Halloween poll shows varied results

By Kathleen DeBo

A majority of University faculty and Carbondale residents polled favor ending Carbondale's annual Halloween celebration, but students are about evenly divided on the issue, according to a survey presented to the Halloween Care Committee.

In the survey, 48 percent of the students polled thought Halloween tradition should be scaled back or stopped completely compared to 44 percent of the faculty and 26 percent of the residents.

Fifty-two percent of the students thought the event should be continued or expanded compared to 56 percent of the faculty and 50 percent of the residents.

A majority of the students think the event helps Carbondale's image as a good place to socialize, but hurt its image as a good place to live. A majority of students thought the event hurt Halloween tradition, but favored the University for a week at the end of October.

Fifty-five percent of the students favored the University for a week at the end of October.

Twenty-three percent of the faculty opposed the closing compared to 31 percent of the residents and 46 percent of the students.

Twenty-two percent of the faculty, 26 percent of the residents and 25 percent of the students didn't care whether the school was closed.

A majority of the students think the event is a "administrative hoax," prepared by Jack McKillip, professor of psychology and director of the SIU Student Health Program Evaluation Center, and Rod Lyerla, doctoral candidate in educational psychology, were presented to the committee at its meeting Tuesday morning. A telephone survey measured the opinions of University faculty, Carbondale residents and University students on the current Halloween festivities. It also recorded responses to President John Guyot's proposal to close the University for a week at the end of October.

Disputes ignite at internal BAS review

African Studies walks out on task force

By Jeanne Bickler

The African American Studies Association denounced the Black American Studies review committee and then walked out during the committee's internal public hearing Tuesday.

"The whole object is, we don't see the object here (for the committee)," an unidentified AASA member said. Corwyn Moore, an AASA member, read a proposal prepared by AASA members discussing the BAS review committee as "administrative hoax."

The AASA stated in the proposal that they do not see the need for the task force, since it is purely advisory, and has no decision-making powers.

"We want to know what you want," Jim Scates, Career Development Center director and committee chairman, said.

The committee was formed to study the mission, purpose, goals and objectives of the BAS program. The committee also will make recommendations to Benjamin Shepherd, the vice president for Academic Affairs and Research, on the ideal number of faculty and structure.

"The emphasis of the committee is on the structure of the BAS program," Trudy Hale, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council and member of the committee, said.

Seven of the ten committee members were present.

The hearing opened with Scates asking audience members to allow the committee to ask some prepared questions in a focus group that students want.

Scates asked students not to identify themselves, "because answers, not names, are important for us to consider what students want."

Students were asked about BAS should be developed on campus, about the possibility of a cultural center, the liberal education course, and what courses they would like to see in BAS.

The 25-25 students present responded by saying they would like to see all of those things and more. Students said they felt the black faculty members, more courses offered and more emphasis put on the worth of the program.

One student said there are 27 black organizations on campus and the students don't feel the BACC is in charge of them.

Clear-cutting in Shawnee set for review

By Lisa Miller

The U.S. Forest Service in Washington has called for a review of two areas in the Shawnee National Forest before the clear-cutting of those areas can continue.

The U.S. Forestry Service contends that the areas of Quillen Creek in Pope County and Town Hall in Jackson County have been environmentally assessed improperly to find if clear-cutting will have a hazardous effect on the environment.

Clear-cutting is the removal of trees from tracts of land to use for commercial sale.

The Shawnee Forestry Service was sent a letter by the Chief of the U.S. Forest Service in Washington, notifying them that they must look at the environmental implications of clear-cutting those areas, Sam Emmons, Shawnee timber management, information and involvement officer, said.

"A review team has been set up and we should get some results within the next week," Emmons said.

The areas must be checked botanically and biologically for any endangered plant or animal species and for harm.

University worker running for council

By Jackie Spinnere
Staff Writer

University Job Placement Specialist Carl Flowers said he will represent the city of Carbondale and the University if elected to the City Council.

"I have lived in Carbondale for 17 years and gone to school and worked at SIU," Flowers said.

The 1979 graduate of SIU-C is running against incumbents John Yow and Keith Tuxhorn, Marvin Tanner and Kyle Engleit in the Feb. 28 primary election.

If elected, Flowers would bring experience as a member of the city's Liquor Advisory Board, board member of the Center for Independent Living and former president of the Carbondale chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"My biggest challenge would be trying to serve all the citizens, but I would vote keeping the people I would represent in mind," Flowers said.

Although Flowers said the issue of "withholding Carbondale's Halloween parade" is not an issue for the city, he agreed with University President John C. Guyon's idea for a fall break.

He added, "If there isn't a way to make it professionally then they should shut the whole thing down."

Flowers said Carbondale should have an event that serves all of the citizens instead of "driving people out of town for fear of what might happen to them."

The City Council needs to emphasize economic development in the next year, Flowers said.

"We should focus on trying to get new companies and businesses into Carbondale," he said.

Another issue that should be solved in the near future is the problem of underage drinking in Carbondale, Flowers said.

"The easiest way to resolve the issue is to not admit anyone under 21 to the bars," Flowers said. "But then it moves into the community."

Flowers, the father of one son, said he is an SIU basketball fan and enjoys playing tennis and tennis and for high school basketball.

Local bookstores delayed in receiving 'Verses'

By Fernando Feliz-Moggi
Staff Writer

Carbondale residents willing to purchase Salman Rushdie's controversial novel "The Satanic Verses" will have to wait for at least a week before they can get the novel from a local bookstore.

The book is available upon request at Waldenbooks, in the University Mall, John Buckhold, bookstore manager, said.

Buckhold said once the book was ordered, it takes from a week to a week-and-a-half for the store to get it.

Waldenbooks' deal would be the fastest in town. Other bookstores will receive copies of the novel from a local bookstore.

The employee said the book is unavailable from the publisher, and there are about half a million back orders for it.

"The waiting list is so long that it might take several weeks before the book gets to the store," Fox said. "By the time we get it, it will no longer be a big issue."

Because of this, Fox said Waldenbooks would be ordering not ordering the book at all.

At Book World, 170 S. Illinois Ave., "a couple" of special orders have been filled and the book is expected to be there in about three weeks, Dave Eakin, owner of the store, said.

An employee of the University Bookstore said the store had tried to order the book Tuesday morning, but both the publisher and the other suppliers had sold out.

No employees said the bookstore could try to order the novel when new copies are available — as soon as new prints come out.

In a few weeks, the book will be available in Morra Library.

A copy of the book has been ordered for the Special Collections section, a library spokesman said.

"It isn't a rare book, but because they are trying to manage it and because it's controversial we would like to add it to our First Amendment Collection," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said the book will be available to the public.

State's Attorney wants Jones' trial to quicken

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

State's Attorney Charles Grace expressed dissatisfaction Tuesday with the lengthy trial of Duane Jones, who was charged with the stabbing death of a Carbondale woman in 1987.

In a status hearing at the Jackson County Courthouse, Public Defender Robert Van Derhoff asked for another hearing to determine if Jones is fit to stand trial.

Jones was declared mentally unfit to stand trial in two previous hearings, but those determinations were reversed in July.

Jones of East St. Louis, faces three counts of first-degree murder in connection with the stabbing death of Marshella Sanders Houston.

Houston, a mother of four, was attacked by Jones outside her home at 706 N. Barnes St. Houston died of multiple stab wounds Oct. 22, 1987 at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Van Derhoff said Dr. Michael Alfie, a Carbondale psychologist, had declared Jones mentally unfit to stand trial. Circuit Judge David Watt Jr. granted a hearing to determine Jones' competency for a date yet to be determined.

Grace said he did not doubt Van Derhoff's argument, but expressed desire to "move swiftly" with the fitness standing and go forward with the trial.

"The matter has been back and forth on the fitness question since October of '87," Grace said. "It's now over a year since this matter has been raised."

Watt said Jones' trial date is still set for March 6, which was set during a preliminary hearing Jan. 23, until it can be determined if Jones is fit to stand trial.
Clearcutting protests have wrong focus

ENVIRONMENTALISTS CLAIM clearcutters can’t see the forest for the trees.

Recent action by the Jackson County Board approving a registered clearcut has shed some light in the forest.

The resolution that the board approved enabled the Association of Concerned Environmentalists to appeal to the U.S. Forest Service, whose officials in the Shawnee National Forest are doing the clearcutting, to stop it.

The Forest Service says clearcutting is not harmful to trees when done properly, and that the timber is needed for commercial sale.

"CLEARCUTTING HAS BEEN done in the Shawnee National Forest for 20 years, and according to the timber management staff officer, thus usually done, it is properly handled, and the timber is routinely regenerated.

With the support of the Jackson County Board, the environmentalists appealed to the U.S. Chief of Forest Service in Washington, D.C.

Environmentalists said they were concerned not only about the harvest of the trees, but endangered plant and animal species whose habitat in the Shawnee National Forest is being disrupted or destroyed.

IN FACT, ENVIRONMENTALISTS believe the Forest Service could be in violation of the National Environmental Policy Act because of refusal to stop reconstruction of the Cave Valley Bridge in the Shawnee National Forest, an area of clearcutting controversy.

Clearcutting in the Cave Valley area also may be a violation of the Endangered Species Act, but the Forest Service has yet to take any action until an assessment can be made to determine if endangered species do live there.

THUS CONTINUES the endless cycle. The environmentalists find a way to stop the clearcutting and the clearcutting goes on.

Although the Forest Service should have the sense and conscience to watch for endangered species and stop clearcutting in areas where it would disturb them, there probably should be some law or act regarding clearcutting that protects endangered species.

People involved should respect the commercial aspect of clearcutting. If it doesn’t endanger anyone or anything there is no reason for all of the hoopla that is being created.

IF ENVIRONMENTALISTS really need something to worry about, why not all the toxic waste that won’t disappear or the hole in the ozone layer that can’t be patched. There is enough irreversible damage being done to the environment without having to fight over trees — after all, people have been cutting them for centuries.

Evolution theory misleading

A common misconception is that evolution theory suggests that humans evolved from monkeys and/or apes. This misconception is evidenced in Doug Toder’s paragraph which states that "human beings came from monkeys..." in his review article on the Feb. 14 "Evolution vs. Creation." For Toder, the anatomical and muscular evidence indicates that fossil and living humans and all fossil and living apes and monkeys evolved from the same ancestral species.

Parking complaints not valid

After seeing (not reading) innumerable letters in the DE about the parking problems on campus I was not surprised to see an editorial about it. I think everyone gets tired of complaining about the parking situation is a pain.

All my undergraduate years I dreamed of the day that I could afford a motor vehicle so

I might enjoy the pleasure of looking for a parking space.

Now I park at the Arena and I walk, and I will not complain.

Israel only defending its homeland

The check is in the mail. You won’t get pregnant. I didn’t see the stop sign. The P.L.O. does not support terrorism. Add the last statement to the great lies of the world. In Araba’s speech before the UN Security Council, he denounced all forms of terrorism. If this were true, there would be peace in the occupied territories. Peace could come much quicker if the Palestinians discontinue their assassination of soldiers. Possibly this weapon is being advertised as a recreational activity for college students. Whatever the case, I am pleased that this campus paper is doing a good job of facts and I would advertise such a ghastly weapon. Maybe tomorrow you or your neighbors, turn off your VCRs once in a while and talk about our feelings, and try to keep in mind that maybe what the world needs most, after all, is just a little more TLC — Steve Harvey, junior, sociology.

Pro-lifers in a 'magic' kingdom

IT LOOKS LIKE the pro-lifers have done it. Fifteen years after the Supreme Court decided on Roe vs. Wade, abortion is again an issue on a national scale. The historic court case is currently being reconsidered, and both sides are saying that anyone is wrong and bold that separation of church and state is necessary. Abortion will be decided by the court of last resort, and in the end, the court will make a decision that most people will be satisfied with.

decided to keep her child, much to the dismay of her fiancé, who decided to disappear. Jan is not going to college, and no indication as to where she will go when her support comes to an end. She is not going to be there, and the baby will be left in the lurch.

Is it that we have souls?

Hate? Is it that we can go to someone and get help while our children are being taken away from us?

Is it that we have the right to life?

The controversy over abortion stems from one question: Does life begin at conception or at birth?

If you believe that life begins at conception, none of the above will convince you, because to you, abortion is murder and cannot be condoned in any way. However, if you believe life begins at birth, then the evidence should support whether or not the right of abortion is necessary. Abortion is not just a way to "escape one's responsibilities"; it is often the result of both the mother and the child

Fetuses need "benefit of doubt"

THE NATURE of human consciousness has been a subject of much debate, and as a result, so has the question of fetuses. What qualities define us as different than animals? Is it that we have souls? Is it that we have a dog seen capable of love and hate? Is it that we can think? Are smarter, people more human than less intelligent beings?

Neither the doctors who study the brain nor the spiritual leaders who explain our hearts have been able to satisfactorily answer the question of when human life begins. Does human life begin at conception, birth or somewhere in between? We do not know, but we are learning.

In the United States, most hold that the separation of church and state is necessary to ensure the freedoms of all. The separation of church and state may not support nor deny religious beliefs, it simply stops one section of the populous against another.

IF THE SUPREME Court rules that human life begins at conception, then the court is overturning the religious beliefs of much of the Judeo-Christian segment of our society. If the court rules that human life begins at birth, it will be defined by the physical realities of the body, and the court has made a statement (concerning the validity) of holding religious beliefs in nothingness.

Specifically, the court — an arm of the state — would be saying that anyone is wrong who believes the defining characteristics of human existence in the soul rather than our physical development. For instance, if the court would rule that human life begins after the heart begins to beat, then what has the court said about the religious belief that human life begins at conception? No wonder the issue of abortion is a source of conflict.

IN LIGHT OF these arguments, the court cannot make a judgment either way without violating the separation of church and state. The court can only rule that there is doubt as to when human life begins.

So what does a court do when faced with doubt? It yields to the benefit of the doubt.

For instance, if a court cannot determine guilt or innocence, then it assumes innocence, because the court seems imposing an innocent person to be a greater evil than releasing a guilty one.

It seems that if the court must determine a time when a fetus is to enjoy constitutional rights, it should be the one which gives the fetus the "benefit of the doubt" to prevent the possible unlawful denial of life and rights.

MANY ARE probably wondering, and rightfully so, about the bypass of the "woman's right to choose." If the court should decide to grant fetuses the rights of individuals then what gives the fetus the right to occupy the mother's body? What right does one have to interfere on behalf of the fetus?

By law the state requires that parents see to the welfare of their children because it is assumed that the parents have implicitly made a commitment to their children simply by producing them. Similarly, if fetuses should enjoy individual rights then the parents should be required to see to their welfare.

It is not without precedent that the state regulates what people do with their bodies. People may not lawfully use illegal drugs or engage in prostitution because the state does not have the resources to stop them.

If the state can control the body in regard to drugs and sex, then the possibility of denying human life also merit regulation.

and only 42 black faculty members. He called for the existing black faculty to support the students in name and stop ignoring the cause before them.

He asked the committee, with three black faculty members present, if today’s generation should follow the example of their elders by not getting involved in issues concerning blacks.

Several members of the AASA then denounced the committee, saying the committee was not going to be taken seriously by the administration because of its advisory status.

Students walked out of the meeting, encouraging others to join them. "Students must recognize that the committee is a sham. The only possible positive thing the committee can do for the BAS program is to disband itself," Franz Mullings, AASA coordinator, said.

Mullings said the committee is being used to "buy time" for the University administration’s trace.

Professor of Political Science said, "All black faculty were invited to these hearings. They didn’t come because they think all the decisions have already been made on BAS. That’s what happened here tonight (with the students walking out)."

Professor of Political Science said, "The behavior of the students is understandable. Whenever the administration ignores the recommendations of a committee, it is harder to get people to participate in the next time."

The BAS review committee held hearings almost all day yesterday for both registered student organizations and individual students in the Student Center.

The AASA proposals were released at the Fed. 9 Board of Trustees meeting.

The primary reasons for the Forest Service, to call for a review are the increased public concern about clear-cutting, the fragile soil in the area and the soil erosion that may affect the lake Kinkaid watershed which provides drinking water for Murphysboro, Thomas said.

"Because of all the rain, the erosion could wash into the water and could impair the drinking water," Thomas said.

However, the local branch of the U.S. Forest Service claims it uses less severe actions that reduce soil erosion.

"We use restricted methods that decompose soil erosion," Bob Mason, lands, watershed and mineral officer for the Shawnee National Forest, said.

Both Pope and Jackson counties have passed resolutions banning clear-cutting.

Although the resolution is not legally binding, it is a big change of support by the people in those counties, Thomas said.

"People want the clear-cutting stopped," Thomas said.

The U.S. Forest Service said it will assess the area within the next week. If it finds that the environment of the area that can exist in question, it will go through the process of clear-cutting, then they will begin the cutting immediately, Emmons said.

"The Forest Service is saying it’s going to assess the area and if it finds it cannot exist in question, it will be cut immediately," Emmons said.

James Addiction

The recreational use of nitrous oxide has been popular since the 19th century when demonstrations of laughing gas were given commonly. Today it has many uses, including that of general anesthetic, particularly in dental offices, as a propellant for whipped cream, and so forth. It is toxic to the liver. Nitrous oxide is available as a pyrotechnic in small metal cylinders, popularly called "whippets," and are sometimes sold in drug paraphernalia shops.

There are dangers associated with breathing anything from a pressurized can since the gas that comes out is very cold and can cause frostbite of the nose, lips, cheek and ears, and is toxic to the liver. Nitrous oxide can be used as laughing gas, and there are many reports of deaths due to its ingestion.

Nitrous oxide does not contain any oxygen to sustain life, can result in your death, heart failure, or organic brain damage resulting in personality changes or psychoses to name just a few of the potential consequences. Anaesthesia is usually accompanied by a blueness of the skin color due to a shortage of oxygen.

James, inhaling nitrous oxide may be a gas, but it certainly isn’t a laughing matter. It sounds like you’re sufficiently concerned that you should see a doctor and confirm if you’ve had any permanent damage. You definitely don’t need any more gas.

Director develops theatrical version of still photograph

By Wayne Wallace

Entertainment Editor

"Tell Me For God's Sake, But Make It Snappy, I'm Tired and the Bus is Picking Up Speeds." Who said play titles had to make sense? Certainly not John Capecci, director-adaptor of this Calipre stage production.

"Tell Me For God's Sake," a collection of 20 short scenes, will be performed on 8 p.m. Saturday in the Calipre Theater.

"The title...is a surprise," Capecci, a doctoral student in performance studies, said. Adapted from "Sudden Fiction," an anthology of "really short" stories, the play takes literature intended for the stage and turns it into a series of performance pieces.

"IF A NOVEL is the equivalent of a film, then short-shorts are the equivalent of a still photograph. That's the impression we're trying to create," Capecci said.

"Short-shorts!" is the term Capecci uses to describe the skits.

"The shortest one's a sentence long. You can only do so much with 18 words, but I was amazed at how much can happen in such a short amount of time," he said.

"The longest scene is about a page long and we fit 20 of these into an hour's worth of time," he added.

THE SCENES are totally unrelated and are strung together in random order, he said. Capecci said he didn't want to give any of the plots away because he feels it would spoil the over all effect for the audience.

"Suffice it to say that they are quick, fun, touching. Did I say fun?" he asked.

These vignettes aim at recreating moods and sparking a series of impressions within the viewer, rather than conforming to the traditional narrative structure of exposition, conflict and resolution, Capecci said.

"I'm going to be really interested in the audience's reactions," he said. "Some of these scenes get strange. In some, before you can decide whether to laugh or cry, the skit ends and leaves you with a weird feeling."

"YOU KNOW how when you're driving and you wish you could stop and look at something, but you have to pass it up, that's the feeling you get. And I don't mean road kill," Capecci said.

As far as Capecci knows, he is the first one to experiment with adapting a collection of short-shorts for theatrical presentation.

Will it work? "I think so," Capecci said. "I guess we'll find out Thursday night with our first audience."

"That's what I like about the Calipre, the new challenges and the freedom to experiment," he added.

CAPECCI is using nine actors, no costumes and sparse sets to create his world of theatrical fast food.

"It's a mix of comedy and drama. One story takes place on another planet, but we don't use moonrocks and lasers to get our point across. We work with people's imaginations. We don't need sets to evoke a sense of setting. We simply use our vocal qualities. Plus we're poor," Capecci said.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children over 10. Advance tickets may be purchased in the speech communications office in the Communications Building.
Daley blasts Mayor Sawyer for alleged ethics breaches

CHICAGO (UPI) — With just one full week left in the Democratic primary campaign for mayor, front-runner Richard M. Daley Tuesday blasted Acting Mayor Eugene Sawyer for alleged "weakness" and "unprofessionalism."

Daley has been well ahead in every poll taken since he announced his candidacy Dec. 5 but the latest polls released during the weekend show Sawyer gaining.

Daley also chided Sawyer for his slow response to inflammatory remarks made during the weekend by Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., who said Daley was a "born and bred racist."

Sawyer has spent the past few days denouncing Savage's remarks, and on Saturday was forced to say publicly he did not think Daley was a racist.

Sawyer also has been bombarded by remarks in a New York Times article by the Rev. Al Simpson, who was quoted as saying if Daley is elected mayor, "There will be protests in the streets. We will shut this city down."

Daley — reacting to a report that some $400,000 in campaign contributions to Sawyer may have violated the city's ethics code and state law — said Sawyer's fundraising "showed a lack of professionalism in a campaign," and reflects the "real weakness" of his administration.

"It's an example of the lack of professional and competent people, not only on his campaign, but also in City Hall," Daley told reporters. He called Sawyer's fundraising "a serious violation."

Director to play at Shroock

School of Music Director Robert Roubos will play the organ in Shroock Auditorium at 8 p.m. tonight.

The program features the American premiere of Frank Stumper's "Trylongenesis." Stumper, the music school's composer in residence, will give a short lecture before the performance. In addition to Stumper's work, composed in 1988, Roubos will perform organ works by 18th-century composer Johann Sebastian Bach, 19th-century composer Cesar Franck and other organ works from the 14th century. Admission is free.

Wolfpack set for title game with Duke

United Press International

North Carolina State's lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference is on the line when the 15th-ranked Wolfpack play at No. 4 Duke Thursday. "We probably have given our players blindfolds in the backyard before," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "Don't you usually get blindfolds before an execution?"

It shouldn't be that bad, although Duke has won six straight games by an average margin of 20 points. The latest loss came at the coat of Georgia Tech Monday night.

In addition, the game will mark the final home appearance for Duke star Danny Ferry and fellow seniors Quinn Snyder and John Smith.

"They already retired Ferry's jersey, now they'll retire his shorts," I guess Valvano said. "I try to stay away from two things — opening somebody's arena and final home games. I know it will be tough.

Valvano always has quips, but this year he is having a last laugh. The Wolfpack being shadowed for six weeks by a forthcoming book that charges widespread corruption in his program, Valvano has the Wolfpack atop the ACC with an 8-2 record. North Carolina is 8-3 and Duke 7-4.

"The fact that we are both playing well, it should be an easy battle," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Newcomer notables

Don Thurman was named Player of the Week for the second consecutive week as Bradley has upped its winning streak to seven games.

Thurman scored 73 points last week and shot 63 percent from the field in three games. His 33 points against Drake was a career high.

"He is the first junior college player I have ever had, and it has taken him a certain amount of time to adjust," Albeck said. "I know (SIU's Freddie) McSwain has had his peaks and valleys and he's too. I think he will give us additional momentum going into the tournament.

"Those two people (Manning and Thurman) have keyed our turnaround. We let six bad games, now we have turned the direction around and are heading north.

With the MVC season ending next week, McSwain and Thurman seem to be two of the top candidates for newcomer of the Year honors, with Tulsa's Lamont Randolph also having his name in the hat.

Along with the player awards, the MVC will give out its annual Coach of the Year award. Albeck said the coach of the MVC champion should receive the honor.

"If Tony (Barone) wins it, he should get it," Albeck said. "If there is a three-way tie, name all three. People don't realize the expectations demanded of coaches and teams.'

Henson hoping break helps Illini

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Coach Lou Henson says a five-day break playing three games in five days, he hopes his athletes take advantage of No. 11 Illinois" five day fast to rest.

In a pair of road games, Illinois beat Michigan State University 79-76 last Thursday, but was surpassed by Wisconsin 72-62. The Illini returned home Monday night with a 102-73 thrashing of Purdue.

Illinois' next game is Sunday at Ohio State. Henson said Tuesday his players will work out with weights Tuesday and Wednesday but would not practice. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the squad will have light, 60-minute workouts on the court.

"We want them in good condition," Henson said, "but we don't want to overwork them."

The coach said Illinois, 24-4 overall and 9-4 in the Big Ten, has had problems with concentration away from the Assembly Hall and will be trying not to drop another decision in Columbus, Ohio.

"I've never seen this league where it's been so difficult to win on the road," he said. "When you go against any team on the road you have to fight for your life. When you play good defense you have a chance to win on the road but this year it's taking a lot more to come up with a win."

Illinois needs to win all its remaining five games, including three road contests, to challenge league-leading No. 6 Indiana.

part of the offense. He has been a ‘go to guy’ and at the Tulsa game he was almost unstoppable. “He really wanted to play. He takes a chance on his hand to make us a better team. It is his decision, and I understand.”

Nurnberger said he knows of no animosity between Herrin and House, and had no idea why Herrin decided not to play House.

“I don’t know why he wouldn’t play him, but that is Coach Herrin’s decision,” Nurnberger said.

If House does not play again, he will finish his SIU-C career having played in 104 games, four short of the all-time record.

In addition, House became the 1st player in SIU-C history to score 1,000 points, good for 12th on the all-time list.

House leaves the Salukis with an average of 11.9 points per game, having hit 105 of 314 three-pointers for 33.6 percent. The senior graduate pulled down 107 rebounds in 27 games.

Florida rolling in quest for SEC title

United Press International

Florida, once written off as the season’s most disappointing team, has risen to contend for the lead in the Southeastern Conference.

Florida has won eight of its last nine games and is 16-10 overall and 10-4 in the SEC.

Vanderbilt, which won six of its last seven, is tied with the Gators, a half-game behind Louisiana State, 11-4 in the league.

The Florida turnaround carries in some ways with what happened to national champion Oklahoma a year ago.

Like the Jayhawks, Florida lost several players for a variety of reasons but has regrouped and overcome the adversity. Off-maligned center Dwayne Schintzius is emerging as team leader while playing consistently.

“I think too much has been made of the bad things,” said Coach Norm Sloan, who has been known of having control of his program. “It simply hasn’t been a factor with us.”

Football assistant considered for job

STARKVILLE, Miss (UPI) — Mississippi State University football coach Rocky Felker has recommended the hiring of assistant coach Jim Tompkins, who served as defensive coordinator at SIU-C in 1988.

Felker’s recommendation went to President Donald Zacharias and Mississippi Higher Education Commissioner Ray Cleere. It is expected to be approved by the Board of Trustees.

“Jim Tompkins is an outstanding defensive football coach with a solid background on both the collegiate and high school levels,” said Felker. “We’re pleased to recommend his addition to our staff as inside linebackers coach, and look forward to having him aboard for the start of spring practice (March 14).”

A native of Brantley, Ala. and a graduate of Troy State University, Tompkins, 49, is a veteran of more than 25 years of coaching on the high school and collegiate levels.

He launched his coaching career as an assistant football coach at Foley (Ala.) High School from 1968 to 1969.
Randy House opts to cut basketball career short

By David Galliannetti
Staff Writer

Senior Randy House had a permanent cast put on his broken left hand Tuesday, after deciding to sit out the remainder of the basketball season and end his career.

House said his decision at Stagg Field Tuesday night's game with Murray State, which he did not play in.

Before the game officials told him he could not play with the fiberglass cast he had on. House had the cast removed with the idea he would see some action he said.

"I wanted to play, and feel I should have gotten the chance," House said. "I had myself psyched up to play with the broken bone. It was quite a letdown, I feel some disappointment hit and hurt.

"There were some personal goals involved that mean nothing now. My career is over. I don't know whether he (Coach Rich Herrin) understood the circumstances he would see some action he said. I don't want to be a tagalong.

"I was ready to play, and feel I should have gotten the chance," House said. "I had myself psyched up to play with the broken bone. It was quite a letdown, I feel some disappointment hit and hurt.

"There were some personal goals involved that mean nothing now. My career is over. I don't know whether he (Coach Rich Herrin) understood the circumstances he would see some action he said. I don't want to be a tagalong.

Herrin said he and Herrin met at 3 p.m. Tuesday, at which time Herrin spoke to House. But House said Herrin gave no indication why he did not play the senior Monday night.

Herrin was out-of-town Tuesday night and unavailable for comment as were assistant coaches Ron Smith and Bobby McCullum.

Assistant coach Rodney Watson declined comment on the matter saying he preferred to let Herrin handle the situation.

In making his final decision, House said he did come to grips with the fact that his basketball career was over.

"There is more to life than basketball," House said. "I'll be there to support them 100 percent, but it will not be the same as being out there. The main thing is being around my friends."

Senior Joe Morberger said the loss of House from the lineup will be a hurtle the Blue Jays will have to overcome in their quest for postseason success.

"When you lose a starter it hurts," Nurnberger said. "He has always been a big

Hart says

The NCAA is planning to visit the University to examine the circumstances surrounding the Randy House incident, where a technicality in registration put the senior forward on the bench.

Athletics Director Jim Hart told the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee Tuesday of the pending visit. "We invited the NCAA to come in and see how we do things," Hart said. "It done at the request of Missouri Valley Conference Commissioner Don Elgin.

Haweis was fouled, ineligible because he was not registered for the required 12 credit hours of classes per semester. House was attending two closer classes that he was not officially registered.

The problem was resolved when House sat out the Bradley game. He did not play.

Jerry Handler, a sociology professor, said Friday that asking the NCAA to investigate is not an admission of guilt. The problem is handled the same way, Handler said.

"The visit could check this semester, or possibly the summer. It won't affect the University anything," MVC Associate Commissioner Joe Mitch said.

(Visit) is a review of procedures. They're interested in the enrollment of student athletes. They want to see how athletics are registered for classes. They're trying to prevent the Randy House situation."

Hart maintains that the University doesn't seem to be having a problem, but that the visit could help the system.

University prof advocates elimination of football

A proposal to eliminate the University's football program was nixed by the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee Tuesday night.

Jerry Handler, an anthropology professor, supported the proposition to go out of the athletics program because it doesn't bring prestige to the University and it is a financial burden.

Handler also said the social aspects inherent in the game, and the value on the academics of the University were not enhanced by the program.

"Football has been no benefit to us," Handler said. "In fact, it has hurt it.

Handler suggested that fewer than 25 percent of the University's football players, in the 27 years that Handler has been at the University, have graduated.

IAAC member Jack Cody, chairman of the educational psychology department, challenged Handler's figures, saying that 55 percent have graduated.

"You have to look at the graduation rates carefully," Cody said. "The data is around, you have to look on the research."

Cody said the proposal for the reduction should never have been made without the research. He also said it was a money-maker.

John Cherry, the IAAC representative from the Alumni Association, responded at length to Handler's proposal.

"It seems that your proposal just doesn't jive with the academic priorities," Cherry said. "You can't measure success solely on the basis of wins and losses.

"National recognition is not the objective. Money-making isn't the objective."

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the proposal was not made because the athletics department was a money-maker. It is not the primary purpose.

Hart also said that the proposal was made because the academics department was an emotional response."

Hart played football at the University from 1962 to 1967.

The money saved from cutting the program that still remains will be directed to the athletics department, Handler said. It is to be used to support other already established sports that bring prestige to the University.

Handler said any money that can be diverted from the athletics department should be pumped into Morris Library. He said the library is in a "tough" financial situation.

Jays nearing league crown

With less than one week to go in the Missouri Valley Race, things are not going so good for the Creighton Blue Jays.

Eager to win the league at 18-3, the Blue Jays watched their lead over Tulsa increase Monday and saw it disappear when they lost the golden Hurricane in a forgettable loss. Tulsa is tied for second with Wichita State at 8-4.

All a board

Forward Jerry Jones has had a marked impact on the Missouri Valley this season, as the junior is battering for the league lead in rebounds. Jones is tied with Drake's Sean Roark for third in the MVC with 8.7 per game.

Togetherness key to victory

"Our team has found a way to win," coach Bos (Hartman), James (Ferris) and Chad (Dart) said. "The saves are the only ones providing our team a chance.

"We spread our out good performances. Porter (Moer) showed us how to increase the game of the basketball at Bradley. (Scott) Em and another by against Southern Illinois.

Barone said despite the pressure involved in leading the MVC, the Blue Jays' youth is an added plus rather than being harmful.

"We're really young, and I think that's to our advantage right now," Barone said. "We never sit down and say 'Boy, if Drake beats Tulsa and we beat Drake we are the champion. We play each game, evaluate and move on.

"The pressure is there, and I think some of the guys are Light. We are a very interesting team to watch on the road. We eat together, go to movies together and stay together so there are no other distractions.

"The only seed with significance is the (Vail) which has to play Wichita. Illinois State Coach Bob Donaldson said we finish seventh, and Wichita is (tied) fourth. We are the team to win the first round, no question.

"I think coming in, the way Chris (Backman) is playing (Shoop coach) Eddie (Fagerle), he'll be a star in the tournament's first round, but hasn't have his hope too high.

"I think we'll be a dangerous team," Abatemarco said. "We could get blown out the first round, but we could find See CROWN, Page 18
