Jobs in Fair Area

Are Wanted Most

Summer vacation jobs in hotels, national parks and dude ranches, usually most sought after by college students, are playing second fiddle this year to work in the Eastern states which promise unemployment-free visits to the New York World's Fair.

Bruno Bierman, a supervisor in the Student

Work Office, said more than 38,000 job opportunities for summer work are posted in a special folder in the campus office.

These range from work in vegetable and fruit houses to guides at dude ranches in the vicinity of Yellowstone National Park.

"Few requests for worik at World's Fair booths were quickly snapped up," Bierman said. "There's also a noticeable increase in inquiries concerning camp counselor jobs in the New England states, within a short distance of the fair."

Students are invited to visit the Work Office and inspect the summer job listings.

Lunch Time on SIU Campus

The lunch hour at SIU provides a variety of photographic subjects, as these shots illustrate. SIU students, faculty and staff members eat lunch in a number of settings ranging from the atmosphere of the picnic, to a quick snack in a vacant classroom.

Four photographers roamed the campus to investigate the possibilities, and these two pages show some of their results. The four who took these pictures are Jay Dickinson, James Cash, P. Van Dinh, and George Cassidy.
Konrad’s Novels Investigated
For Signs of Political Theme

Some Persuasive Evidence

The Political Novels of Joseph Conrad is certainly one of the most thoroughly researched books which has ever been written on Conrad. In her Preface, Mrs. Hay apol­ogizes for not reading more Polish examples, that the economy of her imperfect knowledge of Polish and European history. This apology, however, seems falsely modest, for Mrs. Hay’s grasp of those details of Conrad’s fiction is indeed impressive.

The main interest of the book is the integrity and wide­ ranging character of the methods and the arguments which Mrs. Hay’s study is her trac­ ing of the historical origins of many of Conrad’s fictional characters, though she is not always successful in this. If the second and third parts of the book are a true representation of Conrad as a writer and as a man, there is no reason why the novels that Conrad wrote in the late 19th century, when he was able to write, should be deprived of him.

The final division of the book is devoted to “The Communist Era in China”. The author has not been able to give the book the full treatment it deserves, and there are several errors in the text. The book fails to depict the internal struggle of China, but the generally realistic account of the Chinese communist movement is valuable.

Cuban Rebels Report 6 Bridges Destroyed

MIAMI, Fla.--Anti-Castro commandos of a revolutionary group headed by ex-Detained Pigas invasion leader Manuel Artime were reported Tuesday by a high number of the organization to have blown up six bridges in Cuba.

The source, a member of Central Revolutionary Recovery Movement which last Wednesday raided an eastern Cuba sugar mill, said Artime would issue a communique later from somewhere in Central America.

The spokesmen said the commandos entered Cuba for the first time.

The spokesman said the bridges destroyed were over strategic spots, exiles said, and pointed to them.

Each destruction at strategic spots, exiles said, could hamstring heavy Castro troop and weapon movements which recently arrived exiles have told of seeing in Cuba's coastal and mountain areas.

The Associated Press reported Tuesday that the Johnson administration was not ruling out sending troops into Thailand as was done in a period of crisis in Laos two years ago.

State Dept. "Not Ruling Out" Use of Troops in Laos Crisis

WASHINGTON.--A spokesman of the State Department said Tuesday the United States is "not ruling out" any measures--possibly including military moves--which it may find necessary "to preserve the neutrality and independence of Laos."

The spokesman said the United States might send troops into Thailand as was done in a period of crisis in Laos two years ago.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said the latest report from the State Department was that Communist Pathet Lao attacks are continuing in the Plain of Jars against forces loyal to the neutralist government of Premier Souvanna Phouma.

Other officials said the attacks could result in destroying the neutrality forces under Gen. Kong Le and wrecking the whole internationally agreed neutralization program in Laos.
