300 Meeting At SIU for Safety Talks

Traffic safety, like the weather, is something "everyone talks about—but few people do anything about," but 300 high school students and educators here from 22 states are doing something about traffic safety.

SIU is playing host to this week to the seventh annual National Education Association through its National Commission on Safety Education.

Discussions social activities and addresses by safety experts are on tap for conference delegates at the threenday program which ends Wednesday.

A committee of 14 Illinois traffic safety educators, and the Illinois Student Senate, is sponsoring the event with the NEA.

The annual banquet will be held Wednesday afternoon in ballrooms B and C of the University Center. Paul Powell, Illinois secretary of state, will address the group. He will be followed by an address by H.J. Hardy, public relations executive for the American Oil Co.

Illinois schools slated to receive safety awards are Woodruff High School, Peoria; Lake Forest High School, Lake Forest; Parkside Junior High School, Roseville; Quincy High School, Quincy, and York Community High School in Elmhurst.

Financial sponsors of the student safety program are the American Oil Co., Chrysler Corp., Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. and the Ford Fund.

Foreign Students Invited to Meeting

All international students are encouraged to attend a rescheduled meeting between John Paul Davis, student body president, and the international student Club Presidents' Council at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the University Center Economics Building Lounge. The meeting had been rescheduled from August 19 because of inclement weather on that date.

On the agenda of Thursday's meeting is a discussion of activities and functions of the Student Council and a review of the election procedure for nominating the international student senator.

Plans for special trips during the year, as well as various activities slated for fall quarter, will also be discussed.

LOOKING AHEAD — How SIU's central academic campus will be enclosed in a loop road (solid line) and a new master plan based on bypass of Illinois Central tracks and Route 51. Dotted line shows another loop around proposed research complex and University Park residence areas. Campus Lake area is encircled by loop road now in operation.

McAndrew Stadium may someday become an open plaza surrounded by a multistory administration building, student services and general services buildings.

This new look for the campus is among the long-range objectives contained in the university's master development plan.

Under the plan, the campus would get a new front door near the site of McAndrew Stadium, with the proposed administration building facing a greatly widened and improved Harwood Avenue north of the stadium.

Planned is on the site of the stadium's present steel bleachers would be a student services building and a general services building would be located at the south end of the field. The plan scheme proposes a parking garage adjoining the administration center in the northwest corner of the complex.

The present football field would be turned into an open plaza inside the development. It would have a stage in the center for open-air productions, concerts, summer graduation and other activities. The existing grandstands facing the stage area, would be retained.

The football field itself would be moved to a University farm site near McClafferty Road at the far west edge of the present campus. Steel bleachers now at the stadium could be relocated there.

Planned for the administration building would be the president's office, purchasing office, business manager's office, personnel office, vice president's offices, the registrar, university architect and other university-wide contact functions.

Uses proposed for the student services building are the registrar's office, scheduling, housing, career counseling, student work, advisement, admissions, dean of academic affairs and other offices existing at the site.

The entire complex would permit students to use the building and related facilities in large numbers, and to occupy the space as activities demand.

Slated for the general services building would be the security office, fire department, ambulance service and telephone exchange. It would be served from the same concrete apron as the existing garage, and the north wall would be a decorative facade facing the plaza.

Funds for the administration building are included in the SIU's 1965-67 budget.

SIU master planning has become inseparably linked with a proposed bypass of the campus by the Illinois Central railroad and Route 51. With this in mind, planners gave the board a package of three alternative versions covering all planning contingencies.

Under Plan One, assuming that the tracks and highway will be rerouted around the campus at some future date, the campus is circled by main traffic loop that runs behind University school, north on University to Grainger east to Illinois (Route 51), then re-enters at approved Harwood Boulevard to reconnect with the present road in front of University Center.

Feeding into this from the east-side residential areas would be a road underneath the tracks and highway near

Calm Restored, Classes Resume At Breckinridge Job Corps Camp

Reasons Cited For Outbreak

Everything was calm at the Camp Breckinridge Job Corps center Monday. The camp was the scene of a riot last weekend and a mass exodus of trainees Friday.

The primary reason for the rioting Friday was "one big question," according to Charles Preston, public relations director at the center.

It was first attributed to racial conflicts, but officials later said the cause was not basically racial.

Some of the reasons mentioned by trainees and staff members were poor food, lack of privacy, a protection racket, thefts of clothing and money, and idleness.

The riot broke out about 12:30 p.m. Friday in front of the cafeteria. About 50 trainees were involved. Early reports numbered the rioters in the hundreds and said one person was killed.

No one was killed, but nine trainees were treated for stab wounds and four staff members were treated for injuries.

Mike Scullery, the firefighter who was pulled from his truck and beaten, was in satisfactory condition Monday.

When classes resumed Monday morning, 490 of the 546 trainees were on the center. Most of the staff members were also there; not all, however, came to work.

Not far from the Kentucky state troopers who circled the camp Friday were still on duty, Men from the Federal Bureau of Investigation were also still at the camp.

The camp has a security force of 50 men. Members of the SIU Security Police have also been transferred to Breckinridge for duty.

"There was no fight inside the cafeteria as was reported earlier," according to him, a group entered the building and then left.

Tourists' Impressions

Soviets Are a Proud, Conscientious People, Materially Poor But Rich in Appreciation

On Aug. 2 a group of 20 SIU students and faculty members left on a three-week tour of the Soviet Union. Here is a letter written by Linda J. Nelson, a junior at Southern, about their first impressions of Russia:

Well, the buildings are historical, but the people are practically the same as Americans. This opinion, expressed by many of the SIU Russian Study Tour Group, concerning their impressions of Copenhagen, Stockholm and Helsinki, was soon to be abruptly altered.

The first realization of a noticeable difference between Russia and the West came at the Russian border—the first border encountered by the tour where all luggage was inspected. As the tour progressed to Leningrad, this realization became even clearer.

After three days in that city, most of the tour agreed that the Soviet Union differs noticeably from the West and the United States both materially and theoretically.

Although the production of consumer goods in the Soviet Union has greatly increased in the past years, the quality of these goods could not compare with that of western consumer goods. At the same time, even though the prices of their goods are approximately equal to those of the West, their lower salary scale discourages the purchase of these goods.

For example, in the Soviet Union a man's suit costs approximately 70-80 rubles; a pair of women's shoes costs between 15 and 25 rubles; a chocolate bar (five cents in the United States) costs 50 kopecks. Although these prices are about equal to those of the West, when one considers that the average worker earns approximately 100 rubles ($110) per month, he recognizes the high cost of living in Russia today.

Realizing this lower salary, high-price situation, the SIU students found it much easier to understand why the people dressed in simple clothing with few accessories.

This lower quality is also noticeable in building materials. Just as the tour members were surprised to see only wooden or log cottages on the farms, they were equally surprised to discover that some of the buildings in Leningrad which they thought were products of the early 1900s were actually built after World War II.

But this material difference was not the only one noticed by the tour members. The different theoretical system under which the Soviet citizens live is also apparent. However, the students agreed that this difference was extremely difficult to explain.

As one student commented, "I can't wait to hear a home book or to change the dial on the radio." This still does not give a complete picture of the Soviet Union. It is true that in comparison with the West, their material wealth is little; but their beautifully tended public parks and subway stations, their clean streets and public conveyances, present another facet of Soviet culture.

It is almost impossible to spend a few days in the Soviet Union without noticing the pride and conscientiousness of the people. That the people have been raised to give in return, rather than to take without giving, was evidenced even by the children, who trade their tokens for souvenirs from America.

Many tour members were impressed by the desire of the Russians to study and learn, to increase their appreciation of music and art. This is shown by their numerous book and music stores in the cities.

This pride, conscientiousness and appreciation are qualities in the Russians that the tour members feel, if not entirely different from feeling in the West, at least more noticeable in the Russians.

It is true that in material goods the people of the Soviet Union can not begin to compete with the West. However, as one Russian citizen said, "Our houses are perhaps weak, but our citizens are strong."

The members of the Russian Study Tour disagreed with this statement. They feel that their main problem upon their return to the United States will be explaining about Russia to other Americans.

As one member of the tour put it, "How do you explain to someone who hasn't seen it that they do have less, but they really appreciate it so much more than Americans?"
Distinguished Alumnus Award
Given Dean Rehn by Oregon

Henry J. Rehn, who will resign effective Sept. 1 as dean of the School of Business, received a citation and bronze medallion for outstanding achievement from his alma mater, the University of Oregon.

It also cites his "counsel and advice given to the U.S. Bureau of Budget and consultation work with the Radio Corporation of America in the field of communications," and his "leadership in business education" as dean of the School of Business at SIU.

Rehn was appointed dean when the school was organized in 1957. He has been on the faculty at Southern since 1945. The achievement award was presented by the Oregon university's School of Business Administration as part of its 50th anniversary celebration. Dean Rehn received his master's degree from Oregon in 1925.

Letter to the Editor

Writer Would Trade 'Liberal' Dillard For 'Moderate, Intellectual' Columnist

I have much difficulty in understanding why a newspaper in Southern Illinois would print an article, of a radical liberal columnist of a Chicago newspaper, who advocates and supports governmental policies and activities which advocating and supporting the rights and freedoms of the people of Downstate Illinois. The columns of Irving Dillard are nothing but the senseless ravings of a reactionary. A prime example is his all-out support for referendum and one vote court ruling (Daily Egyptian, Aug. 19). The supporters of this ruling (most of the liberals) fail to point out that it effectively means that the people of Downstate Illinois (all of Illinois except Chicago) will have much difficulty in casting a vote for president in their state government. Half the votes in the 89th Congress had a check and balance system similar to the U.S. Congress; representation in one house was based on population, the other on geographic area. Now, with reapportionment of the check and balance system; absolute power is in Chicago, Dillard friends and foes. Not cows and trees, should be the basis for legislative representation. However, with such unlimited power located in the City, they could, and very likely would, place taxes upon 'cows and trees.' (Who in the city has any cows or trees?) Such unchecked power of the Chicago to bleed the rest of the state even more than it does now, and to support his "free-market" relief and exhorbitant city construction programs. The leftist philosophies of Dillard are an abomination to all the people of Illinois (except Chicagoans), and especially to the interests of coastal Illinoisans. I realize that there are too many radicals both on a university campus and in the media who will continue to support this "truth" into the minds of undergraduates. Undergraduates, hope that someday we, too, will become alumni.

All Letters to the Editor Must Include Signatures

Readers are reminded that the policy of the Daily Egyptian does not permit publication of unsigned letters to the editor.

If it's worth writing, it's worth signing.

IRVING DILLARD

A High Point in Progress

The tragic war in Viet Nam and the Los Angeles riot, with their horrible costs in human life and resources and property, have made it hard to appreciate the full significance of the historic legislative program now going through the 86th Congress and becoming law with the signature of President Johnson. The medicare law, more properly described as health insurance for the elderly, is long overdue, but the real purpose for which it was enacted was to teach the world how to get older with their health. What was long overdue is a program of hospitalization for the elderly. The need for such a program was obvious, the population, already heavily urban, is becoming even more so. Yet rural-dominated congressional delegations have blocked the passage of an urban affairs department until now.

Expert Leadership Proves Worth

These are the only high spots of the legislative program that is being enacted by the Johnson administration. Earlier case the war-on-poverty measure, aid to depressed Appalachia, and federal assistance to education were of prime importance.

Since the need for this program is not new, why is it being enacted now when it could have been passed in previous Congresses? First, because there is a professional in the White House who has the skill, the knows-how and the personal resources required. Second, because the 1964 election so strengthened the liberal bloc in Congress that the old guard Republicans-Dixicrats combine has had its teeth pulled.

And so the 86th Congress is going into the history books as one of the most constructive ever assembled.

ROBERT M. HUTCHINS

Editor Chicago's American

U.S. Press 'Ignorant,' Doesn't Educate Public

By Robert M. Hutchins

Not long ago, 15 foreign journalists, sponsored by the press of the United States at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, spent a year in this country. How does the World Press Institute at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn. In addition to traveling through the land, they had each worked three months for a major American newspaper, magazine or television station.

They came from every­where. There were five Latin Americans and six Europeans, from as many countries. There was a man from Japan and one from India. They were representatives of the Middle East and Africa.

The Latin Americans thought the American press could not be bribed and intimidated, but that the same could not be said of all the newspapers on their continent. The Frenchman remarked that American television could be overly critical of the government, whereas French television was being used as a propaganda instrument of the regime.

These points were to the good, but beyond them the visitors could do little but express their amazement and concern. False reporting on civil rights in the South, anti­communist fascism and general failure to inform the people were the charges unanimous­ly brought against the American press by these Latin Americans.

One of the Latin Americans summed up the view of his colleagues when he said that the press in the United States was more honest, but more ignorant and more corrupt than that of his own country.

The meaning of that statement, which seems paradoxical, is that the foreign press is less American and the American press is less foreign. It results from the interaction of culture. Neither is the ignorance of the American press delibera­tive, it is a consequence of the weakness of American education.

According to the visitors, the ignorance of the American press leads it to pay attention to "political noises" in other countries, rather than to the actual conditions. Our press, they said, does not know enough about conditions elsewhere to form any judgment on the signific­ance of such political noises. The foreign journalists' criticism came to this: The American press, instead of telling its readers what they ought to know, tells them what they want to hear. They want to hear about the disruptive effects of communism; they do not care to learn anything about what is going on from day to day in faraway places, the names of which they cannot pronounce.

The visitors were, in effect, attacking the American press for its political noises. There is no more hateful and educational function. Americans must agree that, with few notable exceptions, the American press is. If the American press can be trained, as it must be, to give more consistent attention to world affairs, it might continue to sell papers.

SIU Gets Role in State Promotional Film

Microbiology Laboratory Featured in Illinois Bell Movie

ROLL 'EM - An SIU microbiology laboratory was turned into a movie studio when part of a film being produced by the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. about the educational, cultural, recreational and industrial advantages of Illinois was shot there. The picture on the left shows director Dick Vuillame (striped shirt) giving action directives to Ramone Tate, left. Seated at the lab counter are Charles Yantis and Robert Bell. At the adjoining lab table are Judy Page and John House. The picture at right shows the maze of lights and the camera crew at work. Left to right are cameramen John Eisenbach, Phil Risser, studio mechanic (holding microphone boom), Vuillame, Bill Fanta, assistant director and Pete Hopke, assistant cameraman.

In addition to the shots in the lab, several general campus scenes were also filmed here. Vuillame said some recreation, farming and fox-hunting sequences were also taken. The film will be used by the company to promote industrialization in Illinois. It is being made to use in support of a program by the State Board of Economic Development to seek to bring in new industry. Seven students and Dr. O. McClary, associate professor of microbiology, were involved in the shots taken in the laboratory Aug. 11.
Familiar faces will return to the Saluki basketball line-up this fall. Lloyd Stovall, who started at center for Southern two years ago, has returned to school after an one-year absence.

Since he joined the Saluki team six-foot-six junior averaged 9.3 points per game and pulled down 104 rebounds during his 21 games with SIU second highest on that year's team.

But Stovall doesn't have a guarantee for the 1965-66 starting center position. He must beat out six-foot-four Boyd O'Neal and six-foot-seven Ralph Johnson, who divided the pivot position last year.

Other newcomers include Andy Kukla, a transfer student from Wichita State University, and two boys up from the SIU freshman team, six-foot-three forward Jay Westcott, Arizona, and six-foot guard Bobby Lack, Harvey.

The four new faces will join such familiar names as Walt Carter, Dave Lee, George McCull, Bill Lacy, Roger Buckland and Ed Zastrow, forwards Randy Goin, Clarence Smith and Bill Roberts, and center Andy Stovall.

Coach Jack Hartman is a little concerned about lack of depth at the forward spot and may use one or two of his centers there.

Wichita State University is the only Missouri Valley Conference opponent on the Saluki schedule. Southern will play the Shockers here Dec. 20 and there March 1.

"Scheduling is the hardest part of the job," said Hartman. "There is difficulty in getting good schools to play us, because Southern isn't established itself as a name school. We hope that these schools won't use us because they have nothing to gain by it."

But Hartman pointed out that the Shockers are a few well-known basketball schools. Southern will play Wichita and arch-rival Evansville.

Christian Athletes Group Is Planned

Bill Knuckles, assistant football coach, is planning to sponsor a chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes at Southern.

Collegiate meetings were held during the spring, and Knuckles said the group plans to get started this fall. "We're looking for a small nucleus of athletes who are interested in the organization," Knuckles said.

He plans to play a few well-known basketball schools. Southern will play Wichita and arch-rival Evansville.

Oklahoma Track Coach Testifies In NCAA-AAU Senate Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Track Coach William J. (Bill) Bowlerman of the University of Oregon told testified Senators Monday, one U.S. amateur athlete secretly received an "airplane bag full" of money to compete in a crack meet in Ireland. He did not estimate how much the money totaled.

Bowlerman said "one of our own Oregon athletes" was offered an automobile as an in- troduction to compete in a meet sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union but turned down the gift.

Such payments and gifts are strictly forbidden by amateur rules.

At the committee's request, Bowlerman gave no names in this or later testimony. But he agreed to give the committee in confidence names, dates and other data.

He made the allegations to bolster his contention that the National Collegiate Athletic Association is justified in demanding the right to give or withhold its sanction for college athletes to compete in AAU meets.

He has harsh words also for what he called the "dishonest AAU officials" he said were involved in an incident that ended a Kansas Runner's career.

The NCAA has been boycotting AAU competition as a device to force agreement to its demands for co-sanctioning rights for sanctions.

Tony Lema Outlasts Palmer in Tournament

SUPTON, Mass. (AP) — Champion Tony Lema richness one of Arnold Palmers' famed stretch charges and won for $200,000. Carling World Tournament by two shots Monday with a 72-hole total of 279.

Lema, the 1964 British Open and World Series of Golf King, built a three-stroke lead and hung on top prize of $35,000, and another luster party as host with a final round of one- under-364.

Palmer, playing in a three- some just ahead of Lema, made a tremendous effort to break out of a slump in which he has failed to win a tournament since early May. The victory boosted Lema's 1965 earnings to $236,162.50.

any estimate made of the property damage, but Preston said there was "hardly any."

Camp Recreation Field opened on June 1. Preston said that a lot of the complaints made by trainees stemmed from the fact that the "program was put together in a big hurry."

Building is still going on at the camp. A new dormitory will be opened on June 1. Preston said that the rioters were those who "thought they would not be beaten, and the report is being investigated."

"They were just three different times to kill me," said Sergeant Blankenship, 19, of Jamestown, Ky., as he was getting on a bus to leave. Another student who complained about the racket was Ralph Alton, 18, of Pascagoula, Miss. He said, "If the officials here had a stand before this, it would never have happened. They were always giving these guys a second chance."

Preston said he had known about the racket for about two weeks. He said he felt the number of trainees involved was too small because "it wouldn't pay off of them." He added that the racket "is being investigated, but the investigation is going slowly because the members of the racket won't talk, and the victims aren't going to."

Beginning Monday morning, three steps had been taken by the center, either for security or in answer to the complaints of the trainees:

- Members of the SIU Security Police were sent to the camp.
- The communications skills department of the center was reorganized. This reorganization puts some trainees in elementary courses in writing, reading and arithmetic and others in high school level courses.
- Preston termed the reorganization "better breakdown according to ability."

The communications skills courses are not job-training oriented. They are merely to help the trainee communicate better.

- The beginning of vocational skills courses. These courses, including such skills as blueprint reading, are planned for job training.

By modified bus schedules on the other two, has been proposed.

Envisioning a student population in excess of 25,000 by 1970, planners have given prime emphasis to vehicular and pedestrian traffic circulation. The entire space within the main loop road is now planned for academic use and buildings are grouped in the master plan so as to improve pedestrian mobility.

"Express sidewalks," designed to carry foot traffic directly to groups of buildings with no intervening obstructions, are among features of the new plan.

Other highlights of the plan:
- Provision for parking.
- Two high-rise residence halls west of the campus lake, similar to the University Park towers.
- A Faculty Club site on the south shore of Campus Lake.
- A student recreation development south of the campus lake beach. Buildings would include facilities for swimming, skating, handball, tennis courts and service areas, dancing and dining.

by bulletin boards! They're pretty unpopular around here, you know. Kind of give us an Avis complex. (We don't want to be number two.)

But we can't understand it, either. Why do people advertise on bulletin boards? Newspapers are for advertising. And we think the Daily Egyptian is a better than average newspaper.

And think almost these 10,000 papers rolling off the presses every night (except for Sundays and Mondays) for those nice people reading it every day (upwards of 10,000; maybe 20,000.) And then think that it costs only a buck. That's one classified ad (up to 20 words) and that you can reach many many more possible buyers or renters or helpers, and we doubt if you could stand it either. We want to make bulletin boards number two. So, please give us a hand. Place ads with us. We're quick, efficient, and inexpensive.

Help us stamp out bulletin board advertisers!
