SIU School of Tourism Suggested

SIU has been recommended as the location for a School of Tourism which could be "a real help in assuring good direction and management for tourism development in Southern Illinois."

The recommendation is contained in a study, "The Potential of Tourism and Recreation in Southern Illinois."

The study noted that SIU has been recommended for a Department of Tourism, as soon as possible, and recommended that the concept be expanded to include other aspects of recreation.

According to the report, the school should have a full-time director, a full-time hotel-motel—resort specialist, and should deal with other specialists in such fields as promotion and accounting.

The Checchi report, the first of its kind in Illinois, analyzes in detail the tourism and recreational growth areas of Southern Illinois, including present and potential markets, competing areas, and facilities most needed to expand this region's tourism economy.

The study of the state's 29 southernmost counties, can be used as a pilot program for similar studies for other areas of the state.

It recommends initial development of tourism and recreation be concentrated in existing growth centers, Carbondale-Marion and Carlyle Lake.

Development in the Carson-Cass area should include a resort ranch at Devil's Kitchen, a convention center at Giant City State Park, and the construction of a Civil War Village.

Development of the Carlyle Lake area should include a White Cove Lake resort, Carlyle Marina and a Carlyle Village, according to the report.

Early development is also recommended for recreation "corridor" extending through the Shawnee Hills and for six recreation areas along the corridor. Tentative name for the recreation complex is the George Rogers Clark Recreation Way.

Fairy Tale Spoof

Once Upon a Mattress' Musical to Open Tonight for Six-Day Run in Muckelroy

"Once Upon a Mattress," a musical spoof of the fairy tale "The Princess and the Pea," will open at 8 p.m. today at Muckelroy Auditorium.

The musical, which will be presented in-the-round by the Summer Music Theater was written by Jay Thompson and Mary Rodgers. It was first conceived as after-dinner entertainment for a group of friends at a Vermont resort.

Carole Burnett played the original "Princess Fred" (short for Woodpecker), who wants to marry Dauntless the Drab. Dauntless is protected by the Old Queen, who suffers from Hypochondria, Melancholia and Blabbermouthia. The mad maneuverings of the queen in her plots against "Fred" and her dominance over her husband, King Sex-timus, furnish most of the laughs in the musical.

"Mattress" is directed by Richard Jaeger, a graduate of the Indiana University School of Music, Choreographer is Gary Palombi. Principal roles in the musical are played by Elizabeth Weiss, Albert Hayne, Pam Worley, Jim Fox, Judy Sink, Robert Guy, William Wallis, Alfred Erickson and Palombi.

"Mattress" will also be presented Saturday and Sunday night, and be repeated for another three-day run beginning Aug. 5. Tickets for the productions are on sale at the University Center Information desk.

The award was presented at a dinner of Sigma Delta Chi journalistic society and the SIU Department of Journalism at the Three Flags Restaurant in St. Charles, Mo., in conjunction with the conference. Howard R. Long, chairman of the Department of Journalism is conference secretary.

Dinner speaker was Howard B. Woods, associate director of the U.S. Information Agency.

McNamara's editorial, which said "we defend war with belligerence and pursue peace weekly," added that "no one wants a war, no one wins in a war, but somehow it becomes lost in the national hollering match."

It said the real peace, like truth or goodness, is inimitable; "it is or it is not." It concluded by saying, "Peace on this planet, however desirable, would be futile indeed if none of us were here to enjoy it. Cinders and rubble, drifting gases, and the low life of lizards would have a long wait before 'intelligent' creatures like man came this way again."

Kerner to Speak Here Today

At Area Tourism Conference

Economic Future
To Be Discussed

Governor Otto Kerner will give the keynote address at the Southern Illinois Tourism Investment Conference at 1 p.m. today in the Ballrooms of the University Center.

Congressman Kenneth Gray, West Frankfort, and Edward P. Clift, chief of the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be special guests at the meeting.

The conference will begin with a registration at 9 a.m., in the foyer of the Ballroom.

At 9:45 a.m., the Checchi Report on The Economic Potentials of Tourism and Recreation in Southern Illinois will be presented. Harry Clement, vice president of Checchi and Company, and Ernie Modilteri and Bob Goldman, also of Checchi and Company, and Albert Knoed of Knoed, Landis and Landis, Inc., New York City, will present the report.

Richard Newman, chief of the southern division of the Department of Business and Economic Development, will introduce a panel in "Tourism Promotion and Development in Southern Illinois at the State, Regional and Local Level" at 10:30 a.m.

Members of the panel are Jeffrey Hughes, president of the Illinois Travel Bureau Council; Ralph Stauder, president of the Region 8 Tourism Council; and William Tudor, assistant director of the Du Quoin State Fair.

W. A. Lucier, president of Southern Illinois Inc., will moderate a panel discussion on "Local Support for the Private Investor Interested in Southern Illinois Tourism" at 11:20 a.m.

Members of the panel are Kenneth Cook, past president of the Illinois Chamber's Association; Sam Treffe, chairman of the Southern Illinois Business Agents Conference; Oren Drew, president of the Southern Illinois Recreation Council, and William Tudor, assistant to the vice president.

WSIU-FM Adds UPI 'Voice'

WSIU radio has subscribed to the United Press International (UPI) Audio Network service.

According to Paul Dugas, news director of the University's Broadcasting Service, "the addition of the audio service not only gives a better supply of national news, but also is one of the most valuable training tools we could offer to students aspiring to become professional broadcast newsmen."

WSIU radio recently utilized the audio network in broadcasting live portions of the Gemini 10 flight and President Johnson's press conference this week.

Through the network an average of 70 to 75 news items are received daily, half of these are "actuals," live recordings of voices-in-the-news, Dugas said.

"We were faced with the problem of possibly depending so much on the new service that we might neglect local news when the service was installed," Dugas said. "But this is not the case. In fact, we have been getting more significant local news than at any time since I came here in February."

Article by Chen

An SIU faculty member, J.W. Chen, is joint author of an article appearing in the current issue of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, Process Design and Development Quarterly.

The article, "Simulation of Steroid Biocatalysis with Mathematical Model," is abstracted from a research report given by Chen earlier at a national meeting of the American Chemical Society in Chicago.

Working with him on the report were W. D. Maxon and F. R. Hanson of the Upjohn Co.

Chen is professor-in-charge of transfer and rate processes studies in the School of Technology.

Pedestrian, Driver Courtesy Needed

Congratulations to the University and the city! With traffic slacking on Campus Drive and other death traps around town, it became a little safer to cross the campus. But because there is less traffic in the summer, work was started to widen Mill Street to four lanes. That street was the main east-west artery on the south side of town and was heavily traveled.

With Mill Street closed, traffic was rerouted to Grand Avenue, which has been closed for almost three years while work was being done on Lawson Hall and the General Classroom Building.

Even before it was closed, Grand Avenue was barely wide enough to accommodate two rabbit squirrels from Thompson Woods and three stray dogs at the same time. But now—no wider—it is expected to be the main artery on the south side of town for east-west traffic. The result is that between quarter past and half-past every hour of the day, Grand Avenue looks like the time trials for a stock car race.

It's hard enough getting two cars through those narrow lanes from Campus Drive to Illinois Avenue. But when pedestrians walking to and from classes are added, then you've really got a problem.

Grand Avenue might be a great setting for a Peter Sellers movie or as an inspiration for a rock-and-roll tragedy song but for the normal driver or pedestrian it is not so pleasant.

The problem could be reduced considerably if both drivers and pedestrians would exercise plain old courtesy instead of playing "Chicken" between Lawson and the Wabash Building.

For instance, a disabled student Wednesday had to keep his wheelchair from rolling back down an incline while one car after another buzzed down Grand Avenue.

At other times, students can frequently be seen darting through gaps in traffic without waiting for one of the cars to stop and let them pass.

If the situation continues until Mill Street is reopened, one might very easily be injured or even killed unless pedestrians and drivers alike become more considerate and courteous.

The "Stop for Pedestrians" signs aren't enough to encourage caution. Security Police may have to direct traffic on the street to prevent injuries and other hazards.

It would be better for supposedly intelligent people to exercise their own caution rather than having it forced on them by the police.

Reader Questions Optimism

With Use of Voluntary Fee

To the editor:

In the July, 20 edition of the Daily Egyptian, there was an article on page one about the off-campus fee. Let me say that I'm rather fluctuated that this fee has finally received some attention other than from the Off-Campus Executive Council.

Last summer, I lived on-campus and I was required to pay a four-dollar residence hall fee. This requisition fee had to be paid in order to secure an on-campus contract. This fee did not yield as many benefits as the off-campus fee will.

What I would like to know is: how can the Off-Campus Executive Council be so optimistic in its programming with the use of a voluntary fee, when the on-campus mandatory fee provided so little? Why isn't the off-campus fee mandatory as the on-campus fee is?

Nick Ciulla, a former on-campus student.

Britain Tries to Help Fighting Irish Win Their Battle But Spirits Subdued by Victory

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones (General Features Corp.)

Half a century ago this month, Roger Casement, was on the lips of the world.

On June 29, 1916, a London jury had taken just 35 minutes to find Sir Roger guilty of high treason. Although he had been knighted by King George V for long service as British consul in Africa and Brazil, Sir Roger had sneaked off to Germany after the outbreak of World War I to persuade Irish prisoners to rise in starting a rebellion against the British in Ireland. Naturally, the Germans were most cooperative.

Sir Roger's military force was a flop. On good Friday, 1916, local police caught him and two companions in a cave near Ardfern, Ireland. Sir Roger's trial was almost perfunctory. You could hardly blame the outraged British jury.

But then the judge made the mistake of asking this flamboyant revolutionary if he had anything to say. He did. In calm dignity, he made one of the greatest speeches of vindication ever heard. A paragraph:

"We are told that if Irishmen go by the thousand to die for Ireland, but for Flanders, for Belgium, for a patch of sand on the deserts of Mesopotamia, they are winning self-government for Ireland. But if they dare to cherish their lives on their native soil, if they dare to dream even that freedom can be won only at home by men resolved to fight for it there, then they are traitors to their country... if we are to treat our criminals, to be shot as murderers, to be imprisoned as convicts, because our offense is that we love Ireland more than our lives, then I know not what virtue resides in any office of self-government held out to brave men on such terms."

A petition for Casement's pardon was signed by such British luminaries as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Arnold Bennett, G. K. Chesterton and John Drinkwater. The U. S. Congress passed a resolution hoping for clemency. But Britain, involved in a desperate, grinding war, was not inclined to mercy. On Aug. 3, 1916, Casement was hanged in Pentonville Jail and his body buried beneath the scaffolding.

JONES

The Irish people drew strength from their disasters. The massacre at Droghead gave them unity. The excesses of landlordism gave them purpose. The Black-and-Tans gave them a common demonology out of which Dublin's Abbey Theater drew themes of protest unmatched in the drama of its time. Irish heroes—O'Donnell, Tyrone, O'Connell, Parnell—caught the imagination of all peoples. In the days of the Potato Famine, Ireland poured her hungry sons and daughters out into the world. In America the Protestant majority treated them coldly.

"No Irish need apply" signs were up on factory gates. "No Irish, no popery!" The Irish merely chained up higher. They marched in proud defiance on St. Patrick's Day. They got out each Easter Sunday. They cheered their hungry young prize fighters. They clawed and climbed upward.

Then, truculently, disaster came to the Ould Sod in the form of total victory. The British gave up. In 1938 Ireland became as independent as Norway. You could wear the green. You could talk all the Gaelic you wanted. The lamp of freedom was extinguished.

Came World War II. The Irish-Irish didn't like Hitler but they couldn't stand helping the British. Many a Brooklyn Kelly and Boston O'Toole, riding the dangerous convoys, thought bitterly of the U-boat wolf packs lying close to Ireland's cliffs.

The Irish legend became stale and dated. In the light of Tarawa and The Bulge and the blazing furnaces of Buchenwald, it was hard to weep for the Irish.

Respectability struck the Irish in America. John Kennedy was elected President of the United States. Jewish merchants and Baptist preachers began wearing Green ties on St. Patrick's Day to show their good will.

A lot of fun were out of being Irish when there was no more reason for chin-up defiance. This spring the British quietly relinquished the bones of Roger Casement so they could be buried in Ireland. No need to invade the jail anymore. The hangman for a wizard jape. The bobbies stood politely around, watching the exhumation.

It was a dirty trick, and maybe the reasoning behind it was the Irish knew it. The Irish have proven that they can stand anything, except, perhaps, to win.
There is a queer paradox to our times. All of us who have reached the age of reason have a deep longing for peace in the world. Yet we feel it is too far beyond our reach, too utopian even to discuss.

As ridiculous as it sounds, most Americans are sure man will stand on the moon by 1970, but we will never admit that he will stand a chance of peace by the millennium. We broadly speak of the day when we all will have helicopter pads on the roof, the day when there is no more heart disease or the day we can shop by computer. Yet few believe that man will someday be able to abide with his brother in peace.

We make war on poverty, war on the dollar drain, war on illiteracy, but never consider a war on war.

To those who have been bred on war—the grandfathers who were at Verdun, the fathers who served at Guam, the brothers who went to Korea, the sons who fought at Da Nang—war has been to fit similar narrow minds until only two sides emerge: the Vietnicks who believe that even in this age of sophistication, he talks the roof, (he day when there is no more heart disease, he will never admit that he will stand a chance of peace.

But still the idea of peace cannot be completely lost. It crops up in peoples' thoughts: a GI's Viet Nam Christmas is a bit more bearable by thought that 'it'll be over, perhaps, by next year.' A father whose son is scheduled for military service faces up to peace. Peace, his son will do his duty—but he is buoyed by the hope that 'someone' will do something about the war. State Department officials keep plugging away at their job and hope—and hope. And many, many others pray for it, although most have given up in their lifetime. Peace has been the Cold War Version of peace.

But real peace would not be like the nervous Cold War, a period of lull or calm with the guns. Real peace, like truth or goodness, is inimitable. It is or is not. What the Communists want is peace, as we conceive it. They would like a suspension of hostilities, truce as a time for regrouping. Peace to them would be like hymning in an evangelist's tent, a period of softening up for the hard sell to come.

Peace to us means planning, a day to make life in a new world, a blessed respite in a time of bombardment and conflict, of dire warnings and inescapable diplomacy.

Our version of peace is undoubtedly the better of the two. But is a mere cessation of fighting one step along the very long road? If we are to believe the guns, have we not accomplished one important thing?

How to win the peace? Ironically, the first answer is that we must fight harder and with greater determination and make the signing of a truce desirable to our enemies. Does this include changing our methods, going “further north” or using a wider range of weapons?

We must work with every ability at our command to get the enemy to the conference table. We must find, between our version of peace and that of the Communists, a common ground to at least bring the world to rest.

But when the shooting stops, our job will only have begun. Because then we will have to find a way to rid the world of its nuclear nervousness. Driven by our knowledge of Nagasaki and Hiroshima and by the fact that we are not alone in possession of nuclear weaponry, we must seek to outlaw their proliferation. Perhaps a good starting point for world agreement on disarmament would be President Kennedy’s nuclear test ban treaty.

Finally, when peace—however shaky—is achieved, the job will be only a beginning. It will be necessary to sit down and talk that there are other people in the world, people who will be affected by the war. We must make peace to all men everywhere and be intended for all time.

Before World War Ill comes raining on us, let us realize that our war lack begets war, that reason begets peace, that strength begets peace. Let us see the peace for what it is—a weak that wider war that brings us to the day of change. Let us make peace. Let us think of peace and talk of peace. Let us, as the most powerful country on earth, declare peace against the world.

Peace on this planet, however desirable, would be futile indeed if none of us were here to enjoy it. Cinders and rubble drifting gases and the low life of lizards would have a long wait before “intelligent” creatures like man came this way again.

The Strike:

New Approaches Needed

By Paul Simon

When the nation suddenly finds itself paralyzed by an air strike, or some other basic crippling of essential services, more and more say that some new approach to the problems of labor-management relations is needed.

Collective bargaining is an essential part of our free enterprise system and is here to stay. But in an increasingly complex society, more and more there will be strikes which formerly seemed remote which will affect the health and welfare of greater numbers of citizens. As we become an urban society, for example, it becomes possible for strikes to cut off the food supply of a city.

The temporary answer now in the White House, called the President of the United States is the injunction, which postpones a strike if such a strike is found to be injurious to the public welfare. Even then strong-willed leaders of management and labor can defy a hard-driving President and there is every likelihood that we often will have weak Presidents in the future, just as we frequently have had in the past.

There are some who believe that eventually we have labor courts, presided over by judges appointed for life who can deal fairly and with the power of the law in back of them. The only measures which would reach the labor courts would be those ordered in or by the President. The court decision would be binding on both parties. Another way to rigidify a statutory labor court is to give it the type of solution appeals to neither labor nor management, but talk of such a possibility almost inevitably is going to grow.

A union attorney and a corporation executive have co-authored an article in the Business Review of Silicon Valley which suggests an improvement. This is the Dunbar Furniture Corp. of Berne, Ind. and the Upholsterers' International Union, which represents the employees. A settlement contract which called for a "strike-work agreement." If after the usual negotiations the union and company cannot agree, then the union calls a "strike," but for the first eight weeks of the "strike" all money is refused to labor and management as always—except that employees have one-third of their pay deferred in a special fund and management must match that fund.

If agreement is reached in the first four weeks of the "strike," all money is re-contracted to labor and management as usual. Finally, if the strike lasts beyond that, then 75 percent is refunded; seven weeks, 25 percent. The plan is that there will be no refunds of any money if a charitable organization.

After eight weeks there is a walkout of employees and the traditional strike and all money set aside by labor and executives goes for a predesignated charitable purpose. There are obviously some difficulties with this arrangement, but it is at least a step in the right direction.
Living Costs Climbing, U.S. Statistics Show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Living costs rose three-tenths of one per cent last month, rounding out the biggest six months of rising prices in eight years, the Labor Department said Thursday.

Substantial price hikes for food, medical care and mortgage interest rates were the biggest factors in the June increase that brought living costs up a total of 1.7 per cent the first half of 1966. The rise lifted the government's consumer price index to 122.9, meaning it took $11.29 in June to purchase typical consumer items costing $10 in the 1957-59 base period.

The index was 2.5 per cent higher than a year ago and up 4 per cent in the past two years, said Commissioner Arthur M. Ross of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

He said this compared favorably with other nations which had experienced price hikes between 6 and 14 per cent in the past two years. Food prices went up four-tenths of one per cent in June because of bad weather and strong demand affecting fresh fruits. Medical costs climbed seven-tenths and mortgage interest rates rose two-tenths, the bureau said.

In other major price categories measured by the government, housing costs rose four-tenths of one per cent, clothing one-tenth and transportation two-tenths.

Although overall food costs were up, meat prices generally leveled off after many months of alarm increases. Egg prices dropped nearly 10 per cent.

Average after-tax wages of some 17 million factory workers remained at $95.22 for those with three dependents and $90.35 for single workers but higher prices cut their purchasing power by about 15 cents a week.

The June price increase brought the value of a 1957-59 dollar down to 88.6 cents from 88.8 cents in May. The dollar, in terms of 1947-59 value, dropped to 72.2 cents and the 1939 dollar to 42.9 cents.

Some 84,000 workers with costs of living escalator clauses in their labor contracts will get wage increases ranging from one to three cents an hour.

U.S. Contacts Red Cross On Prisoners
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is informing the International Red Cross Committee that it will attend either a large or small conference on applying the 1949 Geneva Conventions on prisoners of war, U.S. officials said Thursday.

State Department legal specialists are studying whether Viet Nam's reservations to the Geneva Convention are legal, Hanoi still is bound under the Geneva rules to give American captives the special treatment on applying to the United States.

The United States is informing Hanoi Thursday that it is informing Hanoi of their application in the Geneva Convention under international committee channels.

President Johnson pro- claimed at his news conference Wednesday U.S. readiness "to sit down at a conference rather than use diplomatic channels."

A foreign official said that what kind of a conference might be convened under Red Cross sponsorship is up to the international committee head- quartered at Geneva. Johnson's proposal was reported being conveyed to the committee through diplomatic channels.

In other developments:
—Two Republican congressmen moved to place Congress on record unanimously in a resolution warning Hanoi that any trial of the captured pilots might kill any hopes for a peaceful settlement of the war.
—Reps. F. Bradford Morse of Massachusetts and Ogden R. Reid of New York announced at a news conference that they backed with every member of Congress asking support for their resolution.
—The Defense Department disclosed that after a year of describing American prisoners as "detained" it is returning to the more common classification of "captured or interned."

In what it described as a bookkeeping maneuver, the Pentagon reclassified as captured 29 Navy airmen previously listed as missing. This increased to 63 the number of Americans officially listed as captured.

Near Perfect Landing Ends Gemini 10 Flight
CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Gemini 10 astronauts John W. Young and Michael Collins came back to earth Thursday, parachuting to a watery landing in the western Atlantic Ocean within sight of the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal.

The astronauts were deposited safely on the deck of the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal after a near-perfect landing climaxing their record-breaking double rendezvous and space walk mission.

A helicopter plucked them from the sea just 22 minutes after they splashed to a landing in the western Atlantic at 3:30 p.m. (EST). They dropped to a parachute landing in the western Atlantic at 4:07 p.m., exactly on schedule.

Fire, Shooting Mark Cleveland Race Riots
CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — A young Negro mother and her two small children were among five persons wounded Tuesday when protesters hurled a ball of bullets into a car lurching toward them at the scene of a fire.

An eyewitness said both police and National Guardsmen fired at the car, but Guards officials said later none of the shots came from their men.

Police would not give any information on the incident, which climaxied the third night of spreading racial unrest. Riotsing by Negroes on Monday and Tuesday left two dead, 24 injured and brought in nearly 2,000 guardsmen.

A 7-month-old baby, nicked on the cheek, and a National Guard officer, shot in the leg, were among the injured. The mother and a 4-year-old son were in serious condition at a hospital.

The shooting started when the car bore down on three policemen on duty at a roaring blaze, said the wounded guard officer who was hit by a ricochet.

Dorothy Higginbotham Named To Council on Oral English

Dorothy Higginbotham, associate professor of speech, has been appointed to serve on the National Council of Teachers of English committee on oral language in the secondary school.

This committee will examine current research in language development, linguistics and the teaching of oral English with reference to classroom practice. The members will then prepare a bulletin on oral English for teachers in the secondary classroom.

This appointment is one of many being made by the council in the expansion of the organization in new directions, according to James H. Squire, council executive secretary.

In addition to furnishing such teaching aids as books, recordings and literary maps, the council publishes five professional journals. They are Elementary English, English Journal, College English, College Composition and Communications, and Abstracts of English Studies.

Freshmen Find University Life Is Not What They Expected

By Carol Malburg

No student ever forgets those first few weeks of his freshman year. Nor can he help asking himself anew each year: "Was it ever that bad?" As freshmen remember the paths that all led nowhere? Remember trying to find building T-38 according to the fabled campus map? And, remember suffring from line to line as some condescending upper-classman made a stab at giving directions?

But after the novelty wears off, the familiarities grow thick, and the high school illusions are shattered. Everything sets down to what is casually called the college life.

Speaking of illusions, Jim Speese, a freshman from Monmouth, Ill., agreed that college was different from what he had expected. "I didn't realize how much a person would have to depend on himself. College is a challenge. A person can either make or break himself."

Most freshmen, when asked about college life, answered either "It's a lot more exciting." or "It's a lot more work." But John Fischer, from Kansas City, Ill., was more to the point, "It's better than working!"

"Getting prepared has a lot to do with whether you are going to make it," said one coed from Skokie, Ill., as she spoke on the importance of a high school background.

Dorthea Kramme, from St. Claro, Mo., felt she wasn't adequately prepared academically, but for a reason, "Maybe that's why college is a little frightening, along with being exciting!"

Another coed, from Crystal Lake, Ill., disagreed as to whether college life is exciting. "I lived in a college town for years, so I didn't expect anything different, but I did think there would be a little more going on."

Lillian Roebeck pretty well summed up the question when she said, "It's fun, it's hard, and sometimes I wonder if I'm ready for it at all!"

The SIU professors certainly came out ahead as the freshmen went on expressing their opinions. Carol Chappell, from Decatur, Ill., said, "They're nice. They seem on the level, although distant."

Nancy Tust, a freshman from Rockford, Ill., also agreed that the professors are friendly, "They make you want to learn."

But you can't spend all your time learning. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, so the saying goes. And that seems to be the major complaint. "I think the people of Carbondale could try to provide some form of special interest for the SIU student," said Jim Speese.

As a consensus of the freshmen, Steve Miller offered a very definite statement, "Carbondale offers nothing for people under 21!" Trying to find his shoes seems to be about the only out of the ordinary thing he has to do. "Someone borrowed my shoes at a dance..."

Needless to say, neither the food nor the weather has escaped criticism. But surprisingly enough, food came out way ahead in preference, Nancy Tust exclaimed, "it's fabulous. You get as much as you want to eat, and the meals are fairly well balanced."

And on the other end of the scale is the freshman from Chicago who comments, "What food?"

And as for the weather, well... who needs to say anything about that? If it hasn't been said yet, it's better left that way.

"Trouble was that I fell into my senior slump in the first week of my freshman year."

Since 1959, approximately 2500 people from all walks of life, have completed this revolutionary reading improvement course. Graduates of Reading Dynamics now include key personnel from many of the nation's leading organizations such as IBM, DuPont, N. A., S. & A., International Telephone and Telegraph, Graduates also include students from many outstanding universities and colleges, such as Harvard, Columbia, UC A, the University of Texas, Washington University, St. Louis University and University of Missouri.

Reading Dynamics is not just a "speed reading" course, but a very comprehensive reading improvement program. Even though the program does indeed achieve extraordinary reading speeds, much emphasis is placed on building comprehension and recall ability as well as developing rapid and efficient study techniques.

"Southern Illinois Institute"

Once again in Southern Illinois and Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course will be offered to the students at SIU. Classes will meet twice a week for 5 weeks ending the week before finals.

In the last 12 months, in the Eastern Missouri and Western Illinois area, approximately 1,000 people have completed the Reading Dynamics courses. These 1,000 people had an average beginning reading speed of approx. 270 words per minute and an average comprehension level of 50%. These same people, after completing the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course, had an average reading speed of 1725 words per minute with a comprehension level of 95%. This represents an increase in reading speed of over 600%, and an increase in comprehension of 95%. These results are typical of those obtained in Reading Dynamics Institutes throughout the nation.

Results Guaranteed

So consistently positive are the results of Reading Dynamics that the program categorically guarantees a minimum increase in reading speed of three times with equal or better comprehension, or the entire tuition fee is refunded.

FREE DEMONSTRATION

The results that have been achieved and the techniques that have made them possible will be demonstrated and explained in the消除 of Building 604 in University City, 600 College Ave., Pacific, July 22, at 2 p.m., and 7:30 p.m., and on Saturday July 25 at 10 a.m. If you cannot attend the free public demonstration, further information may be obtained by calling the Southern Illinois Reading Dynamics locations at 657-2649. Considering these facts, can you afford to ignore what Reading Dynamics can do for you?

Six Recommended Tourism Projects

Study Recommends Southern As Tourism School Location

the incorporation of private funds and development with federal, state and local funds, also recommends a system of tourism, recreation and public works reserves which will be needed during the next 10 years to develop potentials.

Examples of the projects in the reserves, a majority of which are already being considered, are water impoundment, paved secondary and access roads, service stations, movie theaters, golf courses and camp sites.

Checchi estimates the cost of the 10-year program at $367 million. Of this, $58 million would be for the six initial projects, $50.5 million for the recreation corridor and six core areas, $101.5 million for the tourism reserve projects, $90 million for recreation reserve developments and $180 million for the public works reserve.

State and federal government involvement in the program is justified by the study because of water supply and public outdoor recreation benefits created, additional tax revenues and a reduction in unemployment and other social welfare payments.

Checchi estimates additional spending generated by the program would create about 8,400 new, permanent jobs and increase total annual payrolls by $42 million. Southern Illinois unemployment could be reduced by 50 per cent, the report says.

Form Cooperative Program

- Ten new employees of the Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation are going to school this summer at SIU as part of their job.
- In a program that might be described as "reverse internship," the division has made arrangements with SIU's Rehabilitation Institute to give its new counselors a master's degree level training in the field. The employees typically will go to school at SIU for a term, go back to their jobs for six months, then return to school for another term.
- The process will continue until they've completed the one-year master's course in rehabilitation administration at SIU.

Guy A. Renzaglia, director of the Rehabilitation Institute, said it marks the first such cooperative arrangement between the division and a university.

Special Conference On Poverty Slated

A special conference on "Affluence and Poverty, the Christian's Dilemma," as it applies to Southern Illinois, will be held here Monday evening.

Hartman said speakers will provide interpretations of the government programs, the role of the church, the critical issues and the current outlook.

The conference is cosponsored by the following five groups: the Town and Country Church Institute Committee, SIU, Office of Economic Opportunity, the Cooperative Extension Service, and the Area Redevelopment Administration, Hartman said.

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Texas star Don January, with a string of 17 straight singles and the veteran Julius Boros, two-time U.S. Open champion, grabbed the early first round lead with one-under-par 69s today setting up a possible July 1 showdown that few believed favorites in the 50th anniversary PGA championship.

January, 36, an 11-year veteran of the tour, birdied the first hole from the fringe 40 feet from the cup and then played the card the rest of the way. The smooth-swinging, 46-year-old Boros, Open winner in 1952 and 1963, matched it shortly afterward with 33-34. Including two bogeys and three birdies,

Larry Beck of Southern Pines, N.C., Borsa’s home town, lashed back with a record-tying 91 for the back nine and after wire to tie Jim Ferrier for second place at 71. Ferrier is an Australian.

Don Kirkland, the “Most Valuable Player” during the SUI 1966 baseball season, embarks on a new career Saturday.

The righthanded pitcher, who has been a standout in summer league play, will take off that day to be married.

... The SUI baseball diamond southwest of the Arena continues to be improved.

The field now has a warning track in the outfield. There is also a rock path from the batter’s on-deck circle to the plate. Still being sought are lights to allow night action on the diamond.

... A highly regarded Australian tennis player has beaten an SUI entry in the singles category at the Pennsylvania Grass Court Championships in Haverford, Penn.

Southern’s Joe Villarete bowed to Ray Ruffels, 7-5, 6-3 in the opening round. Ruffels is regarded as one of the better players in the tournament.
