

La Crosse, Wis., Colleen Heimstedt of Elkader, Ia., Greve Johnson of Kankakee, and Karrie Redeker of Illinois.

Bergius ended her career as the No. 1 all-time scorer in SIU-C history. Bonds, who was selected as 1987 MVP in the Midwest Conference, finished as the No. 6 high-scorer in Saluki history.

Scott said she will be starting a new era of women's basketball at SIU, with seniors Dana Fitzpatrick, Cathy Kumpers and Karrie Redeker.

Hart's financial work to give athletics department boost

By Robert Baxter

The SIU Foundation has compiled a list of contributions received since Jim Hart took over as athletics director three months ago and the results are encouraging for Intercollegiate Athletics.

The list shows the Hart campaign has already received a little over $96,000 in cash, or unrestricted contributions. At this time, $128,675 in cash contributions has been pledged, and another $12,877 has been given in the form of gifts-in-kind.

Hart, president of the SIU Foundation, explained the Page 28, Daily Egyptian, October 19, 1986 difference between unrestricted and gift-in-kind contributions.

"We need these type of (unrestricted) contributions because they give us a chance to distribute the contributions to the areas which need it most," Ball said. "Many of the contributions we have received in the past have been gifts in kind, which are given to specific funds, scholarship or academic purposes.

Bryan Vagner, controller and treasurer for the Foundation, said these figures were based on all contributions received before Oct. 12.

"We are half way to our $200,000 goal," Ball said. "With the addition of Wayne Williams in the capacity of athletic fundraiser, I see us having a first-rate fundraising program."

Wayne Williams took over duties of athletic fundraiser three weeks ago and Ball said since he has shown why he's right for the job.

"I think we'll be running a much more leaner, meaner, and efficient fundraising program," Ball said.

"Williams is already identifying major contributors who have not contributed for a long time, and I think he will let anyone who is capable of giving us the means," Hart said.

"The goal of the 1-1 contributions were from kids," Ball said. "It will add a more personal side to the fund-drive. Many of them came up with jars of pennies that had been saved."

Total alumni contributions have amounted to $239,141, and that total could actually be more, Ball said.

"In many of the households, we have more than one alumni who would be able to possibly do contribute," Ball said.

"This could cause some discrepancy in our final contribution totals."

A real bright spot in the contributions Ball said, was 314 first-time contributors.

Repeat contributors totaled 38, bringing the combined total number of contributors to 907.
