Fire destroys wing of VTI building

Students joined firemen Thursday in battling a three-hour fire which gutted a wing of the two-story main building at SIU's Vocational Technical Institute.

The wing destroyed, H-7, had housed 54 women in living quarters on the second floor, and classrooms and offices on the first floor. The wooden frame building was built during World War II when the VTI area, located south of Carverville, was an ordinance depot.

No injuries were reported from the fire, which began about 11 a.m.

Officials said the cause of the blaze was not known. It began in a bedroom of the second-floor apartments. Residents said there was an exposed electrical outlet on the bedroom wall, and that a nearby storeroom contained turpentine, paint, and other combustible materials. Carole Thalman, a freshman from Wood River, turned in the alarm. Miss Thalman said she had been lying on her bed shortly before 11 a.m., then went into the living room to leave for class. When she returned to the bedroom, the fire had started.

"The bedroom wall was a sheet of orange. We tried throwing water on it, but gave up," she said. "I ran out and called the operator, then went out of the building, screaming fire.

William C. Biever, dean of student affairs at VTI, said at 6 p.m. Thursday that no estimate of damages had been made. Residents of the wing were allowed to go back into their apartments. Several women said they were commercial art students nearing graduation and that their supplies and work were destroyed.

Dan Cole, an assistant professor in Water Resources Technology on the first floor, said $30,000-$40,000 worth of equipment was lost, and "15 to 30 years worth of work." Melvin Wallace, chairman of the Corrections and Law Enforcement Department, also located on the first floor, said personal books were lost. "I'm much more concerned about the loss of my student files and records," he said. Wallace said most of the residents were in class when the fire started and others evacuated quickly before the fire spread.

As soon as the fire was evident, students began moving supplies and belongings from adjacent wings in a four-wing structure. They buried clothing, books, instructional materials and furniture out of windows to students on the ground.

Books and shelves from VTI's library were carried out by students and loaded into trucks and buses.

The contents of the Data Processing Center, located in a wing adjacent to the one ablaze, were removed by students in "bucket brigades." Data processing machinery valued at $750,000 was moved out, but one piece said to be worth $125 million stayed in because it was too heavy to move.

VTI officials indicated the equipment would be moved back in before nine, since fire was contained in the middle wings.

A snorkel truck from West Frankfort, which arrived at 12:30 p.m. Thursday, was kept busy fighting the fire spread to other parts of the building. Fire trucks from Marion, Carbondale, Carterville, Herrin, Du Quoin and the Fish and Wildlife Service and the Carbondale Chairway Village Fire Department arrived to answer the fire alarm.

VTI students helped firemen man the water hoses and chop off burning parts of the building. Others brought in coffee to the firefighters and directed people in and out of the other wings.

Fines to be taken from faculty's pay

By Paula Musso
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU faculty and staff members who have not paid parking ticket fines, or made arrangements to pay them in installments, can expect to have the fines subtracted from their Feb. 1 paycheck. Casswell E. Peebles, assistant to the chancellor, disclosed Thursday.

Several faculty and staff members threatened to sue the University if they were made to pay what they believe to be unjust fines.

"If the fines are set off on our checks next month, it will leave us no further chance than to sue," said Rebert Donow, assistant professor of English, who is organizing the intended legal action.

Donow said about 30 protesting faculty and staff members not only oppose the collection method for the fines, but the fines themselves. Many of them oppose the parking fee system and have refused to buy parking cards. Several have accumulated parking ticket fines which amount to hundreds of dollars.

Peebles said there are 116 faculty and staff members with unpaid bills which total $3,800. A letter was sent to them last quarter warning that if the fines were not taken care of, the money would be deducted from their paychecks.

"We have to collect the money. It is not fair to the others who have paid," Peebles said.

Fire leaves gratitude, bitterness

By Vera Fokker

I've been saying for years that this would happen any time and that we'd really be in trouble then. My home is burning. This is where my friends live and work. Now most of them are left without a stitch. Look! they're carrying out a whole drawer. And there come some roads, I'm so happy. These were just a few of the comments made by VTI students about the fire that destroyed their quarters of 54 girls at VTI Thursday.

The fire whose official cause has not yet been determined is alaged for approximately two hours, as hundreds of people sat near by and watched. But the fire was on the second floor of the World War II enlarge structure below the dorms. The fire was put out three hours later. (Photos by Fred Pfister and John Lapointe)

vs. progress

Tom Scherschel, SIU student body president, delivered his state of the campus address this week and the tone of his speech revealed more about the Scherschel administration than did the actual words he spoke.

Scherschel’s administration has been rather quiet, almost sedate, especially when compared to the upsurge of Dwight Campbell’s “right on” term in the same office. Questions should not be confused, though, with a lack of responsibility or concern. Scherschel is aware of the problems that exist on campus and is doing his best to help again. The student government tries to help and act as a conscience about things going on around us.

Unfortunately, this school year has seen a great deal of contentiousness but little actual progress. With the exception of the drive against the tuition hike and a push for student voter registration, student government has not accomplished enough to change the usual student opinion of it.

This week’s address was reflective of the Scherschel administration’s lack of concrete gains. Resignations were called for, praise was given and new projects were outlined but there was little to speak of that was a reality.

Is the war over?

American troops are being pulled out of Vietnam right now. The national draft call is being lowered right. The war is becoming de-escalated.

More than 70 air strikes have been made on North Vietnam since the so-called “peace talks” were announced in November of 1968, including eight in three days recently. The U.S. command calls these raids “proactive” in keeping with the inherent right of self-defense.

Direct Cambodian involvement is on the increase too. Navy support ships and Army helicopters are operating in Cambodia. An Associated Press photographer even photographed a U.S. Army liaison officer on maneuvers in Cambodia. When the U.S. command informing the Khmer Rouge with the photograph, he denied completely the possibility of any support from his ground troops in Cambodia. (Shades of ex-president Johnson’s lamed credibility gap.)

As if all this isn’t disheartening enough, Laos, a country that is being bombed seven times more than the U.S. before President Nixon took office, is a case for a spy operation taking place in China sponsored, of course, by American dollars.

What does it all mean? Does Vietnam and Laos mean a time in which we are not going to see American bombers dropping bombs on those two countries? The American GI’s being withdrawn from the region are being replaced by helicopter gunships, battalions, and F-106 and F-100 jets. The Vietnamese, Cambodian and Laotian countries are being irreparably destroyed by a steady show of American bombs.

The inhabitants of these regions are the ones who suffer the most from this holocaust because they must attempt to live on some kind of a regular basis in these areas. They cannot be withdrawn by some arbitrary deadline.

The question seems to be: will the withdrawal of ground troops significantly lessen U.S. involvement in southeast Asia? The answer is a definite no.

Americans will still be at war. Americans will still be dying. Only in a more sophisticated way. The defense budget will still feel the brunt of a foreign war. In addition to this, there is no guarantee that American troops won’t return to southeast Asia, just as there was no guarantee in 1968 that the bombing would be halted for ever.

Statistics or effort: which one is goal?

To the Daily Egyptian

On Jan. 19 one of your armchair sportsmen enlightened the readers of the Egyptian with his rather casual observations concerning the failings of the Southern wrestling team. It seems that these efforts against Michigan State were “hardly worth a passing grade” due to the fact that eight out of the 16 matches were won.

What bothers me is the attitude lurking behind that and similarly toned phrases. It is apparent to me that the author of such remarks is little concerned with the ideals of sport and more concerned with statistical outcomes.

Do me a favor, will you? Take all those statistics and throw them out the window because I am concerned with people, not just with numbers. What interests me is effort, a commodity all too rare in today’s world. What counts is the fact that all Michigan State wrestlers performed better in winning matches than did in losing matches. It is a team in the truest sense of the word. It is the kind of team that can carry you to victory when you were not sure you could win. It is the kind of team that deserves respect from everyone who participates in sport.

Late show produces usual frustrated males

To the Daily Egyptian

Once again the late show produced its usual number of frustrated males, who were forced to sit through a movie never intended or conceived of to be a sex exploitation film.

This time it was “The Rain People,” written and directed by Francis Ford Coppola, a graduate of UCLA’s Film School. The frustrated few were cheated of their money and time, which could have been better spent with a cheap magazine elsewhere.

If the local theater owners were not so interested in touting revenue to the publishing industry, they could have a right to be proud when they bring in a good film. If the sale of magazine goes up as well.

"Those dirty rats still at it!"

By Larry Bailey
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Education is best defense openings into basements and cellars where rats can find easy access.

Downtown merchants also add to the problem. Everingham continued, some of the stores which have beautiful facades and elegant interiors, he said, the back door has been littered with debris.

Everingham said in many cases landlords either can’t afford or won’t keep up the property they are renting to students. Some landlords, he said, are on a limited income and often can’t keep up with city code regulations.

There have been recent reports of small children bitten by what parents think are rats but several of these cases have turned out to be mice bites, he said.

About two months ago, however, an eight month old baby was bitten by rats in northeast Carbondale. The problem seems to be more acute there, he said.

Chester Nebelt, pest control technician working in Everingham’s office, said the environment for rat problem is more ideal in northeast Carbondale. “For example,” he said, “there are more derelict cars, more lumber and debris on the ground around the housing and refuge sitting places are largely inadequate in this section of Carbondale. These items attract rats and mice.”

Nebelt admitted that the rodents have infested other parts of town as well. For this reason, he said, rodent control should be a community wide concern, rather than being isolated in one area.

Much of the rat problem in northeast Carbondale, Nebelt said, is due to housing that is judged “substandard” according to requirements made by the city code. Nebelt said that, to be rated substandard, housing has to be totally unlivable.

“The problem with substandard housing in the northwestern section of town is that you put these people out of their present housing because it is substandard, where will they go? The Model Cities program has been trying to alleviate this by erecting prefab housing but funds are limited,” Nebelt said. There are many in the northwest section that are owned by people on federal aid. These people have tailored down the quality of their housing to the means in many cases it is at a minimum.”

Everingham said citizens are beginning to cooperate in a small way in the rodent control program. However, there has been no major participation. “This is not really their fault,” he said, “because most people have not been addressed with the problem yet. When they are confronted with rats in their homes or garages, most people are willing to help the situation.”

The Code Enforcement Department’s job is to make people aware of the rat problem and to instruct them in proper methods of garbage disposal.”

Everingham said.

Nebelt said, “Code Enforcement is currently trying to get the rat control program into the phase of educating the public about the infestation. You can exterminate rats forever but the problem will not be controlled if you don’t educate and enlighten the public about the problem.”

Nebelt said people could prevent rat infestation by cleaning up their yards and removing lumber or other debris that provides harborage for rats. “One big problem,” he said, “is to get individuals to make proper use of garbage containers, which should have a fire screen over the top of them.

The way to get rid of rats, he continued, is to cut off their food, water and harborage. Rats are extremely adaptable to their environment, he said. They can survive on one ounce of food or water per day and it doesn’t matter whether the food is rotten or the water tainted.

According to Nebelt, the Code Enforcement Department is educating the public about the rat problem by presenting a slide show made by the Rat Control Survey last spring. The slides illustrate rats living habits and how to identify places where rats have sought harborage.

“We have also provided special programs,” Everingham said, “for grade school students, high school students and women’s clubs. The University has also cooperated in special programs,” he said.

“Bruce Peterson, associate professor of zoology, has frequently invited the Code Enforcement Department to speak on rat control in his GSA 210 biology courses.

Everingham said a major step in solving the rat problem would be to rewrite the city’s garbage ordinance. “This would probably burn out in the city limits,” he said, “If you get rid of the burning barrel then you have knocked a large hole in the problem.

But neither Everingham nor Nebelt is too optimistic about rat control in the future. Both see the problem as one that requires community support to complete the project. “We will never complete the education phase of the program because there are new people constantly coming up into the community who will need to be conscious of rat infestation and how to control it,” Nebelt said.

The Rat Control Program began in Carbondale received $12,544 from the state and put up $18,213 itself for pest control programs. Everingham said.

RATS ARE A PROBLEM

1. When Food is Not Protected!
2. When Garbage is Left in the Open!
3. When Trash Piles Up in Yards!

RATS WILL LEAVE!

1. When Food is Properly Stored!
2. When Garbage is in Tight Cans!
3. When Yards are Kept Clean!

Youngsters orientated literature and drawings are two facets of the rat control education program of the Carbondale Code Enforcement Department. As a part of its plan to visit all city elementary schools, the department has sent speakers to Lincoln Junior High School Thursday and Friday to back up the literature. The local department uses standardized literature, posters, and cartoons created by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, as well as local material.
Disease claims life of Russell

WASHINGTON (AP)—Richard Brevard Russell of Georgia, a senator more than half his lifetime and a symbol of the South with unparalleled prestige, died Thursday. He was 73, the dean of all senators.

His voluntary retirement complicated by emphysema dogged his later years and brought his death in Walter Reed Army Medical Center. He had been there, this latest time, since Dec. 4.

"When the security of the United States was the issue, six American presidents leaned upon this great patriot, and he never failed them," President Nixon said. "The nation whose security was his constant concern for four decades in the upper chamber will be ever in his debt."

Nixon minister leads services

WASHINGTON (AP)—The minister of President Nixon's Quaker church in California will preside at White House worship services Sunday and famed spiritual and gospel singer Ethel Waters will be a guest soloist.

About 200 guests, including a Negro porter girl from Kansas, have been invited to the 11:30 a.m. East Room ceremony.

The minister is T. Eugene Coffin of East Whittier Friends Church, where Nixon still continues to hold membership.

This will be the first Sunday worship service or at the White House, continuing a series of such gatherings that Nixon inaugurated at the White House.

The special guest, Roberta Scott, 12, of Wichita, Kan., the Poster Child for the National Association of Retarded Children, recently was the center of misunderstanding about being photographed with the President.

She will now be Nixon's special guest.

The White House said Dec. 4 that other commitments made it impossible for the President to be photographed with Roberta.

Winter enrollment at SIU increases

Winter term enrollment at SIU's two campuses is 1,482 students above the same period for 1970.

The SIU Office of Institutional Research said total enrollment reached 35,079 as of Jan. 15, the final cutoff for undergraduate registration.

By campuses, the tally shows 22,500 students at Carbondale, an increase of 380 over the 1970 winter quarter; and 12,519 at Edwardsville, a jump of 1,083.

SIU at Edwardsville had limited its fall term count to 12,700.

Loren Jung, director of Institutional Research, said some late graduate student enrollments or withdrawals could alter the final count when the breakdown by class is completed during the week of Jan. 15.

Total enrollment for the University at the start of the fall quarter, in September, was 35,362.

Understanding dispels gap

By Darrell Abeln
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Sydney Harris, syndicated columnist for the Chicago Daily News, dispelled what he called three of society's greatest misconceptions at Thursday's Convocation.

The misconceptions Harris cited included the generation gap, the generation gap caused mainly by a lack of communication and closing the gap with relevant education.

Harris said that historically, the young have had different thoughts from the old. "It is part of the nature for youth to question the adult's conformity and rigidity," Harris said.

"Nor is the gap one-sided," Harris said. "The old resent the sexual freedom of the young. They are determined to avenge themselves." Harris said.

He added that the old have always resented that the young will see the "fruits of tomorrow" which is what the old have worked all their lives to see.

Harris said that he feels the ultimate way the old have "got ten back" at the young was by having them "killed in war."

"The old declared the wars but it is the young who are drafted, fight and die," Harris said.

"I do not believe we have a mere traditional generation gap. It is more of a qualitative change rather than a quantitative change," Harris said.

On a lack of communication causing the generation gap, Harris said most people don't know what they are disagreeing about and usually arguments end in a mist of mutual misunderstanding.

"Today's fathers are thinking of their sons as manpower while the sons think of themselves as manhood. Fathers want their sons to earn money to make the country more powerful and today life and society are really about manhood. We should ask ourselves how to see as human as possible," Harris said.

A bad day at VTI

Firemen and snorkel equipment from West Frankfort (far left) pour water onto the roof and into the windows of VTI's Building H-7. A resident of the building (left center) is comforted by a friend. Furniture and belongings of occupants in a wing adjacent to the damaged building are scattered on a parking lot where they were taken for safety. Firemen tear away a wall to get at the back of the flames in the two-story, frame building. Fifty-four women who lived on the second floor of the building were moved to quarters in Mae Smith and Newy Hall at the main SIU campus.

The Visiting International Student Association (VISA) may open its membership to all SIU students, "interviewed in promoting the purposes of the organization as specified in the constitution," says Duncan Bradley, VISA adviser.

Change in membership requirements is among many revisions now proposed in the association's constitution which will be presented for passage at the next large meeting of the VISA. Passage of the revised constitution will require a two-thirds majority vote.

At Tuesday's meeting of the VISA constitution revision committee, proposals were made including changes in parliamentary procedures for conducting business meetings as well as the opening of membership to students other than international students.

The date for the next meeting is yet to be announced.

Senator accuses Scherschel of neglecting duties

By Cathy Speight and Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

Wednesday's Campus Senate meeting ended in charges and countercharges between Senator Wilmouth, Westside dorm senator, and Tom Scherschel, student government president.

Miss Wilmouth spoke during the remarks section of the meeting. She said Scherschel had neglected his duty by failing to make student appointments to the Parking Committee, the Joint Task Force Committee, a health care study and in general neglected his responsibilities as an ambassador of SIU. Scherschel responded that he had not neglected his duties and said he would produce documentation to prove his remarks. Scherschel said, "Do you really know what duties you are talking about?"

Earlier in the Senate meeting, a "motion concerning the remarks of Senator Wilmouth" was withdrawn from the agenda by Dennis Koziinski, Westside dorm senator. The bill asked that the Senate resolve to support Miss Wilmouth's statements and requests.

The Senate made the recommendation that the bill calling for a student Christian Foundation grant speaker be sent to the Finance Committee. A mandate to the Health and Welfare Committee to organize a program in which student pressure will be applied to the state legislature to legalize abortions was passed by a vote of 12 to 5.

The Senate also passed a bill for a by-law amendment to the student government. The amendment requires a one-third vote of those present at the time of the vote to call a roll call vote.

W. Grant Gray's musical to open

An original musical comedy, "Make Way for Love," will open at SIU Saturday night.

The production by the Southern Repertory Dance Company contains 27 songs, with book and lyrics by W. Grant Gray, company director and assistant professor of theater, and music by Shirley Rogers Walker of San Francisco, Calif., who was a student of Gray's in California before he joined the SIU faculty. The musical arranger and piano accompanist is Gus Pappas of Carbondale Community High School.

"Make Way for Love" is based on the 17th century French play, "Love's the Best Medicine" by Moliere. The musical opens at 8 p.m. and runs about two and a half hours."
Tight market, economic slow blamed

Few jobs offered during ‘Career Day’

By Paula Mone
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"It's a buyer's market. Most companies that are offering opportunities are requiring students to apply for instead of recruiters coming to this campus," said Rod Andrews, a representative of the Illinois Civil Service Commission.

"We have applications galore, but not nearly enough job openings to handle them," he said.

"There's just one more applicant this year and looking closer at applicants' personality and their level of education," said Rod Andrews, a representative of Continental Bank.

Many students who would have qualified for a job a couple of years ago are now being passed up, Andrews said.

He said the Civil Service is experiencing a substantial increase in job applications this year, although the number of jobs has not really increased.

"We have applications galore, but not nearly enough job openings to handle them," he said.

"We are having difficulties in the recruitment of students," Andrews said.

If you want a job, learn to sell yourself and be prepared to impress recruiters.

"Come with some ideas of what you want and what you have to offer, " Paul Vander, who represented Zephyr, advised students who were going to interviews.

"Vander said one of the most valuable things a person looking for a job could do is study the company literature before showing up for an interview.

"Job hunters will have to do a lot more work on their own."

The University's Placement Service offers services for the College of Education, Dixson said.

"With the larger number of students that we have," Dixson said, "We can't afford to place a person for student teaching who cannot qualify for the teacher education program."
Students feel entitled to food stamps

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) - About 100 students at SIU's Edwardsville campus are enrolled in the federal sponsored food stamp program in Madison County.

Participants, who can get a maximum of $150 worth of food stamps per month, must pay 8 cents per dollar for the privilege of buying the stamps at stores.

In Chicago, E. J. McBride, head of the Cook County food stamp program, said that about half of the stamps are redeemed at stores.

Funkhouser said most of the students feel they are entitled to the food and "they don't come here because they want money. They say it's supposed to be a pretty hip thing.

Sopinski said he's received requests for information on the program from officials at Northwestern University, the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Loyola University and the University of Chicago. A student, an accounting major, feels that a 80-month student assistant supervisor who manages the program, has no problems about accepting students. "If they qualify," he said. "There's no reason why students shouldn't get them."

When the main gripe is that "There isn't enough money through the purchasing power of the stamps to afford around with."
Author to speak on problems of abortion

Daniel Callahan, author of "Abortion: Law, Choice, and Morality," will speak at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Newman Center, according to Rev. William Longuet, director of the center.

The topic of Callahan's talk, "Abortion: Law, Choice, and Morality," will deal with the various debates centered around abortion, including legal questions, moral and ethical issues, and experiences of other countries. Callahan has traveled throughout the world studying abortion, including visits to Japan, the East European countries, Sweden, Denmark and Latin America. Callahan's book, "The Morality of Abortion," was published in 1972.

Callahan has also been a staff associate on the Population Council and held several visiting professorships at leading universities.

The talk, sponsored by the Newman Center, is open to the public and Father Longuet has invited everyone to attend.

There will be no admission charge. The Newman Center is located at 713 S. Washington.

Prehistoric life revealed at Rend Lake

By University News Services

A report wrapping up an eight-year archaeological salvage project in the area now mandated by Rend Lake has been issued by the SIU University Museum.

The project, conducted under grants from the National Park Service, identified 138 sites of prehistoric occupations in the area to be flooded. Four sites - Delaney, Cash, Brown Swamp and Big Bean - were excavated, and testing and controlled surface collections were carried out on four other sites.

Chinese is the most striking aspect of the entire project was the preponderance of Middle Woodland components in the area, wrote Sidney G. Denso, field archaeologist for the project. The 1960-68 field operation dates back about 2,000 years. Crab Orchard is a regional manifestation of this period.

Denso cited a total absence of artifacts, a total absence of structural features, a marked absence of tools related to hunting, a scarcity of animal bones and a high proportion of "mano" (grounding stones) and other general utility tools.

These facts lead to a conclusion that the area was inhabited primarily on a seasonal basis, probably in the fall, by Indians gathering nuts and digging herbs and plants for food.

"Data seem to indicate that the area was never intensively occupied," he said.

The Brown Swamp site, excavated in the summer of 1967, like the others, was used primarily as a nut collecting and processing station.

It is a significant discovery for the SIU-Brazil project, brought Vogel to Carbondale for his graduate studies.

This is Vogel's third visit to the United States. He was a Fulbright student in American literature at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., 1961-62. He also represented the Brazilian Ministry of Education and his University at a 6-week seminar in Michigan, 1967 for Latin American school administrators.

Vogel teaches Portuguese to the wives of SIU faculty members who, in the near future, may visit Brazil on the SIU project.

'Third World' theme at mock United Nations

Applications to become a delegate to SIU's Model United Nations are due today, according to Rick Moore, this year's secretary-general for the event.

Moore said applications should be turned into the Student Activities Office on the second floor of the University Center by 5 p.m.

"The Third World" is the theme for the 1971 Model U.N. Moore said the committee emphasized on "Exploitations of Human Rights" and "The Third World Tomorrow."

"The reason we chose the Third World as a topic this year is that we feel as though we have been ignoring two-thirds of the world's population at past Model U.N.'s," Moore said. Although the Middle East is a visible issue, we've been focusing on it for the past three years and ignoring the world's hungry people.

The event will be held Feb. 11-13, and will be sponsored by the International Programming Committee of the Student Government Activities Council, in cooperation with the Council of International Relations and the International Relations Club.

Approximately 250 student participants are expected to represent most of the 127-member nations in the General Assembly.

Delegations will consist of a chairman and two delegates. Students are asked to register as a three-person delegation, indicating nation and bloc preference. Each delegation should also decide committee assignments for each member. Moore said Glenn A. Olds, ambassador and representative from the United States to the U.N. Economic and Social Council will be the keynote speaker on Feb. 11. Jari Ralston, a member of the Center for Economic and Social Information of the U.N. Secretariat, is tentatively scheduled to address the Model U.N. on Feb. 13.

Nixon administration will ask increase in public debt ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration will ask Congress to increase the public debt ceiling at $336 billion, before the fiscal year ends June 30, a Treasury Department official said. But Paul A. Volcker, undersecretary for monetary affairs, declined to say how much of a boost in the limit will be sought by the administration.

We will need an increase in the debt ceiling, Volcker told newsmen Wednesday as he briefed them on the Treasury's latest quarterly refinancing of the debt.

Congress in the year increased the temporary debt ceiling to $326 billion. Through June 30 of this year, when it will revert to the new permanent ceiling of $300 billion. Volcker made it clear the Treasury will have to seek another step-up prior to June 30 because of the cash needs of the government.

Increasing the debt ceiling has become almost an annual fixture in Congress. While President Nixon's budget for the current fiscal year had first projected a small surplus it is not expected to yield a large deficit.

Volcker announced plans to refinance $236 billion of the debt to bring in more cash. He said the Treasury will need between $6 billion and $8 billion in March and April. "We are in a period where we are going to have to maneuver very carefully in terms of the debt ceiling," he said. The debt ceiling is now $326 billion.

Volcker said the Treasury is taking advantage of a favorable money market for government bonds to put out what he called a "summer offer."

The organization of the SIU Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) is a paradox. Many of its members belong to a wide variety of peace organizations because they associate organizations with the armed forces despite the reformation of this organization. "My goal is to educate the general public, especially in Southern Illinois, that being antiwar is not unpatriotic," Arthur Troutt, former adviser with the 4th Special Forces Group in Vietnam, said.

To do this, I conceived the idea of a panel of Vietnam veterans presenting their antiwar views in local high schools and other organizations. And I thought the best way to get this panel going was to form VVAW.

Most of the antiwar veterans agreed that this panel was needed especially in Southern Illinois. However, Rich Juslin, a native of DeKalb, Ill., said, "Northern Illinois is just as conservative as the local area." He and five friends tried to get permission to lower the flag to half-mast at Knox College Junior College after the Kent State shootings last May. The local Vet's Club and 80 per cent of the student body opposed us," he said.

Asked why he was personally opposed to the war, Troutt said, "Our objectives are being defeated by our methods. Americans are ethnocentric and tried to Americanize Vietnam, which the majority of people believe Vietnameses butted out.

Troutt said he was qualified to speak for Vietnam veterans because he talked with the Vietnamese people ate their food and married a Vietnamese girl. I knew how they feel. They hated the Viet Cong for the repulsing reason for the popular South Vietnamese Army.

Troutt doesn't think Vietnam should be divided. "The Saigon government represents a minority. Ho Chi Minh was the most popular leader among the peasants. What Vietnam needs most is a truly free election. Concerning the current war crimes trials, Troutt said, "If Galley swings, several more names will emerge in the ladder and the army will be subject to new trials in the ladder and the army will be subject to new trials.

Juslin thinks that "all actual participants are just as guilty as those who condone such actions."

Right McCormick, who returned from Vietnam in June, thinks the problem is the "so-called American dream." He's biggest disappointment has been the "hassle" he gets for expressing antiwar feelings and growing his hair long. "I thought I was leaving hassling behind when I left the Army. I'm so sick and tired of it I'll do anything to stay out of the hassle. I even cut my hair and put on straight clothes when I was driving to Florida because I had to go through the South.

One veteran, who preferred not to be named, hearty endorsed the panel idea and hoped that VVAW might later take an active part in settling domestic conflicts, especially the racial crisis. He is convinced that America is a racist society.

He's just a pain in the butt by people who label me unpatriotic because of my antiwar feelings. I don't care if I'm in mod clothes, even though I was awarded the Bronze Star in Vietnam.

Last week the free films are to be an Alfred Hitchcock creation. "Spellbound," "Notorious," and "Rebecca" make their next weekend one you won't pass up to pass up.

Layoff, track are hurdles for Salukis

A 3-game layoff this spring may have us a lot too if the teams that had to

Wanted: a defensive line

"The best offense is a good defense." That phrase is proving true on an unexpected level.

For two years, Tom O'Boyle's defensive linemen have been among the best in the country, not always on the pass rush, but more often on the line against running attacks. When Southern's offense struggled in 1969, the defense gave out consistently. But in 1970, an otherwise disappointing 5-3 mark, with a major portion of the line returning, they had a better effort last fall, yielding 784 net yards rushing during the 6-3 campaign.

The best performance was against Bradley when the now-defunct Braves charged through McAndrew Stadium for nearly 300 yards and were humiliated 119-0.

When injuries took their toll at defensive end, the last three opponents fastened up on Southern, gaining 562.3 yards per game, an average Ball State ran for 191, Drake 130 and College Division national champion Arkansas State 155.

Credit for the improvement, however, is owed to Ball State's defensive line that seemed to stand in front of every spring drill.

"Their size, their strength," the coach said, "helped them learn to play together.""
