Houses Play Host Tonight To Students

The second annual Host House Night will be held tonight from 8 to 10. Houses in each of the eight off-campus areas have been designated as the host house, and students from the areas are invited to visit their host houses.

Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

Host House Night is an off-campus exchange that is unique with SIU, said Mrs. Anita B. Kuo, supervisor of off-campus housing.

The Housing Office and individual householders cooperate in planning the event. The program is planned to let students enjoy more fully the social, educational and intellectual facilities of the University, saidMrs. Kuo.

She reported that some 60 supervised houses served as host houses last year and about 2300 students participated.

As a result of last year's Host House Night, some of the integration problems were alleviated, said Mrs. Kuo. One of the main problems now facing off-campus residents is high rent, she added.

Plans are also underway for a Host House Night in February.

Parking Unit Has Motorcycle Forms

The Parking Section is now handing out applications for registration of motorized cycles, although registration itself has been delayed.

Edward F. McDevitt, supervisor of the section, said students owning motorized cycles should pick up registration forms at his office in order to have them ready for the inspection time. He said drivers should also make sure their vehicles are in good operating order before they go through the inspection line.

Dixie Lawmaker Describes 'Breaking of a Moderate'

This is the 'story of a politician's failure to bridge the gap between his political reality and the due process of the professional coalition between the racist politics, economic conservatism, and the state's rights provides the basic framework for Smith's discussion of Mississippi politics. "The book is largely about race," writes Smith, "because race has been the overriding element in Mississippi politics for more than a century."

The "closed society" of Mississippi, Smith argues, is alive and well. The author describes the intimate interrelationship between the racist politics, economic conservatism, and the state's Jim Crow blueprint.

The politics of race in the politics of white supremacy. The "broken" rights doctrine is another name for "white rule."

Reviewed by Jerome M. Miler

Labor Institute

This is a continuing history rallying cry of civil rights opponents as "cultural negative" doctrine. Smith argues persuasively that this view is a "cloud of too much unreality." Because other's rights really mean the right to discriminate is more important than the state's citizen's right to protection in the due process of the law. If state's rights provides the ideological justification for which a wedges between segregationists and economic conservatism is the state's political power, in the "strong central government means opposition to integration. In conservative circles outside the South, the same phrase means opposition to federal spending."

The politics of race, the author concludes, is "the strongest bulwark of economic conservatism in Congress today."

Smith concludes that the South of today is not a region, but has cost the region much of its national political influence. Furthermore, the relationship of economic conservatism is the South's economic power, in whatever the author means is essentially to any real resolution of political conflict.

Finally, he observes both the "excessive dissatisfaction with the rate providing important and the ironical fact that the whites are "crying away their own freedom in the attempt to deny freedom to others."

Twelve years of frustration and failure was climaxd for Frank Smith in 1962 when his racial extremists in the Mississippi legislature skillfully re-directed his attention to his congressional next. His"liberalism" on the race issue had been opposed by the right-wing dominated coalition in the state legislature. He was in Con­gressional coalitions. The campaign to unseat him ("Nigger") from the Senate campaign) and his sup­port of the Kennedy Administra­tion had become too offensive to state leaders.

In his "biography," historian James Silver, Smith, during his tenure, was "Mississippi's most effective national representative since World War II."

Smith calls his book an "apology" for his hypocrisy in opposing civil rights legisla­tion, but it is equally as impor­tant personal study of real politics. A straight­forward volume, refreshingly free of the self-congratulatory and self­appraise, the book would be recommended reading for anyone interested in American politics at any time. It is a specially recommended reading in an election year crowds with oratory on states' rights and civil rights.

New Generation of East Germans Shows National Self-Confidence

It is difficult, if not impossible, for people in the West to understand the political conditions in countries behind the Iron Curtain, not only because of differences in social problems. Joseph Wechselburg, Through the Life of East Germany, has given a view from the inside. He has fired much of the atmosphere of the life in East Germany.

A significant change has taken place in the German Democratic Republic. For years when the older generation, the younger generation, were confident that their political and economic environment would soon be absorbed in a united Germany. They have looked toward the West, faithfully waiting for encouragement.

Today these people have lost faith in the willingness of the older generation to make a course and resort to a position of political indifference, even of seeking ways of reconciliation their political beliefs with the Communist system.

The younger generation seems to be better off. The state has taken over the re­sponsibility of educating children from pre­primary school age to university, thus insuring higher education receive monthly allowances free of charge and has the opportunity to lead a very in­expensive existence in dormitories." It is a special program, living standard of the people in East Germany, the new breed of East Ger­mans daily a high degree of national self-confidence and looks down upon the West Ger­mans as the people of the West, free of any decadence. The enthusiasm for the state seems to be sus­cible. The German Democratic Republic, many East Ger­mans argue, is a product of their own effort, while West Germany experienced its cosmos boom with the help of "capitalist" America. Because of populist and culture, there cannot be no doubt East Germany is improving the living standards of the people and also, national self-confidence is better than ever before.

Traveling around the country and talking to people of all walks of life, Communists non-party members, workers and middle­class people, the young people are doing an ever­present system, the present generation, single individual freedom and force the citizen to con­tribute to the party in whatever he does.

Wechselburg's book is a real contribution and genuine understanding of the social and political development in East Germany. There is nobody anybody interested in the Ger­man question of reunification. The book can be learned about West Germany but we really know little about the people in East Germany. This book helps to cross over into the every­day world of the East German people who have been replaced by the soft sell method.

Tin Pan Alley Goes West

Burgeoning 'Pops Industry' Singing a New Tune

In case you haven't taken a look at the days of Red Seal records, there has been a great change in the world of music. Most easily marked is the change in popular music. There was a time when there was nothing to grasp, but there are several main trends.

One of the most interesting is Tin Pan Alley was the music capital of the world in the old sheet-music days of the song pluggers. It's important, there are now three capitals and more than one way to grasp, but there are several main trends.

When Tin Pan Alley was the music capital of the world in the old sheet-music days of the song pluggers, it's important, there are now three capitals and more than one way to get a little more money to spend than did their older sisters. The record-makers see to it that they get their share but admit they are not always sure whether or not they have a hit. Pop singers are younger, too, and many come and go faster than a TV commercial.

One reason for the concentation of the pop single on this narrow but lucrative market is the trend toward the LP record. Once what a white artist was recorded is now compressed into a single record, it is less bulky, requires less changing and is often cheaper overall, although still more expensive than an LP record. Its music is more enduring than that even of the record. If it's attractive packaging possi­bilities have not been over­looked by the music publishers.

The proliferation of record­companies has hit the point where it is almost impossible to know them all. Many of the old giants publish­ers have practically retired from the wild com­petition, content to rake in the profits from assured his of a few years ago that are sure to be added to any com­plete collection.

"Anything Goes" covers the wide world of musical activity in the record revolution: Country and Western music, Broadway musicals, and the impact of the "Scotch" on the world. It's a product of Dachs's contacts with record companies and writers on entertainment for the Saturday Review and the New York Post. The book is a guide to summer reading. It is an adaptable writer and covers so completely all phases of its subject that a reader is sure to find something of interest among the music publishers.

Thrifty but Thrifty

The title is not an error. While it is true that in Scot­land "Scotch" suggests a distin­guished scholar to most people, it is very rare ever to refer to himself as "Scotch," the author care­fully explains that the scot­tish doctor who settled in Ontario along the lakeshore, Lake Erie preferred the word usually associated with a native Canadian. Mr. Gal­braith writes of their des­cendants, and of his own feelings toward them, with nostalgic affection.

The result is a baker's dozen of charming, and some­times poignant stories of rural life in Canada around the turn of the century. While the title of "Scotch" and their propensity for thrifty and hard liquor, their story might easily be the saga of the English, Jewish or Nordic ethnic groups who have been America's "natives." While it is not a炊k, the author con­cedes, is a tricky reference because that at times "deepened a shadow or sharpened a line."

This book is an intriguing change of pace for the author.

NEW YORK—Herbert Clark Hoover, 31st president of the United States, died Tuesday at the age of 90. His death followed a recurrence of massive gatro intestinal hemorrhage.

The stanch old statesman, whose life spanned a varied career of engineering, high office and humanitarian service, had kept busy almost to the last minutes.

Hoover's two sons were at his bedside when the end came. "Work" was his rule. He called it "the best antidote to talk of ills and pills." Death came quietly at his apartment at the Waldorf Towers, which he described as his "comfortable monastery.

He will lie in state at St. Bartholomew's Church, Park Avenue and 61st Street, for two days. After memorial services, he will be taken by train to the capital.

There will lie in state under the steps of the na tional capitol.

Following service there, his body will be flown to West Branch, Iowa, where the final services will be held as he is laid to rest. The national park at the site of the small town, where he was born in 1874.

Repeatedly, and sometimes miraculously, in his latter years, he had fought off or staved off serious ailments.

But time, and its wear. It is its freedom. Kap-still, Hoover endured much abuse, but he lived to regain national prestige and esteem as a wise, humane elder statesman.

He was sought out for counsel by Democratic office holders, as well as Republicans. Countless friends and admirers came to love him as a man of heart, sympathy and gentle wit.

Even his grave illnesses of recent times did not stop him from leisurely conversations with callers, and from keeping two secretaries at work with his writing.

Until lately, it had taken considerable fuel to keep up with this work. But wanting health allowed him down. He had undergone surgery for an abdominal cancer in August, 1962, made an astonish ing comeback from anemia brought on by intestinal bleeding in June, 1963, and recovered from akidney hemorrhage complicated by a respiratory infection in February, 1964.

Support Growing to Postpone Opening of General Assembly

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.-- Support is growing for a move to postpone the U.N. General Assembly opening to give the United States and the new Soviet regime time to work out a compromise on the issue of the U.S. vessels off the coast of Cuba. Diplomats predicted the opening would be delayed two weeks, until Nov. 24.

The 19-nation Latin-American group virtually unanimous approval to the idea at a meeting Monday after the United States announced it was willing to consider a postponement.

Informants said a number of Asian and African delegations also have signed approval. The Communists apparently are willing to go along.

The Soviets indicated they might quit the United Nations if they lost their assembly vote. They have refused to pay for representing their country.

The United Nations said it will hold the opening of its regular session next Monday at 10:30. Diplomats said the question will be a major item of discussion. The Soviets have threatened to take the United States to the International Court of Justice.

In addition to Cuba, the other major problem of the meeting will be the admission of the still-rejecting China. The United States will ask that China be admitted to the General Assembly and be given a place in the United Nations Security Council.

Herbert C. Hoover Dead, Busy Almost to the End

WASHINGTON -- U.S. offi cials are watching for possible further upheaval in the Soviet Union's leadership as they consider what steps the United States should take in the coming weeks to deal with changed international conditions.

President Johnson, who conferred with congressional leaders for 2 1/2 hours Monday, has called a meeting of his special advisory committee on foreign policy for Wednesday. This group of prominent private citizens will be given detailed reports on world developments and asked to consider various possible actions.

Johnson told newsmen that he had met with the congressional leaders, Democrats and Republicans, but gave no de tails of the information presented.

He did say he intended to make the reports by and several Cabinet members and members of the national security council available to a larger group of senators and representatives.

It is understood that the administration officials told the legislative leaders they are not sure what issues, domestic or international, will ultimately be the focal point of the overthrow of Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The briefing is also understood to have brought out that while Leonid I. Brezhnev, 37, seems to be the top man in the Soviet ruling group, the actual post-Khrushchev power structure is not yet clear and the possibility of further changes, possibly involving a power struggle in the Kremlin, must be borne in mind.

Khrushchev's formal authority as head of the Soviet Union was stripped from him by Brezhnev, as first secretary of the Communist party, and Alexei N. Kosygin, 60, as premier.

U.S. experts said real power in the Soviet Union is vested in the Communist party's presidium, which is a kind of board of directors with Brezhnev's position of that of chairman of the board.

Administration officials say the situation faced by Brezhnev, Kosygin and other members of the Communist ruling group is basically different in one respect from that which faced the men who took over after Stalin's death in 1953.

The men now in power have had a great deal of experience in working together. They share authority with Khrushchev, who spent almost three years' time away from Moscow.

Khrushchev is considered responsible for the decision to explode a nuclear device in Red China, in an interview with The Associated Press.

He said that, with the changes in the Kremlin, "the Russians can go either way. They can get closer to us or closer to China."

Salukis Unveil Double Wing-T; Phillips Paces Ground Attack

By Richard LaSala

A new Saluki offensive formation made its debut in Saturday's SIU victory over Drake.

The new formation, a double-wing-T, was instigated by head coach Don Shroyer in a surprise move to add variety to Southern's pro-style offensive attack. The move paid off with a much-needed 25-19 victory over Drake, a team which easily had contained SIU's offense in two previous games.

According to one Drake observer, Southern's use of the double-wing-T—featuring two flankerbacks (Rich Weber and Rudy Phillips) and only one runningback (fullback C.T. Traylor)—caught the Bulldogs' defense completely by surprise.

The new offense, which上司 the Salukis passing attack with some flashy running, kept the Bulldog defense off balance throughout the game, particularly in the second quarter when the Salukis tallied twice on pass plays.

For the second consecutive week, Rudy Phillips showed that he had the ability to handle first string flankerback duties for the Salukas. Against Drake, the 5-9, 173-pound speedster was Southern's leading groundgainer with 78 yards in 17 carries and was second in pass receptions with three for 33 yards and one touchdown. In addition, the swift Decatur sophomore is leading Saluki scoring after five games with 21 points (two touchdowns, a field goal and six extra points).

Former SIU quarterback Vera Pollack is having a successful season in his first year as coach at Carbondale Community High School, Pollack's Terriers squad, 3-0 in league play, is tied with Pinckneyville for first place in the Southwest Egyptian Conference. Carbondale and Pinckneyville, both showing 5-0 records, will meet in McAndrew Stadium Friday.
