USG senator to fight impeachment

By Brad Bushue

If senator Juliana Taylor is impeached by the Undergraduate Student Government senate tonight, it appears she will appeal the decision and possibly stay on the senate for the rest of her term.

Taylor's position as USG senator and chair of the Committee for Internal Affairs could last until the end of the semester. USG President Bill Hall said the panel which would hear her appeal might not be in place until the end of the Fall 1988 semester, Hall said.

By that time, Hall said, she could raise her grade point average above the required 2.0 level, and remain on the senate for the rest of the semester. After Hall received word Oct. 11 that Taylor failed to meet the GPA requirements, he said Taylor told him she would work through the remainder of the semester to get her GPA up.

In an informal meeting Monday, USG President Bill Hall, Associate Vice President for Student Affairs Julian Taylor and the Committee for Internal Affairs informed Taylor that her rights were violated and appealed in favor of Kelly's reinstatement.

Taylor was impeached Oct. 12 because he was graduate student, a violation of USG bylaws, and appealed seven days after the impeachment.

Kelly was allowed to rejoin the senate Monday when the Senate, Page 6

Deans see no virus problems

By Miguel Alba

Deans at two colleges said they have not heard of any cases involving the Pakistani computer virus in their departments. Dean Thomas Gutteridge, of the College of Business and Administration, said he is not aware of any cases in COBA involving the computer virus, but an investigation is under way.

"Some people may be confused about this virus," Gutteridge said. "It is not a medical virus and people cannot get sick from it."

The virus, a boot sector virus, so named for its place of origin, is a computer program that scrambles data. This type of computer program is called a virus because, like real biological viruses, it can reproduce and transfer itself, passing from disk to disk without the users' knowledge.

The virus surfaced in the Fasner Lab personal computer software, prompting lab officials to temporarily stop issuing software. Software is again available at the lab, though the possibility of reinfected disks exists.

"We must educate people about what the virus is and the steps on how to protect themselves," he said.

Gutteridge said the disks in the Rehn Hall computer lab are free of the virus.

Nitz' plea for retrial rejected

By Mark Barnett and Scott Perry

Judge Donald Lowery denied request for a retrial for convicted murderer Richard Nitz and said the death penalty is an option during a sentencing hearing Tuesday, Nov. 10, was Nitz's birthday.

Nitz, 28, was found guilty Sept. 22 of three counts of first-degree murder and one count of unlawful imprisonment in the April 8 death of Michael Miley.

Nitz claimed his lawyer, Public Defender Larry Proctor, was unprepared and did not ask questions of trial witnesses. Nitz felt needed to be asked.

"He's not incompetent," Lowery said Tuesday. "I believe that Brecking had presented good reasons why certain witnesses were not brought to testify.

Williamson County State's Attorney Charles Garnett charged Nitz and his wife Rita in the death of Miley.

Miley, 23, of Murphysboro was found April 9 in his car near a cemetery near Rocky Comfort Road in Union County. Nitz also has been charged with three counts of first degree murder and one count of concealing a homicide. His trial is expected to begin in November.

Richard Nitz testified that Larry Beard, a lawyer representing Nitz's wife, had evidence that a witness for the prosecution had lied to police and white under oath.

Betsy Boyer, the Nitzes' baby sitter, testified that she saw Richard Nitz beat a man with a baseball bat on the same day Miley died. Nitz was not bringing outside the Nitzes' house near Crab Orchard Lake in Williamson County.

Beard, who represented Nitz in a civil case, testified that a law clerk employed told him Boyer said she felt pressured by police and lied.

W. Germany, Soviet Union finish agreements

MOSCOW (UPI) - W. German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev concluded a series of agreements Tuesday to revive stagnating trade between the two countries and to put a W. German into orbit aboard the Mir space station. Gorbachev expressed satisfaction at the tone and progress of the summit after the two leaders exchanged barbs Monday over Kohl's desire for a unified Germany.

Police and students clash in election violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) - Riot police fired rubber bullets and tear gas Tuesday at students demonstrating on the eve of controversial elections for segregated municipal governments. The clash occurred after a mine exploded in the university town of Potschefstroom south of Johannesburg, shattering windows in a shopping mall and wounding a police officer.

Persian Gulf peace talks to resume Monday

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) - Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Tuesday he has invited the foreign ministers of Iran and Iraq to resume peace talks with troop withdrawal and prisoners of war. Perez de Cuellar said he expects to begin talks Monday and continue for "four or five days."

Pentagon: Stealth bomber unveiling Nov. 22

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The supersecret stealth intercontinental bomber, designed to evade enemy radars and drop nuclear bombs, will be unveiled Nov. 22, the Pentagon announced Tuesday. The rollout that will occur at the Northrop site in Palmdale, Calif., a Pentagon spokesman said, Northrop Corp. is the plane's manufacturer. The four-engined stealth bomber is being built with non-metallic materials that do not reflect radar beams and is virtually invisible to enemy radars.

NASA spacecraft marks 15th anniversary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NASA's sole surviving Interplanetary Monitoring Platform spacecraft marks its 15th year in orbit Wednesday studying near-Earth solar winds and the natural phenomena in space. The craft was launched Oct. 26, 1979, from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Fla., and is expected to remain operational until a new solar probe called WIND is launched from a space shuttle in 1992.

Court upholds Pentagon can send Guard

BOSTON (UPI) — A federal appeals court Tuesday upheld a lower court ruling that the U.S. Army, Air Force and Navy Guard units to Central America. In a terse, one-sentence decision, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously upheld the "well-reasoned opinion" of U.S. District Judge Robert Keeton that the 1986 "Montgomery Amendments" did not illegally strip states of their constitutional right to control deployment of their own militias.

Testing underscores link between drugs and crime

CHICAGO (UPI) — Results of a drug testing program for suspects appearing in Cook County's night bond court dramatically underscores the link between drugs and crime, with three-quarters of the offenders testing positive, it was reported Tuesday. The study showed 78 percent of the 1,111 suspects in the voluntary program tested positive for an illegal drug, the Chicago Tribune said. The substances included marijuana, cocaine, heroin and other narcotics.

Loan Closet lends items to students

Articles can be used during SIU-C stay

By Diana Miville
Staff Writer

Packing your bags and deciding what to take with you to college is difficult for any student. Some international students have the added burden of inexperience with winter, therefore not knowing how to prepare for Southern Illinois weather, or, like any other student, forgetting to bring certain essential items.

The Loan Closet offers new international students an opportunity to borrow items such as winter clothing, kitchen items and bedding for the length of their stay or until they purchase their own.

"It's especially good for students who are only going to be here for one year. It is expensive to buy these things," Shirley Dunagan, community volunteer who operates the loan closet, said.

"It's also helpful for students coming from countries that don't have winter.

The loan closet is located at the University Baptist Church in two upstairs rooms, one with three racks of coats and another with a variety of items. It is open every Tuesday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and various programs that service international students operate in the International Friends Club.

Dunagan said people don't need every item for the loan closet all the time.

"I get a wide range of everything, from curlers for home perms to dissecting kits. Yet I'm always amazed at the things the students will take. You never know what will strike someone's fancy," Dunagan said.

Claudia Zapata, graduate student in computer science from Colombia, said he borrowed kitchen utensils from the loan closet after his friend from Colombia told him about it.

"It is a big help because after I return to my country, another person who follows will have these utensils," he said.

Seok Si "Elisa" Lum, junior in computer science from Singapore, said she tells new internationals about the loan closet.

"It is very useful. When I go back to my country, I will give the loan closet the things I cannot bring back home with me," Lum said.

Andres Caballero, graduate student in economics, said he borrowed a mixer and bowl for use in his family of five.

"When new families come to Carbondale I will tell them about the loan closet.

"Any international is welcome to borrow, but it's necessary to return the items. The loan closet relies on students returning what they borrow," Burghilde Gruber, resident of the International Friends Club, said.

"Once the students don't need the items or before they return to their countries, they should return them so that other students may use the loan closet," she said.

Outreach Day to exhibit artifacts

By Diana Miville
Staff Writer

Twenty countries will be represented at this year's International Outreach Day. Students will exhibit artifacts and cultural displays from their native lands Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the International Lounge at the Student Center.

M. Ali Firouzi, president of the International Student Council, said Outreach Day is a good way to meet people and promote international cultures.

"One goal is to promote friendship, understanding and interaction among all nationalities," he said.

Firouzi said the representatives of the different countries are natives.

"Some will be dressed in their country's traditional dress and they will be explaining about their country and its culture and answer any questions about it," Firouzi said he would like American students to meet people from these countries. "Ask questions and get to know them," he said.

Another goal of the event is to recruit members for the various associations.

"You can't have to go outside of Carbondale to see the world. It is here at SIU-C," Firouzi said SEU-C has a great asset in its international student population. "Other schools don't have the high number of internationals we have at our University."
CONGRESSIONAL RACE STICKING TO HIGH ROAD

PERHAPS THE presidential candidates should look to the congressional race as an example. We are not making any endorsements, but we are proud of the way Southern Illinois has been portrayed through the campaign. We want the region in Congress.

The presidential candidates, meanwhile, have spent much too much time arguing over who has been running the most positive campaign.

State Sen. Glenn Poshard and School of Law Professor Patrick Kelley should be an example to Vice President George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Too often Southern Illinois is portrayed as the home of country bumpkins and the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion. Nothing could be further from the truth. Burger and the Southern Illinois boys often receive more press than our rich cultural heritage.

OUR CONGRESSIONAL candidates have focused on the unsavory aspects of our past. Kelley, for example, was a volunteer of his Notre Dame and University of Iowa Law School classes.

Poshard has a doctorate in Education from SIU-C. Both candidates have only underscored the importance of education, but the financial commitment made by families of college students.

Kelley and Poshard's intelligence are evident elsewhere in the campaign.

Both have stayed on the high road during appearances and press conferences.

They understand what they would do if elected. There appearances have been long in explaining the two differ on specific issues, but short on personal attacks that have undermined the campaign at the top of the tickets.

A real naysayer will find fault with the positiveness of the candidates. There is a form of sound that has undoubtedly seen it all.

KELLEY SERVED on city councils in University City and Carbondale. He was a board member of the Southern Illinois Education Group. He has been a prominent lecturer in Carbondale for several years and coordinated state Sen. Ralph Dunn's campaign in Jacksonville.

We believe Kelley has seen the dirty underside of the political process and wisely has chosen to reject it.

LIKEWISE, POSHARD has undoubtedly seen it all. Poshard has been active in local government affairs for years, and has 20 years experience in education. He lost a hard-fought race for the 1982 Democratic primary, then defeated Republican Bob Winchester in 1984.

Johnston and Winchester were recognized as heavyweights when they opposed Poshard.

Poshard has not had to resort to the fear and smear campaign tactics that were inspired by John F. Kennedy, and that inspiration has led him to deal with problems openly and honestly.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS is a rural area that will always be subject to criticism to the cosmopolitan residents of the state.

But, with our current crop of public officials — especially after the Congress election — there should be the envy of those suffering through an election choice between the lesser of two evils.

Southern Illinoisans should have a snappy answer to those critics who claim that politics is a dirty business best left up to crooks and sycophants.

We know that politics doesn't have to be dirty work.

As a philosophy student, I feel morally obligated to assist students like Jeff Blevins and Eric Davidson when they seek answers, especially since I realize the decaying reputation of Morris Library as a research tool because "spoon feeding" is a great tradition in educational systems. Get our own paper ready. It's time to blindly accept the answers to some of life's great mysteries.

1. Trueblood workers never work because they are on strike. Like most workers, they are unorganized.

Our mascot should be a junkyard dog. Yet I wonder if our football team is better than Yale's. Maybe we should challenge them for Homecoming next year.

10. A Bhu-Bhu is one of God's many representatives on this Earth.

ME APONTE to document her claim. I go to the Hopeless Clinic.\n
Aponte to document more than a handful of isolated incidents of abortion protest, there or anywhere else. I challenge Ms. Aponte to document her claim. I go to the Hopeless Clinic.

Second, I have never seen "silently viewed" anti-abortion protest, there or anywhere else. I challenge Ms. Aponte to document more than a handful of isolated incidents of abortion protest, there or anywhere else.

Maybe she is referring to Atlanta where people are "violently" praying, or "violently" going limp before police pick them up.

Third, I am an adoptive parent. There are millions waiting to adopt infants. It may take five, seven, or 10 years through the state. They adopt from other countries because this country has 1.5 million abortions each year and rules against inter-racial adoptions. Look in the DE ads.

The last and worst blunder she makes is her "stand" on when life begins. Try taking biology 101. In 1868 the World Medical Association said that life begins at conception. The First International Conference on Abortion in D.C., 1967, said, "at no time between union of sperm and egg and birth could we say that this is not human life." Ms. Aponte says first trimester it's only opinion if it is life. What is her criteria for human life?

Brain activity? There is activity detectable at 40 days (first trimester) heart beat. Try 18 days, detectable with a stethoscope at 8 weeks (first trimester) bicycle can lift up on Aponte! Four hundred late term abortions are done per day.

Please get your facts straight and do a lot more thinking before you write. Maybe the DE would consider what they give so much space to John Curtis, Murphysboro.

Basketball needs space

This is directed toward Kathy Kuszy and Wendy Hounta, who were complaining about the lack of space afforded to aerobics classes in the Rec Center.

Their letter stated that it was "a bit out of place" that 200 Aerobics participants to one basketball court, while there were 11 small players and volleyball players got the other two.

Not really. The nature of each game requires that there be a lot of space available. If that space wasn't available, literal and logical, there's really no point in playing at all. It seems to me that the problem is scheduling of the activities.

If aerobics is as popular as you claim, then obviously more aerobics classes need to be scheduled —Phil Schleyer, sophomore, philosophy.

Maybe Cuomo should take over presidential campaign for Dukakis

THERE'S A NEW game in town. More popular than Jeopardy, more intellectual than Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? It's called "What Dukakis Should Be Saying." But no, I didn't think I've been to a gathering in the past six weeks where the phrase was echoing sooner or later, hasn't turned to what Mike Dukakis should be doing in his campaign. The game isn't limited to liberals, even conservatives even in suggestions. Dukakis has met the phenomenon on the campaign trail, and the truck driver sitting next to him would say, "Governor, what you should be saying is..."

The advice is worthless, of course, most of it conflicting. But it has its uses, helping the wrong campaign. A campaign where (ital) everybody (end italic) thinks he or she can do a better job of explaining the candidate than the candidate himself.

WHEN THE history of this sorry campaign is written, a chapter should be reserved to "How the political press are doing much more damage to the campaign than the candidate is doing." The press in this campaign is not the press of a few weeks ago, after a particularly egregious Bush attack on Dukakis. Cuomo called The New York Times and made a statement: "The Vice President talks about economic voodoo and then hangs the label "liberal," and the impression he went to school in Xanadu. He sounds like he's from a different world."

That's a certain higher class devastation than we've witnessed from the Duke.

Cuomo also would have closed the incumbent's gap. In another interview he pointed out that Bush had been a director of the CIA.

"What's the CIA?" he asked.

"I mean, that's going to be the presidency, right? ... You're going to have a president who's going to attend secrets,orra secrets that's not disclosed."

THEN, WITH worse even-handedness, he added: "I'm not saying George Bush is corrupt. I have no reason to believe George Bush is corrupt." If Mike Dukakis said that, people would think he meant it. The difference between a Cuomo and a Dukakis was demonstrated in an incident involving the New York governor. He was being driven into Harlem to visit a dilapidated school when he saw a man running down the street with police in pursuit. "Follow that guy," Cuomo told his driver. Three minutes later the officer had turned the fleeing man's path, after which Cuomo got out of the car and, along with the cop, the man's heich and his state trooper-driver, chased the guy down.

THE MAN, as it turned out, had been taking subway tickets, fist to a turnstile. Cuomo gave a thumbs up sign to the officer and went on his way. That's style. A politician either knows how things like that or he doesn't. Dukakis doesn't.

Dukakis would have rolled down the window of his car and tried to talk the guy into giving up his tickets. He would have said: "This is your last chance."

Cuomo, on the other hand, would have watched the guy get away, then proposed giving transit police the right to shoot to kill.

CUOMO, ASKED recently what he'd have done differently from Dukakis if he had been running for president, said: "I think I would have used my hands more."

He would have. What Dukakis really should have done is fired a good make-up artist and sent Cuomo out campaigning, disguised as the best make-up artist.

It's probably too late now.

Changing law won't stop abortions

Women will have abortions regardless, no matter what you do. If abortion is made illegal, a woman will still get one. Children will still be born. You will simply limit her to using a coathanger, knife, or gas.

Keeping abortions legal will save a lot of women from self mutilation.

I know there are a lot of people hearing about the rights of the unborn, but what about the woman's right to keep her own body. Don't you think a woman has the right to decide if she wants to let something other than herself use her lungs, her stomach, her uterus, and her blood? If you say, "no she doesn't," how would you feel if you were dragged into a hospital against your will in order to save a life support system?

True, an unborn has the potential to become human, but can we call something which can't live out of water fully human? It's not developed yet, and the woman has to decide whether or not she wants to develop in her body. If you're concerned about potential, remember that either an egg or a sperm has the potential to become human.

Should we punish a woman for menstruating, or punish a man for every sperm that doesn't fulfill its potential?—Annette Brezinski, freshman, philosophy.

Alumni booted off Homecoming train

Ah, Homecoming! That wonderful weekend for alumni and friends, just a trip home to the alma mater, enjoy the glorious fall weather. It's a trip to the past in Southern Illinois, take part in all the gala festivities, and enjoy the spectacle of the Homecoming parade. Why? Because the representatives of the Alumni Association? Weren't they supposed to ride on the tour train in the parade?

Well, as it turns out, the tour train had mechanical problems on Friday and couldn't be fixed in time. One of the seating sections couldn't be used, so some of the people who were supposed to be on the tour train were told to get lost.

Alumni and friends, just guess who it was that the University Programming Office and SPC pitched off the train? Yes, you got it! The officers of the Alumni Association.

That's how decisions are being made these days at the old alma mater—Jerry D. Mathias, Alumni, 75, 82.

Michael Madigan denied the State of a needed tax increase," Dunn said.

Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Morgan Ford, seeking re-election to the Illinois House, defended Madigan against Democratic attack, saying a "false count" was taken and the proposal received very little support.

Richmond said he supported a proposed tax increase, saying "if the dollars aren't there, we need a tax increase," but stood behind Madigan's decision.

Also participating in the forum were Democrat L. Gene Clarke, running against Dunn for a seat in the Senate.

Judicial Board of Governance should go through the committee, which Taylor chairs, for review of their qualifications and then be recommended for approval in the senate,帕特罗先生说。)

According to the constitution, the committee must interview each appointee to insure that they meet academic and disciplinary requirements and the committee must be unbiased in their decision.

Taylor said the committee could not do the interviews immediately because it had a full agenda.

Taylor said she will not participate in the committee's decisions to recommend the appointees for senate approval because there would be a conflict of interest.

Hall said he would ask the senate to hold a special meeting to review the appointees. Hall expected the appointments to take place at the next senate meeting.

majority of those attending the meeting decided that he could remain an East Side senator until the Judicial Board of Governance makes its final ruling on his USG eligibility.

Paratore said the USG constitution states that when a decision is appealed, all sanctions imposed on the individual by the senate are lifted.

Hall said: "It was the consensus of opinion that (Kelly) can resign his seat on the senate until he goes before the Judicial Board of Governance."

The Judicial Board of Governance, consisting of nine undergraduate students whom they met academic and disciplinary requirements, hears all appeals after senate action.

Because candidates for the judicial Board of Governance have not yet been selected by the USG chief of staff, Kelly will be allowed to participate in the USG for an unknown amount of time, Hall said.

Kelly said he expected to participate in the USG senate for the rest of the semester because it would take long for a final ruling on his eligibility.

Kelly said he is not participating in the committee because his interpretation of the constitution states that a candidate must be an undergraduate only to be elected.

are protected from the virus because of the write-protect notch at the top of the disk with a plastic tab, making it impossible for anything to be transferred onto it.

Although the disks in Rehn Hall are protected from the virus, Gutteridge said that this does not stop people from exchanging and using contaminated programs. Dean Kenneth Tempehmeier, of the College of Engineering and Technology, also said he was not certain of any problems arising from the virus.

Roger Missavage, director of computer-aided instruction and research lab in the College of Engineering and Technology computer laboratory, said the virus is unable to contaminate the mainframe in the lab because it runs on a different operating system than the virus, which makes the mainframe impossible to infect with this particular virus. Zemanta workers in the lab also do not run on the same system the virus runs on, making infection impossible.

Missavage said, pointing out that there could be other computers in the college that could be at risk.

If a disk is contaminated, the virus will be invisible until it is loaded into the computer an unspecified number of times. After this, it will appear as "(e) Brain" on the disk directory (a list of files on a disk).

While it is possible to remove the virus from some disks, for others it is impossible. When the file name "(e) Brain" is followed by .EXE or .COM, the virus is invisible until loaded into the computer an unspecified number of times.

The virus is invisible until loaded into the computer an unspecified number of times.

There is a high probability that copying any file on that disk will also transfer the virus.

In such cases, the disk must be completely erased. By using an uninfected DOS disk to start the computer system, students can transfer files from their infected disk to an uninfected disk if the file name "(e) Brain" is not followed by .EXE or .COM.

Some precautions are recommended to lessen the chance of getting and passing along the virus on computer disks. Lawrence Hengehold, director of computing affairs, said students can easily turn off personal computers before using them. This kills all the memory in the computer, including the virus. "If you think your disk is infected, bring it into the lab, let lab people check it out," he said.

Officials at the "Fanor lab, the lab in the Communications Building and the "help desk" in Wham are distributing information on how to deal with the virus and what to do if your disk is contaminated. Hengehold said if students have any questions or if they are uncertain whether their disks are infected, they are encouraged to bring them to the "Fanor Lab.

The virus was created by two Pakistani brothers, Amjad and Basi Farooq, who intended to discourage the practice of selling illegally copied software.

Group considers expanding format of Tony Awards show

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Theater Wing, sponsors of the annual Tony Awards for the best on Broadway, may expand its award presentations into off-Broadway productions, it was announced Tuesday.

Isabella Stevens, president of the wing, said at a luncheon in the Pierre Hotel that she had submitted a proposal to the organization's board for including off-Broadway productions in the Tony Awards format.

Since their inception in 1947, the awards have gone only to productions performed in theaters designated as Broadway theaters by the League of New York Theaters and Producers.

"I think we must find a way to recognize distinguished achievement in the off-Broadway theater in the near future," Stevens said.

"The American Theater Wing Awards for the best of off-Broadway would satisfy critics of the American Theater Wing for its failure to recognize the lively off-Broadway theater industry, which has developed since the Tony Awards was founded. The wing, which founded the awards, operated the famous Stage Door Can- teen for servicemen in New York in World War II."

Many more new theatrical productions are mounted off-Broadway than on Broadway in recent years, making off-Broadway the principal showcase for new American playwrights, whose works are not given expensive Broadway productions because of the risk.

"Halloween 4" kept from film rankings

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — With the horror film they have scared up as much as $7 million at the box-office turnstiles over the weekend, but conflicting and inconclusive box-office tallies made it ineligible for the weekend.

Daily Variety reported the horror film grossed in the neighborhood of $6 million in its opening week. Other sources pegged it at $7 million. Either figure would have made it the top grossing film in North America, but because Galaxy International could not provide a firm figure, it was not officially listed.

Because of the foul-up, "The Accused," the prize-winning rape drama starring Kelly McGillis as a prosecuting attorney and Jodie Foster as the victim, retained its standing as the No. 1 picture in release.

"The Accused," playing on 930 screens, grossed $4 million in its second week for a two-week total of $9.8 million.

No. 2 was "Alien Nation," starring James Caan as a Los Angeles cop in the near-future who finds himself with a humanoid alien partner (played by Mandy Patinkin) overcoming criminals and prejudice. "Alien Nation" beamed up only $2.4 million, a drop of 39 percent from the previous week, in 1,456 theaters. In three weeks the action-adventure yarn has picked up $17.4 million.

Dropping 32 percent from the previous week was "Punchline," the Ben Hecht-Sally Field bitter-sweet comedy about stand-up comics. In its fourth week "Punchline" grossed $2.3 million for a take of $13.3 million.

"Gorillas in the Mist" grossed $2.1 million in 1,073 theaters for a six-week total of $16.8 million. It was ranked No. 4.

Two newcomers opened in limited release to fairly good audience response. "Without a Clue" made its debut in only 286 theaters for a gross of $1.2 million. The comedy stars Michael Caine as a bogan, benefited Stock Holmes and Ben Kingsley as a brilliant Dr. Watson (the real Sherlock).

"Mystic Pizza," the other new arrival, opened on 401 screens, and nipped $1.1 million from filmmakers for sixth spot in the rankings.

A third new arrival was "Bat 21," which grossed only $962,060 in 348 situations.

"Without a Clue" was ranked No. 2 with a gross of $4.9 million, while "Mystic Pizza" was No. 3 with a gross of $4.3 million.

With the tally of "Halloween 4: The Return of Michael Myers," it was a slow and dull week for North American theater owners as only eight movies topped the $1 million mark.

In all, only $32.7 million was taken in, compared to $63 million for the same week in 1987 and $72 million in 1986. The 1988 box-office grosses, drop of 39 percent, however, remained ahead of the 1987 record to this time. So far this year the total is $3.4 billion. A year ago it was $3.2 billion.

Foreign students' enrollment at peak

NEW YORK (UPI) - A record 366,200 foreign students were enrolled in American colleges last year and more than half of them came from Asian nations, including Taiwan, Korea, China and Japan, a report showed Tuesday.

The report, "Open Doors: 1987/88," said that despite the record figure, the number of foreign students made up only 2.7 to 2.8 percent of total U.S. college enrollment, a ratio that has remained relatively constant throughout the 1980s.

Nearly half of the students were pursuing graduate degrees and the most popular fields are engineering, business administration, mathematics, computer sciences, physical sciences - in that order, according to the report funded with support from the United States Information Agency.

The foreign students, more than 241,000 of them male, came from 186 nations and places of origin.

"Open Doors: 1987/88" will be published in November by the Institute of International Education, the nation's largest higher educational exchange agency. Its headquarters is across from the United Nations in New York.

These students have been the fastest growing group in the foreign student ranks for five consecutive years, Institute President Richard Krasso said when he released key figures.

He said the top six places of origin were all in Asia, led again by Taiwan with 36,960, up 3.9 percent from the previous year.

The People's Republic of China with 22,300, up 36 percent, was second - followed by India, 31,010, up 14.5 percent; Korea, 20,538, up 2.9 percent; Malaysia, 19,662, down 10 percent; Japan, 18,590, up 18.5 percent.

"Significant growth in numbers from China, Japan, Korea, Taiwan and India resulted in a record for some 160,000 south and east Asian students in 1987-88 - a 6 percent increase over the previous year," Krasso said.

"Economic strength has given these countries both the need for advanced training through U.S. higher education - and the capacity to afford it," he said.

For the first time, more than half the foreign students enrolled in U.S. colleges came from Asia, at 180,940 and up 5.8 percent. Other figures included 44,350 from Latin America, up 2.6 percent; Middle East, 43,640, down 7.1 percent; Europe, 38,620, up 7.4 percent; Africa, 26,460, down 9 percent; North America, 16,370, up 0.4 percent; Oceania, 5,820, down 14.4 percent.

The report said schools in California had 49,197 foreign students enrolled, while New York had 34,693; Texas, 23,714; Massachusetts, 16,946; Florida, 13,591; Illinois, 13,589; Pennsylvania, 13,460; Ohio, 13,142; Michigan, 12,171; and District of Columbia, 5,996.

NEW YORK (UPI) - High schools should offer alcohol and drug abuse education, said 32 percent of high school principals and 94 percent of assistant principals surveyed, according to a national study Tuesday.

More than half the educators taking part in the National Association of Secondary School Principals' study, "High School Leaders and Their Schools," said they supported tougher requirements in academic subjects, and nearly half charged that "schools require far too little academic work of students."

Stances on drug instruction and other topics were identified when some 1,590 principals and assistant principals were asked their opinions on 19 broad educational issues in the study, a comprehensive type that is sponsored by the NASP every 10 years.

Other findings included:

- 32 percent of the principals and 36 percent of the assistant principals said the compulsory academic year should be lengthened.
- 52 percent of principals and 27 percent of assistant principals agreed that federal aid must be made available to private and religious schools.

WHY I SUPPORT COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

For many years I withheld support from union activity on campus because I was either involved in administration or because I was a "professional purist" with the notion that universities were professional places where administrators were on the same team as the faculty. I believed the entire operation was to advance knowledge and to teach students and that problems could be worked out reasonably.

Sadly we have seen university administrators turn universities into paper factories and the entire operations put on a production-line basis somewhat akin to the corporate world. Along with the increase in paper work, we have seen a mushrooming in the ratio of top administrators to faculty and students. During these times of financial stringency, in higher education, we have seen administrators, already with very high salaries, get raises that are greater percentage-wise than raises given to the faculty. Even as I write this I realize that many of SIU's problems must be laid at the door of its Board of Trustees.

For these reasons I support faculty unionization and especially the Illinois Education Association, a union of, by and for teachers. Even with its faults, unionization seems to be the only way to try to get the system back into reasonable balance and working order.

Dukakis tries to refocus on positive campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers who led congressional probes into Watergate and the Iran-Contra affair criticized Vice President George Bush Tuesday for not answering questions they posed about reforms aimed at preventing such scandals.

Bush, who took a different approach to the 1974 Senate Watergate Committee, said he still supported extension of the Presidential Records Act to protect his administrations and limits on the Nixon White House.

The Dukakis campaign's counter-strategy is to put their man on TV as the only available candidate who can prevent such scandals.

The Bush campaign defended ads that Dukakis opposes new weapons systems and that Massachusetts' prisoner furlough program was an example of the Bush administration's lack of concern for the California's and the federal government's assurance of public safety.

The Dukakis campaign countered with a statement that Bush's commercials are "lies, damn lies."

On the pre-taped Larry King show aired Monday night, Dukakis said, "I don't like these negative campaigns. I must prefer to go out to people and tell them what Mike Dukakis wants to do, my concern for them, for their family, for their children, for the children of the future, for college opportunity, for jobs."

Accordingly, Dukakis spent a few minutes Tuesday morning at the Diablo Valley College day-care center

Bush hit for not answering questions on scandal-reform

At a news conference, Gary said, "We've never seen the importance of keeping its fingers crossed Tuesday that Dukakis' counterpunches against George Bush's ads as the Bush administration proceeded to generate new ads based on truth.

Accordingly, Dukakis spent a few minutes Tuesday morning at the Diablo Valley College day-care center.

Wearing a yellow button that said "Child-Caring Man," he greeted some children and shook hands with two 3-year-old boys.

In front of a crowd of about 3,000 students and members of the public gathered on the college campus, Dukakis hailed the event as "For some of these young people, the door of opportunity has opened up so they can go out and make their contribution to this country of ours." Dukakis said.

Bush denies Dukakis' 'class warfare' charge

Scirpa Howard News Service

AKRON, Ohio — George Bush doesn't miss a chance to remind voters of Ronald Reagan, and his campaign Tuesday that Michael Dukakis is waging "class warfare" is reminiscent of Reagan's successful 1980 effort to bury a similar charge by Jimmy Carter.

Stumping Ohio and buoyed by a new CNN poll giving him a 54-41 lead nationally, Bush took the matter head-on.

Addressing the Ohio Association of Broadcasters in Columbus, he said the tone of Dukakis' campaign has reached a disturbing level.

"I must say that I have been disturbed," Bush said, "I have been impressed my opponent's campaign over the several past weeks — the increasing appeal to class conflicts," he said.

"GOOD HEAVENS, this is the United States of America. In my view there is no place in American public life for a philosophy that divides Americans one from another on class lines and that excite conflict among them.

"Dukakis has run his campaign on the theme that Bush represents economic policies that benefit the rich at the expense of the less affluent.

"In 1980, Carter, commenting on what he implied was an unethical campaign by Reagan, which he said the election, black may be parroted from North, South from South and Jew from Christian.

"The next day Reagan responded: "I'm saddened today, there was someone who held that position, could intimate such a thing ... I think he's been a one country an apology... I think he's an uninformed and prejudiced man."

CARTER SUBSEQUENTLY apologized on national television.

Dukakis has continued the class warfare theme in California, telling voters Bush is the candidate of the privileged rich — "He's on our side ... I'm on your side."

Bush has clamed away at Bush's plan to cut the capital gains tax from 20 percent to 15 percent, a giveaway to the rich, saying Dukakis would get a $22,000 tax break.

Dukakis' running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, said yes Bush has been a "vicious and ugly and so un-founded."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Virginia Volponi is among a group of progressive whites who came out three months ago, when the turmoils of 1960s are now part of the new Birmingham.

Volponi teaches in the biology department at the University of Alabama.

Politically, she's a liberal and a backer of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis; at the Democratic Convention, she was a delegate for Jesse Jackson.

"I'm sure some people thought we were, you know, like Jesse, and I had mixed feelings about it," she says. "But you have to do what you truly believe in when you have some clear choices. I believe in what he was saying. He was talking about building bridges between people who don't have very much in common and those who have a little more."

SHE SMILES as she tries to explain how far Birmingham has come, socially and how far it has to.

"Emotionally, whites were responding to Jesse, but I don't think they were ever at the point of bringing themselves to vote for him. But they bring together a lot of whites, especially those in rural areas, certainly understand his message."

Here, she gropes for words, "Just thinking about it sometimes, you know. "Boy, that nig..;er sure knows what he's talking about. It was that terrible, terrible statement hearing him emotionally at least."

HER CONCERNS in this election range from support for abortion rights and more programs for the needy to the issue of high spending, especially during a time of peace. "I I think the theme is typical of many American women who are now chief breadwinners. The problem, she says, is that Republicans seem to understand that today's family faces new problems."

"Women work today because they have to work," she says. "Yet many of them in Alabama don't even earn enough to pay for child care and provide a decent standard of living for their children."

"Students are getting a mechanical education. When you're working two and three jobs, you don't have time to reflect on the meaning of life."

—Virginia Volponi

THE REagan administration, the (George) Bush forces all talk about decentralizing government and letting up on those take part in this."

The governor has a problem with messages, she says. "It doesn't just clean up a budget through the legislature and the budget isn't meeting people's needs. If states can't meet those needs, who's going to?"

Even if she were better off today than she was a decade ago, Volponi is convinced that for only child, a son, won't necessarily be once he finishes the University. She says he might not be able to afford a house and she becomes the lines of federal aid to education just when he needs it.

From discussions in her classes, she says she had discovered that three-fourths of her students worked full-time jobs and that some even worked two or three jobs to cover college and personal expenses.

"Students are being cheated out of something else besides financial aid," she says. "They're getting a mechanical education. When you're working two and three jobs, you don't have time to reflect on the meaning of life. When they're so financially burdened, where are they going to find the time to tune in to what's happening around them and respond in a meaningful way?"

THAT, SHE says, is in contrast to her college days when she got through school on a scholarship and a part-time job, had time to reflect on the meaning of the turbulence of the 1960s and got involved in the civil-rights movement to effect change.

Volper is active nowadays in feminist causes and is a member of the Alabama New South Coalition, a bipartisan group of blacks and progressive whites.

Although she says some of her friends feel Dukakis hasn't provided enough specifics and wouldn't be able to address many social concerns if he is elected, she feels he'd be a lot better than Bush.

"THE KEY thing about having Dukakis in office is the set of values he'd bring," she says. "There's the feeling he'd be more responsive to the problems."

"I don't think Bush could respond, except in a very negative way. He'd bring a different set of values about who should be included in America's economic pie. But women and blacks fought too hard for the right to vote, and I don't think it'll let them win this election by default."
Grant to bring geology lecturers

A $2,000 grant from Amoco will help the Department of Geology expand its visiting lecturer series. The grant will help bring in 10 research and industrial geologists for campus lectures, John E. Utgaard, department chairman, said. Guests will likely come from the American Association of Petroleum Geologists distinguished speakers list, he said.

Some of the grant may also be used to buy computer programs for student use, he said.

Utgaard learned of the gift from J.W. Phenice, vice president of Amoco's Houston region. Utgaard said SIUC alumni Dennis R. McConnell and Greg Anderson are among several geology alumni who work for Amoco in that region.

"(Alumni) have been very supportive of our efforts. It's really because of them that the Amoco Foundation has been supporting us," Utgaard said.

Two Russian icebreakers to aid trapped whales

BARROW, Alaska (UPI) — Two Russian icebreakers punched through the frozen Arctic and arrived Tuesday off the northernmost tip of the United States to aid the Japanese whaling vessels and the two young Eskimos trapped for more than 2 weeks.

The vessels would smash through the weakest sections of the ice ridge that contains chunks as big as a house.

They should give us a tremendous boost," said a Japanese whaling official. The Russian vessels are expected to be able to help free the Japanese whaling vessels and the two young Eskimos trapped for more than 2 weeks.

"We're going to open the whole barn door. We're going to kick out the whole side of the barn," said another Japanese whaling official. The Russian vessels are expected to be able to help free the Japanese whaling vessels and the two young Eskimos trapped for more than 2 weeks.

The Archimedean Screw Tractor, a huge oil company contraption capable of churning a path about 15 feet wide using ice-destroying pons, was being used in an attempt to enable the whales to get free.

The unique tractor was being used to create what a U.S. admiral called "a one-lane swimming pool" from the 5-foot-ice hole where the whales have been for three days to the ice ridge.

Reagan enacts policy to test pesticide safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan enacted Tuesday a stripped-down plan setting the government's and manufacturer's and signed, the measure was limited in scope and would free money for the government to test the safety of 600 ingredients in pesticides used by farmers and gardeners.

Callers have suggested every imaginable way of freeing the whales — from the workable to the downright silly.

The whales have been trapped for more than 2 weeks, but the number of calls increased during the weekend when one whale disappeared and was presumed drowned.

The National Institutes of Health came under fire Tuesday for asking pharmaceutical companies to bid for a promising new AIDS drug developed by government scientists.

The American Public Health Association, Public Citizen Health Research Group and the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force assailed the plans letter to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, a branch of NIH.

"This drug was discovered by the NIH at the taxpayers' expense and it simply must not be given away to a drug company with no strings attached," said Dr. Lynn Silver, spokesperson for Public Citizen.

The drug, CD4-pseudomonas elastase, is a genetically engineered drug that in a test tube has been shown to target and destroy cells infected by the AIDS virus. Although it is not expected to be a total cure, it is hoped such an approach would reduce the extent of infection and thus slow the progression of the deadly virus, scientists said.

NIH scientists, and this month the NIH asked interested companies to submit bids for an exclusive license. The license would contract the winning company to guide the drug through animal tests and the human trials required by the Food and Drug Administration. It would grant sole marketing rights if the drug then gained FDA approval.

An NIH spokesman declined comment on the letter.

The plan's opponents argued that the CD4-PE bid proposal lacks controls on the eventual price of the drug or the speed of development. "We would prefer that the NIH develop CD4-PE itself and then license it non-exclusively to allow competition," Silver said.

Infectious waste guidelines obeyed by most hospitals

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - American hospitals are complying with and even exceeding standards on disposal of infectious refuse, used surgical tools, contaminated animal carcasses and autopsy waste, researchers said Wednesday.

A survey conducted by a group of researchers at the University of California, Los Angeles, and North Carolina Memorial Hospital found that most hospitals categorize more types of wastes as infectious than is required by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

William A. Rutala, chief investigator of the nationwide survey, told the Los Angeles Convention Center that more than 90 percent of the respondents considered blood, isolation materials and autopsy wastes to be infectious.

More than 80 percent of the 441 randomly selected hospitals in the 49 states surveyed designated surgical, dental and unincinerated laboratory waste products as infectious waste, he said.

Rutala said the surveyed hospitals reported that infectious wastes are normally autoclaved or steam-sterilized before they are discarded. The non-infectious waste is put in a sanitary landfill.

Because so many hospitals exceed federal infectious waste management guidelines, results of the study suggest the seriousness with which the disposal of infectious materials is viewed.

Rutala said the study was conducted from July 1987 to January 1988.

Researchers estimated that costs for those hospitals exceeding federal guidelines to be $30 million for the annual disposal of infectious materials.

Rutala said hospital administrators participating in the study were required to answer a comprehensive questionnaire designed to identify solid waste practices.

The study found that the hospitals generated 10 percent of solid waste per day and that infectious wastes comprised 3 percent of the total refuse at American hospitals.

Athletes lead anti-drug campaign

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - The man who founded Students Against Driving Drunk began a new campaign Tuesday to encourage student-athletes to lead the fight against drugs among the nation's high schools and colleges.

Accompanied by Rick Davis, the captain of the U.S. Olympic soccer team and a former teammate of the deceased St. Louis Steamers of the Major Indoor Soccer League, Robert Anastas introduced his fight against drugs during a news conference at St. Louis University.

Anastas announced the formation of Student Athletes Detest Drugs, which is modeled on the highly successful anti-drunk driving push he began in 1981.

"Student athletes are natural leaders and trendsetters in our high schools and universities," said Anastas, a former high school football and hockey coach. "When they stumble, everyone falls."

"The program will use the SADD precepts to help them and all students put an end to illegal drug use," he said.

Students Against Driving Drunk has grown to include 4 million members at 15,000 high schools, 4,000 middle schools and 1,000 universities across the nation, Anastas said.

Under the program, students and their parents sign a "Contract for Life," in which the child agrees to call his parents for a ride rather than to drive after drinking.

Anastas pointed to the success of the anti-drunk driving effort as an indication that his anti-drug effort also would be successful.
Co-worker dating can be time-saving

Yuppies finding companions on the job

Scripps Howard News Service

Workaholic yuppies who yearn for companionship but who say they just don’t have time to go out and look for it haven’t looked in the right places.

It’s right there, guys, wedged between the computer terminal and the Holodeck -- cancel that business lunch and make a date for one.

Margaret Kent, author of “Love at Work,” says mutual interests, place of work habits and personal goals, make finding a relationship at your place of employment a natural.

“It would take a year or more of dating to get the same information you could get by observing someone in his work environment just for a few weeks,” Kent said.

“You CAN see how he treats people, how generous he is, whether he gets a kick out of how much of an exasperator he is. Things that are usually difficult to get to know in a brief encounter are easy to find out — very innocently, as at work.”

In fact, Kent, who met and married her present husband, book co-author Robert Fein­schreiber, while on the job, even advises switching jobs to.

“So far, the court has called harassment anything from making a comment to a third person to giving a compliment.”

confidence at work.

Kent offers tips on making yourself more approachable at work: keep all the niceties of life, like tissues, aspirins and safety pins in your desk drawer. Also, keep a jar of candy near your work station so people have something to stop by, she says.

The book also offers tips on avoiding or ending relationships with people you may still have to encounter every day.

Kent’s first book, “How to Marry Your Male Choice,” sold for $6.95, but offered readers a money-back guarantee that they would find a suitable mate within two years. “So far, I haven’t had anyone ask for their money back,” Kent said. The book is now in its second printing.

“Be friendly to everyone,” Kent advises. “Say hello in the same friendly way you would to the computer repairman as you do to the man you’re interested in, so when you are interested in someone you won’t look as if you’re checking him out and nailed him to the wall.

“Be nice to everyone, and you’ll feel the whole office as your witness when a relationship begins.”

Kent cautions males, however, in making what they believe to be just friendly gestures. Because there are currently no definitions of what constitutes sexual harassment, an advance may be just as bad.

“SO FAR, the court has called harassment anything from making a comment to a third person to giving a compliment,” Kent said. “Men are already chicken-hearted; he’s not going to venture even a free word to a woman if he doesn’t know how she’s going to take it.

“It’s addressing the problem of companies that have rules against employee harassment. Because there are no day. When a company is primarily

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the latest volley in the United States’ escalating visa war with Nicaragua, President Reagan barred Sandinista officials and party members from entering the country for short-term commercial and tourist visits. Reagan’s proclamation on non-immigration visas cited a number of anti-American measures by the Marxist Nicaraguan government, including recent delays in processing the visas for U.S. diplomats into the Central American country.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said during the last month, U.S. diplomats have had to wait an additional one to three weeks for their visa requests to be processed.

Reagan’s proclamation said his action also was motivated by "the long-standing government suppression of free expression and press and support of subversive activities throughout Central America." Redman, who did not know how many government officials and Sandinista National Liberation Front members would be affected by Reagan’s action, said the proclamation "gives the secretary of state another policy tool."

Redman said Secretary of State George Shultz could make exceptions in certain cases, adding the proclamation would not ban Sandinista officials visiting the United States as part of their "official business with the United Nations."

Veterans department jumps up to Cabinet-level position

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan signed legislation Tuesday that creates a new Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs to prove to the military that "America’s debt... doesn’t end the day the uniform comes off.

Elevating the 58-year-old Veterans Administration to Cabinet status at a ceremony at the National Defense University, Reagan signed the legislation before an approving crowd of government officials, members of Congress and veterans organizations.

"America’s debt to those who served and sacrificed for her defense doesn’t end the day the uniform comes off," Reagan said. "For the security of our nation, it must not end."

The new department, which will rise in rank March 15, 1989, immediately becomes one of the largest federal agencies, with an annual budget of about $30 billion, and 240,000 employees.

It will retain operation of 172 veterans hospitals, 231 outpatient clinics, 56 regional offices, 117 nursing homes and 189 "outreach" centers for Vietnam veterans.

Reagan, greeted at the national war college by a 21-gun salute and full military honors, first spoke briefly about the growing terms of the U.S. invasion of Grenada five years ago, and lauded U.S. support for freedom fighters around the world.

At the same time, however, the president said successes achieved in Afghanistan, Angola and Cambodia, could have extended into Nicaragua if the Unites, States had stayed strong and steady for years.

"In each country we helped freedom fighters obtain the supplies that together with their own courage, evaded the odds," Reagan said. "We could be seeing the same seeds of genuine peace and freedom sprouting in Nicaragua today if we had shown the same steadfast support for the freedom fighters’ cause."

Reagan, throwing in a plug for Vice President George Bush, opened the signing ceremony with a somewhat rosy narrative about the U.S. invasion of the tiny Caribbean island and praised Bush for planning the operation he said stemmed a Marxist threat and saved the lives of about 1,000 American military students.

But the purpose of the address was to thank the nation’s military. "This bill gives those who have borne America’s battles what they’ve deserved for so long — a seat at the table in our national affairs," Reagan said.

Reagan issues few pardons

Lawyers tighten investigations, pardon standards

WASHINGTON — President Reagan issued fewer pardons to convicted felons during the past eight years than any other modern president.

Of 2,631 applicants from 1981 until this year, 236 received unconditional pardons, Justice Department records show.

Most of the 361 felons pardoned were convicted of white-collar crimes, many hired lawyers and many used strong hometown or character witness, the records show.

Former President Jimmy Carter pardoned 534 felons during his four years in office.

Former President Gerald Ford issued 382 pardons from 1974 to 1976, including one for former President Richard Nixon. Nixon pardoned 883 felons from 1969 to 1974, where he resigned from office.

In the Reagan era, government lawyers have tightened background investigations of pardon standards for applicants, Justice Department lawyers said.

As in other administrations, pardons granted by Reagan have gone unpublicized for the most part briefly before being quietly granted 15 to 20 years after a federal court conviction.

Among the Reagan-era pardons were:

- David Parr, of North Little Rock, Ark., and Harold Nelson of San Antonio, the first two persons ever sentenced to prison under a 1952 law barring corporate campaign contributions to those seeking national office.

- Joe Doe Looney, of Alpine, Texas, former National Football League star, who was convicted and placed on probation in 1974 for possession of an unregistered weapon. Looney was killed in a motorcycle accident last month.

- Donald Parr, of Austin, Texas, convicted of violating federal anti-corruption laws.

Thailand officials pessimistic about deal to return artifact

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) - Thai officials expressed pessimism Tuesday that a deal for the return of an ancient statue will be consummated, as the Fine Arts Institute of Chicago could be easily arranged.

Considered a plundered national treasure by Thais, the 1,800-pound, 7-foot lar Kartli, by-3-foot Cambodian artifact — now owned by the late Vithasen Rechling on water — on display for 21 years.

The Neu Choamornedhinh lintel disappeared during the 1960s, from the ruins of Phnom Rung, a Cambodian monument in what is now Thailand, and covered about 200 miles east of Bangkok and some 50 miles north of the present Thai-Cambodian border.

The Thai government announced it will return the carver to the people of the land, which the Elizabeth F. Cheney Foundation planned to buy "as a way to stop the theft," because the statue will be sent to the Art Institute of Chicago.

Vannesac Senavong, director general of the Thai Ministry of Education's Fine Arts Department, said the Bangkok office of the United States Information Service had phoned the morning informing them that 18,000 excess deaths, the highest death rate from the drought, had occurred in the St. Louis between 1969 and 1975.

The companies whose shipments have been stopped were contacted ahead of time and have cooperated.

While we are aware of the Greenpeace study, this action has been planned for quite some time," she said. Greenpeace released a report earlier this month saying that 18,000 excess deaths, the highest death rate from the drought, had occurred in the St. Louis between 1969 and 1975.

Typhoon capsizes ferry; more than 400 missing

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) -- Typhoon Ruby capsized a crippled ferry, leaving more than 400 passengers and crew members missing and feared dead, before swirling out of the Philippines this week.

Police and relief organizations said Ruby, the worst of 19 typhoons to hit the Philippines this year, left at least 44 other people and left 90,000 homeless in the southern town of Sorsogon, 360 kilometers southeast of Manila.

The ferry had left Manila Sunday bound for the central city of Tacloban, where it was scheduled to arrive Monday. Its manifest included 441 passengers and crew members.

Officials said vessels sent to trace the ferry found eight survivors on Maripipi island Tuesday, 40 hours after the vessel overturned. Another 18 survivors were discovered in Samalawan island an hour later.

Coast Guard and shipping officials said the 1,366-foot ferry Dona Marilyn capsize at 3 p.m. Monday after sending a distress signal saying it had a broken engine and was taking on water in the storm-swept Visayan Sea, 300 miles southeast of Manila.

Masters swimmer wins 2 world titles Down Under

By John Walley

Still recovering from jet lag, 74-year-old Ed Shea said he was satisfied with his weekend performance at the 1986 World Masters Swimming Championships in Brisbane, Australia.

Shea, a professor emeritus in physical education, captured first in two events and took second in another.

"I was very pleased with the result because of the circumstances," Shea said.

Shea arrived in Brisbane after more than a day of continuous travel, only to compete in the 1974 age group category with less than a day's rest.

In his first event, the 200-meter backstroke, Shea took first with a time of 3:18.43, narrowly missing his own world record by four-tenths of a second.

He set the record in September at the U.S. Masters National Championships in Buffalo, N.Y., with a time of 3:18.03.

"I would have only known if I was that close," Shea said.

Shea's last event, the 100-meter backstroke, turned out to be his second win of the championships. He finished the race with a time of 1:31.72. His nearest competitors finished with times of 1:34.72 and 1:36.00.

Shea said the reason he feels he can continue to win in the 100 and 200 meter events is that the other athletes don't train as hard as they could.

"In the shorter distances they can go like heck, but put them in a 200 and that's what gets them," Shea said.

Earlier in the championships, Shea finished second in the 50 backstroke in 1:30.80.

The World masters is held every two years at a various host nations. The swimmers range from 25- to 86-years-old with competition, levels grouped in five-year intervals.

This year, Shea said there were 4,000 swimmers from all over the world. Some 1,000 were from Japan.

"(The Japanese) were very well organized," Shea said. "They were there six days before it started.

Shea will compete in various meets around the state and another U.S. National Masters Swimming Championships before the 1986 World Championships in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

UCLA tops UPI coaches poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Nebraska Cornhuskers continued their rise north in the rankings this week, trying to avoid a stumble into the No. 1 slot. UCLA's Notre Dame remains at No. 4, its former No. 3 spot that had fallen as low as 11th, but the No. 1 spot.

The Bruins, who last week earned the No. 1 ranking for the first time in 21 years, received 727 of a possible 735 total points and 41 of 49 first-place votes.

The No. 2 Fighting Irish gained 93 points and the remaining eight first-place votes. The No. 3 Trojans received 19 points and the No. 4 Hurricanes 563 points.

The Cornhuskers were No. 2 before losing 41-28 to UCLA Sept. 10 — a loss that could cost them a shot at the national championship. In recent weeks, Nebraska was ranked Nos. 10, 11, 9, 8, and 6, before leaping over West Virginia this week.

"I think our objective is just to play well every year and to have a good season," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said Saturday. "But a good season is kind of in the eyes of the beholder.

"Sometimes the further you are away from Nebraska the better you play. Whereas (around Nebraska) 10-2 sometimes doesn't look too good. But I think most people up here are happy to win 10 or 15 games a year. There are those who are used to that, too.

"Saturday's 63-5 victory over Kansas State assured the Cornhuskers of a 7th consecutive winning season, breaking the NCAA record string set by Penn State (1959-73) and tied by Alabama (1965-83). Nebraska has not had a losing season since 1961, the year before Bob Devaney took over as coach, and is 255-54-4 (81 percent) in that span.

A lot of people had something to do with the (success)," said Osborne, who succeeded Devaney in 1973. "I think the people that you saw in the red down there (fans) have been a lot to do with this record, because, obviously, that kind of tradition breeds a certain amount of success."

The Top 10 also included No. 5 West Virginia, No. 7 Florida State, No. 8 Oklahoma, No. 9 Auburn and No. 10 Texas.

Rounding out the Top 20 were No. 11 Arkansas, No. 12 Oklahoma State, No. 13 Syracuse, No. 14 Michigan, No. 15 Louisiana State, No. 16 Alabama, No. 17 South Carolina, No. 18 Clemson, No. 19 Oregon and No. 20 Georgia.

In the ratings were six independents, four teams from the Southeastern Conference, one each from the Big Eight and Pac-10, and one each from the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big Ten, Southwest Conference and Western Athletic Conference.

The 1988 national champion will receive a $22,000 non-scholarship from the Geraff Foundation and UPI.

Irish to face three unranked teams

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz knows the difficult task of keeping his team as motivated as its three games against unranked teams as the No. 2 Fighting Irish were against some of the nation's best clubs.

Notre Dame, 7-0, plays Navy, 3-4, Saturday in a game that is crucial to the team's hopes of finishing the season with an unblemished record. Boeing (4-1), Winona State (3-2) and Illinois (2-3) are next.

"I will not be lulled into sleep tomorrow because of our record, or that we are not capable of beating us, because they are," Holtz said.

"That doesn't mean we will win, but I think we are capable of playing the game. You have to play every football game the same way. You have to respect the opponent. I don't worry about who has won or lost, but the other team's player playing its best. I feel sure we will play very, very well.

"Attitude and morale doesn't depend on whether or not you're winning. It depends on whether or not you think you're improving on the field," Holtz said.

"The more we improve the higher we will go," Holtz said.

"The attitude and morale doesn't depend on whether or not you're winning. It depends on whether or not you think you're improving on the field," Holtz said.

Saluki starting left tackle Vince DeBlasio is listed as questionable for Saturday's game at Kentucky, Coach Rick Rhoades said.

DeBlasio suffered a knee injury in practice Monday, and is still bothered by a swollen knee cap.

DeBlasio joins quarterback Fred Gibson, who will also be sidelined Saturday with a knee injury he sustained last week's loss to Northern Illinois.

Rhoades said the Salukis will look starting right end Travis Smith for the remainder of the season. Smith nicked a bone in a knee joint.

"I really haven't had that much trouble with (knee injuries) before," Rhoades said. "Sometimes things run in cycles."

Rhoades said although it is the point of no way to take extra precautions to prevent further injuries.

Thursday afternoon five freshmen made their first appearance for the Salukis.

"We tell them to go hard all the time and keep their feet moving. I don't know how you tell a guy to watch his knees," Rhoades said.

Quarterback Vinny Gutteridge also saw his first action mark for Saturday, as he has sustained a broken finger.

While none of those 50,000 people will be out on the field, it is something we really don't have control over.

First-time for everything

Not only is Saturday's meeting between the Salukis and the Wildcats the first for each school, but the game will be the first time Kentucky has ever faced the Salukis and the first time the Salukis have played an opponent under 100 yards in the air. Kentucky also held Georgia to 175 yards rushing.

Addition planned for Wrigley Field

By United Press International

The Chicago Cubs plan to make $14 million in improvements to Wrigley Field, including the addition of 66 private boxes, team offices and suites.

Primary elements of the project are the 66 private mezzanine-level boxes, construction of an enlarged press box in the upper deck, addition of upper deck concession stands and additional seating for approximately 600 people.

"We are delighted to be able to provide additional amenities for our fans, while also improving the appearance of Wrigley Field," said Don Groesko, Cubs executive vice president and business operations.

"As with the lights project, a great deal of attention was paid to ensure that these improvements do not detract from the unique character of Wrigley Field and the value it adds to the Cubs," Groesko said.

The new boxes are located in the left field corner and will have a view of the scoreboard and the center field light tower.

They will be approximately 18 feet wide and 12 feet deep, with a maximum of three people per box.

The Chicago Tribune reports the boxes will be priced at $120,000 to $140,000.

The new boxes will be completed in time for the 1988 season.

Oakland's LaRussa named top AL manager this season

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tony LaRussa, who led the Oakland Athletics to a major-league best 104 victories in the regular season, was named American League Manager of the Year.

LaRussa received 103 points to easily oust Chicago's Joe Morgan, who finished second with 89. LaRussa joined Sparky Anderson as the only two-time winner of the award.

He is the first AL manager to win the honor since 1983.
