Free trial use of Center set for two groups

By Cathy Seger
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Use of the Student Center by Student Government and the Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) will be free of charge on a trial basis starting fall quarter.

Clarence G. Dougherty, Center director, announced the change Monday, after a meeting Thursday with members of SGAC and student government.

Dougherty said the center will not have to pay room and equipment rental charges at the Center for an undetermined period. Labor charges to pay for operators of projectors, extinguishing candles, and special events will still have to be paid.

Dougherty said that if the program is satisfactory, it may be extended to cover other student groups wishing to use the Center. The director said the two organizations were excluded from the rental rates because their programming in the Center is usually designed for all students, not special groups.

"Our intention is to cause outstanding activities programs will be given to everyone," Dougherty said.

Dougherty said the costs of room and equipment rental for SGAC and Student Government will come out of the Student Center's operating budget.

"The costs are still there and will have to be paid," Dougherty said.

Dougherty said many student groups did not know that some rooms in the Center do not carry a rental fee. He said the activities rooms, areas equipped with tables and chairs on the second floor, are charged.

In 1970-71, student groups paid total charges of $14,174.82 for use of the various rooms in the Center. Other groups paid $11,340.58 of the Center's total income from charges of $22,464.

Six groups associated with Student Government Sales paid $11,340.58 of the $14,174.82 paid by all student groups.

The six groups include SGAC, Student Center Activities, Student Programming Committee and Student Center Educational Operations.

The latter account is administered by the Director of Student Activities and has in the past paid rental fees for student groups unable to do so on their own.

Board decides to let housing increases stand

By Curtland T. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In accordance with President Nixon's order on wage-price freezes, University-owned housing rate increases will not be effective until September 1972 according to T. Richard Mager, SIU legal counsel.

The Executive Order states that if such order were to be effective before the order has already taken place, the price freeze doesn't affect us.

Samuel Rinella, director of Housing Business Service, said that as of Aug. 18, 455 apartments for off-campus housing were offered and all but 410 have been signed and the money remitted to SIU.

This means that over 80 per cent of the housing contracts had been paid by then.

At the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday, Mager told the board to be a "substantial amount of transactions."

At it's February meeting, the Board agreed to raise the housing prices for single undergraduate on campus from $347 to $375 a quarter. Small Group Housing was increased from $175 to $180 a month. University Court space rentals were increased from $28 to $33 a month.

Mager said the Board action was both legal and in accordance with Nixon's order.

U-Senate to get veto override

By Dale McConaughay
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Chancellor Robert G. Laverannounced Monday evening that he has filed a formal action upon taking over the presidency on Sept. 1. He would like to recapture the present campus governance system, including the University Senate's power to override a presidential veto.

Laverannounced that the Senate will not approve any campus governance system which a chief administrator's veto could be overridden.

However, Laverannounced Monday that the Senate has since determined that the veto decision was a "presidential matter" rather than something to be decided by the Board.

Laverannounced that the Senate's recognition of the president as the "chief university officer" means that future presidents will have to make a decision whether or not to request the overriding veto power.

"I believe this is an important point for the presidential selection committee to consider," Laverannounced U-Senate members.

Randall Nelson, professor of government, agreed members of the Senate that overriding a veto would seem to register a "vote of confidence" for or against the president.

For this reason, Nelson said the power should be used cautiously since it might result in a president's resignation.

A resolution stated that it considers the American role in the continuation of the Indo-Chinese War as abhorrent and reprehensible.

That it urges an immediate termination of the American involvement in that war and with the Saigon government.

"Calls for the most expeditious American withdrawal of American armed, material and men from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

"And finally that our Illinois representatives in the state and federal legislatures be notified of this resolution.

Various members of the U-Senate debated whether or not the U-Senate should take political stand on issues outside their governance.

Faculty Senate members Nelson, John Baker and David Kennedy as well as Chancellor Laverannounced indicated that they personally sympathized with the resolution, but they would not support it since they considered it beyond the responsibilities delegated to the U-Senate.

Murray Mann, a member of the U-Senate's student constituency said he felt universities suffer from wars both academically and economically.

Tuition refunds cause problems

By Sue Ball
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees' action to end tuition refunds created initial problems for SIU administrators whose most now devise a plan for handling tuition at reduced rates and processing refunds to students who had already paid.

"Right now we are trying to find out how to do this legally and with as much dispatch as possible," said Chancellor Robert L. Laver.

In lieu of payment being accepted at the Bursar's Office until Wednesday, according to Robert E. Brewer, assistant to the bursar.

A letter will be sent to students informing of the adjustment of their tuition rate, he said.

The previous deadline for fall quarter tuition payment of Sept. 1 may be extended.

Brewer said that some 18,000 to 12,000 computer cards for students who had paid will be processed incorporating the revised tuition rates.

Tuition will be collected at the rate of $85 for spring semester and $61.50 for summer semester for Illinois residents and $151 for out-of-state students carrying a full academic load.

T. Richard Mager, SIU legal counsel said a joint meeting was planned with the Edwardsville campus to work out a unified policy for tuition collection and refunds. He said it would probably be two or three days before a system is established.

Shootout trial in third week as house owner testifies

By Pam Silco
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The trial of three defendants charged in the Nov. 12 shootout in Carmelville entered its third week Monday with testimony from three police officers and the owner of the house.

The defendants are Milton Boyd, St. Charles, and James E. Holley, Jr., both of Carmelville. They are each charged with seven counts of attempted murder, one count of attempted assault, one count of theft action and one count of causing damage to property.

Carmelville Police Lt. Larry McKinney testified that he had been assigned to take pictures of the house at 48 N. Washington St. to record evidence taken from it.

He said he was the first person to enter the house after the suspects had come out. He said he went up the stairs to determine the source of a noise that he later learned was a record player that had been left on.

Under questioning from State's Attorney Richard R. Richman, McKinney said he left the house in the same condition when he took the pictures at about 11 a.m. as it was when he entered to investigate the noise shortly after the incident occurred.

Later, under cross examination by defense attorney Jeffrey Hao, he said that he had been unable to see parts of the upstairs rooms during his first examination. He also said he did not know what the police and squad had done during the 30 seconds they were upstairs before he entered the house for the second time.

McKinney said he took the pictures before "heavy searching" was done in the house, but that "light searching" could have been done during the 30-second interval.

Richman introduced five of McKinney's pictures as people's exhibits. In explanations of several of them, McKinney described concrete and wooden "fortifications" located under the windows of the bedrooms.

Roy Clark, assistant professor of speech at SIU and owner of the house, said the rent on the second floor apartment — where the shooting was concentrated — was paid by defendant Leonard Thomas.

Clark said he had seen the other defendants at the house but did not know if they were also living there.

Under the rent terms with Thomas, Clark said, other people could move into the apartment as long as the rent was paid, the property kept up and they did not turn the place into a "commune."

He said Thomas had been a good tenant.

Two Carmelville police officers, William Allen and Clarence Johnston, testified during the morning session. Allen's testimony closely matched that of other officers who have been witnesses.

Johnson, who was the officer in charge during the first part of the shooting, said he requested fire from an officer carrying an automatic Smith and Wesson 78 so he could move behind the neighboring house.

He said he fired two .38 gas canisters into the house at 80 N. Washington St.

Under questioning by defense attorney Michael Deutche, Johnson said he failed to write a report after the incident.

Nineteen witnesses have already testified for the state. The defense will begin its case after the state rests.

The presiding judge, Everett Proctor, recessed the proceedings until 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Eckert unhappy with Board’s action on joint committee

By Dale McConehouy

The Board of Trustees Friday in-structed Chancellor Robert G. Layer to name an administrative committee to serve as the joint com-mittee—however, the Board’s action has not satisfied Mayor Neil Eckert. Eckert said Saturday the city felt slighted by the Board’s decision since the city-university relation-ship committee would not be on the Board level and therefore would lack power to make policies.

A City Council committee has been established to deal with a similar Board committee concerning city-university problems. Eckert explained that such a com-mittee, if formed with the power to make policies, could have resolved problems concerning annexation or water-rate increases.

Eckert said the matter will be discussed at Tuesday’s Council meeting. “We’ll have to decide whether to repeal our resolution or let it stand as it now exists,” Eckert said.

Unions may continue decal protest

By John B. Trow

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Although SIU parking decal prices have been lowered, local union members, concerned that protest meetings may continue and planning committees are continuing to meet.

Herbert Dowse, representing the Carbondale Federation of Univer-sity Teachers and the union mem-ber contractors, told a pickle price of the Traffic and Parking Board were accepted Wednesday.

Chancellor Robert G. Layer, in a letter to “all persons eligible to pur-chase parking decals,” stated that the prices were being reduced due to financial hardships caused by the city and the SIU’s current wage and price freeze.

Dowse said he doesn’t think the price reduction had anything to do with the price-wage freeze.

Mrs. McGovern campaigns for her husband

CHICAGO (AP) — The wife of presidential hopeful Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., said Monday that as a senator, she would vote for the peace and black children in the war and desegregation.

Mrs. Eleanor McGovern told the 16th annual convocation of the American Academy of Medical Ad-ministrators that “the damage done by extreme poverty or illness has a lasting impression on a child’s later life.”

Patriotic prices?

To the Daily Egyptian

In light of President Morris’s economic message, the following thoughts occur to me:

1) Will the landlords of the Carbondale area, who I am sure are patriotic individuals, abide by the President’s policy of a 30-day rent freeze at present levels, or will they augment inflation by raising rents?

2) Will the University, as a landlord, continue to set a bad example by considering itself unaffected by the ban?

To quote from the President’s order: “Each person engaged in the business of selling or providing commodities, which services shall maintain available for public inspection a record of the highest prices or rents charged for such or similar commodities or services during the 30-day period ending August 14, 1977. Thus, it is perhaps fortunate for the student that the rent freeze was imposed while summer rates were in force, since the ban would seem to keep the Full quarter, at least, under the summer rent schedule. Like contracts for wage increases which, though already signed, will not go into force until the ban is lifted, housing contracts which call for rent increases over the rates charged during the 30-day period ending August 14, 1977 should be forced to remain at present summer levels during the period of the ban.

I am sure that every American worthy of being called such will do everything in his or her power to assuage the President’s attack on runaway inflation which is currently plaguing our great country.

‘Tar and feather’ time

To the Daily Egyptian:

In a few more days, Dr. Morris will be leaving our campus for his last time as President of this great university, which he has built in the past 21 years.

In the past 50 years, L. Clyde Morgan, have compiled a list of names. Like everyone else who has a list, my first list has the names of Charles A. Lindberg, Abe Lincoln, General Eisenhower, John Kennedy and Neil Armstrong. Now I am adding another great man – President D.W. Morris of SIU.

On the second list, I have the other people – Benito Musolino, Tejo, Adolph Hitler and Fidel Castro. To this list I want to add Clyde Chaote of Anna. He is the only person who managed to get us all out of work and got President Morris removed – and never mentioned his own friend who more than passed the shoe box fortune. On this he kept his mouth shut, and I wonder why.

COVID budgets are cut, hundreds of people are at home, laid off from work. So come next election, everybody should remember Clyde Chaote of Anna. Say it loud and feathery for next time runs for office.

Now that our three astronauts are safely home to the hero’s welcome they so richly deserve, plans are already underway for the final two moon missions next year.

Never has our entire multi-billion-dollar space program faced a tougher challenge.

Most of the burden, of course, falls on the shoulders of Maestro Feliu Hitchcock. NASA’s bravura, if unheralded, Scenario Director.

No sooner had Apollo 15 successfully splashed down in the Pacific, than the Maestro held the first planning session with his team of experts on the scheduled flight of Apollo 16 next March.

Scene: The Creativity Room at NASA. The staff is reviewing the rushes of Apollo 15. Hitchcock, wearing riding breeches and a cap and carrying a megaphone, finally cries, “Cut!” The lights come up and the staff breaks into spontaneous applause.

Aide No. 1 A superb production, Maestro. Your newest masterpiece yet. From the working panel light in the beginning to the failure of one of the three parachutes at the end the suspense was breathtaking and the pace flawless.

Aide No. 2 And you captured 78 per cent more of the viewing audience than had been projected. A triumph, Maestro.

The Maestro (modestly) I would like to thank all those who made this possible, including our three brave astronauts. But, of course, it was my concept of the moon buggy that did it. Knowing Americans love of automobiles and their penchant for gadgets, what better device to capture their imagination?

Carruthers (a young idealist new to the staff) You’re nothing but a bunch of cynical crooks! You not only bullied the American taxpayers out of half a billion dollars for a bunch of old rocks, but you cleverly made them enjoy being had.

The Maestro (sorrowing) That’ll be enough. Carruthers! The public wasn’t bullied. That half billion provided thousands of jobs in the flagging aerospace industry, a wealth of scientific data and, most important, a feeling for the common goals of the human race. It’s a small price to pay for a chance for eventual peace.

Carruthers: I... I hadn’t thought of that way, sir. I’m sorry.

The Maestro But you’re right about one thing. The public will pay only if it’s adequately entertained.

That’s the reason we have all that live television from the moon. But Apollo 16 is going to be a tough act to follow. Any ideas gentlemen?

Aide No. 1 I’ve got a great opener, Maestro. Instead of working lights, let’s use a persistent alarm bell in the space craft. It grows louder and louder. Then zap! and unexplained radio silence.

Aide No. 2 (excitedly) And for a closer, they get lost, see? And splash down in the Capital Reflecting Pool.

The Maestro (nodding) Fine. Fine. But what can they possibly do on the moon? They’ve walked, jumped, played golf, ridden in a buggy. We need something to capture the younger viewers.

Carruthers I know! They hop on these red-white-and-blue motorcycles. You know, just like in Easy Rider.

The Maestro (clapping Carruthers on the back) That’s the best idea I ever had, son! Gentlemen, I think we have just saved the human race.

“Caught him trying to sneak into his neighborhood school.”

Symposium presents intriguing questions:

Reviewed by Charles C. Clayton

In the nearly four centuries since “Columbus sailed the ocean blue” through the Hawaiian channel on his way to the east coast of Asia, men have speculated about the origin of the peoples and the culture of the Hawaiian world. If the Polynesians had come by way to North and South America by way of Alaska or by crude boats across the Pacific? Did the cultures the explorers who followed Columbus found in North and South America develop independently, or were they borrowed from Asia and Europe?

The questions are intriguing, and as the papers of the specialists presented in this symposium emphasize, the answers are inconclusive. The editors point out that at best the papers presented at the national meeting of the Society for American Archaeology represent guidelines for future study rather than answers.

This book has a special interest in Southern Illinois. It presents the contents of the symposium in 1968 at San Pe, N. Mex., as all on the Faculty of Southern Illinois University. Carroll L. Riley is professor of anthropology and curator of anthropology at the University Museum. J. Charles Kelley, former director of the museum, is professor of anthropology and coordinator of research for the museum. Campbell W. Pennington is professor of geography and Robert L. Rands is professor of anthropology and museum curator of Mesoamerican archaeology.

The preface acknowledges the “generous help” of former chancellor Robert W. MacVicar; Dr. William Simeone, former dean of the Graduate School; Dr. Roger E. Body, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences; Dr. Ronald G. Hansen, associate dean of the Graduate School for research and projects; Dr. Charles H. Lane, chairman of the anthropology department, and Dr. Frank H. Thomas, chairman of the geography department.

There are 21 papers presented in this symposium. They discuss various approaches to the problem, review the evidence gathered thus far and suggest possible conclusions to be deduced. The editors provide an interesting introduction to the field and a concluding chapter evaluating the conjectures and theories of the contributors and suggesting possibilities for additional research.

For those interested in scientific detective methods the papers provide intriguing source material. Similarities in language, introduction of new crops, such as maize and sweet potatoes, the migration of parasites and diseases across the continents, such as the introduction of syphilis to Europe by Columbus’ sailors, are some of the clues.

The editors believe that “we must involve several disciplines—anthropology, botany, geography, history, and certainly paleontology and zoology—to unravel the mystery. Specifically, they warn against ‘ideas becoming so imbedded that they are accepted as gospel without check or challenge’.

For the layman who has been intrigued by the mystery of Mesoamerica, the symposium’s title, the title of the symposium, the title of the book itself, the title of the entire series of lectures and papers offers a convenient guide to the work of the symposium.

Montgomery’s “strategy”

Reviewed by Harrison Youngren

For history buffs who are hooked on World War II. and who are already well-stepped in the conflicting claims recorded by individual Allied Commanders. Thompson has produced a useful and illuminating volume. For the casual reader who has not yet absorbed Field Marshal Montgomery’s version of “strategy as it should have been,” and the counter-claims of those devoted to the more simplistic goals of the United States Command, is to bring about a swift conclusion as related by Generals Eisenhower and Bradley. This volume might lack perspective.

Thompson has related the facts with accuracy and comprehension. Throughout the volume Thompson acknowledges Montgomery’s obvious shortcomings of pompous arrogance and inflexible deliberation as he provides an apology for Monty’s impatience with a faulty command structure and with American failure to support British political dreams.

An undeniably, albeit unconscious, current of British thought comes to the surface best described as “You Americans must provide men and material while we, the experienced rulers of global empire provide direction and control.” Frustrations on the part of British policy makers. writing on outrage, appear to stem from the refusal of naive America to pull United Kingdom chests from the fire, from the failure of the Americans to support UK dreams of hegemony over Northern Europe.

Thompson ignores the partial vindication of the American view expressed by the British workingman who blamed Churchill and the Tories for inspiring leadership in war but, elected the man Win- nos; Britain as “that sheep in sheep’s clothing.” Clement Atlee, to guide them back to a peace time economy and a settlement of overseas frictions with India and other imperial outputs.

Thompson is a meticulous worker and a scholar. This volume will add an outstanding ceremony that threatened the fragile tissue of the Allied High Command during those crucial closing weeks of the war in Europe.

Facts and quotes are well documented. An index and an introduction are especially valuable for students of this troubled time.

Collection title describes Beloff

Reviewed by Charles C. Clayton

The title of this collection of essays and lectures aptly describes the author. Max Beloff is a Fellow of All Souls College and professor of government and public administration at the University of Oxford. He is also a prolific writer and his works range from a study of Seventeenth Century politics to the trilogy he is now writing on the decline and fall of the British Empire. The first volume, “Imperial Sunset”, was published in 1969.

There are 28 essays, lectures and speeches in this collection. Some have been published in learned journals. Others have been printed in pamphlets. The opening piece from which the collection takes its title, is a discerning tribute to Ramsay Muir, who served briefly as Prime Minister in England before the turn of the century and who was recognized as one of the leaders of the Liberal Party. Three of the four selections on liberalism were lectures. On this side of the Atlantic the most interesting perhaps is his historical overview of the problems of prime ministers and presidents in modern society.

In the next eight pieces, the author examines the problems of governing England. These essays have a familiar ring, for the complexities of government are essentially the same in England and in the United States. There are five essays on European affairs, ranging from a review of the Anglo-Russian entente prior to 1914 to an intriguing discussion of the “Anglo-American Myth.”

Readers in America will find his pieces on the Soviet Union and the background of what he describes as the “Jewish predilection” of special interest. There are as well essays on the apartheid policy in Africa and the problems of India. It is difficult in a review to do justice to Professor Beloff’s penetrating comments on men and events as seen through the eyes of a liberal. He is a debunker at heart and even Winston Churchill does not escape his caustic pen.

The final essay discusses his current project. He describes it this way: “The problem I am trying to tackle is one that stales all of us in the face. Within the space of a single lifetime Britain has been transformed from being the center and powerhouse of a world empire into an unsuccessful candidate for admission to an embryonic federalism of Western Europe.” This was written before the current developments that new promise to admit England to the European Common Market, but the problems he poses is significant. Readers on both sides of the Atlantic will look forward to the two remaining volumes of his trilogy.

Much of the delight in reading this collection is the author’s lucid and sometimes humorous style. In a period when the conservatives seem to rule the roost, both in the United States and in Great Britain, he presents a convincing case for the proper role of the intellectual in politics.
Blood tests set for Northeast children

By John D. Snow
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A blood poisoning and sickle cell screening program to test children 1 to 6 years old, will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 11-12 at the Indiana University Multi-Purpose Service Center, 611 E. Main St., Decatur.

Crime said at least 250 children have been selected to be tested. He said home health aids and family service coordinators chose the children by visiting their homes and setting up the program.

"We want any parent who wants to have their children tested, we chose 250 children so that we could get a blood sample of children on the Northeast side," Crime said.

Crime said all of the workers in the program should be working free, including the doctors, because "we don't have any money for the program." He said the program is in need of volunteers from IU to help those two days, handling such duties as helping to hold the children when blood tests are given and issuing lollipops and balloons.

BSU plans special meeting

The Black Students Union (BSU) will hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Black Students Audiology. The meeting is open to the public and families of black graduating seniors.

"We are asking all persons interested in planning and organizing the event to meet with us whether or not they are graduating this quarter," May said.

He said the BSU hosted a reception in June when about 26 blacks were graduated. "We think we will have more students graduating this quarter and we would like to again have the tradition show, music and dinner," he continued.

May said the response from the parents in June was overwhelming.

"The BSU began holding receptions because we felt the need for some other type of social gathering, especially after already being a minority within a minority," May continued.

He said the BSU would like to have the receptions become annual events.

Tentatively scheduled, the reception will be held from 2:30-5 p.m. Sept. 3 in the Student Center Ballroom B.

QUEST scans effects of educational policies

By Ed Donnelly

A student group called Quality Education for Students Today (QUEST) has been organized to investigate and propose alternative policies to present SIU policies which detract from the educational experience of all students, according to Wayne Wohlfert, chairman.

"QUEST will serve to educate the student body in regard to present SIU policies by publicizing university attitudes and practices which help or harm them," Wohlfert, a junior majoring in government, said. He said QUEST's membership is about a half-dozen.

As stated in its constitution, "QUEST will lobby for smaller classes with more faculty that will teach more and favor the more lucrative ventures of publishing and research."

"Fall quarter we plan to publish a student handbook, sponsor rap sessions and investigate the faculty-student relationship at SIU," Wohlfert, an Evansville native said.

The student handbook will be modeled after something students have seen at other institutions where they feel the university orientation provides for freshmen and transfer students, according to Wohlfert.

Rap sessions will be concerned with initiating student participation in the decision-making process of the University by discussing the policies and procedures practiced by SIU's educational system, Wohlfert said.

"The educational system at SIU is geared to provide graduate assistantships and to acquire status and prestige through publishing and research."

"Consequently the students, as paying customers, are cheated and used for the prestige," Wohlfert said.

According to Wohlfert, QUEST hopes to serve as a medium in which it considers a decaying system by injecting recommendations on university reforms into the policy-making process.

"We have organized to acquire the same benefits sought by faculty and graduate students unless other groups can find alternative means to satisfy student needs," Wohlfert said.

For girls
'Dracula' provided suspense, drama

By Cecily Grand
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If you get chilly from the thought of a snowstorm, the sight of igloos popping up in the night, the SIU Men's basketball team playing, or the sound of a piano, "Dracula" was the thing to see last night.

The story line of Count Dracula, a blood-sucking vampire, is so well known that it has been mentioned in his familiarity. "It's a monster, a horror, a story that has been told so many times and in so many variations that the audience was even a bit bored with it."

J. Harold McDonald's direction and a fine cast of actors made "Dracula" a success and an entertaining evening. In contemporary terms, "Dracula" is a punk, but a fun punk. Lighting and sound effects and several tricks, such as Dracula's disappearance from the stage when he is in addition to the many tricks Dar- en R. Payne's set design was effectively adding to the representation of a spooky and eerie setting.

Daniel Crane was alternately quack and ghoulish in the role of Count Dracula, a visiting vaegue from Transylvania who is after the daughter of the doctor who runs the laboratory. Blake never lost his character, even when he tripped during one of his entrances.

SIU takes part

in forestry work

Three SIU students are among 16 high school and college students taking part this summer in a work-training program in Shaver National Forest.

The three from SUI are Terry Chase of Grantsburg, Ill., Stephen M. Jones of Centralia and James W. Dwyer of Springfield.

The program consists of involvement in nearly all phases of national forest management. It gives students the opportunity to further their careers interests and gain practical experience in their chosen fields.

He will address the People and Food, a World Problem. The dinner is the Milton annual conference, which began Sunday, to continue through Wednesday. Some 200 Illinois and Canada have registered, according to Steve Petters, executive con-

'retire' druggist

DENVER (CBS) -- After being held up by his gun-toting neighbor to have his plain glass windows replaced to prevent another attempted break-in, Joseph Eisenberg, a druggist, is about to retire.

"I've reached the point of no return," he said. He was returning a swollen left eye, an injury received when he was squashed with disabling chemicals in the most recent hold-up attempt.

Trustees mark policies on budget, admissions

By Fred Brown
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Here is a summary of the major actions taken by the Board of Trustees at its meeting Friday:

Tuition increase—the Board increased the full tuition increase, in response to President Nixon's wage and price freeze. Tuition will be charged at the spring quarter rate. Refunds will be given to students who have already paid the increased tuition, which was due Sept. 1.

Budget—the Board approved a preliminary segment of ERT for 1978-79 operating budget. A total of $6,463,531 was approved for both campuses. Carbondale gets $6,360,975. The remaining $6,641,357 goes to Edwardsville. Top priorities for Carbondale were the School of Medicine, proposed School of Law and the proposed Center of Human Resources Development.

Fee changes—the Board deferred action on a change in student fees, stadium development and rental rates for some University-owned apartments.

Only 28 per cent of student government's activity fee requests have been approved. More information was requested from other student groups seeking Board funds.

Norm development and fee changes were withdrawn for further study and consideration. The Board will again examine the matter at its September meeting.

Car regulations—new regulations lessen the University's power to regulate vehicles in Carbondale. Now, SIU will regulate only on-campus operation of motor vehicles. Off-campus operation of automobiles will not be regulated by the University.

Pollution—a $25,000 pilot project was approved to fund ways of reducing pollution from the Physical Plant smokestack which now produces emissions that violate Illinois pollution standards.

If a workable solution can be found, SIU will apply for a grant from the Federal Environmental Protection Agency to fund the work.

Admission policies—tightened admission policies will go into effect next summer affecting transfer students and low-ranking high school graduates. The minimum class rank for summer for conditional students will be 11 hours, rather than the present eight.

Admission standards at VIT will be raised slightly.

Group housing—Students who want group housing arrangements, such as fraternities, will no longer have to get special permission.

Since the Board last February removed all housing restrictions for students 21 or over, the Board passed the group regulation Friday.

Official housing—the Board passed its action in providing a University-owned house for James Brown, chief of Board Staff. Its statement, said providing a house is standard practice and a necessity in recruiting high quality administrators.

New degree—a new degree in classical studies was authorized to replace the Latin bacalauréate degree. The new degree, offered in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, will be open to students who want a degree in philosophy, history, anthropology, art and government.

Grassroots seeking staff workers

By Dale M. Combs
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Students interested in editorial positions on the staff of Grassroots magazine for 1971-72 should apply before 5 p.m. Aug. 30, according to Lyman Baker, faculty advisor to the magazine.

Baker said a selection committee will interview candidates for some student positions submitted applications. The selection committee is looking for persons to fill the positions of executive, art and a sales editor.

The executive editor, according to Baker, will have final authority for selection of poetry, fiction and articles manuscripts used in the publication. The art editor should have experience in graphics and magazine design. While the Sadkin board is seeking a sales editor with sales work experience.

The art and art editors will receive approved student wages working 20 hours each week and the sales editor will receive the same wage rate for 10 hours each week.

Applicants should submit a brief vita to Rhonda Starnes, Student Government secretary, at the Student Activities Office on the second floor of the Student Center.

Two-segment committee consists of Baker, Richard Meyers, outgoing executive editor Tom Bunch, fiscal advisor, and three faculty members appointed by George Camille, student body president.

Grassroots, a student creative magazine at SIU, annually publishes one to three issues of student poetry, fiction, essays, drawings, and photography. According to Baker, the first issue for 1971-72 will go on sale Sept. 21.

In addition to the publication the Grassroots staff has sponsored the Grassroots Film Festival and Grassroots Writers Platform the past two years.

Contaminated soup detected at Campbell

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Agriculture said Tuesday that one jar of tomato soup was in the plant when the Campbell Soup Company pulled chicken vegetable soup contaminated with botulism from the market.

It was the second time in two months that production facilities regularly monitored by USDA had produced soup tainted with the deadly toxin, although the department had no direct responsibility for the product involved in the first instance.

One agriculture official said it is too early to speculate on the implications of the two incidents for USDA inspection programs. "We're going to take a look at this," said Richard E. Lingle, assistant secretary for marketing and consumer services.

Campbell disclosed Sunday it had discovered botulism toxin in 300,000 cases of chicken vegetable soup packed at its Paris, Tex., plant on July 15, and had recalled the cases. Spokesmen at Campbell's Camden, N.J., headquarters said the cause hasn't been determined, but the manager of the Paris plant said undercooking was a prime suspect.

The Food and Drug Administration determined that undercooking was the cause of the botulism toxin contamination of a supply of vegetables packaged by Bon Vivant of Newark, N.J., on May 21. A New York man who ate a can of Bon Vivant soup died June 30.

Salukis kick off grid workouts on Friday

SIU head football coach Dick Towers figures his team will have a fast idea of what to expect from the Salukis after the first week of "two days down," two-day workouts slated to begin Friday.

Thirty-one lettermen, including 15 starters from last year's 4-6 team, will take the field and get their first taste of what's to come.

"Conditioning, evaluation of our personnel and setting our lineups," said Towers, "will be our primary concerns.

"Most important is the setting of our lineup. The quicker we can get that in place, the sooner I can relax," he said.

Towers actually will get his first look at the 81-man Salukis squad Thursday, SIU's Football Media Day, which kicks off at 10 a.m. From 20 to 30 photographers and writers are expected to get their first look at the 1975 SIU squad.

"After our first week of practice we would like to be finished with all lineup adjustments," he said. "Then we could devote our workouts to preparation for the season opener with Dayton.

Saluki's first two foes are both road games—Dayton and Illinois State. Both opponents possess awesome running attacks which add to Towers' woes since his number one problem area is the defensive line.

Only one part-time regular from the defensive front returns.

"We need to get something stabilized in this area in a hurry," Towers said.

The Saluki staff is considering moving 6-3, 240-pound lip Antone from offense to shore up Southern's defensive tackle worries.
