Pay raise plans announced

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU President Warren W. Brandt announced Thursday the allocation plans for $331,000 in salary increases for University faculty, staff and civil service employees in fiscal 1976.

The raises will be effected in July if the $68 million fiscal 1976 operating budget for SIU-U is approved by the state legislature.

The amount, which represents an increase of 9.62 per cent for SIU employees rather than the 10 per cent figure announced earlier by Gov. Dan Walker, will be distributed to faculty and staff on a "sliding" cost of living scale and on a merit basis.

Civil service employees will also receive cost of living and merit increases plus a "range adjustment" raise.

Walker's predicted 10 per cent salary hike was based on the Illinois Board of Higher Education's estimated 10 per cent turnover in faculty. The actual turnover for fiscal 1976 is about 6.2 per cent, according to University of Illinois officials and the 9.6 per cent is based on that.

Faculty and staff raises call for a cost of living increase based on a "sliding scale" which ranges from a 3.6 per cent raise at the lowest salary range to 2.44 per cent at the top salary levels.

This system provides a gradually increasing dollar value as salary levels increase. For instance, those earning yearly salaries from $1,000 to $10,500 will receive an increase of 3.6 per cent or $36. Those in the $25,800 to $77,500 range will receive a smaller percentage of 2.44 but a larger dollar raise of $600.

The cost of living increase will consume 3.1 per cent of the money allotted for salary increases for faculty and administrative staff. The remaining 6.9 per cent will be administered to those faculty selected for merit increases individually by recommendation.

Brandt said merit recommendations will originate from department heads and be filtered through the offices of the deans, vice president of academic affairs and the president.

Special raises for promotions will come from the money available for merit increases.

Departmental allocations for merit raises may vary slightly, depending on the dean, Brandt said.

The "sliding" scale cost of living raise will also be applied to civil service employees for a 4.54 increase. A merit raise of 3.28 per cent will also be available on the recommendation of the unit heads and the civil service administration.

.brandt said the civil employees in certain job classifications will also receive an increment of 3.33 per cent of this year's salary range base. Brandt said SIU-C's civil service base salaries were found to be out of whack with the civil service range averages of other state universities in some classification levels. One University official said the variation ran as high as 32 per cent in some areas. The adjustments or "equity" raises are being made to bring the problem areas closer to the

Revised dorm pacts to be implemented

By Bob Nishack
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A revised dormitory contract will be used beginning fall semester.

The contract will make it easier for students to be released from their contract obligations.

In the past, students who moved out during the fall semester were responsible for paying one-half of the spring semester rent. The new contract will not require this.

The change in the contract was made because there has been no problem filling dorm rooms, said Sam Rinella, director of housing.

As in the past, students will have to sign a contract at the fall academic year. But the only charges they must pay if they move out during the fall semester are liquidated damages, and the remainder of their fall semester rent.

Students who move out of the dorms in the spring must pay liquidated damage charges, and the room rent for the remainder of that semester, as before.

Liquidated damages are charged to rehouse students for income lost due to the dorm room being empty, and for the administrative paperwork incurred when a contract change-over is made, Rinella said.

Students who left the dorm this fall were still responsible for paying one-half the rent for this spring semester along with the other charges. Rinella said that this payment has been returned to the students because their rooms are occupied this semester.

A student can be relieved of this cost if he obtains an approved petition from University Housing excusing him from the contract obligations.

Liquidated damage charges vary.

The criteria for the amount to be charged is listed on the contract.

"If a student moves out of his room before the end of fall semester, according to the contract, he will be charged $100 for liquidated damage, and the room rent for the remainder of the semester.

"The charges will be reduced to $75 if the student fills out an intent to vacate form five weeks before the end of the semester, and checks out properly, the contract states.

"If a student who moves out is enrolled at a different school the following term, he will be charged $25 for liquidated damages, provided the intent to vacate form is filled out five weeks prior to the end of the semester.

Rinella said that this allowance is made because some people come here and find that they can't get the curriculum they want, or they don't like the program that is offered.

The same charges apply to students who plan to move out to get married as those that apply to students moving out of the dorms so they can transfer schools.

Personal illness, death or grave emergency in the immediate family excuse a student from liquidated damage charges altogether.

The student must first obtain an approved petition from the Petition and Review Board to be excused from the contract.

"The Petition and Review Board has always been lenient," Rinella said.

Last year about 260 people petitioned out of their contracts, according to Rinella.

If a student leaves the dorm during the spring semester he will be charged $75 for liquidated damages. This will be reduced to $50 if the student checks out properly, according to the new contract.

County tax director calls ouster 'political'

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Both opponents and supporters of the Jackson County supervisor of assessments addressed a public hearing on his dismissals.

Lowell Heller, supervisor of assessments, requested at least a three-to-one majority at last night's public hearing after the Jackson County Board of Supervisors voted 6-1 not to automatically reappoint him to a second four-year term as the county's head tax assessing official.

Heller called the dismissal "strictly political" and said it was "inconsistent and concise answers" to questions about his not reappointing him, he said.

"The board has failed to show any good reason why I was not reappointed," he said. "I still think the move was political."

Board member Bill Kelley, D-Carbondale, disagreed that the vote not to rehire Heller was political. One December Democrat who was not in favor of the Republicans to have more candidates to

Charles Gray, R-Carbondale, said Casey, "did a tremendous job in keeping the hearing fair and making sure speakers did not stray into personal matters."

Student Senate opposes housing rate increase

Without debate, the Student Senate voted 22-0 in favor of a proposed increase in SIU housing rates.

The resolution, which was passed Wednesday night, as was later reported, is opposed to the increase because of the financial burden it would place on the students.

If the Board of Trustees approves the increase, room and board charges at the three on-campus dormitories will be raised.

The increase will be $6 for Room and Board and $4 per month for off-campus rooms.

At the March 12 senate meeting, a resolution was approved stating that the board "grudgingly accepts" the increases "increased tuition and fees." The president, Rich Finley, set a committee to review the increase.

Student Sen. Joel Spenner (Brush Towers) and Debbie Degman, president of the East Campus executive council, said Thursday that they will run for student president and vice president, respectively, in the April 18 student government elections.

Spenner said the main reason he is running for president is to give the students the rights and powers they deserve.

"The administration does what they think satisfies the needs of the student," Spenner said. "It is student government's role to satisfy the needs of the students."

Spenner said he felt that student President Dennis Sullivan has worked hard during his term, yet students don't like the way student government is being run.

Spenner, a junior majoring in journalism, said he will seek a new relationship between student government and the students.

Degman, a sophomore majoring in journalism, said she is running for vice president because she wants to bring out information that students don't have, yet have a right to know.

"When we get our schedules every semester, we see how the fees are divided up," she said. "The students should know where all that money is going."

Spenner said he favors having been served in the Student Center and decriminalization of marijuana.

"Student government should work more closely with the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws," Spenner said. "It is ridiculous that someone can go to jail for an ounce of pot."

In addition, Spenner said he would like to see the parking garage, being constructed east of Fauer Hall, open to students.

"As it stands now, only persons with a blue decal, namely, those who will be able to park in the garage," he said. "Yet there's a sign outside of the construction site which says the garage is being built by student parking fees and fines. Students are paying for the facility, yet they aren't going to be able to use it," Spenner said.

Both Spenner and Degman said they would like to see a reallocation of the athletic funds to give women a higher percentage of funds, without a fee increase.

Degman said the two are running what they call "a platform of idealism."

"We aren't promising that we are going to get it all done," she said. "But we will work as hard as we can to make the student's voice heard in this University."

State House begins investigation of Klan

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—A move to investigate the Ku Klux Klan began Thursday in the Illinois House.

The House suspended its rules to allow immediate Executive Committee hearing on the resolution, sponsored by Rep. George Ryan, R-Kankakee. But it blocked a bid by Ryan for a quick floor vote.

Foes of the resolution, authorizing a probe of the Klan by the Legislative Investigating Commission, said it would set "a witch hunt," and would be "a violation of religious freedom and implied violence," Ryan said. "I do not believe it would deny the Klan their constitutional rights but...I do not want the Klan to engage in overt or covert activities that are aimed at denying anyone else's rights or inciting insurgency or other violent acts."

Klan leaders recently announced a membership drive in Illinois, concentrating on Chicago suburbs and nearby such nearby cities as Aurora, Joliet and Kankakee.

Both the House and Senate held brief sessions before going home for the weekend. They are scheduled to reconvene on Monday and meet through Easter recess, scheduled to last until April 7.

A resolution calling for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, to the U.S. Constitution also was introduced in the House.

The resolution, co-sponsored by 53 House members, would "lay to rest any false notion that anyone might have that the ERA movement is dead in Illinois," Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said.

A scheduled vote on ERA was postponed in the Senate earlier this month because the chief sponsor announced she did not have the needed number of votes.

Gov. Neil Hartigan was seen in both the House and Senate attempting to drum up support for the ERA for senior citizens.

Hartigan told a news conference the adoption of the resolution by the Illinois Legislature, "would be a commitment to ERA legislation, currently under consideration by the House Appropriations Committee after passing the Senate."

The Democratic governor said he and members of the Senate and House United to amendments to the tax relief measures being sought by the Department of Revenue.

Brandt's memo said funds were limited for the raises adjustment and as a result not all areas could be brought up but, in most cases, no range will be more than 10 per cent below the average.

Other University officials noted that the 10 per cent figure may be beyond reach and a 12 to 15 per cent goal may be more likely at the present time.

Brandt said graduate assistant salaries will be administered by each individual department. The amounts available after necessary reallocation will be increased, if possible, by none per cent with the recommendations that salaries be increased accordingly.

Amtrak to add more cars for student rush

An estimated 900 students will use the normal Armed Forces rail card for the weekend, Gerald V. West, Amtrak district supervisor, said Thursday.

Amtrak will add five passenger cars to its five-car Shawnee, giving the four 2 p.m. Carbondale-Chicago run a capacity of approximately 500, West said.

The five-car trains will operate through Sunday, and will carry about 250 persons Friday, 150 to 175 Saturday and about 140 Sunday, West said.

 Enough open seats should remain to accommodate University of Illinois students boarding at Champaign-Urbana, West said.

 A reserved-seat Panama Limited will stop at Carbondale on its New Orleans-Chicago run at 3:57 p.m. Persons should make reservations at least an hour before departure, Amtrak spokesman said.

The Panama-Limited can seat 80 to 90 riders, West said.

A Chicago to Carbondale special will leave the Windy City at 6 p.m., Sunday, March 30. The special will carry up to 500 persons, West added.

The special will leave Chicago at 8:20 p.m. and arrive at Carbondale at 12:30 a.m. The special will carry up to 1,300 persons will return to Carbondale via Amtrak.

Editors' Note

Get out now

President Ford's plea for $222 million for aid to Cambodia is getting a little legislative support as it deserves. A recent letter published shows that eight out of every 10 Americans oppose further military aid and it appears that Congress is listening to its constituents instead of the White House. Last week the House Foreign Affairs Committee rejected an $80 million compromise proposal. The Senate Democratic Caucus went one step further in voting 38 to 3 against further aid to Cambodia. In its March 6 news conference, President Ford stated three reasons for continued support to Cambodia.

The President's first appeal was a humanitarian one. He wants the United States to give food and military supplies so Cambodia can remain independent. He says that if Cambodia were to fall to the Communists, the people would be perverted even after the fighting ended. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield countered by saying, "The more aid we give, the more killing there will be." Others don't believe the reports of the food and money going to the Cambodians enough to last through July. Then the monsoon rains will swell the Mekong River, causing flooding of Communist positions and impeding the mining of the river. Such a strategy merely postpones the crisis rather than solving it. Insurgents have refused to negotiate with anyone from the present Lon Nol regime and U.S. Sen. Hubert Humphrey has called for the dictator's resignation. Ford disagrees with this logical request and thus is contradicting his own wishes for ending the crisis. The President is being unrealistic in his hopes for a negotiated settlement, especially when Henry Kissinger is described as being reluctant to enter such negotiations.

Government officials are also worried that should Cambodia become overrun by Communists, neighboring Thailand and South Vietnam may fall too. These exposures of the "domino theory" probably don't realize that those two countries have considerably greater strength than Cambodia. Furthermore, the president's foreign government aid did fall over 80 percent in 1973 and will continue to be reduced through U.S. security. The rocket attacks on Phnom Penh are those of the Khmer Rouge movement which U.S. embassy officials say is not affiliated with the North Vietnamese. The government headed by Lon Nol has proven to be corrupt and ineffective, unable to stand up against the Communist insurgents in U.S. aid over the last five years and it is doubtful if he alone could efficiently use an additional $222 million of aid.

The President's third reason for continued aid to Cambodia is that our national credibility and reliability would be damaged if we cut off our support. Thomas O'Neill, House majority leader, does not believe that would be the case. "Our people feel that our deterioration around the world is because of our actions in Vietnam," he said. The ending of U.S. involvement in Cambodia would free funds that could be invested instead in South Vietnam may fall too. Mike Ryokey, the enterprising and articulate columnist for the Daily Egyptian News, paid $300 to have John Coleman hit in the face with a lemon piñata.

John Coleman, for those who have never had the pleasure of watching the 6 o'clock evening news out of Chicago on channel 7, is the ABC affiliate's answer to a fugitive from Ed Sullivan's old variety show.

His reporting of Chicago's weather is spiced with a combination of verbiage and mundane expressions created only by WCFL radio Super Jock Larry Lujack's daily diarrhea of the mouth. If Coleman's wit was matched against his accuracy in predicting Chicago's weather, you'd have a loser on both counts.

I can think of no mug more worth adorning with an unexpected pie-in-the-face.

Question: What can SIU come up with to keep pace with Ryokey and the Daily News?

More of the same. Certainly there exists a multitude of public figures whose public image could be bettered by the addition of lemon meringue with an ample amount of whipped cream.

"How about President Brandt?" inquired a fellow reporter.

Too easy, and too obvious a candidate. No doubt everyone would enjoy hearing about the illustrious leader of Illinois' "second banana" state. But let's try to be more resourceful.

"I know," said another reporter. "How about City Manager Carroll Fry?"

Again, too obvious a candidate. Besides, the "Oklahoma Kid" could only be improved upon by an unexpected meeting with a fresh bakery product. Suggestions continue to be flung at this reporter, with each individual offering his favorite candidate with all the zest of a betting match at the dog fights.

Out of the managing editor's office of the Daily Egyptian strides a thin, weather-beaten man with a white plate-like beard and a pencil in his mouth. Heads are turned in his direction. Chuckles are heard from everyone as eyes catch the object of their attention.

But no, a million times no.

This man cannot be subjected to such merciless abuse.

His walk sets him apart from other men, his knowledge fills the air, his integrity goes unshaken.

"When the heck are we going to get some copy up to the desk?" growls Bill Harmon, managing editor of the Daily Egyptian and the new-found figure of our devilsh scheme.

A student approaches the final voice in the paper's management and timidly hands him some copy.

"Well, it's about time we got rolling in here. Take care, Bob, you've spilled every single word correctly or I'll redline your story in tomorrow's paper and hang it up in the newsroom for all to see," Harmon snarled, pausing to light a cigarette.

Suddenly, and without warning, an unidentified student dashed out of the photo lab and made a bee-line for where the managing editor stood.

All attention was transfixed. The student apparently was hiding something behind his back. It was round, and measured about nine inches in diameter.

Eyes widened, wheelie fulls occurred. His eyes focused on the confederate approaching him, and the object held in his hands.

"Oh no," came the cry. Too late.

The job was done. The lemon meringue dripped from Harmon's face and forehead, and his cigarette smoldered beneath a cloud of whipped cream.

A roar echoed off the walls of the newsroom. The plot had succeeded—the beast was slain.

Harmon sought refuge in the comfortable confines of his office.

Taking a towel to his brow he vowed, "I'll get you all tomorrow. Tomorrow. So many of you in my divine guidance. You can direct all problems to one of the student editors.

And so we went in the Daily Egyptian newsroom. Wednesday, March 18th, 1975.

Mike Ryokey, eat your heart out.
Fallacious forest figuring

To the Daily Egyptian:

This is in reply to Mr. McFayley's letter on February 28, 1975 in which he incorrectly reported several "points" on Thompson Woods. As a forester, I would like to correct some of his misconceptions about Thompson Woods. To correct him in these misconceptions, I will discuss some facts once again.

To the Daily Egyptian:

"Good morning, sir," said the well-dressed young man at the door. "I represent your friendly Genghis Khan Gas Light Company."

"You mean," I asked incredulously, "that you want me to buy advertising from you for your own newspaper?"

"Actually, you have been doing it for years," he said.

"We simply included the charge in your monthly bill. But we felt going door-to-door would be more fair."

"You've got quite a system there," I said.

He opened his briefcase. "Now, how would you like to purchase this beautifully illustrated pamphlet on gas clothes driers for only 99 cents, which covers our production costs? It's quite a bargain."

"It is like those billboards I used to pay for telling me to buy a Gas Rite for a Rainy Day?"

"No, sir," he said, "this is called 'Having Fun in the Great Outdoors.'"

"That doesn't sound like the American way."

"Do you know what an energy crisis is, sir?"

"No, sir," he said sternly.

"Well, let me explain. A gas drier is a representational. 'Sell me a pamphlet telling me how much my rates will go down if I buy less. I need to be encouraged to do my duty,' he said. Actually, you buy less, your rates will go up. But if you buy scads, we can get you it wholesale. That's the American way."

I should pay you more for your product?" I demanded angrily.

"Gosh," he said, "you've been doing it for years." ++ +

Well! Needless to say, I slammed the door in his face. How stupid does the Gas & Light Company think I am?

By the way, would anyone care to buy a T-Bone steak? (Low down payment. E-Z terms.) This offer expires in 48 hours — or 24 if we get a warm spell.

Why in an effort to keep your expenses at a minimum, here is an idea which may be of interest to you.

Last spring an organization I was a member of conducted a newspaper collection drive. We then sold them to a paper recycling company. So in addition to cleaning out a lot of garages and helping our environment, we made money.

Everyday I see Daily Egyptians which people have read and discarded in the classrooms, in the lounges, and on the ground. Why not set up stands for people to put these papers after they have finished reading them? Then have the papers recycled. In one lecture, the instructor stated that some schools have already begun collecting and recycling their newspapers. I think it is a good idea. Recycling of papers would help save money and our environment.

To the Daily Egyptian:

On three separate occasions I have had to avoid hitting wheelchair students while driving east on Mill St. It was dusk on all the occasions, and these students were driving in the street, with no lights or reflectors of any kind, and two of them were driving against the flow of traffic. I am very concerned for the safety of these individuals. There is a sidewalk along Mill St., but I do not know if it is readily accessible to them. If it is, I wish these students would use the sidewalk as a matter of safety. If the sidewalk is not available I would like to know why it is not, and what can be done to correct the situation.

Folksinger Lightfoot to appear at Arena

By Marilyn Scholdld

Contemporary balladeer Gordon Lightfoot will bring his folk-style melodies to the SU Arena 8 p.m. Friday, April 3.

In a career spanning ten years, the Canadian-born folksinger has come a long way from working the bar and coffeehouse circuit that launched his success. During the early part of the sixties, Lightfoot spent time in Los Angeles attending Westlake College of Music to study orchestration. Listen to Peter Seeger and to write songs he considered "unworthy of attention." With the help of Ian and Sylvia Tyson, who frequented Lightfoot's coffee-house performances, new artists are just a smattering of those works to be featured.

A display of the collection will allow visitors to examine at close range the various graphic techniques utilized by different artists.

A Roten representative will be on hand to answer questions about the prints and the artists. the Roten group includes graphics spanning six centuries. A print taken directly from the artist's original woodcut, engraving, etching, silk screen or lithograph is considered to be an original!

Nagrin prefers personal approach

By Deborah Singer  Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Daniel Nagrin explaining that his solo performances are neither theater or mime, but his own personal approach to dance.

Ask him, for instance, to verbalize the content or meaning of a particular dance, and he will reply that his movements speak for themselves. In a Conurbation program in Strycker Auditorium Wednesday night, Nagrin, his movements and his dances spoke a magnificence and impact.

By defying the traditional gap existing between audience and performer, Nagrin becomes more than merely an exciting dancer. He is rough, both in appearance and attitude, but his charm and tangible sensibility envelope Nagrin's audience, taking their intellectual and artistic sensitivity.

Opening with "Spanish Dance," a piece created in 1971, the focus was not on the choreography, but on the choreographer. Adapting his body to the last still poses and wheeling turns of a flamenco dancer, Nagrin becomes a moving sculpture. This dance, as well as his second piece also created in '71, "Strange Hero," are character studies involving much acting as dance.

In the second dance, Nagrin is a Bogart-like gangster with a cigarette dangling from his lip and an icy finger on the trigger of a gun. But for all their depth, the characters are subtly portrayed and the fine points of the dance remain intact.

"Indeterminate Figure," Nagrin's third dance, was created in 1973 and is very elaborate compared to the others. The dance combines the solitary images of Van Gogh with Nagrin's own personal characteristics. When he first created the dance, Nagrin explained that he performed it in a business suit but that he now performs it in a black Mao-style suit that is, "a business suit for ever half the population of the world."

The dance is about urban man, caught in his environment and nearly stifled by his fears and inability to cope with things like dripping faucets and squeaking floors. Except for some remarkable bits executed during this piece, the dancing was secondary to the meaning imbedded in this forceful performance.

The next three dances were drawn from a piece called "Spring 65," in which Nagrin first introduced his now standard informal stage presentation. Respectively titled "Path," "19 Upbeats" and "Sad Mot." and titled "But Him," the dances reflect Nagrin's ability to step outside the realm of theatrically and pantomime.

"Word Play," from Nagrin's celebrated "Pepolemian War" dance was Nagrin's next dance and he characterizes it as a cartoon. More similar to "Indeterminate Figure" than any of the other dances, Nagrin seems to have fun with this dance and so did the audience. When he "executed" his pre-recorded belch into the auditorium, everyone was laughing.

Closing the performance with an untitled work that he made in 1974, Nagrin underlines except for a dance bell, and any of the parody or mockery of his earlier dances was gone. No longer funny or forceful, Nagrin is simply himself. The movement seeming to stem from his strongly controlled abdomen is minimal, but his presence is powerful and the relaxed, reflective poses of the dance spoke volumes about Daniel Nagrin.

Nagrin will be conducting dance workshops through Friday at SIU. An Improvisational Workshop, open to members of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater and students enrolled in the dance program will be held in Purr Auditorium from 11 to 1 p.m. The class is open for observation to the public.
Special major program shapes personal needs

By Clifton Jackson
Student Writer

For students who find departmental majors inadequate for their needs, there exists an alternative program—the special major.

The program was designed to allow students to plan a major to fit their specific needs. Started in 1964, it was slow in picking up. Last year, however, as many students graduated than during the last six, according to John Dorson, director of presidential scholars.

A student who wants to design a special major should obtain an application from Dorson and a sponsor who agrees to advise the student and help guide him through the designed curriculum. Any faculty member can sponsor a student and he need not be from the department in which the student plans to receive his degree.

"Students should be advised to reach their own rationale because they're the ones who are going to have to live with it and look for a job with it. It's not an easy thing..." said Kenneth Serrfas, dean of University Programs.

Both Serrfas and Dorson agreed that the student should be persistent in obtaining their goals and should avoid changing their rationale.

"We encourage students to build flexibility into their programs and be willing to change their method to achieve their goals," said Dorson.

"We think students should investigate the courses they plan to take to the instructors, consult Mr. Dorson and, most importantly, talk to other students in the program," Serrfas said.

A recent survey was taken by Serrfas and Dorson of last year's graduates. Of 28 students contacted, 18 responded and all options were positive. Only two or three of the graduates were not working in the field in which they received their degree.

The special majors program has been an asset to the university because it allows the university to look at various curriculums and see what may be lacking for students, according to Serrfas.

"As the needs of people tend to expand and diversify, regular mechanisms can't keep up. Universities can't change fast enough because of money, restrictions and other factors. The special major is a continuing process that can satisfy these changing needs," he added.

Two Small Group buildings are being converted to offices

Construction workers have finished tearing out the oil furnace in building 101 of Small Group Housing. It was the latest step in the remodeling of buildings 101 and 106 into office space.

The buildings were built nearly 20 years ago as living space and require certain changes to become up-to-date office facilities.

Most of the work is putting in the business machines and separating the toilet facilities.

Conference on rural schools to be held at Student Center

A mini-conference on the problems and prospects of rural and small schools is scheduled to take place on April 24 and 25 at the Student Center.

Participating in the conference are the College of Education, the Department of Elementary Education, the Division of Continuing Education, Kappa Delta Pi and the Illinois Office of Education.

The featured speaker of the conference will be Lewis Tamblyn, executive secretary of the Rural Education Association and Tamblyn is being sponsored by the SIU Lecturers' Fund.

Tamblyn, who has authored books and articles on the rural and small schools, will deliver both the main address and a presentation on the problems and prospects of the rural and small schools. He will also meet in informal groups with rural educators to deal with their specific concerns.

Professor to lead discussion on bilingual conference play

James A. Kilker, associate professor of Foreign Languages at SIU, will lead a "Dialogue with Emmanuel Robles" at a Bilingual Conference of Writers Sunday at St. Louis University.

"De Deserete," a play by Robles, a writer of the Goncorde Academy, will be performed in French at 8 p.m. in the Knight Room of the university's library. After the performance, Kilker will discuss the play and interpret the comments of the author for non-French speaking members of the audience.

The dialogue will be followed by a brief recital and a party arranged by the Alliance Francaise and the Societe Francaise. Everyone attending will receive a French and English edition of "De Deserete" with an introductory essay by SIU alumna Marie J. Kilker.

The conference is sponsored by Francite, an organization which promotes Francophone activities which include a bilingual literary banquet of St. Louis departures from the university at 3 p.m.
Faculty Senate okays plan to enlarge advisory council

A permanent general studies advisory council council consisting of more faculty members has been approved by the Faculty Senate. One faculty member from each academic unit will serve on the proposed advisory council.

Two undergraduate students will be selected by the Student Senate and one graduate student assistant will be selected by the Graduate Student Council to serve on the advisory council.

The general studies Department is currently advised by an interim council, consisting of three faculty members and two undergraduate students.

Beg your pardon

One last time! We hope The Daily Egyptian's correction concerning student loan was still incorrect in saying that the interest on the $600 loan is 4.75% average per semester. Let's correct that.

Three percent of the $600 is subordinated to guarantee defaults, so the veteran only receives $587.25 average through his loan is charged on the full $600.

If you are still confused, Ron Dubbs or either of the VA representatives at the Veteran's Benefits Office can straighten things out. Again, our apologies.

Computer specialist sees global doom

By Kenneth Johnson
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Who-oosh.

A lot of people are going to die—maybe in a nuclear holocaust, almost certainly in the 1980s, perhaps because of energy shortages.

According to this pessimistic conclusion about the not-so-distant future, as expressed by computer specialist Dewanye Hendricks, it will "take a lot more" for populations to decrease to a number the earth will not be able to support. "Who-oosh..." begins. That's someone before the year 2,000 is said.

Looking at the panorama of civilizations they hope to judge, he predicts that much of the software in computer systems will be designed to predict the crisis, but his rate did not improve. He asked to have his money refunded, but was refused.

Beasley thinks the expense of the course makes it impractical for most college students. "Some of the techniques they teach are valid and useful, but most can be learned in one hour. After that, it's just a matter of practicing them," he said.

Twenty-four students enrolled in the Evelyn Wood course taught last semester by Nancy Thuray of St. Louis.

She said it is the student's effective reading rate that is guaranteed to increase threshold. The effective rate is the amount and comprehension factored together.

An average student will increase his effective speed seven to 10 times, said the teacher, and the material is usually an example. The course trains students to read with their hands and to digest groups of words in a single glance. Wood readers stop mentally pronouncing each word (sub-vocalizing), Thuray said.

"In class, we force students to read at very high speeds so the techniques will become a habit," she said. For their pleasure or text-book reading, students are helped to find a compromise between their best comprehension and highest speed.

Two students who took the course this semester were highly pleased with it. Patricia Miller, a senior in dietetics and textiles, said she proved her effective reading speed three times in the first week. "Everyone in the course met the guarantee the first week," she said.

Marilin Bradley, a graduate student in nutrition, said she had been drowning in her other reading before she took speed reading. Her comprehension did not keep up with her speed reading, but she expects it to improve.

Both women said the course has helped them to stop subvocalizing. "It's a habit which goes away when you force yourself to read rapidly," she explained.

Miller said most of the students and even the instructors agree that the price is too high for a seven-week course. However, what you get out of it in the long run is worth the money, Miller said.

Speed reading results controversial

By Tim Hastings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Many people who have taken speed reading say it is a valuable course. But their convictions are not unanimous.

Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics, a course offered this semester in Carbondale, guarantees that their graduates will increase their reading speed threshold during the seven-week course. diversified the course is $200 which includes all materials and a lifetime membership in the program.

Gerald Currada, a doctoral candidate in philosophy, has been teaching the speed reading course for two years in Carbondale. Approximately 200 people have taken the course during that time. Of those, only one person requested a refund, Currada said.

John Beasley, assistant professor of philosophy, said he has heard the course is "outdated". He said his reading rate did not increase when he took the Evelyn Wood course in St. Louis four years ago.

Beasley said he followed all the instructions and practiced at home, but his rate did not improve. He asked to have his money refunded, but was refused.

Beasley thinks the expense of the course makes it impractical for most college students. "Some of the techniques they teach are valid and useful, but most can be learned in one hour. After that, it's just a matter of practicing them," he said.

Saluki baseball in 59th year

By Jim Cothern Student Writer

Spring means baseball and SIU baseball usually means a do-thinkin', winning team. But, as the old sage says, "There was always dust." In the golden year of 1917, the relentless students of the lost generation SIN (for Normal) U showed a growing interest in baseball. The college "almost" had a baseball team as early as 1914, but it was not until three years later that the athletic department organized an intramural league. Following nine-time winning, the league operated under the stipulation that "at the end of one hour's playing time (the game) will be called, thus a premium will be placed upon keeping things moving, rather than killing a lot of time."

The intramural squad was fairly popular. But SINU, and the rest of the world for that matter, was caught up in the matters of World War I, so interest (and male students) faded for several years. New interest and a new team came in 1923. The SINU baseball team (it was unmanned) played such all-time greats as Benton and Herrin high schools and the Star Five Five's Commercial Club of the Brown Shoe Factory in Murphysboro. Newspaper coverage of the newly-organized sport in the Egyptian, then a weekly, was optimistic despite predictions: "Last week the SINU lost their first game of baseball since 1914. This was not because we had bad championship teams since then, but because it is the first nine we have had for that length of time."

"Sometime in May, 1923, even a simple rainfall was glorified by the Egyptian:" Jupiter Pipeline with its torrential spring rains has cheated the Normal baseball team. Also in May, 1923, an achievement of some sort was recorded: Paul Dunn was credited with hurling the team's first perfect, no-hit game when the other team failed to score."

With a total record of 20-6 for the season, coach William M. McAndrew (or football stadium fame), baseball once again faded into the lore of SINU. It was not until 1947, the year the Carnegie Express gave up being referred to as "Normal," that the tracks of college bats were heard once again in Southern Illinois.

Yes, they were heard in Southern Illinois, but not in Carbondale. Since the college had no playing ground to speak of, home games had to be played at Sportsman Park, north of Murphysboro. The new team, the Maroons, were matched by Gino "Ado" Martini (of baseball fame) and played a youth class bunch of teams—NIU, Arkansas-Rutgers, etc.—as well as professors. Big name on this pioneer 1947 team included Bill Boyer, "Box VW wins auto cross"

It wasn't the Daytona 500, but drivers put everything on the line last weekend at Waterville race track and several cars turned in impressive performances.

Cany raced in four classes—A, B, C and D—and the fastest time of the day was recorded by Dennis Vermilye of his Volkswagen in class C. The time was 52 minutes and 53 seconds. In second was Lee Johnson of Yoga, with a time of 1:03:06.

A Firebird driven by Bruce Dickrell placed first in class A. Dickrell's time was 1:08:07. John Simmons was second at 1:08:13. Robert Bates took first in class B in 1:08:25. Curt Mouer's Fiat rolled to first place honors in the fourth division, with a time of 59 minutes and 53 seconds.

There's an interesting story being told in high school and college basketball at the state level this year. Midnite Tokers 14-7, last year's state champions, did not make it to the state this year because their high school and college rules conflict. The same holds true for the Carbondale Chicks, a girls' basketball team which has not made it to the state in recent years.

Here's a basketball question for the fans of the girls' high school team (at least of the team that has made it to the state). The team, in the opinion of many, has a better overall record this year than the Carbondale Chicks, a team which has not made it to the state in recent years. The Chicks, according to many, have a better overall record this year. If the fans of the girls' high school team have read the Carbondale Chicks, a team which has not made it to the state in recent years.

What should you buy for tennis pleasure?

By James Gambach
Student Writer

If you want a play tennis on the University courts, you won't have to dress like Chris Evert or Jimmy Connors but you might want a good racket, some balls, some fake-soled tennis shoes and a partner who is worse than you at tennis.

With the increased popularity of tennis, more students are playing the game. For a beginner there are some essential pieces of equipment that he or she will need and others that are less necessary. The most important piece of equipment is the racket. They come in light, medium and heavy sizes. When the beginner is selecting a racket, he should get one that feels comfortable to him. “Most people tend to overweight themselves. They should start out with something they can handle,” added a racket instructor Larry Good.

Most advisors that of the SHU women’s tennis team, said, “Start off with a moderately priced racket, already strong. One that feels comfortable to you.”

If you buy an aluminum racket, make sure the strings are recessed into the head of the racket so you don’t break them if you scrape the racket on the ground, added. Said she didn’t like the aluminum racket because it can break as much as feel the wood racket has.

The beginner should probably choose the one that will be most durable and visible.

Bill Hancock of Bleyer’s Sport Mart said the tennis player should make sure the ball has a decent wrapper and nylon cover for durability and should avoid the yellow ball for visibility. “That’s the most important thing in most of the big tournaments,” Hancock said.

Shoes are of major importance to the beginning tennis player. Most of the courts indoors require flexible, tennis shoes to protect their surface. Hancock, on the other hand, prefers most tennis and basketball shoes for work.

If you finally bought yourself a good little tennis skirt with matching shoes and top, you may be disappointed to find that you don’t need them on the University’s courts. The courts are not tennis court require flexible, tennis shoes to protect their surface. Hancock, on the other hand, prefers the same kind of tennis outfit. In tennis clothes, the most important thing is freedom of movement,” Good said. “Most clubs have an aesthetic policy though.”

“Tend to think there might be some psychological advantage in the tennis outfit. ‘If you feel good and look good then maybe you will play good.’

But whether you have the outfit or not, as long as you have a racket, a ball and a partner, you can have fun playing tennis.

The women’s intramural badminton singles tournament last week at Davies Gym drew 10 women and nine men into the competition.

Arranged by the women’s intramural department, the tournament included doubles and singles for both men and women.

The most skilled edge Oran Otvam in three sets for the women’s title, while Claudia Blackman erad Janet Lesly in two sets for the completion.

In men’s competition, Michaela Boettcher defeated Richard Hoke and Roland in three sets for the championship. Richard Hoke defeated Bob Post in three sets for the consolation title.

Tracksters follow trend, head South

By Dave Wiesner
Bill Hancock

It’s that time of the year again. Just when spring is coming to the University, hundreds of kids go down to Florida.

Among those thousands will be the SHU tennis team, Sophomore Mark Leach and his track teammates, having just completed the indoor season -- on a new season-the outdoor one.

In Auburn, Ala., theSalukis ran numerous events. With the conclusion of that meet Monday night, Mark Leach will fly to Gainesville, Fla. to compete in one of the most respected events in the country. “They have a decent running team here. They have a good relay team, very good and pretty strong in the distance events,” having both said.

Mark Leach will compete in the mile run and will be much the same it was for the indoor season. Jack St. John will run in the three-mile run, and George Gower will double in the mile run and the 3,000 meter steeplechase.

Mark Leach will join by Gary Mandarino.

Sophomore Larry Mao and Junior Joe Laws will handle the 100-meter dash, with sophomore Dennis Kern and Pat Cook running in the half-mile.

Lennie Brown, Bill Hancock, George Hills, Wayne Carmody, Earl Bigelow and Scott Dorsey will handle the rest of the sprinting. Leach will come back to throw the javelin with fresh Robert Reggy and will also pole vault along with veteran Mark Leach.

Jack Warren will throw the shot put and discus.

Phil Romans, Ken Lorrnaway and Jack Warren will throw 220 yards and the javelin. Hancock and Kim Taylor will do the high jump.

March 29 and 30, SHU will be at the Florida Relays along with some 200 other athletes from across the country. The field of competitors includes track, field, and from high school to college graduates.

The Salukis competed in the relays last year and did fairly well, considering it was early in the outdoor season.

639 tops

A happy St. Patrick’s Day it was for bowler Pat O’Kelley, sitting in the dormitory room he shared with senior freshman, Gary Hunter. Jack Warren will throw the shot put and discus.

Doug Daggitt was the other big winner, taking the All-Events category with a 177 single-game score. The victory was his hat for Daggitt, who won the event.

Other winners in the tournament from left to right were: Dennis Giles and Barney Einer, fourth place doubles (135). Bob Haag, Gray Berry and Barney Einer taking fourth, fourth place doubles in the singles category, and Terry Haas and Derek Mischum, second place in the women’s doubles event.

Romar also took second place in the women’s singles event, with a 103 avroage.

SHU also came out on top in the All-Events, taking first in the team of Haagels, Einer, Berry, Carl Koons and Bob Blye.

The men’s team event was the team of Dave Kibbler, Mike Devlin, family shoes and a partner. You can have fun playing tennis.

Diamondmen forsake Florida for West

Imagine getting tired of visiting Florida three times a year. Actually, it wasn't boredom, but rather a chance for some new competition, which will be the Salukis' baseball team this spring instead of Spring Training.

The diamondmen took off for Tucson, Ariz., today, where they will open a nine-game road trip by hitting the University of Arizona.

The hosts, boasting a 19-2 mark already, could be an awesome force for the Salukis, who just have one game under their belts.

The key is incredible righthander Steve Powers, a pitcher with a 7-0 record and the designated hitter with a .517 average. To his credit were 20 RBIs in the team's first 18 games and a present 11-game hitting streak.

As a team, the Wildcats are averaging almost 11 runs per game and .351.

That helped them accumulate a 14-game win streak earlier in the season. The Salukis will battle Arizona Friday at 7:30 p.m. MDT and Saturday at 9:30 p.m. PDT. Then they will clash again Monday in Riverside, Calif., in the Meteor Man's home opener there.

After Arizona, the opposition, in order, will be Stanford, Santa Clara, California, University of San Diego, Southern California, Washington State and Cornell. The Salukis' first match March 29 winds up the trip, in preparation for the Salukis' home opener Tuesday, April 1, a doubleheader against Western (Minn.) State, starting at 1 p.m.

Saluki coach Itchy Jones is maintaining the same pitching plans he had for the scheduled home opener at Tulsa last weekend which were rained out.

Ron Hodges will start, and I'll let him pitch about three innings," he detailed earlier this week. "Then I'll bring in somebody else for three innings, and so on.

When the Salukis finally did get their season underway Wednesday at Murray State, Jones used two-inning pitching stints. Hodges started, followed by Tim Verpaele, Bill Dunning and Dewey Robinson.

Despite the lack of work, the rather unexacting mentor is not worrying.

"The weather hasn't bothered us," he said. "You can't blame the weather, because it's always like this.

"Work or no work under their belts, the hurlers may be in for a rough time at the outset, considering Arizona's competition.

"The Wildcats have another game scheduled between the first two Saluki ones—a Saturday afternoon battle against the Oakland A's in Mesa, Ariz.

The Salukis, who finished third in the College World Series a year ago after a 56-12 season, face a 52-game slate this year. However, the first four of those were washed out by the rains at the Tulsa Invitational last weekend.

In the Wednesday opener, Jones decided on a lineup of; Bert Newman, dh; Howie Mitchell, 3b; Steve Shorter, 2b; Frank Hunkeler, c; John Horschelt, cf; Phil Klimas, fb; Rich Murray, rf; Jim Locascio, lb; and Ken Wolf, cf.

He figures to go with much the same on the trip, with catcher Dan Herbst and firstbaseman Joe Hage and Dave Menfort also seeing considerable action. Newman could see some work in the infield, besides his regular designated hitter role.

"The only way to become successful is to work hard, unless you have a lot of talent," he said. In between stretches, "Talent can only get you so far, then you have to work hard.

"Robins sat on the green astroturf, jet in front of the sand pile where his future lies. He recalled some of the experiences he had at the 1976 Olympics last weekend.

"It really didn't bother me to compete against the 10 jumpers in the world. Some of them had jumped against me before, so I didn't feel much pressure.

"I didn't have pressure, just preparation. I was well prepared. It was my first attempt. I came away with a 26-foot-4 (7.98) jump, which tied for first at the NCAA. You get in it so much you just let yourself go, but you have to come down. I came down, but I still didn't do much."

I guess to Phil Robin, 53-foot-4 and earning All-America honors is not much, considering he and a lot of other people think Robin can be the best triple jumper in the world.

But with spring here to stay—hopefully—I seem to have given the engineering major new life. "I've been waiting to get outdoors," he grinned. "It hurt me inside because I knew I could do better than what I was. I never had any other option than to work out in the winter."

What he meant was, Siu has no indoor track, and no other option than to work out in the winter. He figures to go with much the same starting lineup.

"Then I'll bring in somebody else for three innings, and so on."

"Then I'll bring in somebody else for three innings, and so on.

"Physically I'm ready this year," he said, sounding like a warning to his opponents. "This year is going to be different because I'm mentally ready. Last year I was prepared physically, but not mentally. I know what to expect now."

What kind of future is there for a triple jumper who isn't expected to peak for a few more years—the olympics, Robin asks.

"I'm going to train for the olympics this year, not next year. I trained for the indoor season next year and I also want to go to the Pan American games this summer."

"He's not worried about being too old for such games. Robins is only 20 years old and he says, 'Most triple jumpers don't quit until they're 35 or 27, barring injury. I'm far from peaking.'"

The confidence Robins exudes will be hard for opponents to deal with. "I'm just going out there and try to be the one to beat."
