Candidates land punches in 1st bout

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — George Bush and Michael Dukakis, clashing in the first 1988 debate between the two presidential candidates, offered Americans sharply different programs for the future in a sharp, rough and sometimes personal face-to-face meeting.

Both parties claim victory — Page 9

Dukakis, seeking to become only the second Democrat elected to the office, sharply attacked Bush for his roles in the sales of arms sale to Iran and the administration's dealings with "the incompetent Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega" but mixed in a broad view of how he would lead the nation into the next decade.

Bush, hoping to parlay his quiet service as Reagan's vice president into continued GOP control of the White House, sharply attacked Dukakis, three-term governor of Massachusetts, for his handling of his experience in world affairs.

Despite their sharp exchanges, some of them personal, the Democratic and the Republican candidates engaged in some banter, some humorous, and others stung from attacks that people shared a concern for the American people.

The debate, the first of two, was held at Wake Forest University before a television audience expected to top 100 million.

Bush said he is "for the sanctity of life," and is in favor of adoption of unwanted children.

But Dukakis, obviously buoyed by what turned out to be the lowest Gallup poll of Bush's campaign, said he doesn't favor abortion but the question is who makes the decision and the answer is the woman."

But Dukakis, obviously buoyed by what turned out to be the lowest Gallup poll of Bush's campaign, said he doesn't favor abortion but the question is who makes the decision and the answer is the woman.

Bush replied that he opposed abortion and favored adoption of unwanted children, adding "I'm for the sanctity of life."

On drugs, both agreed that increased interdiction in the streets and education in the schools were the right approaches.

Mooncake celebration shows Chinese culture

By Miguel Alba
Staff writer

An estimated 400 people attended the Mooncake Festival Celebration sponsored by four Chinese student associations Saturday in Davis Gym.

This was the first time the four organizations celebrated the event together. In the past, the festival was celebrated individually by the four Chinese student organizations.

"We wanted to better the relations between the Chinese and American students, by sharing a little part of our culture," Wei-Lye Kong, president of the Chinese Student Association, said.

Though the style of celebrating the event is different among the organizations, they all use Chinese lanterns and mooncakes. The mooncake is a Chinese delicacy, made of lotus and bean paste, a salted yolk center, traditionally eaten when the full moon appears in the Chinese calendar.

The Mooncake Festival tradition is thousands of years old stemming from the early Chinese dynasties. When mooncakes were once used to pass along secret messages written by revolutionaries of the time.

Pan Han Kung, professor of forestry, spoke about the legend of the Mooncake Festival, where a beautiful woman named Chang-er wanted to live forever. She took an immortal pill and soon thereafter flew to the moon to live forever, mourning the loss of her earthly life.

He said the spirit of the Mooncake Festival is comparable to the American Christmas, Thanksgiving and Fourth of July celebrations, which people share a concern for the American people.

"The tradition of giving mooncakes in the festival is comparable to Americans giving flowers," Kung said, adding that giving flowers is more practical than giving mooncakes because one can eat a mooncake.

But since the tradition stems from ancient China, we should keep the flavor of this event in our country. Kung reminded the audience that the festival tradition is thousands of years old stemming from the early Chinese dynasties.

Budget cuts force CTC to reduce staff

By Jon Maguire
Staff Writer

Decreased staff has forced the College of Technical Careers to limit enrollment, said the college dean.

"We have had to cut back on staff positions," Harry Miller, CTC dean, said. "Because of that, we have had to cut down on enrollment to maintain a level of quality."

More than 4,000 students are enrolled in CTC. Fred Morgan, director of CTC's Allied Health and Public Services, said the cuts on staff have caused the teaching load to "move up and it keeps going up." Jim White, director of Applied Technologies, said, "We need more staff."

The decreased budget also has taken its toll on CTC's research laboratories.

Cost for lab materials and equipment have hamp­pered the budget, White said.

"Almost a half a million dollars in lab materials and equipment have been donated by different industries, which has helped," he said.

Even though CTC has been affected by budget cuts, the quality of education has not been lessened, Miller said.

"Students are certainly getting a good education, but it's very tough," he said.

• Joint searches for MIAs
first for U.S., Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — American experts arrived in Hanoi Sunday for the first joint U.S.-Vietnamese search for witnesses who saw American servicemen listed as missing in action in Vietnam, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said. Six officials from the military’s Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii arrived in Hanoi Sunday morning.

Leftist protesters slam world financial plans

BERLIN (UPI) — Thousands of leftist demonstrators, some masked and waving black anarchist flags or throwing stones, confronted the world financial protestant world about a meeting where International Monetary Fund and World Bank officials prepared for an upcoming summit. Hundreds of belommed riot police, with clubs and shields, dosens of police vans, two armored personal carrier and one water cannon separated the protesters from the venue of Tuesday’s summit.

Soldiers evict Jewish families in West Bank

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Soldiers evicted 19 Jewish families from the Israeli-occupied West Bank Sunday after they tried to establish a settlement near the town of Jericho. Violence flared elsewhere in the territories. Jewish settlers had said they would try to establish new settlements in the occupied territories during the weeklong Jewish festival of Sukkoth.

Indian floods kill over 32, strand thousands

AMRITSAR, India (UPI) — The military joined civilian authorities Sunday in search of hundreds of people stranded by floodS, and at least 32 people were reported killed in and around the northern state of Punjab. Officials said they expected the death toll to rise because hundreds of people were believed drowned when a state-owned bus crashed into a rain-swollen canal near the Punjab village of Jogwala.

Undecided voters look for answers in debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Polls taken before Sunday’s debate showed a large pool of undecided voters waiting to see what the candidates said, with Vice President Bush leading by a slight lead over Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis amongthose who have made up their minds.

Reagan prepares to give final speech to U.N.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan appears before the 43rd U.N. General Assembly on Monday to deliver a valedictory address claiming vindication of his policies and reflecting a marked change in his view of the United Nations. At a time when his words and actions have become overshadowed by the presidential campaign, Reagan will go before the United Nations for a seventh and final time.

Countdown for Discovery’s launch cleared

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The start of the shuttle Discovery’s countdown in Kennedy Space Center was held up for eight hours because of unfinished work, but NASA officials said the ship’s blastoff on Tuesday’s 9:58 a.m. is on track for Thursday. The countdown had been scheduled to begin at 11:01 p.m. Sunday leading up to blastoff at 8:58 a.m. Thursday. Because of unfinished work in Discovery’s engine compartment, however, the “call to stations” marking the start of the countdown was delayed until 7 a.m. today.

Agronomy Day spotlights University’s research

By Lorin Roberson
Staff Writer

Agricultural students from the University of Illinois, Purdue University, and the University of Kentucky attended the Agronomy Exchange this weekend to take a look at SIU-C’s plant and soil research.

The exchange, held at the University Farms, included presentations from faculty members from the College of Agriculture on soybean cross-breeding, peach trees and horticulture.

Oval Myers, professor of plant and soil science, discussed the impact of cross-breeding soybeans to develop ones with more resistance to the races of the soybean cyst nematode.

The CYST nematode is an organism which causes disease in the soybean plants, Myers said. But the disease itself is also known as cyst nematode.

Myers explained that the cyst nematode races were different forms of the disease. “It’s just like models of cars,” he said.

The program has breeding sites in Carbondale, Belleville and Elsberry to study the impact that regional, insect and weed differences have on the cyst nematode, Myers said.

“So far, we’ve found some varieties are more resistant than others,” he said. “We find one variety that has a high resistance level and cross-bred it with one that has a low resistance level. What we get is a plant that is somewhere between the two.”

MYERS SAID the disease has cost the farm industry a lot of money. There is no question that the disease has caused $6 to $8 million in damages.”

Major objectives of the program include developing high-yielding plants with resistance to other pathogens, good seed quality and low shattering levels, Myers said. Shattering is when the beans split open before the plants are ready to be harvested, he said.

Taylor, associate professor in plant and soil science and field superintendent at the Horticulture Research Center, spoke about the center’s past study.

“THE PEACH tree is very unique to Southern Illinois,” the commentaries grow, said the peach study is part of a cooperative project being conducted in 17 regions of the country to try and find better root stocks for the peach tree.

Root stocks provide peach trees with a system for absorbing water and minerals, Taylor said, but, in this area, the roots tend to die because of the flood conditions.

The study’s objective is to find root stocks that are more adaptable to temperature extremes such as lower winter temperatures and more tolerant to heavy clay soils, Taylor said.

The TREES are grown in three categories. There is a control group, which is grown 12 feet by 16 feet apart; the commercial group, which is grown 15 feet by 30 feet apart; and the high density group, which is grown 4 feet by 16 feet, Taylor said. He said they are currently using plum root stocks on the trees.

Taylor said they harvested about 12 to 18 tons of peaches in 1987 from the high density group, but there is a tendency for higher density trees to decline in production faster than the other trees.

Taylor also mentioned that the center has future plans for kiwi planting. “We have already tried planting some kiwifruit, but they are not very winter hardy and they all died.”

KIWI ARE small, fuzzy brown fruits that are typically grown in New Zealand and California, Taylor said. The center is now waiting for more research planting on the kiwis before they try planting again.

The kiwis planted would not be the Hayward version found in the grocery store, but a smaller, Gold Hardy, variety, Taylor said.

The all-day exchange also included a tour of the greenhouse facilities at the Horticulture Research Center and a presentation on floriculture by Terri Starnaman, assistant professor of horticulture. Floriculture is the study of flowering potted plants.

Local farmers to receive $167,000 in assistance

By Lorin Roberson
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois District Worker Assistance Center received a $167,000 grant this year to help local farmers and farm workers obtain free vocational training and services.

The grant will support the Dislocated Farmer Program by providing free classes for classroom and on-the-job training for clear and personal counseling, and free job search assistance, said the program’s assistant director, Charlene Bitting.

Bitting added that the grant also can be used for personal and fees for classes, books and on-the-job training. Employers who hire from the program are partially reimbursed for wages.

The program was created in 1984 by The Southern Illinois Dislocated Worker Assistance Center whose administrative offices are located at John A. Logan College, Bitting said.

The Dislocated Farmer Program served 155 farmers last year and is now serving 160. Bitting said and she hopes the program can provide help for at least 115 farmers again, and it may help more because of this year’s hard weather.

Farmers, farm family members and farm workers may be eligible for the program if they meet any of the following criteria:

a. An applicant has lost a farm because of foreclosure, bankruptcy or a sale with a lien.

b. A farmer or a family member is a large portion of the applicant family income and the family used to meet interest payments related to a farm operation or the farm has not shown a profit for two or more years.

The applicant has completed high school and is a member of a family farm, if the farm is again. Farmers in the past have established an occupation in farming and have a reasonable, attainable occupational goal.

Bitting said all information on the program can be contacted at John A. Logan Community College, Red Lake College, Shawnee Community College, Southeastern Illinois College or Wabash Valley College.

Taylor also mentioned that the center has future plans for kiwi planting. “We have already tried planting some kiwifruit, but they are not very winter hardy and they all died.”

Students’ message hindered by secrecy

COLLEGE STUDENTS in the 1960s have been considered highly apathetic and, for the most part, this is true. During this decade, a record number of students have sought degrees in business, marketing, and similar academic fields almost guaranteed to ensure them big bucks, or at least financial security, after graduation.

SIU-C, ONCE considered one of the most active campuses for the nation during the late 1960s and early 1970s, has been invaded by the “Me Generation.” Not only SIU-C students are here to have fun, earn a degree and graduate into cushy, comfortable jobs. Their concern is mainly for themselves.

But a few students on campus are raising their collective voices, expressing concern for the University’s financial problems. On Sept. 8, “Black Thursday,” students dressed in black carried a coffin, with the word “education” written on the side, into a board of trustees meeting. The leader of the demonstration paused in front of the board members to hold up a red, white and blue flag. “Stop education increases.” The group then quietly left the room, fading into anonymity.

THE DEMONSTRATION was highly effective and to the point. Chancellor Lawrence R. Petit even commented the group’s message. “It’s the best I’ve heard,” he said, “and they were well behaved. I thought they did it very well.”

On Sept. 20, a cross was planted in front of Mann Library. The cross was a peace flag and attached to the front was a banner that read “Higher Education R.I.P.” No one claimed responsibility for the event. Although the cross was quickly removed, the message was getting through.

THE STUDENTS are planning further demonstrations to express their dissatisfaction for the inability of state legislators and University administrators to secure funding for the University in Illinois. So far, they have refused to step further.

We encourage further demonstrations and more student involvement in these issues, but those who are demonstrated must take responsibility for their actions. By shrouding themselves in a cloak of secrecy, they are allowing themselves to be labled cowards; hecklers in a crowd.

THE RECENT campus demonstrations have been colorful, highly visual and, more importantly, non-violent. As long as demonstrations remain non-violent and trouble-free, student messages can be sent to administrators and state legislators that they can not ignore. That message could be a lot stronger if the students had it back up.

HOUSE SPEAKER Michael Madigan said he did not allow the recent tax increase proposal to reach the legislative floor because he did not believe the people of Illinois would have supported it. “Many activity demonstrations are proving just how wrong he was. But, without a face behind the voices, the messages tend to lose a lot of power.”

Quotable Quotes

“They have found that the surest way they could make the evacuation possible was to get the students to vote yes.” — Richard Nixon, on the presidential campaigns of Bush and Dukakis.

“1 was standing in front of the mirror putting on makeup. It doesn’t take that long, maybe 15 minutes. Some of you would say I should take a little longer.” — Tommy Faye Bakker.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned articles represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian editorial board. The editor, the associate editorial page editor, the editorial page editor, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the Editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1244, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and should not exceed 200 words. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, unless specifically requested to do so.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author’s address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Removing lid off a crock-pot idea, surviving nuclear war is propaganda

SUDDENLY THERE’S all the talk. About the U.S. military defense planning and how many people could survive a nuclear war.

Whenever that subject surfaces in a conversation I once had with Carl Sandburg, the great poet, when I was a young reporter.

It was about 22 years ago, when the Cold War was really rigid and digging fallout shelters was a part of this country’s most popular pastimes.

Sandburg was visiting Chicago and I was assigned to interview him for a story.

Before I left the office, I was called aside by an editor who was building his own home fallout shelter.

He said, “Want you to ask Sandburg whether he would stock a fallout shelter with...”

"Why should I ask him that?" I asked that editor.

"Well, he’s a brilliant, world-famous man, and I think a lot of people would be interested in knowing what somebody like him would think about what we’re doing to make ourselves ready for anything.

WHEN I PUT the question to Sandburg, we were in a dining room with one of Chicago’s world-famous, world-knowing, world-prominent, world-writing, world-thinking, world-hating, world-loving, world-class, world-famous critics.

He pondered the question for about 20 or 30 seconds, pursing his lips, nodding his head toward the sky, while everyone sat silently, waiting his profound thoughts.

Then, in that dramatic, rumbling, voice, he said very very slowly and deliberately: "I would be sure (pause, to take with me (pause) a sufficient number of recepable (pause) to hold (pause) which Norman Mailer (pause) calls --"

At the sound of that word, all the fine ladies in gown and garters in cheaper jackets gasped. Sandburg stiffened a grin.

"IF THERE anything else? I asked.

"No," he said, "that is what comes to mind when someone talks about survival after nuclear war."

I returned to the office, wrote the story and turned it in. The editor yelled, "We can’t print this!"

"Why not? He said it.

"Because it’s crude.

"But I think Sandburg was trying to make a point."

"Well, I don’t understand his point and I’m not going into this newspaper."

Sudden death is almost funny when it comes from those eccentric people who call themselves survivalists and plan for the day when they will barricade themselves in their vacation homes and wait with shotgun cocked to blast the looters who want their homes.

But the talk isn’t funny when it comes from officials in the current White House administration.

VITAL TALK about every town and city. Every day at about 4 p.m., people get in their cars and go home from work. Every day there is a huge traffic jam.

And with only a fraction of the population on the move, what would happen if everybody tried to get away at the same time? Nothing would move. It would be chaos.

Ah, but Washington tells us that wouldn’t happen because we would have about four days in which to evacuate the cities.

I don’t understand why they think there would be a four-day warning. We have experienced Russian bombings before. Maybe they have an army of time travel people.

But even though it’s just a crock, people must plan for the worst and be ready to evacuate the urban areas. It’s going to be a real challenge, but I assume there would be time.

WE WOULD have 200 million people around the countryside with no food, no shelter, no medical care, no organized society.

Then when the bombs went off, that fiction wouldn’t be real anymore. So we move and build more. And this puts the lot of other, smaller countries build their bombs. And one of these days, poof.

So that’s where Propaganda Barro comes in. It gave something like this:

DON’T WORRY about the nuclear buildup. The more bombs everybody builds, the safer we’ll all be. Besides, we can survive nuclear war. Not nearly as many people would die as we might think. Sure, millions would not make it but many, many, many millions would survive.

All we have to do is be prepared with plans to evacuate before the war. Then when we see the Russians starting their cities, we will know they are going to attack us, and we can evacuate our cities.

Or something like that.

Propaganda Barro, two comes in. It goes something like this:

"FOR YOUR OLD OR FERIL..."

"YOUR OLD CAN OPEN TOWNS FOR ME, SEE CMD..."

"YOU CAN TRY SOME OF THIS KUNG."

preach to fighting drugs, but Dukakis linked his admistration dealings with Panama's military leader Gen. Manuel Noriega, now indicted in the United States on drug charges.

Bush countered that seven administration officials were indicted by Noriega, and when the evidence became clear, the Reagan administration did not seek the indictment.

Dukakis has said he would not want to "lock every business in the country" by requiring health insurance for all employees, but Dukakis said "the folks who are those 33 million Americans" who do not have health insurance.

Questions were driven at them for 90 minutes by Anne Grove of The Orlando Sentinel, Peter Jennings of ABC News and the editor of the Atlanta Journal and Constitution. Jim Lehrer of Public Broadcasting Service's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour" moderated.

The two candidates — given two minutes to answer, one minute to rebut, and two minutes to close — will meet Oct. 13 or 14 in Los Angeles, and because most polls indicate many voters have not gotten up to speed on the now-traditional debates covering the candidates with last-minute converts.

Bush repeated questions about the deficit, Dukakis said that as Bay State governor he had balanced the budget and cut taxes, To cut the deficit, Dukakis said, "we have used up about 50 percent of the new-traditional debates covering the candidates with last-minute converts.

In a dramatic jolt at Bush, Dukakis said: "If he keeps this up, he will be the first candidate for the issues of American politics" — a reference to the automobile companies that responded to the salesmen smoothly ticks off a series of questions.

Bush responded by asking it was "time to unleash our own." On the economic issue, Bush repeated a promise that "I will not raise taxes.

Bush acknowledged that it is a "soaring" of millions of Americans are written into the insurance, he added, "I don't want to see a mandate that every company has to provide health insurance.

Dukakis responded: "George, that's no answer!" Speaking up for his promise of universal health insurance, Dukakis said: "It's time that when you get a job in this country, it comes with health insurance.

When asked about AIDS, Dukakis expressed immense deficiency syndrome is "the single most important... health emergency in our lifetime" and called for support for legislation now working through Congress. "I think we have to demonstrate some flexibility and I think the Food and Drug Administration is trying to do that now in making some experimental, new drugs available," Dukakis said.

Despite sharp exchanges, some of them personal, the candidates engaged in some banter, some humor and elicited roars of applause from the audience.

Dukakis responded that "we're on the right track, and the surges general is on the right track" in the kind of education he is promoting. But he called for testing.

Dukakis described himself as a leader in the civil rights movement as a Massachusetts state lawmaker, and said he was "one of the few legislators who took a stand" against the Vietnam War.

Bush said he did not question his opponent's patriotism, but said Dukakis had backed legislation to let Massachusetts men from serving overseas in the Vietnam conflict. Bush described that as "misguided.

Asked about his repeated criticisms of Dukakis as a "soft touch" on the A.C.L.U., Bush said he did not question Dukakis's patriotism, but merely disagreed with the often liberal views of the liberal group to which Dukakis belongs.

"I don't want to pick on any other issue. I don't want it," Dukakis said.

Asked about his criticism of the A.C.L.U. and controversy over his veto of a Massachusetts bill requiring teachers to lead students in the Pledge of Allegiance each day, Bush said he had not wanted his 15-year-old granddaughter to go into an X-rated movie.

Dukakis, however, said Bush's comments about the A.C.L.U. and controversy over his veto of a Massachusetts bill requiring teachers to lead students in the Pledge of Allegiance each day was an "unwarranted attack.

"I hope this is the first and last time I have to say this. Of course the vice president is questioning my patriotism. And I remain against Dukakis said.

Dukakis attacked the Reagan-Bush administration's commitment to public housing and ease the problems of the rising numbers of people living in poverty.

Bush and Dukakis agreed on the need to deal with the Third World debt problem, provided no specific. In his closing statement, Bush echoed his vision of a "gentler, kinder nation" that would not "banish chemical and biological weapons," said, "I do favor the death penalty" and completed his final statement by saying he has the expertise and integrity to be president.

The vice president then repeated one of his campaign themes: "Let me change — I am the change," adding: "The best poverty program is a job.

Bush said he wanted to "finalize a START agreement" and to help "American America where we don't hide, we compete. An American, where we don't leave some of our citizens behind, where we bring all our citizens along.

He concluded: "The best America is behind us... the best America is yet to come.

Cancer lecture slated

"Black Women and Cancer" will be the topic of a lecture by Gerri Hayes, executive director of the Terrence office of the American Cancer Society at 7 tonight at the Eva Mae. Hayes plays Willy St. The lecture sponsored by the Southern Illinois Chapter of the Ringers, the National Black Women's Health Project. An organizational meeting will be held.

The National Black women's Health Project, is committed to defining, promoting and making aware the physical, mental and emotional needs of black women, Johnna An-

CITGO awards business school $50,000 grant

By Wayne Wallace
Shift writer
and University News Service

The College of Business and Administration has received a $50,000 scholarship endowment from CITGO Petroleum Corporation.

Money from the scholarship will be awarded to full-time business and administration students, according to James B. Moore, assistant professor of marketing.

Moore, who is the fiscal officer for the fund, said both graduate and undergraduate students will be eligible for the scholarship and money awarded will hopefully pay the entire four-year education of a deserving business student.

Moore said he isn't sure how many students per year will benefit from the scholarship since only the interest on the $50,000 endowment will be used.

Thomas G. Gutteridge, COBA dean, said he predicts priority will go to students with a definite financial need, although no specific criteria has been established.

Other requirements will include academic potential and a "strong interest" in the business field.

The gift is part of COBA's "Time for Pride" capital campaign launched last year to raise $4 million. The current tally is $2 million.

The check was officially presented by CITGO president Ronald R. Hall at a press conference Friday in Rehn Hall.

"Hall, a southern Illinois native, received an honorary doctorate degree in commercial science from SIU-C in May.

Hall said he hopes the scholarship will help "bring in an intellectual community that will benefit the university.""

On hand to receive the CITGO endowment were University president John C. Guyon and SIU Foundation President Rex Ball.

Democrats, Republicans claim victory in debate

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush's aides were predictably proud of Bush's performance in Sunday night's debate, declaring it a win for their Republican candidate. Democrat Michael Dukakis' handlers had the same opinion — only it was about their candidate.

Dukakis, at a post-debate rally, said, "I enjoyed it. I thought it was a good night." Bush campaign chairman James Baker III told ABC News, "Well, I think that it was a clear win for the vice president.

"We think that this debate tonight really reinforced the differences between the two candidates," Baker said, adding that Bush "has a light lead" in the public opinion polls.

"We think that the contrast was clear" between the two, Baker said, and that "will be beneficial to us over the coming weeks."

As Dukakis headed to the rally, his wife, Kitty, said it went "great, just great." And at the rally, North Carolina Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan introduced Dukakis as the "clear winner of tonight's debate."

Dukakis campaign foreign policy adviser Jim Steinberg said, "(Dukakis) was in command. He was able to get across the points he wanted to make."

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo was blunt, saying, "Tonight a whole new campaign began. Governor Dukakis clearly advanced his campaign dramatically. He appeared knowledgeable, decisive, cool, presidential. "He won," Cuomo said.

While the press had their opinion, television viewers had theirs too.

Dukakis won the debate, according to an ABC News poll canvassed within 30 minutes of the end of the debate.

The ABC News poll showed Dukakis the victor, at 44 percent, with 36 percent of those polled saying that Bush won. Twenty percent regarded the debate as a tie. The ABC News poll was conducted among 638 people and had an error rate of plus or minus 4.5 percent.

Shelia Tate, Bush's press secretary, was quick to emerge with campaign reaction — what now has become known as "spin control" — in which aides rush out to put the best face on whatever their candidate did or did not do.

"We were really surprised. We thought Dukakis would try to move to the middle on everything. We were able to keep him left on almost everything — taxes, spending, national defense, all those mainstream social issues," Tate said.

"We thought Bush came across far more human and likable than Dukakis appeared," said Tate, "and that Dukakis appeared quite stiff and mechanical in a lot of the responses."

It is predicted that polls will show that "one of the most powerful moments" in the debate was Bush's comments on the ACLU.
Edgar supports Kelley

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

Secretary of State Jim Edgar made a stop in Southern Illinois Friday to promote the Republican ticket of George Bush and Patrick Kelley.

"It's important for someone who thinks they are going to vote for George Bush to also vote for someone in Congress who's going to agree with those policies," Edgar said.

Kelley is campaigning to represent the 22d Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives. Edgar described Kelley as being a down-to-earth and intelligent person with experience in practical government and a good legal mind.

"He has the tools it takes to be an effective Congressman," Edgar said.

"The people of Southern Illinois want someone who's intelligent. They want someone who understands what it takes to get things done. But they also want someone who won't forget where he came from." Edgar said the presidential race for Illinois will be tight but Bush will prevail.

"The race will come down to the public focusing on the two candidates and seeing which one they feel most comfortable with."

Congressional candidate Glenn Posbard called for a "larger federal commitment" to improve school quality education for America's children.

"The prime concerns in Southern Illinois right now is finding the money, somehow, someway, to renovate and upgrade our old school buildings that aren't even meeting life-health safety standards," Posbard said during a press conference Saturday.

"The federal government owes us a commitment to rebuild our school buildings. Because to have modern educational facilities is important to providing quality education for our children."

NEA-IEA endorses Poshard

The press conference was held to announce the Illinois Education Association-National Education Association political action committee's endorsement of Posbard in his bid for the 22d Congressional seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Marleen Koerner, group chairperson, said the group chose Posbard over his opponent Patrick Kelley because of his consistent voting record as a member of the Illinois Senate.

"There are followers that come along and there are followers like Glenn Posbard," Koerner said.

Posbard's main focus was on education at the primary and secondary level, saying things need to be done to decrease the number of drop-outs and to expand vocational education.

Posbard also wants an increased federal commitment to improve the curriculum in areas "where we're finding it's very tough to compete at the international level."

Among those areas are mathematics, science, foreign languages and international studies. Posbard would also like to improve the recruitment of teachers in those areas.

For higher education, Posbard said something needs to be done to increase low interest loans to ensure "every person who wishes to go to college has the opportunity to do so."

Jan Agnich, who was injured last spring, was the leading hitter in the game for a two-run home run.

"I don't remember anything that happened in the first half," Gibson said. "I'm pretty shook up right now.

"He said it took us a while to get going, like at Western Illinois," he said. "Any time you can come back like that it's a heck of a win. These are a gutsy bunch of guys.

"I nearly didn't play Gibson the second half. He had been batted on the flu and then got his bell rung. We were a little concerned for a while.

Overall, Rhoades said he was impressed with the Salukis' play.

"I didn't think we played very well," he said. "It isn't that we weren't ready, but I think we misunderstood them. I don't think we were ready to play a team as good as they were tonight.

Rhoades said a weak spot was the Saluki's kicking game. Joe Cook once signaled a fair catch on the one yard line, and fumbled another kick which led to a Redbird touchdown.

"Absolutely horrible," Rhoades said. "There are things they did that is so excuse for and we have got to get them corrected.

"We have to really evaluate what we are doing and how we do it. We may have to come back with different people or different ways to do it.

Redbird coach Jim Rhoades said his team would shrug off the loss.

Freshman’s second-place sparks men’s cross country to finish fifth

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The men’s cross country team finished fifth at the 1985 Kentucky Invitational on Saturday.

Freshman Jon Dennis led the way, finishing second in the eight kilometer (five miles) race with a time of 26:05. The only thing that prevented Dennis from winning his second race of the season (he was first in Kansas two weeks ago) was a course record set by East Tennessee State’s Thomas O’Gara who finished at 24:13. Dennis finished ahead of Indiana’s Bob Kennedy, the Big Ten champion, and Scott Williams, who both crossed the finish line with a time of 26:12.

Coach Bill Cornell said overall the team ran a very good race, especially the last seven kilometers. Cornell said his team lacked confidence early, which kept several runners from getting out front to help secure a higher finish.

“I told the guys after the race they ran a helluva race this last seven kilometers,” Cornell said. “But we didn’t run a full race. The first kilometer was very fast-paced and we did not get up in front of the pack.”

Cornell said the team must go out and establish position in the first kilometer of the race or it is nearly impossible to catch up due to the pace from then on.

“All after the first kilometer the pace is established and really doesn’t change that much for the rest of the race,” Cornell said. “This makes it difficult for runners in the back of the pack to pass anyone and finish strong, because they just have to fight too much.”

Cornell said Dennis, freshman Vaughan Harry 30th at 26:12, senior David Burkinshaw 2nd at 26:19, and senior Paul Glanville 51st at 27:55, were able to get out front early and especially finished among the leaders.

Last year, the Salukis placed ninth overall in the meet, with their top runner finishing in third place.

Indiana, who won the meet last year, successfully defended their title by finishing first with 42 points. East Tennessee State was second with 54 points, followed by Kentucky in third with 66, Edinboro College fourth with 87, and SIU-C with 116.

Other SIU-C finishers were senior Paul Glanville 51st at 27:17, junior Jon Vaughan 50th at 27:24, and sophomore Mike Kershaw 63rd at 27:29.

Freshman Mike Danner, who was running his first race, finished 73rd at 27:55 and senior John Kelly, who has been suffering from a stomach illness for the past two weeks, finished 84th.

Also competing in the meet were Marquette, Anderson College, Marshall, University of Cincinnati, and Murray State.

NOKOMI. — For the first time since 1986, a Saluki football team is over the 500 mark. As far as senior right guard Pete Jansons is concerned, that is right where the Salukis should be.

"If it's great, and that is an understatement," Jansons said. "I think Rick Rhoades brought a little bit of magic up from Alabama with him. That's what I call it — magic."

With their 24-23 heart-stopper over Illinois State, the Salukis move to 2-1, the first record over 500 at SIU-C since the 1986 squad finished 7-4. The Salukis move to 1-1 in the Gateway.

The Salukis almost didn't claim their winning record. Down 25-19 going into the final quarter, sophomore quarterback Fred Gibson and the rest of the offense marched down the field twice for scores and pulled out the win. "If someone would have asked how much they would get if they said we would have won after the third quarter, I don't think they would have gotten one cent," head coach Rick Rhoades said.

"When you are down two touchdowns and come back, knowing you won only three games the year before, it's an exciting thing. I'm so proud of them, I really am."

Early on, it appeared that the Redbirds had the Salukis' number. Illinois State kicker Rick Seitz nailed three field goals in the first half, and, after the Redbirds converted on a two point attempt after a third quarter score, things began to look bleak for Rhoades and company.

"I may have been the only person in Southern Illinois who thought they (Illinois State) were a good team," Rhoades said. "They were quicker than us and beat us badly for the first three quarters."

Then somewhere, someone sparked the offense, and after drives of 78 and 83 yards, coupled with the Saluki defense stopping any plans of the Redbirds scoring again, SIU-C had its win. "Offensively, in the fourth quarter, everyone helped carry the load," Rhoades said. "Our offensive line just rolled them right off the ball."

Following the game, a very groggy Gibson sat in the locker room after taking a hard sideline hit in the second half.

Victory over Tigers snaps losing ways

The women's volleyball team, which lost six of its last seven matches, broke the spell Friday night by defeating Missouri, 13-15, 15-3, 15-2, 15-13.

Just the feeling of a win is important as anything," Coach Debbie Hunter said. "Our play was strong and we had good game form. In the fourth game we had a good lead but lost it due to lack of quality control.

The Salukis had four players who each totaled in double-figure kills. Teri Noble led offensively with 18 kills, Nina Brackins and Fred Willam each had 11, while freshman Debbie Bracine contributed to in her first home start.

"Bracine is doing better in the starting role and in substitutions. She needs to be strong in both situations," Hunter said. "She was a key performer in our win over Virginia Commonwealth."

After falling in the first game, SIU-C caught Missouri napping and pulled to a 4-1 lead in the second game. Brackins came alive by making several key blocks. "We can't break up (SIU-C) blocks," third-year Missouri coach Craig Sherman, who has never seen his team win against SIU-C, said. "We knew we had to stop Nina Brackins and Teri Noble, out we played into their hands."

SIU-C continued to lead throughout the match. The third game was close early, but Noble's nine kills and six digs plus Willam's six digs helped the Salukis win. Bracine hammered five kills. Missouri had 36 hitting errors. "We played sharp but we are still learning and from going on the road," Hunter said.

Softball team wins three; rain cuts tourney short

Two outstanding pitching performances, a one-hitter by Jennifer Brown and a two-hitter by Traci Furlow, propelled the women's softball team to the title of its own Saluki Invitational.

The Salukis won 10-6 for the two-day, four-team tournament. Rain on Saturday prevented a true championship game from being played.

In between raindrops Saturday, the Salukis beat Southeast Missouri 2-0 for their second shutout of the weekend. Brown was the winning pitcher. "We're heading in the right direction," Coach Rick Sickels said. "We've got a lot of work to do and there's still a lot to learn before the Gateway Championship, but at this point, I'm very pleased with them."

Furlow was the winning pitcher on Friday night. The Salukis beat Missouri State 2-0 as Brown threw a two-hitter. "We're coming together now," Brown said. "The game was super and we've been working on our defense the week before."

Monday night, the Salukis beat Southern Illinois-Edwardsville 10-0. Jennifer Brown tossed a one-hitter in the complete game victory. "I was off by a few," Brown said. "I'm not too happy with my performance but I couldn't have done it without the team."
