Panel eyes impeachment

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Judiciary Committee moved toward a vote late Friday on an article of impeachment charging President Nixon with participating in the Watergate cover-up. The President's defenders immediately attacked it as lacking detail.

Whatever its final form, an impeachment recommendation seemed certain.

"Wouldn't it be a damning indictment after all this time and all his money if we were unable to state the case with any specificity?" asked Rep. Charles E. Wiggins (R-Calif.), an opponent of impeachment.

"I think this article meets the test," said John Doar, chief counsel for the impeachment inquiry in response to a question from chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr. (D.N.J.).

The committee entered this climactic phase of its deliberations with strong bipartisan support evident for impeachment. The bloc of staunch Nixon defenders appeared to have dwindled to 10 Republicans.

There was little indication in the debate of any weakening in the bipartisan support for impeachment. It appeared that as many as seven Republicans would join the 21 Democrats in recommending Nixon's removal from office.

Before turning to consideration of the articles, the committee rejected by a 27-11 vote a motion from Rep. Robert J. Driessen of Illinois, second-ranking Republican on the panel, to delay the debate at least a day in the hope of obtaining subpoenaed tapes from President Nixon.

Orescanin, Leffler indicted for tampering with records

By Jeff Jouett and David Kornblith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

Danilo Orescanin, former executive vice president of SIU and Thomas Leffler, chief of the SIU Security Police, were indicted Thursday by the Jackson County grand jury.

Orescanin, former campus treasurer, and Leffler were charged with two counts each of tampering with public records and release of $1,000 recognition bond each.

The charges carry a possible sentence of one to three years imprisonment, a maximum fine of $10,000 or both.

The special two-day session of the grand jury had been going on clandestinely since about May. About 50,000 of liquor was purchased from the Carbondale Holiday Inn over a 19-month period.

Howard Hood, state's attorney, said the charges were connected with the grand jury investigation. He said Orescanin is charged with "concealing the true nature of expenditures tabled to the SIU president's official functions account on Jan. 22, 1972, and June 25, 1972."

Leffler specifically is charged with "aiding and abetting Orescanin both before and during the occasions," Hood said.

Hood said vouchers made out to Holiday Inn of Carbondale on Jan. 22, 1972, for $328 and on June 25, 1972, for $199.50 contained "incorrect, false, and misleading information."

At the courthouse in Murphysboro Friday morning David Watt Jr., attorney for Orescanin and Leffler, said his client will not plead guilty, but he declined to discuss the case further.

Both Orescanin and Leffler also refused to comment.

The SIU officials will enter their pleas at 11 a.m. Aug. 8.

Orescanin, now professor of administrative sciences in the SIU College of Business and Administration, resigned as executive vice president and campus treasurer on Feb. 28. He did so after notifying SIU president David R. Derge of "irregularities" in accounts handled by Orescanin.

Later in March, Board of Trustees Chairman Ivan A. Elliott Jr. announced an audit of restricted University accounts handled by Orescanin showed that over a period of 12 months nearly $5,000 was spent to purchase alcoholic beverages for official entertainment to the University House, then Derge's residence.

Elliot said he believed Derge was unaware of the manner in which the liquor was purchased.

Derge resigned as SIU president shortly after Orescanin stepped down, citing "the best interests of the University" as his only explanation for resigning.

At that time, Elliot claimed 18 vouchers had been processed for the Carbondale Holiday Inn for catering services, lunches, dinners or receptions, but none of those services were performed.

"Instead, the Holiday Inn purchased liquor and other alcoholic beverages for the university, usually in case lots, and sold it to the University with a mark-up of 10 per cent over the wholesale price paid by the Holiday Inn," a statement issued by Elliott said.

Asked whether the other vouchers making up the alleged $5,000 purchase of liquor from the Holiday Inn were genuine, the grand jury, Hood replied "You'll just have to wait until the evidence is disclosed in the trial."

Hood said the grand jury has been discharged and he does not expect it to reconvene.

"Attorney Watt asked Circuit Judge Richard Richman for time to study the indictment and filed a motion for disclosure of evidence."

If the motion is granted, Hood said he would file a reciprocal disclosure motion.

A hearing on Watt's motion was set for Aug. 8, at the same time the defendants are to file pleas on the tampering charges.

T. Richard Magie, vice president for development and services, refused to comment on the indictments. He added that he would comment after he had read through the indictments. Magie is Leffler's superior.

Orescanin came to SIU in 1972 to become special assistant to Derge. Later that year he was promoted to vice president for campus and treasurer.

In 1973, Orescanin was chosen executive vice president.
Stakes growing in police board fight

By Dave Ibatia
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A court battle faces Carbondale which could result in the recall of the old Board of Police and Fire Commissioners dismissed in February, the nullification of major civic decisions and even the loss of home rule privileges.

Dismissed members of the police and fire board have teamed up with two policemen's associations to take on the city.

The point of dispute: Did the Carbondale City Council follow proper procedure when it referred hiring and firing powers from the police and fire board to the city manager? Hawkins has said that council violated state statutes when it dismissed the old board and appointed a new one.

By Mike Maurilio
City Manager Carroll Fry proposed that he be given the power to hire and fire police and fire chiefs. While the city council reacted favorably, the three members of the police and fire board hesitated.

The old board of commissioners had agreed to transfer power to Fry, as long as a referendum was held to approve it. Hawkins said that the several public meetings held to discuss the proposed ordinance, no one came to support the city's position. Hawkins added.

The city council passed the ordinance transferring the powers, and when the commissioners refused to surrender these powers, Mayor Neal Eckert recommended their dismissal. In mid-February the council voted to remove the dissidents, and appointed a new board.

Rosemary Hawkins, former police and fire board member, said Friday that the plaintiffs do not dispute whether the council had the authority to transfer hiring and firing powers, but that they question is the way the transfer was made.

"When you alter your form of government, it can be done only by a referendum of the people," Hawkins said. "That's our case.

The city council gave no specific reason for dismissal when it voted to remove Hawkins and her fellow board members. "Even then due process was denied.

"It's our position that we were never removed through due process; therefore the decision was illegal," Hawkins said. She said that if the transfer of powers or ordinance was found to be illegal, all three dismissed members would be reinstated.

But if the former board members and police associations win, everything the present Board of Police and Fire Commissioners decided and every commission power Fry exercised might be negated, Hawkins said. This may even include Fry's choice for new police chief, if the case should land long.

The former three board members took their case to court claiming the city acted unconstitutionally in the city cited that it followed home rule guidelines. Within a month, the Illinois Police Association, represented by Carbondale Officer Mike Maurizio, jumped into the fray.

Three former board members vs. the City of Carbondale vs. Michael Maurizio on behalf of 37,000 patrons throughout Illinois sit on the docket at Jackson County Circuit Court, staked due to legal technicalities.

City officials remain reluctant to speak about the case, maintaining that the city acted entirely within its home rule powers.

Mike Maurizio approaches the case with a slightly different angle. "My personal concern is that I don't live any one man should have the amount of power the city manager has," Maurizio stated.

Now the city manager can control the police department all the way down to fixing traffic tickets, Maurizio said. "This city ordinance is bringing us right back into police.

The primary fear of policemen is that the city might use home rule provision to get control of the police pension fund, Maurizio said. "If the city could get control of that money there's a good chance they could use it for things other than what it is, now used for.

The three former commissioners have agreed to do with his end of the case, Maurizio said. What the two plaintiffs both want is Board of Police and Fire Commissioners operating under state statutes rather than one following home rule. Maurizio said.

Cable to up rates

Rising operating costs will force the city's cable television company to raise its monthly rates $1 Aug. 1 to $6.90. Doug Goodman, manager of Carbondale Cablevision announced Friday.

However, the $1 monthly rate for each additional outlet will remain unchanged, Goodman said. All installation, reconection and cable move charges will remain unchanged.

The raise in rates is the first for the cable company since it began service in 1975.

Beer, barbecued chicken, games, poker and pool were all part of the annual Jacob Day festivities Saturday at the Jacob Community Park.

Southern Illinois residents disgraced the hot, humid Sunday weather to enjoy the 1,000 gallons of cold beer and some 600 chickens barbecued to perfection. The blue and white beer truck relied in early and left late. The six cooks dened their efforts and began at 4 a.m.

The former cost $2.75 and residents pushed back from the tables to have a drink away huge portions of chicken.

When midday meals had been eaten, Jacob yearning left the shelter set up for the meal and engaged in the activities scheduled for the day.

The poker booth was a favorite stop, as hordes gathered around the large U-shaped table trying to break the booth. The table was rarely empty. A quarter was all it took to get in the game and crack at the prizes, a six-pack of beer.

Those who shed away from the free hands at the poker table was covered around the ground and, more than likely, to the "country store." The store was selling homemade quilts, bread, coffee cakes and other trinkets. The store's variety was brought to the attention of patrons by a voice proclaiming: "If you can't find it anywhere else, you can find it here."

The country store was also the scene of the raffle. The first winner went home with a handmade ham. Other prizes included a wall clock, carving knife, transistor radio and a needle crafts book.

For the athletically inclined, there was a Jacob Day Festival game handed in the sun or taken refuge from it next to some nearby trees and into the games. Playing for the first game were dice players, and other games were worn on the field.

When the second game had finished and dancing began. The floor of the shelter was cleared and waded and Baptist Polka Kings started spouting some quick tunes.

Those who didn't step, stamped. Even the children enjoyed themselves as they played on the floor.

Council day off

The Carbondale City Council will not meet today as the Council schedules meetings for four Monday's a month. They do not meet on the fifth Monday of a month. The next council meeting is planned for Aug. 6.

Jacob Days growing in police board fight

There was still the same high spirits left over from last year's Jacob Day festivities.

The fine weather and a crowd of at least 1,000 made the atmosphere even more inviting.

Jacob Day festivities will end today with live music and food served from the Jacob Community Park.

The games, pool, poker and other such activity are scheduled for noon today. A dance floor is also being set up.

When Baptist said "Everyone having a good time" the crowd roared back, "Yeah."
Joint effort on ambulances nets savings

By Carla Conference
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Working together, SIU and the Carbondale community have managed to reduce the impact of nationally skyrocketing health care costs. In the year since the University contracted to provide ambulance service for the city of Carbondale, a duplication of service has resulted in a savings of $21,000 for Carbondale and SIU students approaching $25,000.

The movement toward integration of services has been continued by the agreement of the SIU Board of Trustees determined a new direction for health services at SIU.

In "1970, Sam McVay, administrator of the University Health Service, said, "the board directed the president of the University to integrate the student health system into the community care delivery system at the earliest practical time."

This was done largely, McVay said, under the influence of Richard H. Moyo, a local SIU Medical School, which was being formed at the time.

The philosophy of eliminating many of the practices that only serve to increase cost to the university, said Moyo's direction holds that clinical experience should take place in the "real world" community setting.

Further, it is maintained that perhaps the greatest responsibility of the medical school is to provide a lifetime of health care to the community in which it is situated.

In Carbondale, an emergency medical technician trained with the SIU Ambulance Service, and medical personnel who staff the ambulance, are sent to the scene of the accident; the doctor or the doctors it serves turns over the care to the actual needs of the school's community.

Initially, McVay maintained separate health care systems for community and the University. While the hospital and the University hospital were combined, the size of the University has increased dramatically.

In two areas, SIU and Carbondale have already moved toward fully coordinated services. July 1 marked that the second year that the same health services have been available to them, and the University's health services personnel have been making full use of them.

Under an agreement with the City of Carbondale, SIU provides ambulance service within the city limits.

On June 13, the Board of Trustees amended the second annual contract for the service, holding in part that:

"In the best interests and purpose of the University. The Board of Action in November of 1970, constructed the administration to integrate the student health services with the community health care system. This agreement provides for maximum emergency ambulance service. This contract provides for maximum emergency service and a minimum cost to students and community alike. Under the contract, the city pays SIU $500 for call for emergency ambulance services. That cost is billed in turn to the victim. "We try to extend the service beyond the limits of the city to the outlying community," McVay explained. This means that the caller directly but we try to keep the cost within actual limits."

"In 1972, SIU and Carbondale each paid about $48,000 or about $96,000 total to separate ambulance services. "In 1973, the first year SIU provided the service for the city, the total cost was cut to $71,388.00," McVay said.

The contract for the emergency room service is between SIU and the Shawnee Regional Health Maintenance System, a non-profit organization set up further coordination of health care resources in Southern Illinois. Shawnee contracts with Doctors Memorial Hospital for use of the emergency room during the hours the Health Service is not available. Finally, a hospital contracts with an organization called the Carbondale Emergency Medical Service Corporation (CEMS) that provides for care of local physicians willing to staff the emergency room during the contracted hours.

While the Health Service is integrating some aspects of its services into the city, the 1974-75 school year will also mark several new additions to the services provided students.

Services available for the first time this year will include expanded primary care, hospitalization insurance and psychiatric aid, and added general medical insurance.

Three clubs in one barrel: Bavarian beer hall goes up

By Dave Barta
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Herb Vogel, reach for SIU's favored women's gymnastics team, is again making his mark this summer to set up business on South Illinois Avenue. While December students will be more familiar with Vincent's and Bavarian beer hall goes up in its tenth year, it is with a lot of problems, he said.

Vogel describes Das Fass as a "German-style Italian Village" or a Bavarian beer hall. The facility is a large 20-year-old bar and grill, and "Our guests can taste the authentic Bavarian beer hall atmosphere," Vogel said.

The path will then split three ways between yard beer, garden, one to a short-order kitchen serving only pizza, bratwurst, beer and wine, and one to a basement restaurant.

The rathskeller will be a lounge featuring light jazz and occasional ethnic entertainment. Patrons in the rathskeller will sit at low tables, which will not allow for the type of comfortable seating they have. The restaurant will be a lounge serving just beer, wine and soft drinks.

Das Fass will be open for business on 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. in October, and 11:00 p.m. for the remaining months. Hours for the garden and basement restaurant will be the same as last year's.

"It is a place where a guy and a girl can go together, and just come and enjoy themselves," Vogel explained.

Along with the food, the restaurant will dish out a German style of the Brown Bear restaurant on Chicago's north side. Lunch is served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Outside, "Lovers of silence may get what they're looking for," said Vogel.

A visit to Woodlawn Cemetery

By Marion W. Mitchell

(Twelfth in a Series)

By the turn of the century, Woodlawn Cemetery, out on the east side of Carbondale, held many of the pioneer settlers of the Carbondale area. The Civil War had, of course, taken a heavy toll of Carbondale’s “first generation.” There are at least 50 soldiers of the Civil War buried in Woodlawn Cemetery. They came from all over the United States and there are some from the Confederacy.

The best single source of Civil War burials in Woodlawn Cemetery is a recently-published brochure which was compiled by John W. Wright and published by the Jackson County Historical Society.

The cemetery was established in 1835. As might be expected, Daniel Brush, Asgill Conner and Dr. William Richart were the directors of the Carbondale Cemetery Association. Conner died in 1875, the Association apparently remained active until Brush’s death in 1890. Upon Brush’s demise, the Association’s activities were taken over by the city.

Since that time, various civic groups have, at one time or another, sponsored spurs of interest in the beautification of the old burial ground. New trees, flowers, shrubs, etc. appear rather frequently upon the premises.

A stroll through the cemetery is well worth the time and trouble. Standing near the center is the most imposing stone on the grounds. It is appropriately enough, a dark red sandstone monolith marking the grave of James M. Campbell. Campbell, as you will recall, was Brush’s close friend and the contractor who was killed early in the construction of the “Normal.” The stone is made of stone from the same quarry where the stone for the Normal was acquired. Campbell’s marker, along with several others set in the late 60’s and through the 70’s is signed by a “D. Johnson, Carbondale, Ill.” Several others made of the same material, while not signed by Johnson, bear the unmistakable mark of his chisel. While Campbell’s stone is relatively simple, other stones signed by Johnson boast gracefully carved flowers, drapes, and scroll-work—all artfully worked in the old Boskydell sandstone.

One of the more interesting stones in Woodlawn Cemetery is that of George W. Tiffany. The following inscription covers a good part of one side of the small obelisk:

“George W. Tiffany
One of Gen’l Grant’s Scouts in the early part of the war
He contracted smallpox while in the service and died at Carbondale III of the disease

March 8, 1862

Erected by his memory by his friend D.H. Brush who on his way home from Doneelon, wounded and sick, was kindly assisted and cared for by the deceased
May he rest in peace”

This stone bears the appearance of a Johnson-carved stone. It is probable that it was erected well after the war was over.

It was during the Civil War, so the story goes, that the wife of a Carbondale man sickened and died. When she was buried, her body was wrapped in a sheet that was left and the body was placed in the old burial ground. New trees, flowers, shrubs, etc. appeared rather frequently upon the premises.

Near the front entrance to Woodlawn Cemetery—in fact, about a dozen steps east of the Flagpole, is the well-carved stone of Capt. Edmund Newsome. Newsome just a year before his death in 1866 had published a History of Jackson County. Newsome is one of those people about whom a certain mystery prevails. We first hear of him in 1854 or ’55 when James Green recollects building a house for him. In his History of Jackson County, he writes as if he must have been privileged to attend a wide variety of meetings. He served for some time as County surveyor. Newsome was a captain of the 11th Illinois Volunteer Infantry. We know that he was captured and served a goodly stretch of time as a POW of the Confederates. He wrote a book describing his experiences as a POW. But there is much we do not know about this individual.

Elisha Boyd, who in 1858 built the house which was to later become Dr. Alyn’s home rests under an undated stone a few steps southeast of the center of the cemetery.

The family of Asgill Conner, a co-founder of Carbondale, is buried in Lot 2, just to the south of the Brush plot. Conner’s gravestone is badly weathered, but the following inscription is still decipherable:

“Capt. Asgill Conner
n native of Jackson County, Ill. and a man of perfect honor.
The Originator of the town of Carbondale
In—of highest meed—of
In—his country.

Died April 2, 1875
Age 51 yrs. 7 ms. 19 ds.

The Pricketts had come to town early, and early they began to inter their dead at Woodlawn. One Prickett plot, 27, in the southwest section of the cemetery, was filled by 1870. John and William Prickett had been killed the same day at Fort Donelson when the 18th Illinois had taken the brunt of the fierce Confederate counter-attack.

The strangest interment in Woodlawn Cemetery is that utilizing a massive sandstone sarcophagus. The large box is placed on two stone pediments which hold it well above the ground. This entombment, in the southeast section of the cemetery, bears an almost eerie account of the woman within.

It has been suggested that the individuals interred in Woodlawn Cemetery might have been of the Carbondale area. The Civil War burial records show many of the Carbondale area. ‘Operation Red Ball’

Police to distribute fire decals

By Dave Dutz
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Details for “Operation Red Ball,” a program designed to save the lives of children, are set to be distributed in town this weekend as the second year, according to Office Norma Horner of the Carbon-date Police Community Service (CPSD).

A four inch wide stick on red circle placed on a bedroom window or front door will tell firefighters where children or invalids may be trapped inside a burning home, Horner explained.

“Red Ball” is a co-project between the Carbondale Jaycees and the Carbondale police service unit.

La-We West, commissioner of the PCSD, said Friday, “Basically, it’s just to let the firemen know where the children are.”

“Red Balls” will be given away at the crime prevention display at J.C.

Perney’s from 10-5 Saturday, and at area banks, supermarkets and fire houses, Booker said.

Parents are asked to display one red ball for each child in the upper

bedroom windows. Booker said, “red balls placed on front doors will indicate an invalid occupant, Booker added.

Lou Morgan, assistant city financial director and former Jaycee president, said “it’s been proven by statistics that if there’s a fire in the home, the child will hide and not be found until the red ball, “firemen will know which window to go to first,” Morgan said.

During Oct. 7-8, Fire Prevention Week, firemen will visit area school districts and distribute the red balls to the schoolchildren. Morgan said.

“Operation Red Ball” was conceived in 1971 by Reardon, Ill. Jaycee, and was adopted as a state project by other chapters. Morgan said Morgan estimated that over 200 Illinois cities have “Red Ball.”

'Ah, Wilderness!' good despite its length

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The problem with summer Playhouse "42nd Street's" production of "Ah, Wilderness!" is that the playwright's verbal overkill. No plot needs to be set in a small Connecticut town in July where the love and troubles of the Miller family. "Ah, Wilderness!" begins with the playing of period background music and大气," says Carroll. "Good despite the play's flaws, it is a wonderful show."

The setting of the play is a small Connecticut town in July where the love and troubles of the Miller family. "Ah, Wilderness!" begins with the playing of period background music and themes. The play's flaws, it is a wonderful show."

With the plot's development, some of the rehearsal problems become apparent. The actors seem to be struggling with their lines and the delivery. This is particularly noticeable in the opening scene, where some of the actors speak too softly and others too loudly.

The acting, however, improves as the play progresses. The cast members seem to be more comfortable with their roles and the material. Despite the occasional mispronunciation of a line or stumble, the overall performance is pleasant to watch.

The production values are also impressive. The set design, by John Smith, is simple yet effective in creating the small-town atmosphere. The lighting, by Jane Doe, is subtle and appropriate for the mood of the play. The costumes, by Mary Jones, are period-appropriate and add to the naturalistic feel of the production.

Overall, "Ah, Wilderness!" is a worthwhile production that is enjoyed by the audience. The play's themes, which explore the issues of family, love, and the struggle for meaning in life, are relevant to modern audiences.

The play's flaws, however, are also evident. The dialogue is dense and difficult to follow at times, and the overall pace of the production is slow. Nevertheless, "Ah, Wilderness!" is a production that should not be missed by anyone who appreciates a well-told story.

Federal mediator to supervise

NFL negotiations to resume

By Robert A. Dobkin
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON—Striking National Football League players and owners of the 36 NFL teams agreed Friday to resume bargaining next week under the supervision of the top federal mediator, W. J. Usery Jr.

Usery, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said he would take personal charge of the talks.

Usery asked the striking players to meet with him Monday and asked Theodore Wheel, counsel for the league owners, to meet with him Tuesday.

Negotiations between the two parties would resume Tuesday afternoon, following the Wheel-Usery meeting, it was learned Friday.

In telegrams sent Friday, Usery said: "A continuation of this conflict can only bring hardship to the parties directly involved and to those who are caught in the middle, including the communities in which professional football has become an important economic factor."

"The best interest of the players, the owners, managers and stockholders, and the thousands of employees and operators on ancillary service industries whose income depend upon an uninterrupted season will be best served through the negotiation of a mutually acceptable agreement of the remaining issues."

The players' association called the strike. Several unsuccessful attempts have been made since then to resolve the dispute.

There have been no talks since last weekend, when the owners broke off negotiations with the players' representatives and the mediator.

Workshop scheduled for student trainers

"The first annual student trainer's workshop will take place Saturday, August 10, under the direction of Harry W. Schultz, Jr., athletic trainer at Union University in Jackson, Tenn."

The workshop is open to all high school and junior high school prospective student trainers.

The workshop is being co-sponsored by the Carbondale Park District.

For further information contact Schultz at 506 Skyline Drive in Carbondale, or call 457-7251.

Children wanted for swim study

Jane Henderson, a grad student in recreation, is looking for non-swimming children between the ages of three and five to participate in a study of two methods of swimming instruction.

As part of her masters dissertation, she hopes to get parents to accompany their child to a series of free swimming lessons to be held in the Pulliam Pool. She and a number of Water Safety Instructors will separate the children into two groups to determine the different effects of the parent-child method of instruction and the instructor method.

She said that the children must be non-swimming children who have never before received swim instruction. The parents will be required to attend the free lessons.

For more information, contact Henderson after 5 p.m. at 349-4857.
