The revised Student Conduct Code will go to the Board of Trustees in September with the provisions objected to in a minority report still included.

A minority report was submitted along with the proposed Student Conduct Code. The report objected to the permission allowing for open hearings, methods for appointing judicial panel members and the overall "legalistic" wording of the code.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said Wednesday, "We're going to go with the document as originally proposed. We are responsive to the concerns expressed in the minority report and are concerned about the time it will take to get the board virtually unchanged." The Student Conduct Code will be submitted to the Board at its September meeting as an item of concern. In this way, the Board is made aware of the code but does not actually approve it.

The new Student Conduct Code will probably be implemented by President Warren Brandt at the start of the fall semester before it is submitted to the board, C. Thomas Busch, chairman of the Student Conduct Code committee, said Wednesday.

Busch said Brandt had indicated he was satisfied with the proposed code and directed Swinburne to resolve the issues involved in the minority report.

Swinburne held a luncheon meeting Wednesday with individuals involved with the Student Conduct Code and the minority report.

Will Travelsead, author of the minority report, had no comment to make regarding the decision to submit the code as originally proposed.

"Everything I had to say was in the minority report," Travelsead stated. The minority report objected to the appointment of members of the judicial boards by student government bodies and constituency heads. Under the old system, these bodies only made recommendation subject to the approval of the administration.

Busch said the student involvement is a necessary element of the code. "The code calls for a strong student commitment. For this code to work, students must participate, have faith in it and be willing to be a part of the system," said Busch.

He continued, "This code puts an awful lot of responsibility on the student government structures, but it does give a great deal of respect for Doug Diggie (student body president) and Ellen Shumate (student Senate president). I think this is an ideal opportunity to tailor the requirements of participation. Doug and Ellen have a strong commitment to make it work." He added, "I think there probably will be a few technical changes that have to be made and a few further meetings of the committee will be necessary. He said he would contact the student senators by phone to get their approval for the changes.

Ku Klux Klan holds 'public meeting,' blacks barred by police and Klansmen

By Ken Tenski
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are going public.

"It's time white people in America stood up for their rights. Blacks are just as patriotic, just as American, just as American as we are. And it will continue to do so unless we as white people start putting it into practice," said David Duke, national director of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan (KKK).

Duke made that statement, among others, at a rally held in the Paducah Civic Center. Phillip Chopper (left), an exalted cyclops of the invisible empire of the Kentucky realm, was organizer of Sunday's public KKK meeting in Paducah. (Staff photos by Ken Johnson.)

Duke said there is a Klan chapter in Southern Illinois which is currently underground but "it will become public in a few months." He would not elaborate.

The meeting in Paducah was replete with Klan symbolism. Duke, grand dragon of the invisible empire of the Louisiana realm; James Warner, public relations director and grand dragon of the invisible empire of the California realm; and Philip Chopper, exalted cyclops of the invisible empire of the Kentucky realm; were among the speakers.

A heavy cloud of controversy preceded the scheduling of the rally. Several citizen groups and the mayor of Paducah publicly voiced their opposition to the Klan's use of the meeting hall for the "racial purpose" which would prompt racial discrimination.

The group spent a majority of the pre-rally time speaking among themselves and discussing what most persons at the meeting termed the "black problem." About 15 persons spent the evening guarding the four entrances to the center and restricted admittance to "white persons only." On the half hour behind schedule, Klan speaker James Warner was introduced and began his oratory by lashing out at the "discriminatory practices in the United States which hurt the white race.

"The blacks of this country are taking away our rights. The Constitution of the United States says that blacks only have three-fifths of a vote. Our forefathers created this country as a Christian, white country, and if they had intended the blacks to have more than three-fifths of a vote they would have written it into the constitution," he said.

"Politicians are interested in the black vote. By the time the 1976 elections roll around we are going to be so organized in the United States that politicians will have to come looking to us for the white vote," he said. "These politicians have been licking the boots of the black's for too long; now they're going to have to come to us." (Continued on Page 10)
Search committee guidelines unresolved, says Swinburne

By Louisa Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Guidelines for search committee meetings were approved at a Tuesday meeting of the Student Affairs Advisory Committee, but the issue and "total disregard of the integrity and recommendations of our associate director," Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said.

The discussion was prompted by recent questions regarding the make-up of and procedures used by the committee when it decided to increase the associate director for housing and student affairs.

"We discussed search committee makeup and the procedures, and it was totally resolved. We went over our affirmative action commitments. We got the desirable balance between staff and students on any search or selection committee should be," Swinburne said.

University Housing has been criticized because no students or blacks served on the committee which selected the associate director.

Samuel Rintella, director of University Housing, said last week the absence of blacks and students on the committee was not an oversight.

"It just wasn't set up that way," he said.

The Office of Student Affairs is presently compiling the procedures followed by the search committee with the distinction of affirmative action guidelines.

The affirmative action guidelines for the Student Affairs division state that after a search, committee recommends an individual for the position, the procedures used by the committee must be examined "to determine if the search resulted in identifying qualified minority or women applicants."

"The committee is still in the process of determining if there was a fair selection of Sharon Justice to the associate director post now in that stage. No appointment papers will be signed until the comparison is completed. Swinburne commented.

"In my estimation, we have carried out our committee," Swinburne continued.

Swinburne said Helen Ellison, who was one of the final candidates for the associate director post, had not filed a formal grievance with the affirmative action office "to the best of my knowledge."

Swinburne said he has discussed the appointment procedures with Ellison several times and "Helen has raised the question with me about a formal complaint."

Affairs is also reviewing the circumstances and conditions under which vacancies would be filled through promotion or transfer rather than operating with a search committee.

In a related matter, Swinburne said the problems regarding the hiring of black resident hall coordinators (RHCS) for East Campus are partially solved but added, "the case is not resolved."

Swinburne said no "giblets" are followed in hiring RHCS, but University Housing attempts, to assure "minority interests will be clearly represented by RHCS, both black and white by the hiring RHCS."

Swinburne said, University Housing attempts to select people with a wide variety of backgrounds who can be responsive to a great diversity of residents.

"As of these few months back, only one black had been assigned to East Campus, and it was the feeling some people that we might reach next fall with the same number," Swinburne said.

"We were fully aware of the problems; the commitment has always been there that we would strive for the same proportion of minority RHCS in the past," he concluded.

Swinburne said he sent a memo to Rintella about the hiring of black RHCS long before the recent meetings with George Jones, assistant coordinator of student discipline, and Vernon Stubblefield, director of the Black Student Council Organization, on the subject.

"I think some good concerns were expressed (at the meeting Tuesday with Vernon Stubblefield of the Black Student Council Organization)," Swinburne said.

Stubblefield and Swinburne will meet again either during break or early in the fall to further discuss the concerns of black students.

Following Tuesday's meeting, Stubblefield said there were many things he had wished to discuss with Swinburne but the discussion continued to return to the subject of the procedures to be followed in naming the associate housing director.

Beg your pardon

Due to an apparent oversight in the Carbonado police report last weekend, it was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian that Klimides 8, P.O. Box 84, in Carbonado, was arrested in connection with the melee outside Merlin's early Saturday morning. Klimides was arrested for disorderly conduct Friday night. The report listed Klimides' name with those arrested in the later incident.

Apollo nears landing after joint flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - The Apollo astronauts, architects of a bridge linking mankind's two spacefaring nations, return to earth Thursday, ending history's first international voyage in space.

Astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton are expected with their Apollo craft through a blazing re-entry toward a 5:18 p.m. EDT splashdown in the Pacific Ocean.

The U.S. New Orleans, a helicopter carrier and the prime recovery ship, is already on station near the splashdown target about 300 miles west of Hawaii.

In one of the final acts of preparation for the splashdown, the astronauts jettisoned the black airlock which served as a portal to the Soviet's Soyuz craft, according to the Soyuz commander.

The firefighters blasted explosive bolts that blasted the airlock, contoured the deck and those from the Apollo then watched it tumble free and away.

"It's gone and it went smoothly," Brand said.

The astronauts' Soviet counterparts in the international mission planned a news conference for early Thursday morning.

Woodlawn bank robbed by armed pair

WOODLAWN, Ill. (AP) - The First National Bank of Woodlawn was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash Wednesday afternoon by a man and woman.

One unconfirmed report estimated the amount taken at $45,000.

No shots were fired during the stickup and none of the five employees on duty was hurt, a bank official said.

"They pretty well cleaned out the bank," Jim Wheeler, bank president, said. "Frankly, it could have been worse."

The couple walked in, pulled a pistol and demanded money, he said. "They did a job of moving money."

The couple was eventually captured, authorities said.

A Jefferson County sheriff's Department spokesman said the bank has been robbed once before, in 1966.

Woodlawn is about five miles northwest of Mount Vernon in Southern Illinois.

Police said the woman was young, 5-foot-4 to 5-foot-8, wore a light blue top and had long blond hair.

The man, also young, was about the same height, had dark hair and a moustache and was wearing a blue and white sailor hat with a brass ring.

Authorities said the couple locked the employees in the vault before fleeing. Police were looking for two vehicles, a green van and a red car.

Plants, people require love, gardener-preacher explains

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian
The Rev. Bob James is obsessed with life.

James cares for plants in the SIU Botany Greenhouse during the week and preaches sermons at the Shilo Missionary Baptist Church in Murphysboro on Sunday.

"Plants are like people and people are like plants," James said Wednesday while giving flowers in the greenhouse courtyard a fatherly-looking-over.

"In a sense, I'm trying to satisfy the necessities of both. The two jobs go together," he explained.

"The joy of working with people and plants is that you're dealing with life and survival of each individual or plant."

"There are certain requirements in both fields," he said. "In the spiritual field, you have to give people something tangible to hold fast to. With plants you have to supply fertilizer, water and air," he said, smiling and wiping the sweat from under the brim of his baseball hat.

"We tell people in our church that plants require light, water and most of all air. All that goes back to the Bible where Jesus said, 'I am the way, the truth and the light.'"

"The thing I love most of all is learning about and enjoying being with people—regardless of who they are—just as with plants," he said. James said it is important that a person relate to his plants.

"If I don't talk to them, but I give them loving care, I satisfy them the best I can," he said, smiling.

James has a rapport with student workers that is enviable.

"Mr. James is really nice," said Nancy Lewis, elementary education major and student worker at the greenhouse. "He's crazy, too," she said, laughing. "You should see him at lunch—he holds a sandwich in one hand and a cherry pie in the other. He likes sweet things."

James has what was called 'a personal touch' at the church.

The duration and structure of graduate education in the humanities and social sciences have been matters of concern to educators and students alike for at least fifteen years. The Ph.D., the sine qua non for endowed teaching and research, is considered by many as more of an endurance contest than a climactic moment. An inordinate amount of time is spent in earning the degree—more than ten years for some students—and the dissertation, often the Ph.D.'s burden, is insurmountable for many. Recently a drying up of fellowships and grants has increased the pressure in the academic job market have intensified the pressures to improve the process of doctoral study.

Specifically, the complaints include:

- Both faculty and students severely under appreciate the time it takes to complete the degree. Duration of Ph.D. study also varies widely by discipline, with physical science and engineering doctoral students spending nine months to a year more time than those in the humanities. In a 1970 study of the top-rated graduate schools of English, psychology, and the arts at Berkeley, economist David W. Breneman estimated that the number of student years required to produce one Ph.D. ranged from 3.20 in the social sciences to 4.20 for philosophy. The median was about eight years.

- Too many students fail to complete the degree. A 1971 study of 11,000 Woodrow Wilson fellows, among the most talented students in the country, showed that 40 per cent had stopped short of the Ph.D. For all graduate students the attrition rate is much higher.

- A high rate of Ph.D. production persists although the number of available academic jobs has shrunk considerably. In a recent study, the demand for new Ph.D.'s reached about 10,000 per year by the early 1980s, most of whom would be absorbed by industry and government. Approximately 30,000 Ph.D.'s were awarded in 1979.

- Graduate education has become overly expensive and specialized, with students required to master more knowledge than is needed to establish their competence as scholars. Dissertation requirements are sometimes unrealistic.

Not everyone joins in this chorus. The nation is still going to need creative and productive scholars at the forefronts of their disciplines, and the only way to produce them is through the intensive training characteristic of graduate education. The dissertation is still considered the badge of the scholar and proof that he or she has mastered the discipline. For many, graduate school is one of the objectives of career goals, as seems to be the case with the increasing number of mature men and women returning to campuses.

A Collection of Equal

The resistance of graduate education to reform is explained in large part by the traditional method of university organization, with individual departments overseeing their own admissions, course requirements, Ph.D. qualification examinations, finance and fellowships. Graduate deans have limited authority and must rely on persuasion and interdepartmental committees to bring about changes. In some departments there have been slow to cut enrollments and expedite study because students are needed for teaching and interdepartmental committees to bring about change within individual disciplines. Some departments have been slow to cut enrollments and expedite study because students are needed for teaching and research.

Yet, for all its resistance, graduate study is beginning to change. Many schools now embrace the four-year norm for the doctorate, even though few have been able to achieve it. The proliferation of course requirements has been reduced, and the normalness of patterns of study have been established. Some schools have streamlined the dissertation requirement. Stanford University, for example, now has a well-defined policy with regard to the four-year norm based on the sentiments that the longest to complete the degree are not necessarily the more serious, more concerned with the fundamentals of scholarship, better educated, or wiser in the end.

At ten major research universities producing about 30 per cent of the doctorates in the humanities and social sciences, a major effort was made 1967 to 1974 to improve the efficiency of graduate education with the aid of $41,000 in Foundation grants. The primary objective was to establish a four-year norm for the doctorate, but efforts were also made to improve supervision of candidates by faculty advisors, reduce dropouts, promote tighter admission policies, and integrate teaching with doctoral studies. Some 5,000 students, 30 per cent of them women, received fellowships support through the program.

Tentative conclusions of study

Although the results of the program have yet to be fully evaluated, a recent $80,000 grant to the Brookings Institution will support an in-depth study of a broader study of university resource allocation; a few tentative conclusions have emerged:

- Attrition was reduced at the outset, due primarily to more rigorous admission standards, but then began to drift up as a result of reduced government fellowship support, elimination of draft deferments, and campus turmoil over the Vietnam war.

- Efforts to integrate teaching with doctoral studies in a systematic way met with only modest success. In some cases opportunities for teaching were limited or not available at all; while in others teaching assistantships were heavily relied on to supplement student incomes. But those able to combine both, teaching was a rewarding experience if not unduly prolonged.

The dissertation was the main reason why students couldn't finish in four years. Many had difficulty in focusing on a topic, and then completing the research and writing within the allotted year. Although most departments were flexible about dissertation requirements, some students found a self-imposed need to produce an original contribution to knowledge intimidating. Inadequate mentoring by faculty advisors continued to be a problem.

Generalizations about so diverse an experience as graduate education, and a diverse group of students, are difficult, however. Some went through four years and on to teaching and other jobs without incident, while others became discouraged over what they felt were petty requirements, inadequate faculty attention, and insufficient financial support and dropped out. For still others, the experience was one of sorting themselves out before deciding what they wanted to do.

Stanford in its study pointed to this individualistic nature of education for the Ph.D, and said that any attempt to prescribe structural improvements in what is essentially a unique interpersonal relationship, should be frustrated. "Much of the hoped-for improvement in the quality of our Ph.D. programs will have to come from changes in the nature of that relationship."

ACLU seeks action against Marion prison

By Ron Morgan
Student Writer

Prisoners have been put in solitary confinement for as long as four years at the Marion Federal Penitentiary without a hearing or the right to counsel, Lee Tockman, an American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) lawyer said Tuesday night.

Tockman spoke at the Student Christian Federation, 913 S. Illinois Ave., along with four other lawyers and members of the ACLU committee to Support the Marion Brothers.

The meeting's purpose was to publicize a class action suit brought against the Marion Federal Penitentiary by the Prison Legal Services Project of the ACLU and the People's Law Office of Chicago on behalf of 300 Marion inmates called the Marion Brothers.

The suit seeks to end solitary confinement of prisoner control units at the Marion Federal Penitentiary.

The meeting was held in Benton and resumed after a continuation on Wednesday.

"Being in a control unit is like being in your boyfriend," Peggy Orefield of the ACLU said.

The Marion Federal Penitentiary has 75 six-foot by eight-foot control units, Ralph Hertzig of the People's Law Office said. Nine cells called "bogarts" have sliding metal doors and glass windows that shut out all vision and sound, he said.

"The only thing you can hear is the sound of an air ventilator," Hertzig said.

Control unit prisoners are kept in their cells 23 hours a day. They are allowed out half an hour a day for exercise. They usually see sunlight only once every other week.

Prisoners are allowed to have a radio and reading and writing materials, their cells, Tockman said. At present, 31 prisoners live in the control units, he added.

Prisoners in the control units, besides Marion inmates, come from federal penitentiaries, state prisons, the Virgin Islands and South Africa, Orefield said.

When an inmate is put in a control unit he is not given any chance to defend himself, or told how long he will be confined or when he will be released, Tockman said.

A prison psychiatrist at Marion said in a written deposition that out of 10 attempted suicides last year, over half had occurred in the control units.

Tockman said. Persons are put in control units because the prison officials believe they are trouble-makers, he said. A person may come to the prison just after being sentenced and immediately be placed in the control units because of the nature of his crime, Hertzig said.

Prison officials believe they can tell by the type of crime a person commits how well he will fit in the general prison population, Tockman said.

"Prisoners are also put in the control units because they are members of a certain class of people," Tockman said. "They're Black Muslims, Marxists or some type of prison leader.

"Control units were first set up at Marion after a prison demonstration in 1972, he said.

"The class action suit seeks to shut down all control units in all federal prisons or at least require that prisoners be given a hearing, where they can have counsel and a specific time limit on how long they can be kept there," Arpiar Saunders, ACLU lawyer, said.

The lawyers believe one solution to the problem would be to have a group of correction experts from other prisons tour the control units and make recommendations on changes that could be made.

"So far the officials at the Marion Penitentiary have adamantly refused to allow this," Tockman said.

City council appoints
13 persons to posts
By Kathleen Takemoto
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Thirteen persons have been appointed to various boards and commisions of the city of Carbondale. The appointments, recommended by Mayor Roger Ludwig, were approved by the city council at Monday night’s meeting.

Seven persons were appointed to the newly-established Community Development Loan and Grant Review Board. The board was established at the July 7 council meeting to review applications for loans and grants from Community Development funds.

In proposing the establishment of the board, City Manager Carroll J. Fry said persons with financial background will be board members. Board members and their terms are:

- Charles Williams, SIU budget analyst, three-year term.
- William Whitson, Bank of Carbondale president, two-year term.
- Roberta Ragan, University Bank customer service representative, three-year term.
- David Rosenthal, certified public accountant, one-year term.
- Eldon Ray, Carbondale JC Penney Co. manager, three-year term.
- Susan Enright, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Carbondale Savings and Loan Association, two-year term.
- and Gilbert Legel, First National Bank executive vice-person, one-year term.

Paul Denis, chairman of the Department of Community Development, was appointed to the Carbondale Planning Commission.

Board reviews conduct code change

By Lenore Sobata
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Student Conduct Review Board (SCRB) is holding a series of meetings to discuss revision of its operating procedures and the effect of the proposals on student conduct code.

Lawrence Dennis, newly-elected SCRB chairman, said most of the matters being discussed are "routine matters," involving minor changes of the operating procedures. "The term of office for the chairman is two quarters under the present working papers. That has to be changed," he said.

The University's policy on "sexual" evidence for marijuana cases was discussed briefly. Dennis said, but the discussion was dropped.

Student Center head to be appointed in fall

The search for a new Student Center director will begin soon and an appointment will be made during the second half of fall semester, Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said Wednesday.

The position was left vacant when Clarence Dougherty was appointed director of campus services at the board's meeting in June.

The search committee held a preliminary meeting this week and will meet officially with Swinburne when he returns from vacation.

At the first official meeting we will present a proposed job description, get the search process laid out on the table and set up the selection process for consideration by the total committee," Swinburne said.

Swinburne will serve as chairman of the search committee, which will include Dougherty and the Student Center Advisory Board.

Six persons have submitted applications or given indication of interest in the position, Swinburne said. They are from within and outside SIU, he said.

Two arrests follow attempt to rob house, police report

Carbondale police said two persons were arrested Tuesday night after they attempted to rob a house.

Police said Angela Mason, 23, of Carbondale and a 15-year-old male were arrested on a complaint by Destar D. Marshall, 204 E. Willow St., after the suspects attempted to steal a baby bed and mattress from the house.

Mason is being held in the county jail pending appearance in city court. The juvenile was released to his guardian.

Police said Margaret Okamoto, 40 W. Walnut St., reported that someone broke into her house Tuesday and took food and clothing valued at $5.

Fall student telephone directory set

Plans were approved Tuesday to distribute a student telephone directory during fall semester.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for academic affairs, agreed to a proposal from the Student Life Office to distribute the directory as a supplement to the Daily Egyptian.

The directory will list the names, local and home addresses, local phone numbers and possibly the class majors of SIU students. Patricia Cox, student life staff assistant said Wednesday.

The directory will be printed on newsprint and stapled at the fold, Cox said. Harvey Welch, dean of student-life, said printing the directories will cost approximately $3,200. He said funding will come from the Student Special Projects Fund.

These students who do not wish their phone numbers listed may have their names removed from a list supplied by the Office of Admissions and Records, Cox said. Students may keep their names from being listed by filling out and sending to the Student Life Office a coupon that will appear in the Daily Egyptian early in the semester, Cox said.

Paducah KKK ‘public rally’ bars blacks with police help

(Continued from Page 1) “Warner’s speech was followed by a fiery talk by Duke, who reiterated much of what he had said, but also presented a challenge to the audience. “There are many of you people here tonight to go back black,” he said. “Even this early in the week, it is too late to change the minds of the people in the center.” In an encounter earlier in the evening, a solitary black man attempted to gain entrance to the center and a police officer had assisted Klansmen in preventing him from entering. The police officer repeated what Klansmen had said, saying the building was “reserved to white person only.”

While Warner was speaking, the crowd of 300 persons started moving across the street in the steps of the center and made an attempt to enter the building. Klansmen and sympathizers held fast, refusing to let any black persons enter.

Klansmen inside the building started to get bitter. One Klansman was heard to say, “We don’t want any trouble.” They claimed the black persons just want to cause trouble. They were afraid the whites would come and they just want to start trouble. We made it quite clear that this meeting was for white people only. It ain’t open to the black public.

Delay in garage completion due to lack of concrete forms

The completion of SIU’s 308-space parking garage has been delayed three months because of lack of concrete forms needed for flooring, said Rino Bianchi, director of building planning.

Officials had hoped for the garage to be ready in September, but the Mississippian reported making the concrete forms is behind in filling its orders. He said the forms can be delivered in two or three weeks. If the Niners move by the end of August, the garage could be ready by the second week in December. Bianchi said.

The delay has also affected construction of the school’s new gym, which is scheduled to be completed in the fall. The delay has caused additional costs for the project, Bianchi said. The cost of the garage is now estimated to be $320,000.

The J & L Robinson Development and Construction Company of Carbondale is building the 308-space garage for the campus. The firm has said the forms are behind in part because of restrictions other than the parking garage. Bianchi said.

There will be no additional increase in the $300,000 building budget because of the delay, he said. Bianchi said workers will be kept busy installing electric equipment and working on the interior. The garage is being built between the north end of McAndrew Stadium and Fanner Hall.

Viet refugee face family, job, sponsor problems

Editor's note: This is the second installment in a three-part series on Vietnamese refugees temporarily housed at Ft. Chaffee, Ark. Dan Ward visited the army base last weekend, and returned with stories and photographs.

By Dan Ward

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Pt. Chaffee, Ark.—Tran Run Can, like about a third of the 22,000 refugees at Pt. Chaffee, is a young man in his early 20's. He speaks only broken English, served in the South Vietnamese Military—and has yet to be sponsored.

Tran, 24, is a former helicopter mechanic in the Vietnamese air force. He found his way to Pt. Chaffee via Thailand, Singapore and the Philippines. He seemed very happy to talk to visitors and readily answered questions about his work in a basesouth of Saigon, all the time smiling and nodding.

A military escort for visiting newsmen asked Tran where his family is. The Vietnamese's face contorted and his voice raised octaves as though he were about to cry.

"My family, sir, is in Vietnam. I am alone here. They in Vietnam... and he said this with his hand on his heart.

The escort, to relieve the uncomfortable situation, changed the subject.

"What sort of work do you want to do in America?" he asked Tran. Tran's face lightened and he released a grin as though worried about his family were forgotten already.

"I am barber, sir. I am barber in America—I am barber at Fort Chaffee," he said, pointing over his shoulder at the camp barber shop. Throughout the day interviews with other refugees went in a similar vein. One is left with a sense that the refugees feel deeply about all they have experienced. They seem to grasp at the little pleasures, such as a job on the base, and feel deep sorrow when reminded of personal tragedies. Or, the possibility exists that they are outrageous ac-

Le Quang Nga was an officer on a destroyer operating out of Cam.Ran Bay. He was sitting in the steps of the Interagency Coordinator's office with four other young Vietnamese when he spoke to newsmen recently.

"My family still is in Vietnam... he said, looking downcast. "My father, you go to America. My father Ford Grammar, VR (long) no hurt fisherman. For me, I am, end with a shrug suggesting his fate would not have been good.

Before reporters left, Le gave a Vietnamese 500 patriot bill, now worthless, to one of them. He had signed it: "Le Quang Nga, revenue." The bill was formerly worth 30 cents.

When the center began operating at Pt. Chaffee in May, reports filled newspapers that refugees crowded around newsmen and visitors asking to be sponsored. Now, refugees only speak to visitors when they are asked questions.

Part of the change is no doubt the result of realizing that there is little chance of finding a sponsor by begging. Most refugees have a particular family or type of family in mind that they wish to arrive at the camp, a representative of the International Rescue Council, a nonprofit relief organization, said.

Potential sponsors ask for a specific number of persons per family, skills and age groups, he said.

One 25-year-old former navy lieutenant probably will be one of the last to leave the camp. He speaks fluent English, has had 13 years of sea experience and knows more about American geography and customs than any other refugee interviewed by the Daily Egyptian Saturday.

His problem is common in the camp. He has a family of 12—11 in the camp and one at a university in Germany. He said that his children were studying in Vietnamese colleges at the time of the evacuation. He said he does not know what will become of his own in Germany.

For most people in the camp, hope of quick sponsorship has faded. In May, government estimates said 25 percent of the refugees spoke fluent English. When asked Saturday, about one person in 10 could answer the question, "Do you speak English?"

Early estimates reported that most refugee family heads were professionals, skilled tradesmen and clerical workers. Now, professional soldiers appear to be about all who remain.

One group of fishermen, want to establish a community in Louisiana where they can continue living in the fashion they did in Vietnam. Lt. Col. Robert Potts, one of the administrators, said the plan is not possible due to objections from Louisianans and because it is contrary to a policy of assimilating refugees into American society. He said attempts to convince Latin American countries in need of fishermen to take the refugees have been fruitless.

Do Sam and has family were laying away their family's room when questioned through an interpreter. Do speaks no English and has been trained only as a soldier. He, his mother and eight children ranging in age, perhaps from three years to mid-teen, all live in a single plywood-结构ed, eight by 20-foot room containing four two-tiered bunk beds.

A single shower room on each floor of barracks containing about 46 families provides them with hot and cold water. Portable one-seat washstands stand outside, one to a barrack.

Elsewhere in the camp, the atmosphere is one of idleness. Women in haggly silk pants strolled along the roads carrying umbrellas to shield them from the sun.

Young men sit in the shade, not talking, sharing each other's company. Children play on swing sets and in toy boats made from cast-off cardboard boxes.

Old men and women bubbled from one barrack to another, tragic tag-alongs who will never adapt to the culture to which they have escaped.

Ngo Phong sat with his pregnant wife, Ba, across the road from the freshly-painted barracks, which house former Vietnamese officials. In a manner unusual for Vietnamese, Ngo Phong sat with his arm around his wife.

Ngo said he was a helicopter pilot in Vietnam. He said he and his wife have a three-year-old child, will another expected in September.

When asked if he is glad to be away from the war and sale with his family in America, Ngo gave a surprising reply. "No sir," he said, "I want be back in Viet Nam.—shoot VC. Too many VC now—I cannot go back."

San Francisco clobbers Cubs, 10-2

Montefusco, 9-4, posted his third straight victory and the Giants won for the sixth time in seven games, tearing into lawer Steve Stone, 7-5, with a five-run onslaught in the first inning.

The rookie right-hander struck out nine. One-out walks by Derrel Thomas and Bobby Murcer started the first-inning scoring for the Giants. After Gary Matthews and Willie Montanez ripped run-scoring singles, Speier connected for his fifth home run of the baseball season.

Doubles by Montanez and Steve On tiresen added a run in the third. Montefusco's homer triggered a two-run fourth, the Giants also scoring on singles by Gary Thomassen and Thomas, Murcer's walk and Matthews' sacrifice fly.

The Giants' got their final run in the seventh on Thomassen's triple and Thomas' grounder.

The Giants' attack included 10 hits and 11 walks off five Chicago hurlers, with four walks by reliever Milt Wilcox allowing San Francisco to score a run in the fifth.

Montefusco lost his shutdown bid in the seventh on doubles by Tim Holley and Bill Madlock.

Meeting set for IM teams

The men's Intramural Department's summer softball leagues wind up this weekend with some late-season playoff games.

The推崇 Intramural Department's softball leagues' last games on the schedule are playoff games, beginning Monday.

All teams with a .600 record or better are eligible to play in the tournament. There will be a meeting for all managers of these teams at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in Room 119 of the Arena. Drawings will be made at that time to determine the playoff schedules.

The 12-inch slow pitch league, there are currently three teams which remain undefeated. The AKL Vultures are 5-0, while Conquest and Wildlife Research stand at 4-0. They are followed by UBS, The Over-the-Hill Gang, The Nukes and The Virtual Machine, all with 3-1 records.

The 15-inch slow pitch league is led by the Educators with an 8-8 mark. Other undefeated teams are Scoff n' Deck at 6-0 and The Wallabies at 5-0. The Rowdy's, Just Shirts, The Howling Commandoes and Golgi-Bodies are close behind with only one loss.

The moving team will go to the Indiana University at Terre Haute, Ind. on Oct. 10. Later, the team will go to the regional tournament at the University of Dayton in Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 20-22.

In addition to intercollegiate competition, the University offers an extensive intramural program, under the direction of Jean Paratore.

"Women's intramurals will draw more than 4,000 participants this year," West predicted. The number increases each year, because "there is an ever growing promotion and acceptance of women's athletics," she claims.

Sixty women get SIU athletic scholarships

Patti Jones

Sixty women will have SIU scholarships this year for intercollegiate athletics more than double last year's figure of 27.

Last year, the scholarships provided extramural fee waivers and aid for the student. Now, there is a new extramural fee waiver program which offers a full scholarship that waives room and board costs, in addition to tuition and fees.

The program was passed by the Board of Trustees and made effective May 3, according to Charlotte West, director of the Women's Intercollegiate Athletics Department.

The scholarships are awarded to the female applicant according "to her athletic skill and financial need," said West. "The number of scholarships given in particular sports vary from year to year, depending on the qualifications of the applicants."

In addition to the revised scholarship program, the department's budget has gone up from last year's $17,000 to about $10,000 this year. "This is due to the higher cost of living and increased support services, including the new publicist Carol Van Dyke," West revealed.

Van Dyke, who was hired Monday, is a graduate in journalism from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wis.

SIU competition gets underway in the fall with cross country, field hockey, golf, gymnastics, tennis and volleyball. In early November, there will be competition in badminton, basketball and swimming. More than 250 young women compete each year.

Women's intercollegiate teams plan numerous trips during the season. The volleyball team will go to the Indiana University at Terre Haute, Ind. on Oct. 10. Later, the team will go to the regional tournament at the University of Dayton in Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 20-22.

In addition to intercollegiate competition, the University offers an extensive intramural program, under the direction of Jean Paratore.

Tennis coach regrets beating pupil

Ken Johnson

Judy Auld, the SIU tennis coach who beat her best tennis player to win the Central Illinois Open in Decatur last weekend, feels "kind of bad."

"I feel kind of bad about it because I was able to work with the girls all summer and try to help them improve their game, not compete with them," Auld explained.

"When you play with someone for a long time, you get to know what they are going to do with the ball and all that," she added.

Auld topped Rhonda Garcia, a senior in sociology, by scoring 6-2 and 6-3 in two sets.

Garcia, however, has no hurt feelings about the tournament, and passes off her loss as one for experience. "It doesn't bother me," she said with a shrug.

The Saluki coach, who has played in her hometown Decatur tournament since she was 14, had never won the women's title, but had previously captured the junior championship.

Garcia has played tennis since age 13, and Auld since she was 14. However, the 36-year-old coach noted that her SIU student may go further than she has--"I'm too old now to play in top-notch tournaments, but Rhonda could," Auld said.

"I have a stronger baseline game than she does, but she has a stronger net game," said Auld. "Rhonda just needs to play with some better players to improve."

Garcia qualified for the national collegiate tournament last year, but lost to Judy Archer, the tourney's no. 1 seed, Auld said.

The SIU women's tennis program has been strengthened by the addition of two full scholarships, according to Auld.

The scholarships, in addition to good tennis facilities, favorable weather and the leadership of Athletic Director Charlotte West combine to give SIU a good program, she said. "Southern has everything going for good tennis teams," noted Auld.
