Traffic group recommends code change

By Rich Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Traffic and Parking Advisory Committee on Thursday recommended that sophomore students—those with 42 or more hours—be allowed to register and operate motor vehicles.

The recommendation for a liberalization of the general Student Vehicle Regulations is part of the committee’s report to Chancellor Robert G. Layser for 1971-72. The committee Thursday also recommended restricting overnight parking on campus and reaffirmed an earlier position to recommend substantially lower parking decal prices for 1971-72.

The move to allow recommending sophomore students the use of cars was done in part to erase an inconsistency in the committee’s report.

Early in May the committee had voted to recommend lowering the parking decal price from $35 to $30 for blue decals and from $35 to $10 for silver decals, with all members of the University community eligible to apply for a red decal. Thus, in effect, was a recommendation to eliminate vehicle restrictions on freshmen and sophomore students.

In later meetings, however, the committee, on three successive occasions, defeated motions to change a section of the regulations which forbids freshmen and sophomore students from registering motor vehicles. Current policy is to let graduate students, juniors and seniors and the following categories of students have cars: students who are either 21 years of age, married, veterans with two years military service, who reside with a parent or guardian, have a physical impairment, need a car for employment purposes or have special permission from the appropriate University official.

Thursday’s action amended this section of the regulations to require a student to have 42 or more hours before he can apply for permission to use, operate or possess a motor vehicle. The committee recommended that the amendment to decal prices would apparently be changed to reflect this change.

The move to let sophomore students have cars was described in the meeting as being for “transition” purposes. The committee wants to see what effect letting sophomores have cars will have on the University and the city of Carbondale.

There are approximately 5,500 sophomore students enrolled at SIU. With figures indicating how many sophomores have cars registered with the University under the “special circumstances” regulation, it is known that out of approximately 11,000 freshmen and sophomore students, 1,904 have cars registered.

Committee chairman Melvin Brooks, associate professor of sociology, said at Thursday’s meeting that the problem facing the campus was the effect of lowering the decal prices, thus encouraging more people to buy decals, and how the regulations at the same time would have on the University and the city.

Figures released at the meeting by the Office of General Solutions indicate that at least 1,000 freshmen and sophomores have unregistered cars. One recent report from the student relations office said the number of these students was increasing and that are unknown “may be in the hundreds or the thousands.”

The committee defeated a motion to charge a $80 fee for the overnight parking decal but said that the decal should be free to the residents of the campus.

The committee’s report is now being finalized and will be sent to Layser at a later date. It may approve all or part of the report, change it, or reject it.

Board plans May meeting for Friday

University House annexation and the first appearance of the Illinois Superintendent of Public Instruction are on the agenda of the May meeting of the Board of Trustees Friday in Edwardsville.

The Board is expected to transfer control of the controversial million dollar residence on President Emeritus Beyle W. Morris to the jurisdiction of Carbondale campus administration. The house will probably be converted into a conference center.

The Board will hear a proposal to Carbondale city officials to allow the city to annex a portion of the campus. Chancellor Robert G. Layser has recommended that the city be allowed to annex that part of the campus east of the Illinois Central Railroad tracks. The city will argue for the right to annex the campus west of U S 51. The city feels that the additional land will allow the city more flexibility in developing the area south of the campus. The Board denied a similar request in 1969.

Michael Bakalis, superintendent of Public Instruction, will attend his first Board meeting since being elected last November. Bakalis, who is an ex-officio member of the Board, has sent aides to all meetings since his election.

The Board will consider preliminary operating budget reports for the 1971-72 academic year, a capital projects program and administrative changes and a report from Edwardsville Chancellor John S. Rendleman on the Mississippi River Festival.

The meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the International Room at the University Center on the Edwardsville campus.

Senate approves fee proposal

By Chuck Hatchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Student Senate Wednesday night approved Chancellor Robert G. Layser’s proposed fee structure with several amendments, including one which recommends that a $9 Athletic Fee be lowered to $6.

The senate also added an amendment stipulating that a governing board for the University Center—composed primarily of students—be established as a precondition to the senate’s approval of an increase in the University Center Fee.

If further amended Layser’s proposal to include a Community Fee to be paid by members of the University community other than students. The Community Fee would be for use of facilities such as the University Center.

Layser submitted the fee structure proposal to the Student Senate last week. The proposal is based upon recommendations from the Student Fee Study Committee.

Layser proposed that allocations for the University Athletics, Student Medical Benefits and Women’s Inter-Collegiate Athletics be removed from the Student Activity Fee, lowering it from $30.50 to $8.

Layer also grouped University Athletics and Women’s Inter-Collegiate Athletics under one Athletic Fee of $9 and the medical benefits under a $7 Health Service Fee.

He further proposed that the University Center Fee be raised from $6 to $6.50. Dave Maguire, University Park senator, at Wednesday’s senate meeting said the Athletic Fee could be lowered to $6 and still enable the athletic program to function.

“Just because the University is removing sources of funding the program received before does not make it mandatory that students make up the deficit with their funds,” Maguire said.

Edward H. Hammond, assistant to the chancellor, disagreed with Maguire. He said the athletic department can’t operate on the $6 fee. Lowering the fee will not “be cutting the fat,” Hammond said.

The amendment to the University Center Fee creating a student governing board, came as a result of a question by George Camille, student body president-elect and Eastside non-dorm senator, about why students alone should pay on the Center’s costs while the rest of the University community uses its facilities.

Camille said his amendment would pose the question to the SICT Board of Trustees of whether the Center is a “University Center” or a “Student Union.” Hopefully the Board will decide, he said.

Maguire said, Thursday that if the Board sustains the concept that the Center is a facility for the entire University, “the burden of the Center’s cost shouldn’t be borne solely by students but more by the rest of the campus.”

If the Board does decide the Center is a facility to be used by the whole University, the University community other than students should have to pay an amount “commensurate” with the increase of the student fee, Camille said.

Watson Barn

-- an ancient wonderland

SIU's Little Grassy Outdoor Lab-East is a wonderland for environmental education programs. Set up in 1968 in cooperation with the Bureau of Sport, Fish and Wildlife, the Outdoor Lab provides education for Southern Illinois children on the life of their ancestors.

Watson Barn is one of the great marvels of the lab. Built at the turn of the century, it contains many relics of the early farming community.

The barn is gigantic—40 by 70 feet. When SIU acquired it, the frame was intact but the sides and roof were gone. The interior consists of the ground floor and a hayloft. In the hayloft, a small log cabin is set up to depict early rural life.

Rail fences surround the barn. Some were built in 1968, but others are more than a hundred years old.

Plans for the future include a cultural interpretation center, complete with a blacksmith's shop, a natural log cabin and farm.

Presently there are several Indian shelter caves on the property along with 70 acres of native prairie.

Plans are to continue expansion as long as there are no budget cutbacks.

The lab is located 15 miles east of the campus.

"Vanishing Point" has thrilling chase scene; Warhol film about life

By David Daly Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If you're willing to settle for the most thrilling automobile chase since "Bullitt," then you have a treat in store in "Vanishing Point," the film now showing at the Saluki Cinema.

But if you're looking for some kind of special meaning in a "cute" film perhaps you'd be better off looking for something else, because this "chase" proves a paper-thin plot.

Burt Reynolds is a down-at-the-heel cop and the chief plaintiff in a multi-plaintiff-out-oftown-automobile-race case. He's trying to win enough money to buy a car and go racing. His partner and good friend is a cop named Roger. Another friend is a cop named Sheriff Pop. Pop is Burt's mentor and does everything he can to help him win the race.

The chase begins when the main character, Roger, is killed. Roger's sister, a NASCAR driver, is the next victim. The man responsible is tracked down and killed, but the story doesn't end there. It continues when the survivors go on a chase of their own.

Little is literally turned into the film without any reason for its being there, but one thing must be noted. For all his abrupt introduction, he is excellent in his role, and becomes the end, the only really believable person in the film.

The film is shot in the Midwest, and the action takes place at night, where it is supposedly easier to see.

Motorcycle gangs, pep pills, grazed old prospectors (Dean Jagger), hippies, mad women, more pep pills, homesteader—all the good things of the West—are dashed up so that no one is allowed to be bored.

The plot moves along briskly and it doesn't add up, but that picture really is the star of the show, with Newman in the supporting role.

One interesting note about the film is that it ran at GP. It would have been understandable had it been rated R, especially considering the nudity and raw language. The ratings people are getting more and more permissive, while illusiveness pushes for more control. Where will it all end? Max Scarlet.

Who speaks for SIU?

SIU has developed a problem that used to be reserved for politicians—a credibility gap. It has gotten to the point where the public does not believe anything the University says because it speaks in so many voices when it speaks at all. The SIU administration seems reluctant to talk about controversial issues, a reluctance that makes administrators seem guilty of wrongdoing.

The University's unwillingness to speak up in what caused public suspicion over the University House and over Edwardsville Chancellor John Rendellman's handling of Paul Powell's estate. And it was the diffusion of voices the news media had to rely on that caused the confused coverage of the spring riots and the recent Illinois Bureau of Investigation raids.

Now the drowning of Huey Harrison in the University Pool has sparked a new controversy. There are questions about the May 3 drowning that no one seems to want to answer, the reporting of the incident has been confusing and spotted.

First it was reported that Harrison was in a swimming class that let out at 12:40 p.m. and drowned a little later. Then it was reported that Harrison was in the swimming class that let out at 12:05 and he was not found until after the 12:10 to 12:40 class. If Harrison drowned in the shallow end, why did it take 35 minutes to find the body?

It was reported that Thomas Shear, dean of physical education for men, was swimming in the pool at the time Harrison's body was found and he would release a statement on the drowning May 6. On that day, Jackson County Coroner Harry Flynn said Shear's statement would be withheld until after an inquest. Is all this secrecy during an inquest routine?

A solution to SIU's credibility problem would be the establishing of a Communication Ombudsman, who would be in charge of disseminating news on controversies at the University. He should not, however, be a propaganda minister. He should have the power to speak for the University and he should be knowledgeable of all the facts. Perhaps he could be a solicitor general not linked directly to the University. SIU could then speak with a knowledge of events in times of controversy and might regain some lost public credibility.

Robert A. Iverson

Isn't it odd?

Throughout the spring local merchants have expressed to the City Council and University officials their desire that SIU remain open this year should student gatherings become threatening. It would seem, however, that there are those concerned about loss of business they would lower their prices and give out of some of their lavish check-cashing policies.

Track coverage leaves something to be desired

To the Daily Egyptian

As with most writers, I've wanted to write until I had a complaint. Maybe it would be better initially to complement the majority of sports reporting in the Daily Egyptian.

However, coverage of the SIU-Illinois track meet was unusually poor. After a week of pre-meet publicity, which centered on the line of the imaginative (did anyone really believe it would be as close as predicted?), the dual was just such a classic. Consider these facts:

Dave Hill, Southern's freshman distance runner, raced stride for stride with Illinois' Rick Gross before edging his Illini opponent at the finish. This, incidentally, before 4,000 yelling fans (the Southern Illinoisan said 2,000 but Larry Odell didn't get there until the meet was half over himself).

Lee LaBarrie, 11 of 1, became only the second collegiate miler in America this year to run a sub-four-minute mile. While LaBarrie was posting a 3:56.2 time, the rest of the field was also knocking nearly five seconds off of personal bests.

Mike Bernard, the Sahik's high jumper, cleared 7'1 in that event to establish a career best and mark himself as a bona fide national contender.

Ivy Crockett won the 220-yard dash in record trying time, the mile relay team made a shareable of that confrontation after Illinois had a bad baton exchange and the large, enthusiastic crowd stood and cheered throughout the entire meet.

So how did the DE follow up the event which they had helped to make with columns after columns of pre-meet publicity?

No pictures, a lead which could have been optimistically written before the meet started. And, overall, coverage which might have been equivalent to an SIU-Carbondale High meet.

Maybe the problem was simple—difficulty in deciding which of the events to emphasize most. This may have been the reason since so many leads warranted the headlines.

The writer probably had less than an hour in which to write his story before the presses rolled, but couldn't the write-up have dramatized the evening's thrills a bit more? Thursday's follow-ups were also far from what could be expected.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch saw fit to have a representative in Carbondale that night and carried a long story on the meet.

The DE can send a writer to gymnastics meets in Iowa and Michigan so why not fork out 80 cents for a tremendous meet in McAndrew Stadium?

Arenad concert not place for the 'babbling idiots'

To the Daily Egyptian

The Chicago concert on May 14 had to be one of the best performances put on in the SIU Arena. It's too bad some people cannot appreciate the quality of professionals.

The unsullied audience throughout the concert revealed the incomparable group of people. The whistler that went off during Robert Lamm's piano solo makes it quite clear some people should have stayed home and listened to Blood, Sweat and Tears.

The concert was great. The last number seemed to motivate the audience, but it was too late. Considering that the members of Chicago have been playing for a total of over forty years. I can see why they refused to do an encore.

It seems that one complaint of the audience was that Chicago's numbers were too long. When groups go in concert, most of them do not regurgitate their albums. Truly, Chicago doesn't. For those of you who don't like a variety of concerts, for the respect of the performers and those who really care, please stay home next time. I'd rather go to a concert that has a smaller audience than put up with several thousand babbling idiots.

Chemical tests prove
THC suspicions false

To the Daily Egyptian
Recently the Synergy Drug Crisis Center staff has responded to a number of situations in which people thought they had taken THC, or Tetrahydrocannabinoi, the synthetic form of very potent marijuana. In each of the situations the users involved became immediate, very drowsy and sometimes experienced convulsions. We obtained some samples of this drug and had it analyzed through the SIU chemistry department. The samples contained no THC or any other hallucinogenic. They were hydroxyzine hydrochloride, a powerful tranquilizer.

In form, they were a white powder handpacked into rose-colored gelatin capsules. It could come in a variety of forms. These samples are sold as "pure, clinical THC." WARNING The dangerous effects of this particular drug increase dramatically in high doses and when taken with narcotics or barbiturates.

It may be worth noting that no one has found a proven sample of THC on the underground market. Tests have been run in several major cities, including San Francisco’s Haught-Asbury Free Medical Clinic. In most cases, THC was found to be a tranquilizer. often Phencyclidine, a horse tranquilizer. It has been sold as PCP (Peace Pill).

Angel Dust, Hug and miscells. (Usually, drugs sold as mescaline are often really LSD).

Two things come to mind: 1) Some people are ready to believe anything, especially when they want to believe it. 2) Some people are ready to sell you anything, even when they don’t have it. It’s an old story. Call Synergy at 526-2111 if you have any questions.

Alternative ’71 makes a little kindness happen

To the Daily Egyptian
I would like to say " hats off " to the steering committee Alternative ‘71 for the dedication and hard work that went into the planning of last year’s Alternative Festival.

I think their success or failure need not be measured in terms of dollars and cents or even student participation.

It is a success in terms of setting a precedent. The steering committee of Alternative ‘71 has somehow managed to draw participation from more segments of the academic population than other activities have been capable of doing in the past. I am sure, with the cooperation of various students and department, provided a myriad of pleasurable activities, spectator efforts and culturally enlightening programs—and they have managed to so in the shadow of last year’s tragic affairs—and amid latexly "hat" student opinion.

Efforts have been made by city officials, ad

Institutions and students to ward off or change occurrences similar to last year’s chaos. Alternative ‘71 was certainly taken into account when making plans.

Last year, if we had had activities with the diversification of subject matter, diversity in types of activities and variety of locations, Alternative ‘71 might be presenting this year, student energy might have been channeled into more productive channels.

Whenever success or failure is attributed to Alternative ‘71 in the offing, it is refreshing to see a little kindness floating around the campus. It is revenues to see individuals and groups turning time out from their own problems and activities to provide for all a little fun and diversion, as well as enlightenment amid the tensions.

Within the efforts put into the organization and carrying out of Alternative ‘71, we should all be able to see some of the alternatives for the future.

Student enjoys watching
Chicago replay albums

To the Daily Egyptian

On May 14 Chicago exhibited their ability to tightly reproduce their albums. For some people this might not have been enough. I am basically against groups that perform their albums letter-perfect. But it all depends on the material. I wasn’t disappointed in ’67 when the Beatles performed their albums. And I wasn’t disappointed last January when Neil Young discredited the audience for requesting songs from his albums. Despite the fact that Chicago only released double albums, they do have exciting material. And watching it all unfold at the Arena was a delight.

There were spontaneous moments at the concert. The guitarist and trombone player were highly imaginative. Robert Lamm did some interesting variations in his piano solo. And, of course, they jammed when the cover of the ‘Shake your Tail Feather’ album was replaced. But for the most part, Chicago performed their familiar, well-charted songs.

I was upset that the sound was bad, but as the concert progressed I could distinguish the instruments separately. I was equally upset at the audience for feeling it necessary to demand an encore from a group that had just performed two hours of music. Their reactions and encores are becoming meaningless in the world of rock. I dug Chicago. But it wasn’t Captain Beefheart!

Eight-year-old Billie ends the war

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

It was on Oct. 9, 1971, that President Nixon ended the war in Vietnam.

Most of the credit, historians later agreed, must go to eight-year-old Billie Bergloff of Hamstrack, S.D. Month earlier, Billie had met the President during a CBS Scout Weissie & Picture Taking Session on the White House lawn. With the assistance of a little child, Billie asked why Mr. Nixon didn’t end the war.

"Well, Billie," said the President, frowning sincerely inside the television camera, "as I have said many times, I don’t want to be the first American president to lose a war. But I’m afraid that you’re the one to do it!"

"Oh, I understand, sir," said Billie politely. "When I dropped the atom in our relay sack race, all the other kids shouted, ‘Nyah, nyah, Billie, you lost it for us!‘ It was awful."

But you know, sir," said Billie, "if you lost the war, I wouldn’t tease you about it. In fact, I’d like you better.

"You would?" said the President thoughtfully.

A week later a Los Harris Survey, reportedly commissioned by the White House, revealed that 60.2 percent of the public would like the President better if he ended the war, any way he could.

Back in Hamstrack, meanwhile, Billie had begun circulating his new famous position. It read simply: "If the President ends the war, I hereby promise never ever to say, ‘Nyah, nyah, Mr. Nixon, you lost it for us.’" Supporter of Mr. Nixon signed it without question. Dozens read it several times, scratched their heads, finally nodded happily and affixed their signatures.

Frenz reports of little Billie’s campaigns brought forth duplicate petitions in every city in the land. They were circulated by such diverse groups as the Republican Central Committee and the Quakers. In matter of Alternative ‘71 whose efforts are manifest last hold-outs were the 275 Democratic leaders in Congress who were running for president. But even they bowed to public pressure in the end.

So it was that Mr. Nixon ended the war, saying he knew he could count on every American to keep his word. He hoped, and they did.

Oh, a few superlatives, when the President drove by, would begin to change. ‘As I have said many times, we were immediately drousted by the grateful citizenry. The only casualties were three Democratic leaders who supported and died of apoplexy while trying to deliver campaign attacks on Mr. Nixon.

The billions saved on the war effort, the billions saved on the war effort, the inflation and unemployment vanished. A smiling man was made on radio and television, and government was a thing of the past. The war was ended. Billie had his wish."

I am afraid, sir," said Billie, "that you’re too old to understand."

Commune growth spontaneous

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Religious communes involving both couples and single individuals are mushrooming across the country, says a Baptist missionary of the movement.

"Hundreds of them have started up in the last three years and they’re spreading so fast you can’t keep track of them," said the Rev. John A. McDonald of Mill Valley, Calif.

He is a member of a recently organized group, Evangelical Concerned Inc., which has about 75 staff workers around the country helping to guide the Christian commune movement.

The houses reflect a tremendous diversity, he said in an interview here at last week’s American Baptist Convention.

The spirit is so high in them that it’s infectious and they tend to produce spin-off organization of other communes.

He cited estimates that there were about 400 of them in California alone and hundreds of others in Florida and areas of Atlanta, Houston, Detroit, Boston, New York City, Seattle and widely throughout the Midwest.

It’s a movement on a wide front," he said. "There’s a spontaneity about it all over the country."

Carbondale police
rap on violence

By Everett Thomas
Student Writer

The Carbondale Police Department's answer to voided and seized, stop and frisk; and the threat of right-wing violence in Carbondale were among the topics and issues discussed by a Carbondale police officer and students at a rap session Wednesday night.

The informal discussion was held in the lounge of Wilson Hall. Larry Davis, the police officer at the discussion, said that the police department is trying to avert any kind of trouble that might cause rioting.

He said that in his opinion, "the laws in Carbondale will be liberal until school is out." Davis, who is a member of a special police unit working to secure better community-police relations, was on hand to answer questions that students might have about the law. In answer to a student's question, when can a warrant be served, Davis said that the decision of when to serve a warrant is left up to the discretion of the police officer.

"If an officer has a warrant," Davis said, "he may serve it at any time he wishes." He also said that a search warrant is a complicated document and that it must specifically state what article or articles are being searched for.

A search warrant cannot be extrapolated," Davis added. The difference between search and frisk was another topic of interest.

Davis pointed out that a frisk always precedes a search. He said that an officer's general check of a detained person's body constitutes a frisk, whereas a search is a probe into that person's body and possessions. He also noted that a person must be placed under arrest before he can legally be searched, unless he gives consent to be searched.

When asked if the threat of right-wing action against students was the work of a "single crack-pot," Davis said, "No, certainly not." He said that the right-wing group in Carbondale is well organized and that "right-wing action is as much a threat as left-wing action.

In stating his feelings about the criminal courts of Jackson County, Davis said, "I personally do not feel they are doing their job." Davis also said that he felt that m gin in the Jackson County area, "all the way from the policemen to the top," is doing his part, to the fullest extent, in the administration of justice.

North Vietns gain new supply route

SARGON (AP) — The North Viet- namese gained a new supply route through southern Laos Thursday just as munitions began flooding older routes farther to the north.

This setback to allied commands in Indochina came with the aban donment by Royal Lao forces of the last remaining outpost on the Bolovens Plateau in southern Laos. Control of the plateau gives Hanoi better access to South Vietnam's central highlands and northeastern Cambodia.

Munitions have begun sweeping the northern part of South Vietnam and the Lao Union areas near it and the allied commands had been counting on the weather to hold off any Communist command efforts over the next few months.

The government outpost at Hong Kong in the Bolovens Plateau was evacuated in the face of advancing North Vietnamese troops when Lao forces commanders decided it could not be held.

The eastern edge of the plateau overlooks the Ho Chi Minh supply trail and Hanoi's control of the plateau would enable it to expand the trail's road network westward. Truck traffic on the trail itself was reported sharply reduced. U.S. aerial reconnaissance observers noted some dirt roads flooded or so

Ex-Peruvian president discusses U.S. role in Latin development

By Enrique Rajeza
Daily Egyptians Spécial Writer

"There is a tendency to overemphasize the role of the United States in Latin America. During my administration, 65% per cent of the non-collaborative debts were with a low interest rate of 3% per cent. Only a very small percentage were actual grants."

This was one of the observations by Fernando Belaunde Terry, president of Peru from 1963 to 1968, who conducted a seminar Thursday at the Home Economics Lounge. He answered questions of a group of about 100 students and faculty.

Fernando Belaunde Terry

The visit by Belaunde, now a member of the faculty at American University, Washington, D.C., was sponsored by the Latin American Institute, the International Relations Club and the Latin American Student Association.

He said people think about and in Latin America in terms of the Marshall Plan which was designed to help construct an Europe economically hurt by World War II.

"The Marshall Plan is something different," he said, explaining that its beneficial effects are based on low interest loans. He suggested that foreign capital is indispensable in the industrialization programs of the Latin American countries and said his administration was devoted to creating a favorable climate for foreign investment.

He was stung by a military coup d'etat in October, 1968. The main reason usually given for his overthrow was dissatisfaction with an agreement reached by Belaunde and the International Petroleum Company, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Belaunde explained: "I was trying to leave the doors open for future investments.'" But he said that was not the main reason for the coup, only an excuse.

He said that the first plan of the military was to convert him into a dictator by closing congress and that the dictatorship was offered to him many times.

"They would stand at the door of my room and say, 'You're the leader. You have to make a decision.' When they met with my firm opposition, they decided to do it without me," he told the UIU group.

He said he had a hard time with the congress, because two parties united to make a majority of opposition and to block his legislation. In Peru, the congress has the power to remove cabinet members, and in five years, Belaunde recalled.

"When you appointed a new minister you have to teach him from the very beginning, and meanwhile you have to do all the work," he said. "But I believe the president has to carry his cross and you can see it in this country."

He declared he was very impressed by Rockefeller's world map and study of the world's resources. "I'm glad to see that Southern Illinois University is doing something not only for the state, even the country, but for the whole world."

Talking about Fuller's project of interconnection of the electrical resources of the world, Belaunde said South America with its high mountains and lakes, perhaps could be the world's main producer of electricity.

Asked about Peru's present Aliende administration, he replied that he considers Aliende a personal friend, that Aliende was elected in a democratic process, and that as long as he holds free elections at the end of his term there is no reason to worry.

To a question about the 300-mile limit of territorial waters maintained by Ecuador, Peru and Chile, he answered: "I think we'll have quite a battle."

He was referring to the incident in which Russian boats destroyed nets of United States lobster fishermen.

"When the United States changed to limit from three to twelve miles, it established a precedent that a country could unilaterally change the limit of its territorial waters," he said. "You see, like the number twelve, we South Americans happen to like the number 300."

Belaunde observed that U.S. newspapers don't adequately cover Latin America, except for the New York Times. He said that inaccurate and unprejudiced reporting of Latin America is nonexistent.

He noted that his administration was accused of being dependent on the United States but declared that his government didn't always agree with Washington. For example, he said, he signed a declaration encouraging the United States invasion of the Dominican Republic.

Ogilvie proposes major public welfare overhaul

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - Calling the present Illinois welfare system "a human outrage and a fiscal monstrosity," Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie proposed Thursday a major overhaul based on "the old-fashioned notion of working for a living." "The welfare system embodies all of the worst of our fashions—moral, fiscal, administrative and legal," Ogilvie said in a message on welfare reform before a joint session of the House and Senate.

The message drew resounding applause from both sides of the aisle, although Democrats later voiced reservations about Ogilvie's tough, mass-work proposal.

Under the plan, persons on welfare who presently get their check in the mail would pick it up at the welfare office, where they also would receive prospects for work with a job counselor.

"We hereby serve notice that any recipient who refuses work will be summarily denied further benefits," Ogilvie said.

Other features of Ogilvie's plan include a substantial reshaping of general assistance, which he called "the least effective and most abused welfare program." Tighter machinery to curb fraud, more state and local government jobs for those on relief and a cutback on the cost of the state's medical services.

Ogilvie warned that the skyrocketing "demands of welfare programs" are "producing a crisis in Illinois state financing which is every bit as serious a crisis which led to passage of the state income tax."

The governor's welfare budget for 1972 is based on the belief that Congress will pass President Nixon's major welfare plan, but it includes some similar measures, giving the state's 50 million more in federal public aid funds than it now gains.

Old folks do work, need help

By Teresa Mann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Bright gold bedspreads, pale green walls, brightly decorated homemade posters and decoupage plaques add color to the two-story house which is Tyler Nursing Home, located in Murphysboro.

Sixty-two persons, the average age of 65, reside here. About 75 percent of them have been institutionalized since they were very young, according to Joan Battel, activity director at Tyler and a graduate of SIU. Many of the residents are mentally retarded, she said.

As activity director, Mrs. Battel has set up recreational, religious, intellectual and physical activities which include arts and crafts, a garden, Bible study and exercise periods.

Mrs. Battel said her goal is to meet the residents' needs at group levels and on the individual level too. This, however, creates a problem. Mrs. Battel said that the residents need individual attention in the things they do, but there aren't enough volunteers.

Battel said there are a woman, Florence, who worries about the food. Florence has had bad formal education and can't read. With Battel's help she could learn to read. Mrs. Battel said that there are other residents who could be made happier and could be helped to develop skills if there was more volunteer help.

Most of the activities are now done on the large group level, she said. Arts and crafts sessions are held and occasionally residents go to activities at the Adult Center in Murphysboro, which is sponsored by the Mental Health Department.

The residents are holding a bazaar from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Saturday in front of Woolworths at Murphysboro shopping Center. They are selling many of the things they have made such as decoupage plaques, stuffed animals, pillows, flower holders and leather works.

Walter, a cheerful 53-year-old resident of Tyler, is well trained in working with leather. He makes leather vests, purses, scrapbooks and also does repairs.

The bazaar is one of the few money-making projects the residents have. The money will go into their activity fund which is operated on a nonprofit basis, Mrs. Battel said. They have to rely upon donations and any money they make to finance their activities, she said.

A free bus will leave the University Center for Thomas School at 4:30 p.m. After the dinner the bus will go to the speech, which will be held at 8 p.m. in Davis Auditorium. The speaker, Matsho Mashalalana, will speak on general problems facing Africa today, including the conflict between black African states and the Union of South Africa.

The reception will be held in the Home Economics Lounge from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Seven elected to free clinic board

Seven persons have been elected to the board of directors of the Carbondale Free Clinic at an open-to-the-public meeting held this week.

Two more candidates can be appointed by the board at a later date. The seven are: Guillame Chilton, 390 E. Chestnut; Robert P. Griffin, 885 W. Peoria; William Jackson, 307 E. Chestnut; Gary Kolb, 127 N. Washington; John A. Marduk, 417 W. Sycamore; William E. Rodd, NF 4 and Donna Taftington, NF 5.

According to Michael Olson, business coordinator, the clinic has received about $1,000 in contributions since last November, most of which has been spent for equipment and supplies. Olson said the donations have come from campus funding projects, community groups, Madel Orpha, and individual contributors. He said about $300 is donated by patients each of the two nights a week it is open.

Also, the city of Carbondale has been paying the rent on the Free Clinic storefront at 391 E. Jackson.

Dr. Bruce Hudson, originator of the clinic, said the number of persons using the facility has risen steadily and now about 40 patients are being seen each Tuesday and Thursday evening.

Director views cable TV as potential public service

By Sue Hall
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The director of SIU's Broad-casting Service, which operates WSIU-TV, believes that cable television—soon to make its debut in Carbondale—is the "taste of the future," and that it offers great potential for public services.

John Kurtz thus takes a position directly opposite to that generally attributed to traditional over-the-air broadcasters, who see cable TV as a threat.

Kurtz's remarks were prompted by a story in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian in which Marvin Rimer-man, assistant professor of jour-nalism, was quoted as saying the SIU would not use cable television unless it were warmed in welcoming the advent of cable TV here.

Rimerman had observed that "The University's experience in developing attention to cable communication has been the student's experience in miniature where typically small town broadcasters have fought the development of cable.

Kurtz said, "The Broadcasting Service has been 100 per cent in favor of CATV as a means of providing better service for the people.

"The essence of television is service to the public," Kurtz said.

"And cable is the best service the people can have. It's the way of the future," he said.

"It has been a minor conflict about whether cable TV courses would be offered through the School of Journalism or the Department of Radio and TV," he said. But Kurtz maintained that cable television itself has always been regarded favorably by the Broadcasting Service.

Kurtz said he hopes that a cooperative interdepartmental program of participation and courses could be established.

Rimerman said the franchise with Cable Information Services, Inc. (CISI) was chosen over the other cable companies because it offered the greatest potential for University programming. The possibility for University programming was unimportant in considering companies for the award, he said.

Fourth grade students from Lewis School are making candles in an area of the SIU Outdoor Laboratory at Little Grassy Lake. Watching the operation are members of a tour which was conducted through the facilities Wednesday in celebration of 20 years of cooperation between the Department of Interior, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife and SIU.

SIU Outdoor Lab holds celebration

Twenty years of cooperation between the Department of Interior, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife and SIU was theme of celebration Wednesday at the SIU Outdoor Laboratory at Little Grassy Lake.

The day's festivities included a bonfire and anniversary cake cut, a tour of the facilities of the Outdoor Laboratory, a Buffalo Trace and a slide presentation and program on the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge and the SIU Outdoor Laboratory.

"Crab Orchard is quite scenic, quite attractive and quite available to anyone in Southern Illinois who wants to use it," Aruth Mochhoff, project manager of Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, said. The refuge offers great opportunities for students and people of Southern Illinois, he said.

Mochhoff told a gathering of 26 persons, the primary purpose of the refuge is for wildlife propagation, but is also an area for industry and recreation. The refuge brought an income to southern Illinois last year in excess of one million dollars, he said.

Paul Yambert, dean of the SIU Outdoor Laboratory, said that laboratory area is a rather unique complex of University and federal land which is being used for environmental education. Very few campuses in the country have similar facilities for outdoor education.

"This place wouldn't be here at all if it weren't for Dr. Murray," Yambert said. He gave credit for environmental education and did much of its work.

Yambert explained the meaning behind the triangular symbol which the lab has adopted. He said it symbolized that all parts of the earth are interconnected and need to work together.

- Forest Carpenter, Minneapolis regional supervisor of refuge, said that Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge and SIU Outdoor Laboratory makes him see the need for appreciation for conservation education.

Father donates marijuana

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) - Lawson D. Turner Jr., Beaumont custom housekeeper, says a man at a border entry point donated 10 pounds of marijuana to the U.S. government.

Upon questioning customs, the driver announced, "I brought you guys a couple of presents. They're in the back."

"What's that?" the driver said he had brought the marijuana in Mexico to do business with "people of tender years. He has 18 children."

ISAAC BRACKETT, chairman of the Outdoor Laboratory Activity Committee, also said that the lab facilities wouldn't be here today without Morris. In retrospect, Brackett said, he thinks these lands sustain and promote this University. He said Morris brought vision and dreams into reality.

Brackett has worked with the outdoor lab in coordinating camp facilities for the handicapped.

President Emeritus Daley W. Morris said he saw a great asset in the fish and wildlife service and somehow wanted to connect it with the University for educational facilities.

One of the major turning points in the permanency of the Outdoor Laboratory was when the camp was built for the handicapped, Morris said.

"One thing I had hoped for didn't come about," Morris said. This was a widespread interest by many departments on campus. He said it is needed to develop a functional rather than real estate approach to the area.

"Money spent has promise of lending to the value of the University, the state and the country and I am glad to see it in such good leadership," Morris said.

Church conventions have color

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Church conventions were breaking out in new wild clashes of color and contemporary art and festive banners.

"Arise! Joy!" To live is to encrypt.

These were among the exuberant notes practiced in the bright cloth hangings surrounding Rochester's War Memorial Auditorium where the United Presbyterians currently are convening.

"A curtain wall of banners," it was called.

"Love works," went the words over and over again against a black background.

"Love!" surrealism urged another.

"It is something beautiful." "This is our Father's world."

These same celebrative tones and unabashed symbolism, swarming with doves, flowers, fire, olive branches, crisscrossing prayer hands, light-swinging bells and dancing figures have decorated other recent church gatherings, both Protestant and Roman Catholic.

It was the decor a week ago at the American Baptist Convention in the Minneapolis Auditorium and Convention Hall and has marked numerous recent youth, evangelism and liturgical conferences.

"Celebration is a million candles lit with reverence and joy," said a Baptist's banner. Another, more cryptically said: "People are like artificial flowers Beautiful but plastic."

The mood ordinarily is hopefully happy reflecting the recent theological emphasis on that aspect of Christianity. Actually the burst of colorful emblems is a resurgence of an old medieval church practice when Christian processions were lavishly adorned and churches were hung inside with banners from the ceiling.

Doctor finds new link between LSD, cancer

CHICAGO (AP) -- A Philadelphia doctor has reported that he treated within a single week two cases of an extremely rare cancer and that both patients were LSD users.

Dr. Robert L. Klaas of the Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia made his remarks at the American Urological Association convention here.

Dr. Klaas said the cancer, choriocarcinoma, usually is found in males in their 20s and 30s. He said that less than 1 per cent of all cancer in males is found in the testicles and that less than 1 per cent of all cancers affecting the testicles is choriocarcinoma.

"I had only seen one case in 10 years," Dr. Klaas said in an interview. "It goes to show how rare it is."

Dr. Klaas said that the two cases he did not give solid evidence that the use of LSD contributes to this form of cancer. But he made his report "to alert all doctors to take a drug history of patients."

He said the two patients, boys of ages 15 and 16, used LSD between 25 and 75 times.

Dr. Klaas said he attempts to obtain a complete drug history from his patients, but he has not established possible correlations between drug use and other diseases.

Dr. Irving Bush of Cook County Hospital announced the development of an instrument that will allow visual inspection of the kidneys.

The instrument, a endoscope, was developed by Bush and other doctors. It consists of a device and a long, flexible cord with a light at the end that will allow urologists to inspect the kidneys for tumors, stones, infections and other diseases.

Pre-Nixon 'rhetoric' blamed for riots

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) -- The Nixon administration's chief of internal security acknowledged that a prime cause of recent riots in 1968-69 was the "rhetoric of prior administrations.

At the same time, Rep. Artie Gen. Robert C. McFarlane boasted a blast at the nation's school-desegregation policies in a speech prepared for the Pasadena Rotary Club.

Mr. Bush, head of the Justice Department's Internal Security Division, accused former administrations he didn't name of promising "instant solutions to all of the complex problems of race" without plans for fulfillment.

When instant solutions were not forthcoming, the people responsible for the rhetoric searched for political scapegoats, and vulnerable target—one which they could attack with out endangering their own political constituencies.
Seminar, workshop

VVAV in Alternative '71

By Liz McMahon
Student Writer

The Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAV) will sponsor a seminar from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Alternative Center. The seminar will be part of Alternative '71 "to bring into the open the many different ways in which all of us have been affected by the Vietnam War," Morton Miller, president of VVAV, said at a recent meeting.

"The Impact of the Vietnam War on Campus and Community Relations" will be the topic of the seminar, Miller said. "Hopefully with a closer understanding of the problems presented, suggestions will be made in order to achieve a better relationship among the members of the campus and the community."

Miller listed five workshops to be held to discuss and implement action on existing problems.

The first workshop will be held from 7 to 11 p.m. Sunday in University Center Conference Room A, and will deal with roles and functions of the University and Carbon- dale police departments in community activities, according to Miller. Richard Goddard, a member of VVAV, will act as moderator.

Richard T. Jordan, secretary treasurer of VVAV, will be moderator for a workshop to discuss the role of the City of Carbondale in dealing with demonstrations. The workshop will be held from 7 to 11 p.m. Monday in University Center Conference Room A.

"Problems of annexation, housing, landlord problems and resentment of street people" will be the subject discussed in a workshop from 7 to 11 p.m. Wednesday in University Center Conference Room A.

Next Friday from 7 to 11 p.m. in University Center Conference Room C, dealing with the problems of demonstrations, town opposition, treatment of students and the role of Carbon- dale's "City Fathers," Miller said. Other activities sponsored by VVAV as part of Alternative '71 include a 90-minute film, "The Green Berets," at 8 p.m., Thursday in Davis Auditorium. Richard Meyers, a My Lai veteran and a friend of Lt. William Calley, will play with students after the movie, Miller said.

Other business included informal nominations for VVAV offices for fall. "Formal nominations will be held next week when all members are present," Miller said.

Nixon in 'basic accord' with blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon says he is "determined to press forward vigorously" to realize the civil rights goals that he says his administration shares with black leaders of Congress.

A seven-week, in-depth review of recommendations made by the President's Black Caucus in Congress, Nixon said: "We found that your broad goals are largely the same as those of the administration..."

In a 15-page response to 60 recommendations the black caucus made at a White House meeting March 25, Nixon said in some instances, where the administration was in dis- agreement, approaches were spelled out.

"To many members," he said, "we have found a basic accord between your recommendations and our policies...."

"I have not felt any program of revenue sharing to help serve the people better, to help the disadvantaged."

"A program of "high priority," to a program of revenue sharing to help serve the people better, to a commitment to a concerted drive for expanded economic opportunities for minorities and all other Americans."

"Diggis said the caucus will respond to Nixon Monday. He said members of the caucus agreed to delay their comments pending a thorough study of VVAV President's response to the caucus recommend-

Auto gimmick rallye Saturday

The Grand Touring Auto Club of Carbondale will sponsor a gimmick rally at 7 p.m. Saturday, beginning at the Campus Shopping Center.

A gimmick rally is a race over public roads at legal speeds. The times and dates used must follow certain directions and questions given them to reach the finish line.

There are no mathematical calculations required, but the directions are often in the form of riddles or scrambled letters.

Young farmer believes in education

By University News Services

Dennis Chestnut is a young Jasper County farmer who believes enough is at stake to make a college education worthwhile, and he backs up his belief with practical evidence. Chestnut has been named to the new agricultural education training program in the School of Agriculture.

Chestnut is a 19-year-old student at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, majoring in agricultural education. He expects to complete his degree next fall after fulfilling his student teaching assignments. Dennis and his father in partnership operate a 400-acre farm (relying about half of the acreage producing cash grain and feed crops, maintaining a 24-cow beef cattle herd, and feeding out for market an additional 40 purchased feeder calves annually. Chestnut and his wife, the former Carolyn Dean of Olive, became the parents of their first child, a son (Douglas Scott), April 19. The farmer missed classes that day.

The young farmer, a 1948 graduate of the Newton Community High School. He attended nearby Olivey Community College for two years and entered Murray State College at Murray, Ky., for two semesters until early 1946. With a call to the armed services pending, he worked a few months at St. Louis aircraft factory, attending night classes at the Edwardsville Campus.

After completing a two-year assignment in the armed forces, he enrolled in agricultural education in The 1949 fall term, beginning his daily commute to classes while farming operations at home 13 miles away.

GSD 103 class to play ‘I Spy’ on Morris Library grassy area

If you find yourself under surveillance this quarter, think twice about blaming J Edgar Hoover. You might have to blame Bill Edwards.

Edwards sections of GSD 103, which during winter quarter participated in the Carbondale mayoral primary and launched a campaign to stop the tuition hike, will be observing the grassy area bounded by Morris Library, Lawson Hall and the Wham Education Building for a period of three weeks this quarter.

Edwards, a graduate assistant in the Department of Speech, gave the following educational objectives for the observation.

"We are trying to conceive of how space affects social interaction," he said. "I expect them to develop a concept of social distance and personal territory in relation to the frequency of social interaction.

During winter quarter Edwards, students were left free to choose the topics for their campaigns with a minimum of direction. The format for the course has been changed for this quarter Edwards gave his reasons.

I sincerely doubt that too many people who engaged in the campaign (last quarter) would forget the experience too easily," he said. "This quarter I am more interested in the students understanding the concepts involved rather than just the experiment."

I needed to make a more valid contribution. A good part of the class resented the fact that I was able to stand back and take pot shots at what they were doing.

Home soccer: Saturday pits SIU, Racers

The SIU International Soccer Club will pit in 9-4 record on the line at 2 p.m. today at the University of Evansville in the Aces Soccer Field. It will be the final contest of the season for the Racers and will feature a chance for Bernie Yarijan to extend his goal-getting rampage. In the first six matches of the season, Justin Marvin has scored nine goals and is expected to add four per cent of SIU's total scoring.

A piece of Yarijan will undoubtedly draw special deference from the opposition and this weekend against Murray State will be no exception. According to Racers' coach Gil Layman, "I'd probably get a man to just see if he has the ball or not and then a man to shadow him. "That's the only way if the defense gets beaten. There will be someone else there. That is really the only way you can do it."

"The idea is not to let him get into the free area," Layman continued, "if we can keep him outside it will be a lot harder to score from 25 yards out."

The only problem Murray State has, according to Layman, "is a good and tough squad. We have seen them play twice and had them in every match, but it's a good squad."

SIU will be without injured forward Mike Faler, who will not ready until next week's game.

Layman said he thought Murray State would try to run the ball up the field and get a goal when possible. "They will try to score from deep areas if possible."

Murray State was scheduled to play SIU earlier in the season, but was forced to cancel due to foul weather.

In the five years of existence, the SIU soccer club has compiled a 23-4-11 record, including victories over Indiana State University. Murray State, University of Kentucky and Springfield YMCA.

"We're good," Faler said, "and I think Murray State will be tough. I think they will be tough. I think they will be tough."

Hill gets new shot at LaBadie over weekend

"I ran about six miles every morning and I do a lot of running in the afternoon with (Ken) Nailer," Hill said.

"The person who usually beats me to the distance race is myself, he said, "I don't pay myself up."

Hill said his biggest problem has been sticking with the frustrators during distance races.

"In the middle, people will try to run me out of the race," Hill said. "All right in the race, if you find yourself 30 yards back, you're dead."

Hill is the hardest part of the race.

Hill hasn't been so scoring the victories of the season. He's been pulling some spots of it.

He beat Florida State's ace Ken Minser in the mile and three-mile over the weekend in spite of having led the race for three miles instead of two.

"I ran to win and I won," he said. "I was in pretty good. I've got a very good attitude and I've been running everything from the quarter-mile up on."

The men will run in the state meet Saturday. This time there will be three miles as a race rather than 5,000 meters and the meet will be in the country.

The Daily Egyptian
The only thing standing between the SIU basketball team and the Midwestern Conference title is the Ball State Cardinals and Dick Langhorn. Dick Langhorn lives up to his past performances that obstacle won't be around very long.

Ball State will invade the SIU gymnasium for the third time in the three-game series at 3:15 p.m. Friday. If the Cardinals and Langhorn can knock off the Cardinals the title will belong to SIU. It will be Southern's first regular season series.

The Salukis clinched a tie for the title last weekend when they swept a three-game series, from Northern Illinois University.

LaGrange got the call in the first game of the NIU series and responded with an eighth-victory title. The native of Carbondale struck out nine Huskies and walked one on the way to his eighth victory against one loss. He also gave up four earned runs as SIU won, 5-4.

Going into the contest, Ball State is tied for third place with Northern Illinois. Both teams have 2-4 marks. SIU leads the conference with an impressive 8-1 record.

Indiana State, who Jones says has one of the better teams in the conference, is in second place at 6-4, while Illinois State is marooned in the cellar with a 3-7 record.

Jones indicated that he would start either Dave Martin or Jim Fischler in one of the Saturday games followed by Steve Randall.

SIU will carry a 23-4 mark going into the contest with Ball State and according to Jones, "It was our ambition this season to win 40 games and if we want to reach that goal then we must keep winning.

Now in order for us to get to 40 wins we'll have to win the district tourney."

That tournament, the district Four tournament, will qualify teams for the NCAA College World Series.

Playing key roles in SIU's success this season have been Jim Dwyer, Steve Schreiber and Mike Eden. Schreiber, who patrols centerfield, is leading the Salukis in hitting with a lofty .388, and according to Jones has the best chance to be selected in the pro baseball draft.

Kuiper is the second leading batter in Jones' lineup with a .385 mark including 11 RBIs on 38 hits.

Eden, meanwhile, has been a terror on the bases, coming up with 26 stolen bases. The total is good for a new SIU record. The old mark was set by Jerry Bond in 1969.

"He was trying to beat three of us," Hill said. "Ken Nakler, Rick Gross and myself."

"He knew we were right there," Hill said.

Gross, an Illinois, finished third in the .406.6, and Nakler, of SIU, placed fourth in 4.894. All four marks broke the old record and the first three cracked the old McKendrick Stadium mark.

Hill, a freshman from Canada, also created perfect conditions for the good times.

LaBadie will once again face Hill in the Illinois Intercollegiates Saturday afternoon in McKendrick Stadium.

Illinois and SIU will lock horns for the mythical state track title as they have for the last three years.

"It's good to be back at Carbondale," he said.
