"So far," Neal said, "the response has been overwhelming. Some of these people have to travel as far as 250 miles," he added.

At a meeting will be President D릇tey W. Morris, Robert W. Maccicar, vice-president for academic affairs, Elmer J. Clark, dean of the College of Education, and other faculty members interested in the student teaching program.

When Finals Stack Up

Council Is Asked for Exams Appeal Board; Students Urged to Confer With Professors

The Student Council, at its Tuesday night meeting, heard a committee report recommending establishment of a board to hear appeals from students who have three or four final exams in one day.

Under the new exam system, it is possible and probable that many students will have the problem of finals stacked on top of each other in the same day.

Consequently, the committee felt that to insure the individual student of relief in such occurrences, a board of Council members should be set up to help students appeal to faculty members for rescheduling of tests.

The Council took no definite action on the recommendation, except to try to inform students to consult their professors immediately when they learn of such complications.

Members of the special committee interviewed more than 40 faculty members in an effort to find out if they had been completely informed about the workings of the new system, and how they felt about it.

The general feeling, according to the report, was that the faculty members were usually negative or apathetic concerning the system.

Action taken by the Council included:

- It passed a bill calling for a recommendation to be sent to the administration asking for financial support of the Southern Illinois Women's Gymnastic Club.
- The bill was passed because the Council felt the team is a worthy and benef-

A Political Vacuum Forming Around De Gaulle

Western Europe Rejects His Policies

By Alain de Lyrot
Chief, European Bureau
Copley News Service

PARIS -- President Charles de Gaulle of France is on the brink of political and diplomatic isolation with the Western alliance because of his policies in Europe and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Quick developments in the last few days have demonstrated that De Gaulle has failed to persuade or pressure other nations to support policies basically aimed at the elimination of U.S., influence in Europe. De Gaulle, at this stage in creating a political vacuum around himself.

The turning point, after many months of more obscure struggle, has come over the U.S.-sponsored nuclear multilateral force (MLF) and the issue of the nuclear defense of Europe.

West Germany has made it clear beyond a doubt that it will go ahead with participation in the MLF, despite De Gaulle's pressure against such a move.

Perhaps even more important is what appears to be a new and more favorable British approach to the problem.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's government, after some resistance, has indicated that it might be willing to accept a form of Allied nuclear defense not far removed from the MLF, if it is now defined.

'ONE OF THESE DAYS HE'S GOING TOO FAR'

17 Nations Ante Lists Cautiously to Open Tariff Talks

By Jack Harrison

The Kennedy Round tariff talks got started this week in Geneva, despite some dire predictions about their chances for success.

Not much happened immediately. The participating nations exchanged lists of what products they are willing to submit for the general tariff cut, and then withdrew to their corners to study the data and to map strategy for the real give-and-take expected in January.

This first step was taken after a year and a half of bickering over the rules. The Kennedy Round has been called the most ambitious trade-expansion effort in history, yet there are many roadblocks standing in the way of its success.

Before the Kennedy Round could begin, France insisted that aggressive nuclear policies in an Allied nuclear deterrent, it is considered likely that other members of NATO who so far have been lukewarm will go along with it.

A key difficulty is believed to have been set aside during British Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker's recent trip to Bonn. Before the Labor government until then had been uneasy about Germany's role in the MLF. It appears that during the Anglo-German talks in Bonn, many apprehensions were removed.

Meanwhile, Wilson has condemned in no uncertain terms the essential tenets of Gaulle's policies on nuclear defense and the Western alliance.

His strongest statement included this remark: 'You made me what I am today... I hope you're satisfied!'

'We reject categorically any idea of a separate European deterrent.' He also professed support for collective nuclear security as well as the necessary interdependence of the alliance.

He thus ruled out as far as Britain is concerned Gaulle's proposals for a European deterrent and a belief in total national independence.

The subject of a European deterrent is at least a highly hypothetical one. France, so far, has only the nucleus of an atomic force and no deterrent.

The negotiations were named for John F. Kennedy because of his efforts on behalf of lowering tariff barriers.

Kennedy sponsored the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, which gives the U.S. President greater bargaining power in tariff matters and which led directly to the current round of talks.

The most that can be expected from the Kennedy Round is a 50 per cent cut in tariffs on most industrial imports.

The 50 per cent cut is the limit for action by the U.S. President under the Trade Expansion Act and is therefore a practical limit for the talks. The cut probably will be nearer to 25 to 35 per cent.

The across-the-board tariff cut will be on a reciprocal percentage basis. It will apply to a majority of trade in industrial products.

The Common Market offered 81 per cent of its members' industrial imports for tariff reductions.

The 17 nations ante lists are the Outer Seven—Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Portugal, Switzerland and Austria.

Britain, the Common Market and the U.S. will be the principal bar­ gainers. Eventually, the Kennedy Round will involve more than 60 nations, the parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which is conducting the tariff talks.

Eric Wyndham-White, executive secretary of GATT, is the man in charge of the talks.

Red Chinese Warn Of 'Khrushchevism'

TOKYO (AP) — Red China warned the Soviet Union today against "Khrushchevism without Khrushchev" and laid down a long set of tough terms for any settlement of the Moscow dispute, virtually impossible.

The editorial, which appeared in a Peking newspaper Friday night, is the latest in a series of editorials on Soviet moves that the Red Flag, official theoretical journal of the "Chinese Communist party," has launched against Khrushchev's "hundreds of thousands of ideas." The first of these editorials appeared Dec. 17 and was followed by one in which the two sides were deadlocked in 19 minutes, 34 seconds.

The editorial said that if the dispute was settled without Khrushchev, "the Chinese Communist party" would launch a heavy attack on the United States—which the two sides were deadlocked in 19 minutes, 34 seconds.

Path to Higher Learning Has Its Sticky Moments
Seven SIU football players will be playing their last college football game here tonight when the Salukis entertain Evansville College in McAndrew Stadium. The seven are Bonne Shetlan, Rien Bolger, Earl O'Malley, Yale Corcoran and Jim Siebert. All but Corcoran and Siebert have had prominent roles in Southern's football picture this season. Weber was 5-5, 175-pound running back from Mattoon, Pa., handled the Saluki rushing ball last season but has seen only limited action this year. In 1963, his first year as a starter, he was Southern's second best running back with 168 yards in 52 carries. This season Rhodes has gained 98 yards in 34 attempts. Dave Bolger has been a familiar sight on the Saluki football scene for the past three

- A bill calling for the investigation of possible re­ marks, some which are racist, and that a person's ability to take practical action could be taken to insure all students an equal opportunity to purchase ticket­

The bill was proposed because of the block ticket sales that are made by various organizations.

The fact that a person doesn't belong to a large organization shouldn't disqualify him from having a chance at tickets of his choice, ac­cording to the proposed bill.

A discussion concerning the misquoting of student senators by the Daily Egyptian was opened to Council when Trina Carter, a small group housing senator, asked if there was anything that could be done to regulate the reporting of Council meetings.

Miss Carter and several other senators complained that the words "split iris" had been used instead of "scratched cornea" in a connection with a report by a student senator of medical treatment administered to an SIU student recently.

Miss Carter wanted to know if it wasn't possible to check Council reports before publication to see if they were all right to print.
