China warns Bush on human rights

BEIJING (UPI) — President Bush was sharply warned Sunday by China's Communist Party chief that despite improving Sino-American relations, the United States should mind its own business when it comes to human rights.

In what sounded very much like a lecture, party boss and American attention to its seven-member director that is designed by Finnerty to test its meeting will put its money where its fiscal problems — simply can't ...called "China's Andrei Sakharov" for his outspokenness — was prevented from attending the dinner by police who stopped his car to thwart his efforts to reach the Great Wall Hotel on foot.

The lecture from Zhao and the Fang incident marred the beginning of Bush's two-day visit, which included lunch and talks with China's leader, and a session with Premier Li Peng that was marked by a tense exchange of views over human rights.

Bush was to depart Beijing Monday morning for Seoul, the last stop on his five-day Asian trip, Bush plans to meet with South Korean President Roh Tae Woo and to speak to the National Assembly before heading back to Washington.

The trip will end as Bush's first overseas journey as president, a trip promoted by Bush's chief Democrat rival, Emperor Hirohito in Tokyo, which Bush attended Friday and used as an opportunity to meet with a variety of world leaders.

But his wife, Barbara, had a full day Sunday — beginning by attending services at the Christian church where they were stationed when he was U.S. envoy to China in the mid-1970s. While the president held talks with Chinese leaders, the first lady visited the Ligni plane fun

José Urdaneta, junior in mechanical engineering, gives his plane a toss Friday at the 10th Annual Engineering and Design Pentaathlon paper aircraft design competition. The event, held at Tech A, judged the plane's hang time and overall distance. Urdaneta's plane fied first place until late afternoon, when his wing was battered by another student's.

President scolded for unclear budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chided the Bush administration Sunday for refusing to produce a "line-item budget" and for failing to send Congress the information it needs to meet targets for shrinking the deficit.

Sasser, chairman of the Senate budget committee, told the winter meeting of the National Governors' Association that President Bush had failed to offer a clear picture of his spending plan.

"Despite its recognition of this country's neglected domestic needs, the Bush budget is constrained by our fiscal problems — simply can't put its money where its rhetoric is," Sasser said.

The Bush administration has taken an unprecedented step of not releasing how it plans to cut the budget deficit and has begun negotiating those points with the Senate and House budget committees.

"As far as the different choices are concerned, the budget floats like a butterfly," Sasser said.

Crash incites United to check Boeings

HONOLULU (UPI) — United Airlines ordered new checks Sunday of cargo doors on its Boeing 747s as investigators focused their attention on whether a problem with a cargo door caused a gaping hole to burst open on a United flight over the Pacific, sweeping nine people to their deaths.

The federal investigators said nothing yet indicates a bomb or metal fatigue caused the 10-by-46-foot hole that erupted open and allowed the cargo door as Flight 811 was 100 miles southwest of Honolulu, 17 minutes into the flight, carrying 344 people to Japan.

In Chicago, United Chairman Stephen M. Wolf said cargo doors on all 31 United 747 jumbo jets will be re-inspected upon every landing, and the airline's mechanics will supervise baggage loaders to make sure the doors are properly closed and locked before takeoffs.

"In announcing these steps, we want to make clear that we are not speculating and will not change our position on the cause of the Friday's incident," he said.

The FBI brought bomb-sniffing dogs Saturday to check the Honolulu cargo area, which also was inspected by Federal Aviation Administration specialists. Lee Dickinson of the National Transportation Safety Board told reporters.

"Nothing yet gives us any indication of a bomb in the cargo area," Dickinson said.

Dickinson said the FBI and Transportation Security Administration investigators had drawn no final conclusions.

There was no evidence of an explosive detonation on baggage removed from the cargo area, Dickinson said.

Two key supply roads into Kabul reported cut

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — A combination of blizzards and guerrilla ambushes has blocked the two key supply routes into Afghanistan, treating severe hardship for the poorer parts of the Afghan capital, residents and officials said Sunday. One candidate will go after Tuesday primary

By Jackie Spinner

All five City Council candidates in Tuesday’s primary election know the odds. One of them won’t make it to the April 4 election.

But Marvin Tanner, Kyle Tuxhorn, John Yow and Carl Flowers all said they should be elected because they will represent Carbondale and University students.

Tanner, a University pre-law student, said he wants to see that students don’t get pushed aside by the council. The 24-year-old unemployed student has said he brings young, fresh ideas to put new motivations into the City Council.

Former political science student Engler said he would make a good councilman because he represents University students. “The council doesn’t do much to promote school spirit right now,” the 24-year-old unemployed graduate has said.

Engler ran for council in 1987, but was eliminated in the primary election. The two council seats up for election belong to Yow and Tuxhorn. Both incumbents are running for re-election.

Tuxhorn, a 35-year-old program director for Carbondale Cablevision, has served six years on the council. The 1977 University graduate said his “good ideas, common sense and forthrightness make him a good leader.”

Yow, running for his fifth year on the council, has been involved in Carbondale government for more than 20 years. The 66-year-old retiree is basing his candidacy on his experience and the time he spends talking on the street with people makes him a good candidate for re-election.

Flowers, a 36-year-old University job placement specialist, said his 17 years as a Carbondale resident and position with the University make him a well-rounded candidate.

Bush’s Roe v. Wade appeal raises pro-choicers’ anger

By Lisa Warns

Pro-choice advocates gathered to express their anger at the possible loss of a woman’s right to choose to have or not to have an abortion Friday.

The landmark Supreme Court ruling, Roe vs. Wade, which legalized abortion, is being threatened because the Bush administration submitted a friend-of-the-court brief Feb. 12 asking the Supreme Court to overturn Roe vs. Wade.

The brief claims the 1973 ruling rests on assumptions that are not firmly grounded in the Constitution.

In the brief’s acting solicitor general William Bryan, said a woman’s privacy right to have an abortion was based on “unfounded premises” and incorrect medical findings.

“It is unconscionable (for Bush) to make that decision for women,” said Van der Meer of the Shawnee National Organization for Women. “I am appalled that the government will force women into back alley abortions. I don’t like it.”

“Illegal abortions could become a reality again,” Van der Meer said.

Rob Hurst, a graduate student in speech communication, said, “No, it’s not ever going to get pregnant. Second, he will never have to worry about feeding the child, providing schooling or aborting a fetus in the bathroom.”

Paul Matalonis, a Carbondale attorney, said “Bush takes a position where he is concerned about people, but we can see he is not concerned about women. He labels his concern for fetuses the same as for humanity. He speaks for his constituency.”

A crowd of about 100 gathered and listened to speeches on views against illegal abortion experience.

Women can and always will abort pregnancies they cannot afford,” Julia Pachoud, graduate student in speech communication, said.

If I became pregnant now, I would keep the baby because I can afford it.

“Some women abort by shooting fish up their vaginas. I don’t want to see these women dying,” Pachoud said.

Posters at the rally stated “No More Corrugators” and “Decision Makers, Not Insulators.”

“We women dying unsafely (illegal) abortions does not fit in with the kinder, gentler image of America,” Annette Niel, supporter of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said.

Women can make their own choices concerning sex, birth control and abortion.”

Being for choice is not necessarily being for abortion, Hurst said.

Women from across the United States plan to march on Washington D.C. in the “March for Women’s Equality, Women’s Lives April.”

SO STUDENTS WHO want the Halloween party to continue should not vote. This holds for the true other issues as well.

The candidates have made their views known on these issues and three have said they can relate to the students' concerns either because they attended SIU-C or have worked with students here.

Future candidates should be concerned with electing a City Council that will work with the University and student government to make life better for students in Carbondale. They should be elected to influence the council's decisions.

John Yow and Keith Tuxhorn are seeking re-election, and the council- no matter who is elected — that's the students. The council -- no matter who is elected — that's the students. The council both temperature are some of the issues that concern

Skeptics say the evidence from Britam's Meteorological Office indicates that the average global temperature in 1888 was the warmest of the century, at 52 degrees Fahrenheit. The six warmest years of the 20th century have occurred in the 1980s.

Even so, the global temperature has increased only eight-tenths of one degree during the beginning of the century.

Skeptics say the temperature increase is mostly a fluke, with unknown causes.

John Yow, assistant meteorology professor, said it was too soon to predict global warming. "It's not clear whether U.S. scientists said they had found a natural temperature increase for the United States from 1985 to 1987. Still, the information is bound to raise more questions in the minds of those to believe that pollution can help raise world temperatures. These people need proof, though, and scientists have yet to provide it.

Discovery of this "proof" might come too late in time to give even a small change in the temperatures, they said, to cause the greenhouse effect. That's not a reassuring message for people who want to spend billions of dollars to fight pollution but can only point to long-term gains from doing it. Unless a crisis exists, expect a lot of people to sit this one out, even as it gets warmer and warmer around the world.

The book is in bad taste. It not only grossly distorts the Islamic history in general, but also portrays in the worst possible colors the very people they are trying to protect, especially Mohammad (peace be upon him).

It is certainly controversial, thus profitable for a business like Penguin who aren't just a business. They are institutions which must care about it have not read it either. But without hurting our religious Muslim friends or anybody else, let us all condemn this incident and anything that tries to limit one's right to express his opinions and brands him a traitor or criminal, or the like.

Escaping to the East rare

In a few days, while reading the Southern Illinoisan, I came across an article about six Czechoslovakian citizens who had managed to escape to the West while on some sort of sightseeing tour in Austria.

"Apparently," said the article, "the East is relaxing its attitude toward escaping citizens." Gee, how novel of them! Maybe Muss Memons should send them a thank-you note. It's that Glastobst, you know.

Three out of four of my years in undergrad did not have a chance of getting a job at the border, the cheapest I ever made was the "bad guy." It was a case of "BWDEWIR" (pronounced "Boo-Boo-Boo") from Czechoslovakia.

This past Christmas break, I flew back to West Germany for the first time since my discharge. It hadn't changed much, other than that it was easier to travel without the "71." It was peaceful.

The biggest difference was that a civilian, I was free to travel of my own free will, whereas years before, East German citizens were forbidden to travel, unless they were married to a West German or if there were a few isolated incidents, you never know.

Recently I phoned a friend of mine who is still in West Germany. She had been in Berlin on business the past few weeks and told me of an escape attempt made by three East Germans near the British sector. It seemed they had fanned a fire and were tricking a few "bad guys" in the British sector, a river flows through it. They came in a group of 15 or so, them made it. One didn't. They dragged him off the wall by his hair. West Berlin officials claim that once his hands were free, he was an indigent citizen of the West. Officials in East Berlin say "otherwise." He was only twenty years old.

On the train ride back to Carbondale, the train was creaked even more thoroughly than before. While the goats were doing their thing, I met a young Russian lady from Leningrad who was studying at Frankfort's Goethe University. She seemed happy to be in the West to be allowed the opportunity to taste the many fruits. Of course her husband and little girl remained in Leningrad as part of the deal.

It's funny... except for a few isolated incidents, you never know. I hear of "blows of Westerners" escaping to the East.

Private White Roberts lived in a scanto eight kilometers up the road from me in Giessen, West Germany, when he defected to the Soviet Union with his German girlfriend. They rewarded him with a job as a model for German clothes. When he started crying about the harsh treatment, he was given a new life in the East. He was allowed to return to the West, but his brother, who is Jewish, was subsequently court-martialed. It seems there is no escape to the West. I've heard that now it was over there he was so much! Late Night With David Letterman? Could be... I hear of "blows of Westerners" escaping to the East.

top tourist sites in the capital and, before the banquet, they appeared on Chinese television.

Bush's meeting with Zhao began so long after the beginning of the dinner—a Texas-style barbecue featuring beef, chicken and pork, as well as pecan pie and peach cobbler—for 40 minutes.

The details of the session were relayed to the press by Li Zhaohong, a spokesman for the Chinese president's office. "Zhao complained about "people in the press or the opposition in the United States" who support Chinese dissidents "promoting an introduction of the political systems of Western countries."

"The fact that some people, I mean American society, who support these people who are dissatisfied with the Chinese government will not contribute to the stability of China's political situation," Zhao was quoted as saying. "Nor will it be conducive to the friendship between China and the United States."

"We do not export our system to other countries, nor do we interfere with the systems of other countries," Zhao told Bush.

Questioned about the Chinese account, white House spokesman Ronen Peccei said, "My response is that the issue of human rights was not raised per se." He added, however, "There was a discussion of human rights reforms should come before economic reforms."

Papadakis said later that the issue of human rights later was discussed by the Secretary of State James Baker in his meetings with Chinese officials.

U.S. officials had no immediate response to Fang's being blocked from attending the dinner. Other intellectuals invited by Bush who have challenged the leadership less forcefully were allowed to attend the banquet.

By the end of the dinner, Fang is frequently compared to Sakharov, the Soviet scientist whose willingness to stand up to the Kremlin landed him in internal exile and made him internationally famous.

With Premie Li, Bush received new assurances that China will act responsibly and in the sale of intermediate-range missiles.

White House Press secretary Timmy Wang Fitzgerald, however, said Bush did not ask the premier about recent Chinese missile tests being shipped to North Korea but added that he feels strongly about and where there's some give. But this is going to take a long time and it's a very unusual budget process.

Michigan Democratic Gov. James Blanchard expressed his confusion over that process. "Governor, I must say to you that we are a little confused ourselves this year," Sasser replied. "This is a most extraordinary year. I wish I thought it would be similar to, perhaps, you going to your state Legislature and just taking about half of your budget and throwing it in the air in saying, 'Well, OK (ellis here it is), you decide it.' And that's about what's happened here with a very substantial portion of the federal budget.

Uly-Pak seeks negotiations
Mount Vernon company files bankruptcy; $3 million in debt

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Negotiations will be complete within the next six weeks to find financing for the recently bankrupt company, Uly-Pak Inc. Terry Sharp, an attorney from Mount Vernon representing Uly-Pak, said expansion and the removal of the chief executive officer have put Uly-Pak Inc. of Carbondale, a manufacturer of medical plastics, about $3 million in debt, forcing the company to file bankruptcy under the Chapter 11 protection code.

The Chapter 11 code enables the company, Uly-Pak Inc., to operate with protection from its creditors.

The company ran into a severe cash shortage of about $200,000 when financial institutions refused to fund cost over-runs while the business was developing, and the funding was short on equipment purchases, Keith Hunter, president and chief executive officer of Uly-Pak, said.

During the same time, the company ran into financial problems because of an expansion within the company.

Alumnus: Be persistent, evaluate potential employers in job search

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

An alumnus of the College of Engineering and Technology Thursday advised students to be persistent when searching for their initial jobs, and to evaluate potential employers and companies.

James L. Higgenbotham, Jr., an engineer-technology specialist with McDonnell Aircraft Co. in St. Louis who serves on the university's alumni banquet for Engineering Days, discussed a line between reality and life as a student, saving one of the first real-world problems a company may be facing.

Another member of the audience who were prospective employees to be specific when writing resumes, and give a positive image at all times, Higgenbotham also drew distinctions between working for large corporations and small companies.

"Large companies are inherently impersonal bureaucracies. Competition is very high and you don't advance quickly," Higgenbotham said.

"At smaller companies, you have less job security, fewer resources and generally fewer benefits, but you can be given broad responsibilities quickly," Higgenbotham said.

Higgenbotham secured his first job with Goodyear Tire Co. as a result of answering a help-wanted position. His interview position lasted only a year before he was laid-off.

"After his lay-off with Goodyear he accepted a position with a smaller company, but said he was unhappy with the switch and spent most of his time actively seeking a different job.

"If you're ever in a situation where you've lost a job and are interviewing on campus today, you're about to lose a job, step back and try to evaluate objectively -- not emotionally," Higgenbotham said.

Higgenbotham also stressed the importance of considering spouses in job hunts.

"What's good for her is ultimately good for you; if she's unhappy, you're going to be happy," he said.

Higgenbotham is a 1964 master's graduate of the College of Engineering and Technology.

U of I-Urbana wins battle of brains

Staff Writer

Twelve teams, representing Illinois and Indiana universities, participated in an academic competition Thursday and Saturday at the Student Center.

Purdue hosted the regional finals for the College Bowl, which matched the best teams from the six regional matches in a double elimination tournament.

The winner of the competition was the University of Illinois team, with Indiana University coming in second and Purdue University placing third.

The University of Illinois team will advance to the national finals in April, which will be held at the College of DuPage in suburban Chicago.

The preliminary rounds of the tournament matched groups of four teams in a "lockout," where an electronic buzzer registered the order of response among the teams. In each round, a moderator read questions to the teams. The first team with a correct response won the points and had a chance at answering a bonus question.

The teams participating in the tournament included SIU-C, SIU-E, Quincy College, Illinois State, Ball State, Rose-Hulman and Notre Dame.

The team representing SIU-C was eliminated with losses to Purdue and SIU-E.

Academic Activity Fund criteria instituted

The Special Academic Activity Fund awards ex-ceptional students who have demonstrated outstanding academic achievement in and out of the classroom. The fund provides financial assistance to students who have demonstrated academic excellence and have been active in extracurricular activities.

Factors taken into account include academic status of student, financial need, overall and major grade point average, application with recommendations, and personal interview with fund panel. Applicants are treated on an individual basis. They are not to be worried if they may deficient in any of these categories.

Awards are $250. Application forms are accepted at any time, but students are urged to submit them as early in the semester as possible. For 1988-89, the awards are limited to six. Members of the fund panel are ineligible to receive award money. Recipients must be registered undergraduate students and have a positive academic standing with the University. Awards must also be awarded to programs which will further their undergraduate studies.

For information and questions on submission requirements call John Greene, fund chairman, at 536-9381.

Study skills may mean success or failure at work

Scripps Howard News Service

Just as none of us is born knowing the Gettysburg Address, a child is born knowing how to study.

"Studying is hard work," said Mr. Sieber, who is a high school teacher.

"The study area should have all the materials the child needs, such as pencils, paper, glue, crayons, a ruler and a dictionary. That helps children get to work rather than procrastinating while looking for the things needed to get started.

"A map or globe of the world should always be present. Geography is one of the weakest subjects for students in this country. Having a map or globe within reach makes it easy for children to find countries discussed in textbooks or in the news.

"Parents should recognize that their children may prefer to study in ways different than their parents. Ms. Sieber says she likes to work on one subject at a time, likes it quiet and likes everything in its place.

"Her daughter works on several tasks at once, doesn't like to stare at a page and may have stacks of papers all over the place.

"Establish a time. Work with your child in picking a time to study. For some children, immediately after school is best. Some children may need time to play first to unwind. After dinner may be a good time for some children, while others may be too sleepy.

"Once you've established a good routine, stick to it. "Just like you don't miss basketball practice, you don't miss study time," she says.

"Give homework if none is assigned. It is much easier for children to learn study skills in early grades, says Ms. Sieber. She recommends homework for first-graders, then gradually increasing the amounts each year so that when students face hours of homework in high school, they'll be ready.

She emphasizes the importance of establishing good study techniques in elementary school. Once children get to junior-high school or high school, it becomes difficult to change behavior.

"If no homework is assigned, you can ask your child to read an article from a children's magazine, then write a summary, look up vocabulary words and write sentences with them.

"Make sure your child has an assignment sheet. Many teachers provide them for students, especially in elementary school. The sheet lists the days of the week, subjects and provides enough room for children to write in assignments under each subject.

Go over the sheet with your child each day and ask questions if the assignments seem vague.

"Use a tape recorder. This lets children recite and record their notes on subjects that need to be studied for a test. Children can listen to the notes, using a Walkman, on their way to a friend's house, riding in a car or just before going to sleep.

"Encourage learning all the time. Play addition or multiplication games while getting dinner ready or driving somewhere in a car. Remember that children, especially young children, need practice in learning how to listen.

Calipre Stage skits charming

19 short stories find way to stage in weird, bizarre way

By Nora Bentley

Strange situations that everyone can relate to, mixed with situations that only a few weird people could have ever experienced, made up "Tell Me For One Bite" and "Cats in Car." Mike. It Snappy I'm Tired And The Bus is Picking Up Speed, a Calipre production, was a hit.

The show began with the cast performing "Tell Me For One Bite," a story by a first time member. Despite the confusion, the audience was entertained, especially with the story's many outlandish ideas.

"Cats" was a hit with the audience as well. The audience was completely captivated by the story's离奇 ideas and the skits that were performed. The audience was also amused by the clever concept of the show, where the audience was given the choice of which skit to watch next.

The cast of "Cats" included a variety of characters, each with their own unique personality. The audience was able to relate to the different characters, making the show even more enjoyable.

The skits were performed by a group of talented individuals, who were able to bring the stories to life on stage. The audience was amazed by the creativity and originality of the skits, as well as the actors' acting skills.

The "Tell Me For One Bite" and "Cats" skits were a success, and it is safe to say that the Calipre production was a hit. The audience was thoroughly entertained, and the show was a great success.

Theater Review

"Gypsy Baron" involves love, war

By Kathleen DeBo Stangel

"Gypsy Baron*, written by Johanna Strauss in 1894, is a light-hearted operetta about love, war, imagination, identity and property disputes. The operetta contains the story of a handsome young man's attempt to win back the land his father lost to his mother with the hand of a beautiful princess. The plot is fluff, says Jeanine Wagner, musical director of the show. Wagner says that the show makes no sense at all. It's like a soap opera — it has a lot of love plots.

An operetta, unlike an opera, contains some spoken dialogue. The music included in the operetta was easy to listen to, Wagner said. There was probably never heard any of the melodies before, but you'11 swear you've heard them all.

"Gypsy Baron" is similar to a more famous operetta by Hungarian, Finnish, Dutch, Swedish and other languages. So obviously the show's creators have reason to part with contentment even the cats tale based on T.S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats.

Now, however, some rain came to fall on the "Cats" parade. Translators are growing and hissing about the difficulty of translating "Cats" into French.

Languages have long been aware the French fight (or rather, to protect the reactions, purity and pronunciation of the language). All of us recall that unforgettable laugh in "My Fair Lady" comes when Professor Henry Higgins says: "The French don't care what they do actually, as long as they pronounce it correctly."

It's not easy translating "Cats" into French

Scrubba Howard News Bureau

"Gypsy Baron" is one of the most famous operettas of all time, having been performed around the world since 1891 when it opened in London. In 1927, the show was presented at New York's Winter Garden Theater and the show's original cast recorded the Tony Award-winning musical has been played to sold-out houses ever since.

It also has toured in 12 countries, with translations into Japanese, German, Hungarian, Finnish, Dutch, Swedish and other languages. So obviously the show's creators have reason to part with contentment even the cats tale based on T.S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats.

Now, however, some rain came to fall on the "Cats" parade. Translators are growing and hissing about the difficulty of translating "Cats" into French.
Film Review

their rights are being trampled on and besides, they pay cash. Dodd smokes pot and ratifies off liberal lawyer dogma such as, "Stooges of the ruling class." At the pinnacle of Dodd's career, he defended civil rights cases during the Vietnam War era. That's why Roger Baron, played by Downey Jr., idolizes Dodd, a lawyer that defends drug dealers because he believes in the law and his characters. Dodd, the master attorney, Dodd, to smoke marijuana constantly and defend drug dealers. The crazed Wood's characterization from movies like "Salvador" and "Best Seller" aren't evident until the last third of the film. Most of the time, Wood's performance seems forced and overacted. Downey's portrayal of Baron lacks spark.

DODD IS unsympathetic until the last half hour of the movie. So for 90 minutes, the audience doesn't care for the main character. This is a major problem for popular drama-type films.

A racism theme is exploited in the film until the climax when the audience learns that this theme was only put in the movie to mislead the viewer. It is perfectly acceptable to try to trick the audience into thinking one way and then the truth is revealed to be different. Good mystery stories are told this way. But racism is a powerful theme and it's misused here.

A MESSAGE that could've been flushed out more was the rise of passage benefits. It happens in small ways such as a Baron's desire to learn from Dodd, the master of idealistic civil court cases.

The writer, Wesley Strick, and the director, Joseph Ruben, do an excellent job of presenting the hypocrisy in Dodd. He's fighting a case for drug dealers, a career for the issue. The problem in "True Believer" is the lack of empathy for the three main characters.

THE AUDIENCE is introduced to Kim when he is in a prison chapel with two knives strapped to his wrists. The scene does little in making the audience care for the character. In this era of "Just say no to drugs," it's hard to understand why the Hollywood filmmakers would allow their main character, Dodd, to smoke marijuana constantly and defend drug dealers.

Men’s track team takes 3rd in Valley competition

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Eric Pegues set a new Missouri Valley Conference 400-meter hurdles and Leonard Vance and Mike Michael each won conference crowns to help lead Illinois to a third-place finish at the MVC Indoor Track Meet.

Pegues won the event with a time of 47.87 seconds to break his own record. Pegues had won the event three consecutive years.

Vance, the No. 1 seed in the triple jump, won the competition with a leap of 6 feet 8 inches. Michael was the top seed in the pole vault and vaulted 18 feet 5 1/2 inches.

Illinois got off to a strong start with nine points on the first place 4 x 200 relay team.

Christian Philippou, top seed in the triple jump and long jump, did as expected finishing first in both events.

Philippou set a new school record in the long jump with a leap of 6 feet 8 inches. His jump in the triple jump was 53-7.7 feet.

"I was happy with the victory," Philippou said. "I was thinking about qualifying for the NCAAs in the triple. I didn't jump as far as I could, but I pushed hard all the way. I think I was even growing when I got near the end."

Raske added a win in the 200-meter dash and was on the first place 4 x 200 relay team.

The victory in the 4 x 200 relay was not as easy for sprinter Don Jackson.

Jackson pulled her hamstring midway into the second leg of the race, at the time Jackson was leading the field. Jackson ran with the baton in one hand and the other on her thigh.

I pulled it (hamstring) with 150 meters left," Jackson said. "I thought about stopping, but they were no more than two minutes to go I was going to let the other three girls down."

"I just tried to not let the other teams catch me," Jackson said.

Iowa State scored first-place finishes in the 400-meter dash, long jump, triple jump, and the 4 x 400 team.

Nunn ran to a first-place finish in the 400-meters, while Vincent took first place honors in the 600-meters.

"It was the mishap during the baton exchange that cost us," Stinson said.

Raske added another win in the long jump as expected finishing first in both events.

Both Traci Davis and Tara Kyraeau placed in multiple events for the Salukis.

in the 100 freestyle and Steinbach third with 53.35 and 52.68 respectively; Julie Hoisler first in the 200 butterfly with 2:07.37 and first in the 200 individual medley and Debbie Gutteridge second in the 200 individual medley.

"When you are in a real tight competition like this with a point difference, you really learn a lot about yourself," Jackson said. "I think we did a lot of things right, and a lot of things wrong. We made very few mistakes, which is a credit to all the preparation that has been done all year long.

The Salukis will get one more chance to qualify for NCAA competition.

Arizona edges Duke, 77-75

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — A last second jumper over fellow All-American Danny Ferry with 54 seconds left in the game lifted Arizona over No. 8 Duke, 77-75, for a victory that should earn the Wildcats the No. 1 ranking.

Elliot, who went scoreless for a stretch of 26 minutes, matched up against Ferry for 2 minutes. Elliot, forced into a turnover on the previous possession, took Ferry to the top of the key and sank a tie-breaker to give the Wildcats a 73-70 lead.

Duke had a chance to tie the game with 1 second left, but freshman Christian Laettner missed the front end of a 1-and-1.

No. 2 Arizona, which was 11-0 at the half, improved to 21-3. The Wildcats reached the final of the round when the UPI Board of Coaches conducts its next vote. No. 3 Oklahoma, lost to Missouri Saturday, Duke fell to 15-6.

After Elliot's 3-pointer, Anthony Cook scored off an outlet to give the Wildcats a 75-70 lead and John Smith hit a 3-pointer for Duke. Elliot, who finished with 24 points, hit two free throws with 18 seconds left.

“Sixth-place tie with the Wildcats and Drake, if the Bulldogs lose in their game with Creighton. It’s a key ball game,” said Elliott’s father, Rich Herrin.

"It’s a little advantage that we have played here late. Wichita is the least one we want to play. There’s a good chance we could play them."

Tonight’s game will also be the final regular season home game for seniors Kai Nurberger, Randy House, Todd Krueger and Scott Hesse.

"Nurberger, House, Hesse and Krueger — they all came here the same year I came (1983)," Herrin said. “We will miss them, they’ve done a good job."

"I think our basketball team has put some spark back in Southern Illinois basketball, and has given some the people of Southern Illinois something to be proud of."

The Salukis will continue to search for momentum going into the Valley tournament. After a 133 start, SIU-C has dropped eight of its last 13 outings.

Kampwerth (14 points) and Amy Rakers (9 points) fouled out within 27 seconds of each other.

With both Saluki post players on the bench, Eastern center Laura Mull got some breathing room.

“It’s always tough to get open versus Cathy and Amy,” Mull said. “They were working extra hard against us. Mull got enough of an opening, though, to hit a couple of hook shots and finish with 17 points. Reserve Tracy Roller added 12.

"It definitely became a survival game at the end," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "Their press hurt us."

The pressure was a ball-hawking, pass denial that forced 18 Saluki turnovers on the game. Seeds found fumbling free to receive the inbound pass a chore. "They were holding my shirt when we tried to flash open," Seeds said.

Even so, the Salukis maintained poise at the end. Dana Fitzpatrick, who finished with 14 points, stuck fast to Eastern forward Lisa Tyler.

At 5:06, Fitzpatrick held the 5-11 Tyler to only 8 points. With 2½ minutes to go, Fitzpatrick drew a charge from Tyler, who picked up her third personal foul trying to barrel pass on the baseline.

“Our three seniors really rose to the occasion," Scott said. "They want to keep playing."

The Salukis (16-8, 13-3) have a 10-15 back on second in the Gateway standings. Eastern (14-3, 9-7) is all but eliminated from the playoff race.

Kampwerth, who led the Salukis with 7 rebounds and three blocks, set a school record. Already the career record holder with 30 blocks, Kampwerth now has 37, for the season, which broke Aldon Rogers’ previous high of 24 from the 1980-81 season.

Young swimmers take 2nd in league

By David Gallianetti

Swimming has always been a sport that I enjoy. I decided to talk to swim coach Doug Ingram about youth and perseverance. He is doing fine with both.

The Salukis women's swimming team claimed second place in both the Gateway Conference and Midwest Indoor competition Friday and Saturday. The women took 11 victories in 20 events on route to setting 10 meet records. Not bad for a squad which features 15 freshmen out of 20 swimmers.

"We knew it would be a tight battle between us, Illinois State and Northern Illinois," Ingram said. "Sure enough, it turned out to be those three. We did not quite have the depth out of Illinois State, and it turned out to be the difference in losing the competition."

Illinois State took first in both competitions, which were held simultaneously. The Redbirds scored 703 points in the Midwest competition, with SIU-C scoring 578 and Northern Illinois third at 568.

Team point totals were unavailable for the Gateway competition because the computer went down. Western Illinois finished third in the meet. Northern Iowa fourth, Eastern Illinois fifth and Bradley sixth.

Among the big winners were the relay teams for SIU-C. Swimming in five relays, the women won four, setting records in each.

Melissa Steinbach, Nancy Schmidlkofer, Julie Hosier and Antonia Mahaira took the 400-meter freestyle relay in 3 minutes 07.71 seconds.

"We are real pleased with our relay teams," Ingram said.

Drake ties Salukis for fifth in Valley

By David Gallianetti

If this is an indication of things to come, Missouri Valley Conference basketball fans had better mark their calendars.

Wichita State, the team ESPN college basketball analyst Dick Vitale said has the Valley tournament "locked up," pounded SIU-C 91-78 Saturday and sent the Salukis into a fifth-place tie with Drake in the MVC at 6-7.

Last home game for Salukis tonight

After Freddie McSwain hit two free throws with about 1:16 left in the second half, the Shockers fed on a Saluki scoring drought and rode a 30-7 run for the remainder of the road.

"I think we became a little tired late in the basketball game and our shots didn't go down," coach Rich Herrin said. "We got in the transition and just about every chance we called on us and I think that's mainly what hurt us. We took a little step back, a little step tired.

We got beat pretty good at last, but it does happen and there's no excuse. We've just got to forget about this one."

One highlight for SIU-C was the offensive display of senior Kai Nurnberger. The guard scored a game-high 23 points, 18 coming off six three-pointers, a Salukis single game record.

Nurnberger was joined in the scoring by McSwain who added 21 points, but the Shockers contained Jerry Jones and Tony Harvey, who scored just six between them.

"Jerry Jones has been sick on the trip all week long with a sore throat," Herrin said. "He wanted to play and played very effective especially at Tulsa.

Herrin said he felt the Shockers had an added incentive to play, which propelled them to the victory.

"They got to remembering what this is all about," said Herrin, referring to the Shockers renewed hunger of sharing the MVC title if Creighton loses tonight at Drake.

"They've got four out of five to go," Herrin said. "This is the game, the Praylows and Radinoviches, and I think the fact that they knew they had to win this last home game was driving them.

New coach goes 1-2 in opener

DeNoon's team wins title again

By Paul Pabst

When women's track coach DeNoon makes a prediction, it would be wise to doubt him after his prophecy this weekend.

DeNoon predicted Thursday the Salukis would win its third straight Gateway Conference meet by 40 points.

He was off by two.

The women won the two-day affair by compiling 132 points. In a distant second was Drake with 90.

The team was led by senior Kathy Raske who put together three first-place finishes and a NJCAA qualifying time.

Raske won the 55-meter hurdles and the 200 Saturday, but her biggest victory came on Friday in her 55-meter hurdle heat.

Raske sped to a school record, set a new NJCAA qualifying time of 7.78 seconds. She said that the pressure to qualify was "a double blow." "Qualifying early relieved the pressure a little bit.

Seals propels Scott's squad to league win over Eastern

By Troy Taylor

CHARLESTON — With the Salukis two leading scorers in serious foul trouble, it fell to senior Todd Seals to add her personal stamp of approval to SIU-C's 87-61 victory over Eastern Illinois.

The 9-0 foot guard from Williamson, Ariz., made Eastern Illinois pay dearly for sticking with its zone defense, nailing 15-foot jumpers from the Lantz Gymnasium floor with the same regularity that most players make layups.

Seals, who averaged just 7.3 points per game, scored a game-high 23 points Saturday, hitting 5 of 11 shots from the field.

"I felt pretty comfortable, but I didn't even notice that I was shooting that well," said Seals, who also sank 7 of 6 free throws in the final 1:13 to spoil an Eastern comeback bid.

Tonda Seals being sidelined with stress fracture in foot, and took it in for a layup.

Eastern's press continued its tenacity. Twice it denied the Salukis inbound passes. Under that pressure, Cathy Page 15
