Alleged agreement brings new dispute

By Donna DeBeaumont

The Black American Studies Association and University administrators say an English professor has agreed to study BAS programs at other universities, although he said he has not agreed to retraction.

Gary Smith, an English professor involved in the BAS issue, said that he has not agreed to retraction from President John C. Guyon and that he doesn't want to become "embroiled in a campus mess."

But Guyon and Seymour Bryce, dean of the College of Human Resources, say Smith's defense of his position on BAS programs at other universities is "ill-conceived."

"I thought that he had agreed to do the assignment, Guyon said.

Smith said he never has discussed an assignment with Guyon. He said he has received a "memo of understanding" signed by Bryce, not Guyon, that says Smith will travel to other universities to study their programs and possibly make recommendations on what should be done with the BAS program at the University, he said.

"(It an agreement) has yet to take flight," Smith said. "It is an offer of understanding of what might be if it gets off the ground."

Bryson said the "memo of understanding would suggest that some agreement has been made. But did we sign a contract? No."

Smith said he and Bryce have not discussed a salary for his research or signed a contract. A commitment to be formed for the project and schools that will be studied need to be identified still, he added.

Bryson's agreement with Bryce is not binding, Smith said.

Bryson said he and Smith are working out the details of the assignment, including the conditions and funding for the assignment, and are identifying at least six schools to which Smith will travel.

"Temple (University) may or may not be included," Bryce said. Temple offers bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in English.

Smith will write a position paper in five to six weeks. He is considering the assignment's ability to make overtures to universities, he said.

The trade bill:

- Requires the president to retaliate against foreign trade abuses but allows him to choose among a list of retaliation, such as tariffs or quotas, or avoid it, in light of the definition of unfair trade practices that can trigger retaliation.
- Transfers authority from the president to the U.S. trade representative to decide whether a foreign practice is unfair. It would also authorize the trade representative's office as the lead U.S. policy office to stop the disadvantages that retaliation has provided for foreign concerns.
- Requires companies that employ 100 or more people to give employees 90 days notice before closing a plant or ordering massive layoffs. Firms that fail to give sufficient notice would be subject to fines and be required to pay back at least 30 percent of the direct pay for each day short of the 90-day notice period.
- Enhances government programs to assist workers displaced in industries to adapt to competition and expands the Trade Adjustment Assistance program for workers who lose their jobs because of competition, enabling them to government-financed training. It would authorize $900 million for the Worker Retraining Assistance Program to provide comprehensive assistance to displaced workers.

Senator Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who steered the massive piece of legislation through the Senate over more than three years, said he felt the administration's criticism of the bill was "an effort to ... make it appear that the president and avoid the perception that House has lost his power."

"There are still several months left in this administration," Bentsen said. "We ought to support the president."

Student rejects 'disabled' title

By Phyllis Coon

Lori R. Lee is a graduate student in political science, which puts her in a category that makes her proud.

Of all the categories she's placed in, there is one that she says makes her "mad as hell."

Lee suffered brain trauma eight years ago in a car accident and since the day after the accident has been called disabled.

"I never thought about the label until I went after my master's degree," Lee said. "Everyone's telling me I'm disabled. I'm supposed to write the word down and use it in any argument I make."

But Lee said it is not an advantage because people do not see physical disabilities as just physical but also as mental disorders.

"I may have a physical disability, but not a mental one," Lee said. "I know what I want out of this world, but the world is not giving me the chance to achieve myself. I'm still the same person I was before the accident, but other people don't see that when they look at me."

Categories of people are a way to get hard facts on people, John Rucker, deputy director of fiscal affairs for the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said.

The Senate adopt the landmark trade reform bill Wednesday designed to restore the United States as leader in world commerce and stem the measure by a majority vote, although the Senate did not have enough strength to override presidential veto.

"I thought it was a bill that would allow a bill to get through," Bentsen said. "It has passed the House and it has passed the Senate."

Bentsen said he would not support legislation that will allow a bill to become law over a presidential veto.

The bill is designed to reverse the nation's huge trade deficit, which hit a record $71 billion last year, by opening global markets to U.S. products, cracking down on foreign trade abuses and helping companies and workers adjust to foreign competition.

The House approved an identical bill 312-107 last week, well above the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto. But it requires a two-thirds majority in both chambers to allow a bill to become law over a presidential veto.

Reagan has focused his attention — and his wrath — on one provision: early notification for employees of plant closings and layoffs. The president and the business community argue it is an unnecessary government intrusion and would jeopardize private business, which would be bound to follow the notice word got out they were closing or scaling back.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who steered the massive piece of legislation through the Senate over more than three years, said he felt the administration's criticism of the bill was "an effort to ... make it appear that the president and avoid the perception that House has lost his power."

"There are still several months left in this administration," Bentsen said. "We ought to support the president."

Accused kidnapper testifies

Accused kidnapper Harry Russell testified Wednesday that he intended no harm to Feirich and resentment under citizen's arrest in 1983 for misappropriation of funds.

Russell is charged with murder and kidnapping, including kidnapping, aggravated battery and armed armed and armed.

Russell challenged Feirich's earlier testimony, saying he did not use a gun to place Feirich under citizen's arrest and that he never entered Feirich's home. He said he handcuffed Petrich's arms behind his back, taped his legs together and placed him face down on a table. an Oldsmobile Cutlass.

In Tuesday's proceedings, Feirich testified that Russell abducted him at gunpoint in the garage of his home at El Seneca Drive in Carbondale, telling him to "get on the ground or I'll blow your goddamn head off."

Feirich was taken to Daley Center Plaza in Carbondale, where he was placed in a metal cell and kept in the trunk of the Cutlass at

No group took responsibility for the incident. West German police formed a special commission to investigate the attack in cooperation with U.S. military authorities and the West German railway.

Philippine Senate expected to OK nuclear ban
MANILA, Philippines (UPI) - Senate President Jovito Salonga said Wednesday he expects approval of a proposed nuclear weapons ban on the future of strategic U.S. military bases in the Philippines. ‘Nightline’ special in Israel has tight security
JERUSALEM (UPI) - American television officials imposed tight security that included home searches to prevent a broadcast Wednesday of a live broadcast of ABC’s “Nightline” in a theater filled with Israeli Jews and Palestinian living under Israeli occupation. School Board head suggests drug guidelines
WASHINGTON (UPI) - Citing drug and alcohol abuse as a major obstacle to education, the new National School Boards Association president called Wednesday for drug abuse prevention programs for kindergarten through high school. National President Leonard Horvitz said substance abuse is one of the major problems facing young people, and he said a national program covering the schools and under the direction of state and local boards of education to prevent drug abuse is necessary.

AIDS vaccine appears to work for scientist
WASHINGTON (UPI) - A French scientist who injected himself with an experimental AIDS vaccine 17 months ago may be protected against the virus, but so far the proof comes only from laboratory blood tests, a scientist said Tuesday. The scientist, a director of the National Cancer Institute, said French researcher Daniel Zagury "really looks like he's immune-ready" to successfully resist infection from the AIDS virus.

Group protests coal mining under Route 149

By Richard Goldstein

Plans to mine coal under Route 149 near West Frankfort will cause the highway to sink, members of a public interest group said Tuesday.

Standing in front of a four-foot wide crack caused by longwall mining, members of the Citizens' Coal Enforcement Group said the state isn't prepared for the damage the mining would cause.

Within the next two weeks, IDOT (Illinois Department of Transportation) needs to come up with a plan for how to respond to major damage, that includes an alternate route," group member Ruth Foote said.

Conventional mining leaves pillars of coal in regular intervals to support the ground above. In longwall mining, these pillars are mined, which results in subsidence of the surface.

Route 149 is two miles east of West Frankfort. Karl Bartelsmeyer, IDOT land acquisition chief, said "There's no doubt there's going to be damage to the road, but we'll know exactly when it's going down. We have the resources and expertise to handle it."

Bartelsmeyer said his department's main interest is the safety of motorists. But he sees no reason to prepare an alternate route. "I don't know that they (the Citizen's Coal Enforcement Group) know more about highways than we do."

The Old Ben Coal Company of Benton will mine the coal under the highway. According to the agreement between the state and Old Ben the company (Old Ben) will compensate the state for the repair of subsidence damage to this portion of Route 149.

Group members point to the crack in Gary Wade's land and ask if the state will be able to fix the damage after it is done. The coal company has filled in the crack four times, Wade said.

Jim Minton, Old Ben's subsidence expert, said that because the crack is on a hill, it is much harder to repair.
Prisoners should be given condoms

PRISON OFFICIALS ARE ignoring a basic responsibility to society and to prisoners by refusing to provide prisoners with condoms.

Corrective services officials claim they don't want to give prisoners condoms because it might encourage sexual activity among prisoners. But prisoners obviously are sex-driven, otherwise they would not have asked for condoms.

And, by ignoring this fact, prison officials are doing nothing but increasing the chances that AIDS will become widespread in Illinois prisons, where nine cases of AIDS have been reported. Considering the risk to correctional employees and the fact that virtually all prison officers are male, prison officials must make condom availability the first step in a comprehensive program to alleviate sexual problems and violence in prisons.

THE NEXT STEP after giving condoms to prisoners is to begin eliminating the conditions that make rape so common in prisons — namely, sexual frustration and an atmosphere of violence.

Prison officials should establish a program to allow prisoners private visits from their wives — perhaps姑娘es — during which sexual activities would be allowed. This would go a long way toward relieving much of the sexual frustration prisoners experience and also serve to create a more humane setting in prisons.

Limiting the privilege of private visits to prisoners with records of good behavior also would be a powerful incentive for them to lead out of trouble.

Any action to make life in prison a bit more humane would help eliminate the general feeling of tension and violence. In many cases, rape is not an act of sexual gratification, but rather one of violence and domination.

This type of behavior flourishes in environments in which people are forced to live in sub-human conditions.

IN ADDITION, an effort should be made to separate violent prisoners from non-violent prisoners. If both types of prisoners are forced to live together, the pervasive violence created by the troublesome prisoners could cause the non-violent prisoners to become violent.

But, by separating prisoners with no history of violence, the process of rehabilitation could be carried out more effectively.

As it now stands, America's prisons do not fulfill their function of rehabilitating prisoners so that they are ready to rejoin society at the end of their sentences. When prisoners are released, they very often are more prone to violence than before they entered prison.

This is shown by the extremely high rate of repeat offenders. The basic problem is that violence in prisons has gotten out of control. And the only solution for that is to make prisoners more humane.

Unfortunately, prisoners have been moving in exactly the opposite direction of late, but changes such as providing condoms to prisoners and allowing them to have sexual intercourse with their wives and girlfriends would be a good way to begin reversing this trend.

Hart may be a boon to University, but West deserves AD position

Since Jim Hart announced his candidacy for SIU-C's open athletic directorship, I've watched in dismay as both local newspapers jumped on the Hart bandwagon. But now I think it's time for some reality.

In last Friday's issue of the Daily Egyptian, Troy Taylor heaped the accolades on Hart. Hart, complete with his "white cape," was envisioned as "saving the drowning SIU-C athletics department." He was described as the consummate loyal Saluki — Hart heard the "cry for help" and came back to "save the day." I'd like to picture Jim Hart as a man with the ability to do all of those things. I'd like to, but can't. Reality sinks in, and the picture of Hart, in a white cape and on a white horse, fades back into the dreamland where it should belong.

Look at past experience. Did Gayle Sayers, a much bigger media star than Hart, save SIU-C's athletics department, or was he held back by such a mess that it took years to straighten things out? Did he increase contributions? Did he increase media exposure? And what do we know, from a recent past experience with another man named Jim (Livingood), about people who go out of their way to tell us how loyal they are?

The reality of the situation is that a few good ole' boys op­posed to West's candidacy for the athletics directorship brainstormed the Hart-for-AD campaign as a desperate, last­ resort attempt to keep West from a job she so richly deserves.

Some who have watched the workings of the SIU-C athletics department over the past few years know well what is going on. These people know that hiring a football coach is not the most taxing job for an athletic director. They know there is no way to raise the money for obtaining contributions for a school deep in the heart of one of the nation's most economically depressed areas. And they know that West's outstanding reputation goes far beyond the Midwest.

The most equitable and obvious solution was offered in Tuesday's editorial. The good ole' boys want a back-slap­ping fund raiser. Everyone else wants a qualified, competent administrator. Why not have the best of both worlds and hire both West and Hart, like the editorial suggested? Hire West for the position she is qualified for, then hire Hart as a fund­ raiser.

Don't expect the search committee to live up to its promise of having a new director hired by May 13. Past experience also tells us that the SIU-C administration will wait until break to announce any controversial decisions. And let's not forget the man who'll be making the final decision, President John Guyon. The final word will be his.

If he is truly interested in hiring the most qualified candidate to lead SIU-C's athletics department, all he has to do is pick Charlene West. —Steve Merritt, senior, journalism.

'Sunglasses' comic strip lacks humor, taste:

give DE readers cartoon we can laugh at

I enjoy leafing through the pages of the Daily Egyptian, reading some articles and looking at the ads — until I come across "Sunglasses." I almost get angry at this lame and pessimistic "comic" strip. "Sunglasses" has never did its welcome in the pages of our award-winning newspaper. We have hundreds of other students who are crying out for a funny comic strip. It's about time the DE found some real humor from our student body.

In Jed Prest the only SIU-C student "talented" enough to draw squiggly lines and add words in a balloon over its head. We hope not! It's a terrible attempt at political humor pale in comparison to the other strips featured in the DE. Who needs another political cartoon? No one cares if Prest doesn't agree with how financial aid funds are being distributed.

If we can't find a student on campus to write a strip that is even semi-amusing, then let's get a syndicated one, such as "The Far Side" or "Calvin & Hobbes." I don't think something that will make us laugh, or even smile. —Jesse Lyall, junior, journalism and Lewis Whitten, junior, radio & television.

IT'S A ROUGH LIFE

by Stephen Cox

Society, according to the Merriam-Webster dictionary, is an interconnected system of organizations.

There is only one thing missing from this all-encompassing definition. What does it mean to succeed (or, more importantly, accomplish) to a group of individuals that constitute society?

The society referred to in this context is that which develops in a college environment, but the same basic principle can be applied to society in general. A major determining factor for admission to either group appears to be an individual's athletic inclination. Being interested in sports is an absolute necessity if one entertains the slightest notion of going to a "good" school.

By the term "good school," I am referring to schools that offer me major, political science with a concentration in the area of public policy. Of course, this schools also are ones seen by society as major competitors for some coveted sports awards.

For this reason, the schools recruit people who can help them attain some national title or other. These athletes are not very interested in education. In fact, a number of them use the school name as a take-off point for a professional sports career.

I believe that recent school officials, as well as employers, realize that there exists a large enough reserve of people who are willing to learn and work, but who don't have the required athletic ability to guarantee their admission, at least, of course, referring to those who have a physical disability. For some strange reason, "normal" people are convinced that a physical disability necessarily signifies diminished mental capacity.

The intent of this letter is to expose the falsity of that notion.

I have a bachelor's degree in political science with a concentration in law judicial process and am pursuing my master's degree in the same field. In other words, I would be a useless, jobless, handicapped - the opportunist who would fail on their own merits. - Loni R. Lee, Carbondale

TBN is a respectable operation

I hate to write letters to the editor. I am also not keen to stay silent when I see careless writing in an editorial as such. I was reading Darren Richardson regarding theTreatment of Paul and Jan

From reading his editorial, it seems Mr. Richardson did not do more than a few minutes "research" before forming his conclusions. I have watched TBN extensively since I was unaware an immense amount of respect for the entire operation and for Paul and Jan Crouch.

To begin with, Mr. Richardson stated Paul and Jan as wealthy. How was that conclusion made by me? They live in a modest home that they have lived in for about 15 years - was it ever better?

Paul is a salary for serving as president of the network. I believe the figure is about $22,500. Is it thought Paul and Jan should receive an amount like this for the service they have given?

The last letter that was written about TBN was from a said like an excessive amount for the services they render and the value of TBN? There are kids straight out of college making nearly that in entry-level positions. Paul and Jan didn't have to begin with the mega-million paid to Lee Iacocca in 1987.

In reference to Paul Crouch's retirement in such places as Phoenix, Miami and places, Mr. Richardson would do well to familiarize himself with the locations of the TBN television stations. I'm sure he will find that those places are on the list.

Additionally, why does Mr. Richardson feel it is so audacious for Mr. Crouch to expect to retire one day in one place? Mr. Crouch has earned his retirement as well as the next person.

I find it appalling that people like Mr. Richardson choose what scriptures they will from the Bible because it suits them to apply it to the situation at hand. I wonder if Mr. Richardson is aware of the commission about preaching the Good News to the world? Is he also aware of the other ministries that TBN has - like missions to Mexico and other countries, or feeding the hungry, housing the homeless, and clothing the poor right here in the U.S.?

Had Mr. Richardson decided to thoroughly investigate this particular journalistic writer, he might also have asked these questions: The official records are available for anyone to review. A record of his or her audit could find no faults or questionable practices at TBN. The auditor even commented about how tightly the "ship" was run.

It is obvious that Mr. Richardson has been duped as have have many others. Yes, there are some people some pretty nasty things come out in the world of television in the past few months. What happened in these few instances have been generalized to include anyone involved in television ministry. It's time that those who have been duped these generalizations realize they have thrown the baby out with the bathwater. --Ired Reed, Coaling Education

While I have agreed with your main point, I feel your conclusions of Greek failure and hidden cost are unfounded. You had any connection with the Greek system, (outside seeing the movie "Animal House") know that Greeks do a lot to see that their members succeed academically.

Greek organizations have such learning aide as test files, in-house tutoring by upperclassmen, and study hours for pledges and more.

"Everyone wants to improve the areas they are lacking in serving disabled people," Huther said. "But we do have the three distinct categories of minority, which is racial and ethnic, female and disabled. There are written laws that identify people as being handicapped," Huther said.

"We were informed by the Department of Rehabilitation Services that when referring to handicapped people, that disabled was the preferred term," Huther said.

"Right now our systematic way of collecting information on disabled people is asking the universities how many disabled people are enrolled," Huther said. "But what we are finding is that people don't perceive themselves as disabled."

Students want BAS director

A member of the Black American Society wanted the BASA director for the BAS program to be selected by the organization, not by the administration. Stephanie Collins, a member of the BASA, said be was the preferred director position.

"We are not going to wait until the BASA members would be applied for the director position," Collins said.

GUYON TOLD BASA MEMBERS they would be considered for the director position.

"I believe the only reason I got the internship was because of my disability and not because of my writing ability," Lee said. "I was upset because I was placed in the mail room. Out of the five of us interns in the mail room three of us were physically damaged."

There are many support services offered to disabled people, but Lee said the only one she uses is the transit system.

"But I'm trying to get out of that label," Lee said. "I walk everywhere now.

Lee started using the service last year after she broke her ankle. Other people may need to use the support services, but Lee said she is taking her own path.

"One of my professors told me I should go to the rehabilitation department and see what jobs they had to offer me," Lee said.

paper on how many personnel are needed for a BAS program, goals of the program, structure of the program and where the program should be located, Bryan said.

Smith and Bryson then will present the proposal to a task force of faculty, staff and students, Bryson said. The task force will be a "group of people interested in developing a strong and viable BAS program, who are committed to an orderly process," he said.

Smith said the administration is "trying to get a fireman in an asbestos suit to put out the fire. I'm not the person. We are not going to have professor Smith riding into Carbondale on a horse and cleaning up the program."

"It (Smith's work) will not replace the rhetoric," Smith said. "It (the rhetoric) needs to be addressed before anything is put in place."

Meetings between Luke Tripp, coordinator of BAS, and Guyon could save some of the rhetoric, Smith said.

"Tripp, a member of the BASA, said he was "futile" to Guyon. Huther said that BASA members would be in Carbondale this summer to be involved in the program.

"No, the students want a director hired from outside the University because "No one here, to my knowledge, is capable of being the director of BAS."

But BASA member Bryan Mullings said he hopes Luke Tripp, BAS coordinator, will be considered for the director position.

"Tripp said that he would apply for director of the BAS program if the position is created."
WASHINGTON (UP) — Ignoring Republican pleas to avoid an arms control treaty before the Moscow summit, the House approved Democrat-backed moves Wednesday on two key treaties, the Strategic Defense Initiative and the Scott 1 missile treaty, and the unratified SALT II accord.

The actions, the first steps in two weeks of work on treaties, are expected to be decided largely along party lines.

The House voted 240-174 to limit President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense research program to experiments that would be interpretations of the Anti-ballistic Missile treaty.

And on a 240-174 vote, members said Reagan must abide by weapons launch limits in the 1979 SALT I treaty. Both issues passed by nearly identical votes last year.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., the senior Republican on the Foreign Affairs Committee, said the arms initiatives are recycled "political pet rocks" and "one would at least hope the arms controllers would retain their analagous" while Reagan, who already got the INF treaty, seeks more programs.

Talks with the Soviets are under way on strategic arms and space weaponry.

The ABM measure parallels last year's restraints on the "Star Wars" or SDI program, prompted by an administration effort to declare the treaty actually allows a broader range of testing than thought. The amendment limits the administration to a list of 100 tests it submitted, which fall within the "narrow" definition of what the treaty permits.

Washington (UPJ) — Per Lindstrand, the Swedish-born balloonist who already owns records for the farthest, fastest and largest hot-air balloon flights, announced Wednesday that he will set new altitude and stratosphere records.

If all goes according to plan, the "Stratosquest" flight in June, using a 120-story high balloon and secret propane mixture, will place Lindstrand into the stratosphere within an hour of takeoff, allowing him to claim the existing altitude record of 53,134 feet.

Lindstrand said he hopes to reach 60,000 feet.

Lindstrand, 39, now living in Oswestry, England, at the moment broke a world distance record last year by flying a balloon across the Atlantic Ocean. He piloted Richard Branson, and holds world ballooning records for flying the fastest at an average 100 mph and the longest duration at 31 hours, 41 minutes.

"I want to show the world that balloons are not just little toys that go flying across the sky for couple of hours," Lindstrand said, announcing that his takeoff is set for early June about 25 miles north of Laredo, Texas.

"We're doing the basic (balloon) research here that they did with the airplane in the 40's," said Lindstrand. "We want to try things on this level and eventually work (the balloon design) into the everyday balloon."

Ballooning above the 55,000-foot mark has long been considered impossible because of the lack of oxygen in the atmosphere needed for the propane burners, Lindstrand said.

Candidates look toward November

By United Press International

The two parties' front-running presidential candidates, looking beyond the final test of the primary season, concentrated Wednesday on honing the arguments they can aim at each other during the general election campaign.

Tuesday's watershed Pennsylvania primary, which solidified Michael Dukakis' claim to the Democratic nomination and the Massachusetts governor also helped focus on the certain GOP standard-bearer, Vice President George Bush.

Dukakis said he welcomed a chance to debate with Bush and promises the summer showdown will defy predictions of nationwide ennui: "I've never been in a dull, boring contest in my life and I don't expect this one will be either.

"I've never been in a dull, boring contest in my life and I don't expect this one will be either.

Civil right leader Jesse Jackson, now bearing the weight of two massive defeats to Republican Bush last week's New York primary and Pennsylvania's, tried to energize his campaign by asserting, "The hope is alive.

Jackson campaigned Wednesday in Cincinnati. Ohio, Indiana and the Districts of Columbia have the next primaries May 3.

In a speech to the Ohio Association of Broadcasters, Jackson called for a "humorous" attack on Bush for "almost degenerating from reality" by ignoring the bread-and-butter issues important to Buckeye State voters.

Bush addressed the broad theme and denounced on the proposed "Star Wars" missile defense project in a White House press briefing Wednesday. "I cannot imagine the vice president standing here talking about Star Wars, as if that's a priority for Ohio."

"It's talking about Star Wars when our children cannot afford to go to college, when people working at the minimum wage are not keeping up with the cost of living. It's almost degenerating from reality.

Dukakis was going to a fundraiser in southern New Jersey as well, suggesting, I think the vice president would be well advised to stop criticizing others for a while and address the fundamental issues that face the country.

The governor also promised that the Iran-Contra scandal will be a significant issue in the fall because it was one of the worst things that happened to the United States in recent memory."

Reagan makes plans to stump for Bush

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush, the Republican nomination now just a handful of delegates away, had lunch Wednesday with Bush campaign officials who made plans to hit the stump together soon, a White House spokesman said.

Bush, who has campaigned very little in the past seven weeks, was in the capital for his weekly working lunch with President Reagan a day after his 79 percent victory in the Pennsylvania primary.

With the Keystone State results, the United Press International count — which tabulates only elected delegates — puts 1,092 delegates in Bush's column, just 47 short of the 1,339 he needs for nomination at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans Aug. 15 to 18.

This week, Bush campaign officials said victory in Pennsylmania would officially secure the nomination — thanks to 80 unopposed delegates running in New Jersey primary.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Reagan and Bush "divide the politics in general and the vice president's strategy in the main campaign.

They also talked about (appearing together) at a political event soon," which Fitzwater said would be tantamount to a presidential endorsement.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, who was chairman of the Bush campaign in the Land of Lincoln and who has been touted as a possible running mate, met briefly with Bush to discuss politics and "I can guarantee (a running mate for Bush) will not come up."

Dukakis attacks GOP

BOSTON (UPI) — Gov. Michael Dukakis, fresh from a convincing win over Jesse Jackson in the Pennsylvania primary, aimed attacks Wednesday on Republicans on topics ranging from the Iran-Contra scandal to the trade bill.

The Democratic presidential front-runner, the day after his 2 to 1 victory over the civil rights leader in the Keystone State, used a Statehouse news conference to repeat his criticism of President Reagan's vow to veto any trade bill that contains a provision requiring business to give 90 days notice before closing a plant.

He then headed to Springfield, Mass., to meet with companies and workers affected by a 1984 state law that levies sanctions on companies that do not voluntarily provide a shutdown notice.

The trip followed a Reagan visit to Springfield, where he again promised to veto the trade bill should it contain the plant-closing provision.

"This isn't statistics," Dukakis said. "These are people who in many cases have given years and years of their lives to their companies, to the jobs, to their communities, who suddenly find themselves out of work and wondering what's going to happen.

Dukakis promised that the Iran-Contra scandal will be a significant issue in the fall because it was one of the worst things that happened to the United States in recent memory."

Navy finds sailors’ bodies

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The Navy Wednesday found the bodies of three sailors who died when a series of explosions crippled the submarine USS Bonefish during a training mission off the Carolinas coast.

"I think they have done a super job in trying to get the men out," said Maj. Gen. Donald Gromer, commander of the East Coast Command.

Families of the victims got the sad news in personal visits early Wednesday morning.

"We've expected it, but it's still a shock," said Richard Elze, a family friend who answered the phone at the home of Bordelon's mother, Addie Bordelon. "We were still praying, but we're thankful they found his body."

Bordelon, who was to retire soon, had told his family he was concerned about problems with the Bonefish and did not want to sail aboard it.

Bordelon, who was to retire soon, had told his family he was concerned about problems with the Bonefish and did not want to sail aboard it.

The resulting emphasis on savings might be used to find alternate users for the three submarine facilities in California which cost the Air Force about $40 million a year.

Cromer told the 25th Space Wing deputy commander Friday that the explosions crippled the submarine while it was on maneuvers with the Bonefish, that the vessel was wrecked by the explosions.

"So it may be that they simply ensured that everyone got saved, after they didn't make it," Trost said on NBC News.

The last fatal accident involving a U.S. submarine occurred May 21, 1968.
Reagan: Meese is staying

WASHINGTON — A defiant President Reagan rejected a report Wednesday that White House insiders are campaigning to oust the embattled Edwin Meese and declared only if the attorney general "had a complete change in character" would be fired from the Cabinet.

Reagan's all-out defense of Meese, a consistent stand, took place during an Oval Office photo session with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney when he was asked about a report "we did move by some close associates and longtime friends to orchestrate Meese's departure."

The Wall Street Journal reported that former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and seasoned political adviser Stuart Spencer are among those now convinced Meese cannot continue to serve and should leave.

Asked about the report, Reagan said: "I shouldn't answer, but I have to tell you no, I'm not aware and I thought the story was completely inaccurate."

But would he support a secret plan to remove Meese, he said.

And if it could be envisioned any circumstance under which he would fire Meese, Reagan replied, "If he had a complete change in character."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he could not elaborate on Reagan's remark.

Weinberger disputed the Journal report as "all wrong," in a Cable News Network interview Wednesday and insisted, "I did not have any suggestion that Mr. Meese should leave."

"We have a good attorney general," he said, "and that story was just wrong in most of the major particulars."

Clearly the issue was causing jumpy nerves in the White House. Communications Director Tom Griscom called a guard to escort New York Times reporter Stuart Roberts out of his office Wednesday when Roberts asked about the Journal story.

Reagan, Mulroney avoid clashing on acid rain issue

WASHINGTON (UPS) — President Reagan and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney hailed free trade and defense cooperation Wednesday to gloss over the major conflict in U.S.-Canadian relations: irreconcilable differences on acid rain.

Setting a cordial tone for the last in a series of annual summits, Mulroney opened a two-day state visit by noting his public criticisms of U.S. policy and his insistence the United States commit to a plan to reduce acid rain.

“The issue of acid rain remains a challenge for us,” he told Reagan. “This, as you said in Quebec City, Mr. President, is a problem that belongs to both of us. We must continue, and we shall, to work together for an equitable solution to this important challenge.”

In a private Oval Office meeting, a senior administration official said Mulroney again pushed the notion — rejected in the past year by the United States — of a formal accord to reduce air pollution that causes acid rain.

What was not clear, however, was whether Mulroney’s “ideas” were new or in any way represented a retreat from earlier Canadian calls for specific targets and timetables for reducing pollution.

The response from Reagan was described as, “We will look at them.”

The senior official, who said Tuesday there is little chance of an acid rain accord until Reagan leaves office — at least in the form sought by the Canadians — indicated the two leaders remain deadlocked.

Admitting the two governments still lack “a basis to move forward,” the official said scientific disagreements at the heart of the acid rain debate “not only were not bridged; nobody tried to bridge them.”

At a State Department luncheon, Mulroney said, “One area where our expectations have not been achieved has been on the subject of acid rain.” But, he said, “We are working together.”

The lack of a public rebuke from Mulroney on acid rain reflected political realities. With Reagan unlikely to hedge during the short time left in his term, Mulroney is looking to Congress and the next president for a stepped-up U.S. commitment.

The Canadian leader was to speak to Congress Wednesday afternoon. Reagan has consistently objected to carving midwestern industries to take sterner action to prevent the airborne pollution blamed for acid rain, which damages lakes, streams and trees. The provider argues that scientific evidence on the causes and cures of acid rain is not yet clear.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, extended a warm ceremonial welcome to Mulroney and his wife, Mila, to open the visit and "set a cooperative theme.

Prof: Censorship increasing in nation's public schools

By John Mohler

Censorship is increasing in public schools, associate professor of curriculum and instruction Margaret Matthias said at a seminar about freedom of information and media access Tuesday morning at Morris Library.

Matthias said school boards use "the most bland" teaching materials to avoid conflicts with parents and community groups who may find more informative materials objectionable.

Many teachers are using textbooks published in the 1960s or the 1940s because they present concepts in a more interesting and effective way than their 1980s counterparts, Matthias said.

She said a balance must be found between freedom of access to information in the classroom and parents' "rights to dissent" to protect their children from objectionable materials.

Matthias said objections don't come only from religious groups. She used as an example the recent case of a Carbondale substitute teacher Curtis Caldwell, who was threatened with a lawsuit by a media access Tuesday freedom McCarthy group.

"The morning and afternoon sessions were informative materials. We're not publishing and parents think they are publishing," Matthias said.

Matthias said he is a second-generation journalist, because he detailed the Chinese and Soviet press systems and cultures.

The MORNING forum featured Matthias and keynote speaker Ralph C. McCoy, emeritus dean of the Free Press University, professor of journalism and communications.

"I want you to understand," Matthias said. "I want you to understand, sir, that we are about to enter into a door of freedom.

Iran rebukes Saudi Arabia for breaking ties

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — A senior official in a Saudi Arabian office in Kuwait and Iran delivered an angry rebuke to the Saudi government Wednesday, one day after Riyadh formally severed diplomatic relations with Iran.

The home-made bomb exploded in the Saudi offices in downtown Kuwait city, slightly injuring a building employee, damaging the office and shattering windows in surrounding structures, police said. State-run Kuwait News Agency said.

The bomb was placed on a sidewalk outside the office when the office was closed for evening prayers. No one immediately claimed responsibility.

The attack came a day after Saudi Arabia severed diplomatic relations with Iran, citing "deliberate attacks against Saudi Arabia's basic interests." Iranian gunboats had attacked a Saudi oil tanker in the Persian Gulf two days before the diplomatic break.

Gulf diplomats said Kuwait and Bahrain, two other moderate Arab nations with deep concerns about Iranian militancy, were likely to follow Saudi Arabia's leadership in breaking off ties with Tehran.

A Saudi memorandum handed to Iran's charge d'affaires in Riyadh Tuesday accused Iran of violating "the principles of good neighborliness and mutual respect" and threatening merchant ships entering and leaving Saudi ports "with acts of terrorism and sabotage."

Diplomats said the Saudi move also was a clear message to Washington that its recent purchase of ballistic missiles from China was to thwart any aggression "from Iran and not to threaten Israel."

Iran responded to the Saudi action by issuing an angry criticism of the Saudi government Wednesday, with foreign Foreign Ministry spokesman Morteza Samadi claiming Riyadh was "toeing the U.S. foreign policy (line)" by breaking relations.

"Snapping of ties with Islamic Iran is proof of Saudi subservience to the U.S."

U.S. escorts ships through Gulf waters

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — American warships escorted the 26th tanker convoy this week through choppy waters of the Persian Gulf Wednesday.

The convoy steamed north toward Kuwait a day after bad weather forced it to turn back.

Gulf-based U.S. officials said the U.S. convoy included the guided missile destroyer Joseph Strauss and the guided missile frigate Whidbey Island.

The sources said an unidentified British-flagged tanker was sailing with the convoy, which passed through the Strait of Hormuz into the Persian Gulf before dawn Wednesday.

The escort began just over a week after U.S. forces destroyed two Iranian oil platforms in the gulf is retaliation for an attack that almost sank the American frigate USS Samuel B. Roberts.

The mine ripped open the hull of the vessel, injuring 16 sailors.

The U.S. retaliation led to a daylight clash between U.S. and Iranian forces.

Iranian speedboats damaged six Iranian ships.

The United States suspended the escort operations until it could be sure there were no more mines in the gulf shipping lanes. As the escort operation began, there were no Iranian activity.

Iranian speedboats usually patrol the strategic Strait of Hormuz.

By Richard Hunaz

Fuse Box, a local band scheduled to perform at 2 p.m. in the free-forum area during Springfest, will compete with the mainstage attraction Kanika Kress and the Blues Express for audience attention.

Fuse Box, consisting of guitarists Mark Jarzemsky and Todd Hartman, drummer Ralphy Wood, bassist Steve Marquis and singer Greg Kosner, is being advertised by the Student Programming Council, the sponsors of Springfest, as an alternative music band.

"For the lack of a better term, alternative is probably the best description," Jarzemsky said.

‘Beetlejuice’ has laughter but not enough of Keaton

By Richard Hume
Entertainment Editor

Anyone expecting "Beetlejuice" to be a tour de force for Michael Keaton could be sadly disappointed.

Keaton delivers a great comedic performance, but his screen presence only accounts for about one-third of the movie’s running time. His performance is so brilliant that it is strange the film makers decided not to capitalize on it.

Film Review

The producers did capitalize on Keaton’s performance for advertisements and movie previews. But his role is not as large as it was made out to be.

The movie is about two young newlyweds (Geena Davis and Alec Baldwin) who are特殊的 house in their home in a small New England village. The two drive into town and on the way home they swear to avoid a dog, dress up a bridge and drown.

When they return home, they realize they have moved into a house that must live in their house. A few months after their death, a New York family moves into the house and immediately begins redesigning the couple’s beloved home.

Upset by what is happening to their house, the couple decide to scavenge the family away, but fails miserably. They seek help from their afterlife counselor. Their counselor is unable to help them and they eventually enlist the help of Beetlejuice, a ghost who specializes in exorcism of the living.

The movie’s special effects are stunning and often humorous. The afterlife is the movie is highly surreal, reminiscent of early Pritz Lang “Dr. Caligari” movies.

At times, though, the special effects burden the movie and Keaton’s performance. The movie would have benefited greatly by concentrating more on Keaton’s characterization of Beetlejuice, which is hilarious, though briefly touched upon.

Most of the movie is spent on the couple and the intruding family, who are unoriginal and uninteresting characters. The father is a shallow and greedy New York land developer, the mother is an addled, self-involved sculptor and the daughter is a death-obsessed teenager. These characters obviously are meant to spice up the movie, but they serve only to irritate the viewer when more than half of the movie is spent on their antics.

Though the movie does not fail in all aspects, viewers probably will see less of Keaton in "Beetlejuice" than they may have expected.

Horror films let young express gender roles

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — People who enjoy a horror movie are influenced greatly by the presence of a person of the opposite sex and his or her reaction to the film, a University of Kentucky researcher said Wednesday.

"We found that when horror display mastery the girls enjoy the film more, and when girls express distress the guys enjoy the film more," James Weaver, a telecommunications professor, said. "Also, girls display mastery, girls substantially elevate the physical appeal and aggressive characters toward young men."

Weaver, who has conducted two joint research studies on horror films with professors from Indiana University and the University of Rhode Island, said he would present two papers on the subject to the International Communication Association in late May.

He said horror films give young people a chance to express their sex roles and gender role consistent behaviors.

"At a horror film, guys can be 'macho' and display mastery in response to the film and girls can show distress," he said. "These two combined lead to the ultimate enjoyment of the film."

Weaver said he became interested in horror films in college when he was working as a movie theater in Blooming contributes.

In the basement, at the peak of its popularity, was "Footloose," he said.

Puzzle answers

Dear Supporters:

The "Students Help Mothers March" for the March of Dimes 1988 Campaign is now conducted. We are elated to report that we exceeded our $6,000 goal by collecting $10,500. Many people contributed to the success of our campaign this year with gifts coming from businesses, the Mothers March throughout the Cambodale community, a challenge by Housing residents, and acceptance of the challenge by Registered Student Organizations and University staff members. What a thrill it has been to watch the hours of time given by such a diverse group of people for what is undoubtedly one of the more important health issues on this planet.

I feel privileged to have been a part of this activity and am so pleased that we are currently receiving two grants back to our University from March of Dimes.

My purpose in this letter, however, is to thank you. Your contributions and support of this campaign have, of course, been the "right thing" to which our success must be credited. Your generosity of money and time are to be admired and appreciated by the community as a whole. Once again thank you for your precious generosity to our campaign.

Sincerely,

Libby Pettit,
Chairperson

have an understanding that he's going to do the best he can," said West.

However, men's basketball got a big shot in the arm. Its budget went from $160,000 to $180,000.

"Men's basketball has the potential to give athletics some very significant money," West said. Getting in one round of NCAA basketball could bring the school about $200,000.

The swimming budgets have been combined in one account in the men's athletics. The teams get to share $30,000.

West said she did the budget as she used to do grades when she was teaching. "I'd come back with a different frame of mind, three or four times," as she used to do grades when she returned to her office.

"I'm confident with it," she said.

She also said the men's athletics self-generated revenue jumped from $7,000 to $9,000 in the spring. West said this expected increase in revenue stems from licensing, in which the department gets royalty on merchandise sold that has the athletics logo, and through radio network programs.

In addition, West increased the expectations in revenue for sponsorships. "I think we can do more," she said.

"I've been pleased with the singles," Auld said. "Dana (Cherebaut) has the most outstanding record (13-6). She's just had a really good spring." Auld said that senior Ellen Moeller is performing well at the No. 1 position.

"Ellen has done a really nice job for us this spring. She played well in the fall," too, Auld said. "The No. 1 spot is always the pressure spot, with the media and the fans. No matter who your opponent, they're always tough. Ellen has done a good job for us there.

Salukis lead Gateway honor roll

Lori Rea, a senior swimmer, was one of eight athletes named a Gateway Conference's Academic Excellence Award winner for maintaining a 3.8 cumulative grade point average during her college career.

Rea, a public relations major, will graduate this semester.

Another 13 SIU-C athletes were among 94 named Presidents' All-Academic Award Winners by the conference for having a 3.5 gpa.

By sport, football, swimming, and volleyball each had three at SIU-C. Freshmen are not eligible for the award.

SIU-C led the conference with 63 Academic Honor Roll selections. An athlete must achieve at least a 3.2 cumulative grade point average for their sport and major, will graduate during their senior year.

Saluki pitcher Chris Bend held the Cougars scoreless for the next three innings. Dale Meyer gave up two runs in the final three innings.

The third-place Salukis play next weekend at Wichita State, which is tied for the Valley lead.

"We've also added a more hard-nose defense," he said. "Last year we ran a finesse defense, but we've added an outside linebacker now. Coach (Jim) Thompson has shown us the importance of how to play both ways."

Saluki defensive end Dan Reid said the team should have great success with the wishbone.

"Everyone is just excited about the wishbone," Reid said. "Not many teams run it but we have the personnel to do it right."

Students’ touch produces ‘unique’ Springfest events

By Phyllis Coon
and Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writers

Springfest is unique because it is organized and run completely by students, the special events chairperson for the Student Programming Council, said.

"The administration is involved, but only in an advisory role," Sean Craig, senior in radio and television and advertising, said. "I would estimate more than 200 students help with the planning and then with the actual celebration," he added.

Sean Craig, SPC special events chairperson, said he found that the emphasis the SPC is placing on safety promotion made it hard to find an outside sponsor for the event.

Springfest has 25 committees that branch out into separate sub-committees, which coordinate all of the festival events, Craig said.

An estimated 30 Registered Student Organizations will have booths this year, Craig said, adding that RSOs have a big influence on the festival. "The more organizations that have booths, the less people sit around drinking," he said. "Our emphasis is on a good time through activity, but not standing around drinking," Craig added. "We want people to enjoy themselves, but it's not a party. It's a programmed event."

Fraternities and sororities also make up a large number of booths, he said. "Springfest gives them a chance to show off their letters and faces, a number of them want to show they are involved with the community."

After an organization pays the $10 registration fee, it can keep all profits made at the booths, Craig said.

The Student Programming Council is the sole sponsor of Springfest, which has a budget of $17,907.47.

Springfest is not attracting those larger corporations. We are promoting safety — don't drink and drive."

The five-member promotion committee has been promoting Springfest safety since the end of February, Dana Miller, committee chairperson, said. The promotion committee is running safety ads in the Daily Egyptian, Miller said, as well as using press releases and spots on WILS radio to get the message out.

SIU-C's Health Service, University Housing and the Office of Student Affairs contributed money for the safety program.

Local merchants also contributed to Springfest by buying space on a banner that will be displayed at the Old Main Mall. "This gives local merchants a chance to advertise but more importantly, gives SPC more programming money."

Booths offer many games for those who want to play

"Two tries for 25 cents!" On April 29, voices will be yelling out this phrase and others from several game booths, creating a carnival-like atmosphere and marking the beginning of Springfest 1988.

"All the booths are basically carnival-type booths, following our Student Programming Council's theme, 'Clown 'n Around,'" said Sean Craig, special events chairman for SPC, said.

Registered Student Organizations will sponsor about 20 booths. Each will have a small participation fee and prizes for winners, Dana Miller, SPC's special events chairperson, said.

Miller said that balloon shaving, bell ringing, ring tosses and basketball shots will be among the activities featured at the RSO-sponsored booths.

"The RSOs invent their own game and decide how they are going to do it," Craig said. "We just make sure there are no conflicts — that no one is doing the same thing — and that there are no prizes that are alcohol or tobacco related."

Prizes will include food, movie and gas coupons, he said.

A big attraction will be the Battle for the Books between the undergraduate and graduate students, Miller said. The groups will be competing to raise the most money for Storrs Library's Two for Two fund raiser.

The USO is selling $1 tickets to people who want to guess how many books and periodicals were loaned to other libraries through the Interlibrary Loan System in March. The winner will receive a trip to Cancun, Mexico. The USO is selling $1 tickets for a trip to Hawaii for the person who guesses the number of people who used the library in March.

Novelty booths, which aren't RSO sponsored, also will be set up, Craig said.

"We contracted some outside people to come up with the idea," he said. Novelty booths will include character artists, button salespeople and balloon sculptors, he said.

All the booths will be located at Old Main Mall.

"The location this year is more centralized," Craig said. "Last year they were more spread out. This time they will all be grouped together. Students will be able to play, play, play — kind of like an arcade."
Mainstage to feature music of Nicholas Tremulis Band

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Nicholas Tremulis and his 11-piece band will play a combination of jazz, soul, funk, salsa and the blues from early evening until sunset, as the feature act on the mainstage during Springfest.

"Tremulis, scheduled to perform at about 5:30 p.m., is a native of Chicago and grew up listening to a variety of music. At home, his parents played records of Billie Holiday, Charlie Parker, James Brown and Aretha Franklin, while on the streets he heard Chicago blues and burgeoning rock 'n' roll artists like the Rolling Stones."

Tremulis began playing with soul and salsa musicians on Chicago's south side during his teens. Soon he added rock, punk, jazz and Latin Music to his repertoire.

His music has been described variously as Funk Pop, Mutant Bop, and salsa and the blues from Africa. His mainstage performance will feature music from Chicago and burgeoning rock 'n' roll artists like the Rolling Stones.

Aikens considers his work in Jamaica to be the experience of a lifetime, and it influenced him to have a new faith in reggae and Rastafarian music.

The Illinois Entertainer described the group's performance as extremely hard, with some of the most engaging musical arrangements in local reggae.

"I grew up listening to Nat King Cole, Bob Marley, Jimmy Cliff, James Brown, the Temptations, the Spinners — groups like that," Aikens said.

Blues singer, Kanika Kress will be a featured performer at Springfest.

SPC promotes alcohol awareness in bar, song

By Amy Gautz
Staff Writer

Alcohol awareness is one of the major goals the Student Programming Council is trying to accomplish through its "responsible programming" during this year’s Springfest.

SPC is promoting alcohol awareness through a non-alcoholic bar, a safety awareness campaign and a safety rap song.

"We hope that people who are listening will understand that we are really trying to keep it a safe event," Dave Palmisano, executive chairman of SPC, said. We know people will drink, but we want people to know we are promoting safety. We're trying to get the word out to be sober and enjoy the event.

One of the ways SPC will accomplish this is by dispersing the crowd "by giving them events that they can do instead of drinking," Palmisano said. The events will take place at scattered booths and a variety of entertainment spots.

"We are just asking everyone to come to have fun. We are not encouraging people to drink," Palmisano said. "It's a student event. We don't want anyone getting hurt or killed by drinking and driving.

Palmisano asked festival goers not to bring bottles and kegs with them.

"People drop bottles and the) break. People walk around barefoot out there. and we don't want anyone getting cut."

As for the kegs, "we want people to be walking around enjoying each of the events spread out through the Old Main Mall, rather than gathering around kegs," Palmisano said.

"We want Springfest to be an overall reflection of a safe, responsible program held at SIU."

Springfest 'arrests' to help student's transplant fund

Some of the people attending Springfest will be arrested and taken to jail between noon and 4 p.m. Saturday. The arrests will be conducted by the Dianne Levin Medical Fund Committee. The committee is trying to raise money for Levin, a third-year law student who must receive heart and lung transplants before the end of the year.

Those arrested will be put in a holding pen in Old Main Mall near Davies Gymnasium. They will be held until they can raise enough money to pay off either a fine or their bail, ranging from $10 to $500 depending on how important the "offender" is.

Levin, a Pomona native, underwent extensive testing in February at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis to assess the severity of her condition and potential for recovery. The tests cost $10,000, none of which was covered by insurance. The operation is expected to cost more than $100,000.

Anyone wishing to be arrested may call Andrew Sondag at the SIU-C Legal Clinic, 536-4423.

Coach will get feet wet at football scrimmage

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

The 1988 version of the annual Maroon and White spring football game will be an inauguration of sorts for head coach Rhoades and four of his assistant coaches.

Rhoades and assistants Fred Riley, Jeff McInerney, Greg McMahon, and Stanley King, all in their first season with the Salukis, will get one last look at the team in its last scrimmage of the spring, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday. "There are three things I look for in the spring game," Rhoades said. "We hope there isn't a comedy of errors, that a lot of people come, and that there are no injuries.

"We're looking to get some kind of an idea about our team by then," he said. "What people see in the game is what we're going to do in the fall.

Rhoades took over as head coach on March 24 and wasted no time making his presence felt. Within a week of his hiring he announced that the Salukis would be running a new offense next season, the wishbone. He said that his squad is adapting well and that any weaknesses the team has are not related to the new offense.

"The guys are picking up the offense fairly well," Rhoades said. "Our problems have not been wishbone related."

Rhoades said that the scrimmage will be as much like a real game as possible, but that there will be some differences.

"There won't be much kicking, we haven't gotten that far in our program yet," he said. "You won't see any stunting or blitzing out there either. There are a certain things that we just haven't had much time to work on."

The game will give Saluki fans an indication of what is to come, Rhoades said.

"We're going to run our offense, we're going to send in plays. I'll be just what we plan to do in the fall," Rhoades said.

The new head coach will lay down the welcome mat for anyone and everyone who wishes to attend.

"We'd like to see 18,000 people out there. We'd like everyone to come out and see us," Rhoades said. "I don't what the game is like down here, but we welcome everyone.

Track will get broken in at Saluki Invitational Saturday

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

The new track at McAndrew Stadium will play host to its first competitors at the Saluki Invitational Saturday.

The track will be inaugurated with the 10,000-meter run at 10 a.m. "The 10,000-meter competitors will be the first to ever compete on the track," Rhoades said. "It should be exciting."

Both the men's and women's teams will compete in the invitational. Other potential teams include Murray State, Southeast Missouri, Western Kentucky, Memphis State, Southeast Missouri, Indiana State, Illinois State, Eastern Illinois and the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

"We'd be happy if we got nine or 10 teams," men's coach Bill Cornell said. "It's the first year so you never can tell."

The track, which was scheduled to be completed in August, wasn't finished until mid-April. The completion was delayed in part because of rainy and windy weather conditions.

The Saluki Invitational, set for Saturday, was originally scheduled for Sunday.

The men's team won the Saluki Open at SEMO and Christiana Phillipou set a school record in the triple jump for the women.

Following the Saluki Invitational, the men's team will host Missouri and Purdue in a tri-meet May 9 before traveling to Terre Haute, Ind., for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships May 12-15.

The women's team will compete at the National Invitational in Indianapolis, Ind., May 7.
Large barge to attempt world’s record

By Curtis Winston
Staff writer

A record number of boats already have registered for the 15th Annual Great Cardboard Boat Regatta. About 50 cardboard boats have pre-registered. Regatta founder Richard Archer said “this is the first year we’ve had many boats signed up before the race.” He said about 200 entries are expected for race day, which is at noon Saturday at Campus Lake.

Among the entries is a huge cardboard barge designed by Patrice Mullen, a junior in art. Mullen will attempt to beat the world’s record for most people in a cardboard boat. Arctic Mullen holds the current record. Her “Murphysboro Yacht Club” barge, built in two hours and completed the 500-yard race course at the Record Annual Great Cardboard Cup Challenge at the Du Quoin State Fair Grounds in September 1987.

Mullen is building a bigger barge and will attempt to have 50 people and 3 dogs complete Saturday’s course, Mullen’s sister, Susan Mullen, a sophomore in English, said.

Archer said the barge idea is good because it allows people — and dogs — who aren’t racing to be a part of the regatta. Although the record hasn’t been broken by the Guinness Book of World Records, Archer said he was sure no one has tried to claim the record. “Somebody should call the Guinness book and have it certified,” he said.

Entrants who did not pre-register should bring their boats to Campus Lake at 10 a.m. Saturday for inspection by race officials.

Boat builders will have a chance to test their boats between noon and 4 p.m. Friday at Campus Lake. Local businesses will be on hand to ensure safety.

The cardboard boat racing classes are:
- Class I, boats powered by oars or paddles;
- Class II, boats powered by other forms of muscle powered propulsion devices (paddlesworn or propeller) and sail boats;
- Class III, “instant” boats designed and built in two hours from kits sold at the regatta.

The boats may need to complete the 500-yard race course at least four times to qualify for the race and be able to get into the finals.

Assistant professor of design, started the regatta in 1974 as a class project for his design students. About 1,000 people attended the first regatta, which had 43 boats entered, Archer said. “It was a Saturday meet for the class. I was surprised to see all those people,” he said.

The week after the first race, Archer started getting phone calls from people saying they wanted to enter boats in the event; by the next spring the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta had become a campus tradition.

“Last year, we had about 25,000 spectators,” Archer, who holds the title Commodore of the regatta, said. “When I started this thing, I could see a handful to announce the race. Now I need a 1,000 watt public address system.”

Archer said the title commodore was given to him in a Daily Egyptian article. He said he had previously used the name “Captain Cardboard,” but the commodore title seemed more fitting. “It just sort of stuck,” he said.

The race is a big confidence builder for design students and other people building boats, Archer said.

“Everyone knows you can’t build a boat out of cardboard,” Archer said. “You can’t fail, because it's already falling proposition. But then you do it, and you think, ‘Whoa! I made it all the way around the course.’”

Over the years, the campus tradition has grown into a nationwide event, with cardboard boat regattas being held from California to Connecticut.

“Now it’s totally out of control,” Archer said. “For years and years, people, who aren’t racing to be a part of the event, have jumped in, and a few other members of the design faculty kept the thing going out of our back pockets.”

In 1986, the SIU Alumni Association had the regatta rules and trademarks copyrighted. “(The regatta) has gotten so big, it has to have institutional management,” Archer said.

The copyrighted rules recently were the subject of a nine-month legal battle between the SIU Alumni Association and an organization called the Crystal Lake community of Crystal Lake. The Crystal Lake regatta had accused SIU-C of trying to take control of its event’s charitable proceeds, which totaled $26,000.

Archer related the charge, saying some in Crystal Lake were ignoring the copyright and were attempting to steal the championship from Southern Illinois by offering large sums of prize money.

“I didn’t want to see the event turned into a serious sport,” Archer said in an earlier interview. “Cardboard boat racing shouldn’t be serious. It’s supposed to be a fun, family event.”

Local businesses happy about tourism rush for fest

By Edward Rahn
Staff writer

Carbondale merchants smile at the estimated $200,000 per day that Springfest will bring to the business community.

According to estimates by the Convention and Tourism Bureau, 20,000 people attended Springfest ‘86. These 20,000 people spent a substantial amount of money in the community during their stay.

Estates like Springfest increase the city’s economic base, Trish Richey, director of the Convention and Tourism Bureau said. It’s estimated that 5,000 out of owners descend on Carbondale for the event.

The following figures are estimated from the Convention and Tourism Bureau of how much money visitors at Springfest pumped into the local economy last year:
- The 360 festivalgoers staying in hotels each spent an average of $111 per day, for a total of $39,660;
- The 3,400 people staying in dormitories, including residents and guests, spent an average of $70 per day, for a daily total of $239,000;
- High school students, numbering 350, spent $35 per day for a total of $14,700 per day;
- Visiting parents spent $20 a day, for a daily total of $32,000.
- Residents from surrounding communities — 50,000 — spent $27 per day, for a daily total of $1,350,000.

This means that $318,660 per day was injected into the Carbondale economy during Springfest. According to the Convention and Tourism Bureau, figures the money was distributed in the following way:
- Lodging: 50.9 percent;
- Food: 23.5 percent;
- Entertainment and miscellaneous, 18.3 percent;
- Retail sales, 7.6 percent.

Those figures are conservative, Richey said.

People from surrounding communities who attend Springfest usually have a hot dog for lunch at the boat regatta, go to the mall and eat out in the evening, Richey said.

“The only way to keep people here to spend money is to have an event like Springfest,” Richey said.
Carnival atmosphere in Old Main

They will be riding unicycles, juggling swords, pins and bowling balls and eating fire. Members of the touring acts Variety in Motion and the Gamma Phi Circus are set to perform on stage and mingle with the crowd at Springfest.

Gamma Phi Circus, founded in 1929, is the largest and oldest collegiate circus in the nation, Sean Craig, special events chairman of the Student Programming Council, said.

The circus features gymnastics, clowns, tumblers, vaudeville, fire eaters, jugglers and performers who balance on wooden balls.

Variety in Motion features choreographed juggling, unicycling, comedy and dance. They also try to encourage audience participation.

Other activities planned for Springfest include elephant and pony rides and a "midway" that consists of games of skill. Four carnival rides and two kiddie rides also will be offered.

Group points out dangers of fest sexual harassment

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

Four rapes were reported to the Rape Action Committee during Springfest weekend last year, but these numbers don’t have to be repeated, the RAC director says.

Although it is not planning to embark on an advertising campaign, the RAC is trying to raise the awareness of people on campus about the circumstances of rape, Julie Claussen, director of the RAC, said.

Sue Powell, counseling and administrative assistant at the Women’s Center, said the Program of Rape Education and Prevention will put display ads in the Daily Egyptian addressing rape myths, statistics, risk factors and ways for women to protect themselves.

Usually, the responsibility for prevention falls on the victim, Powell said. "It seems very unfair."

That makes communication important, especially in preventing date rape, Powell said. Women shouldn’t be afraid to say no or go against the sexual stereotype, she said.

Claussen said stranger rape is probably more common than date rape at an event like Springfest.

All the reported rapes last year also involved alcohol, she said, in which either the victim or the perpetrator had been drinking.

This does not mean that because the victim was drinking he or she is at fault, she added. But alcohol increases the potential victim’s vulnerability in the eyes of rapists, Claussen said. There have been unusually high numbers of reported rapes this year, especially Springfest.

People should use common sense and remember that they can’t always spot rapists by the way they look, Claussen said. For instance, women should be careful not to go isolated with men they don’t know well, she said.

RAC counselors are gearing up in case of another onslaught like last year, Claussen said. There have been unusually high numbers of reported rapes this year, especially Springfest.

An average of about six rapes are reported in normal months. But in March there were 10 reported, she said.

People who feel they have been raped or sexually assaulted, or who know someone who has been sexually assaulted, can reach RAC counselors through the Rape Action Hotline, 522-2224.

Security and medical planning for this year's Springfest emphasize safety and sobriety.

In keeping with measures taken during last semester’s tailgate parties, University police “will be very tough on storage drinking,” police director Bob Harris said.

Peace officers as well as uniformed patrols will be dispatched to events at the Campus Lake and Old Main Mall areas, Harris said.

“We’ve got way too many 15-, 16- and 17-year-olds drinking,” Harris said.

Harris said patrols will be more concentrated this year because there are ten Arena concerts or exhibitions and football games scheduled.

To cope with the party problems that are inevitable with large crowds, the Student Programming Council will be in charge of security at this year’s Springfest.

The Safety Watchers will patrol the day’s events in groups of three, watching for signs of heat exhaustion or fighting other problems among the throngs of revelers, SPC Springfest coordinator Kari Craig said.

The Safety Watchers will consist of about 200 volunteer Student Life Advisors trained by SIU-C Security Police to “spot trouble before it becomes a serious problem,” Craig said.

The group will work in connection with security personnel and at least three trained nurses who will be on duty.

When a patrol encounters a student who needs assistance, one Safety Watcher will remain with the student while the other two seek a nurse or police officer, Craig said.

The patrols will be concentrated in the Free Forum Area and the Old Main Mall this year including around people attending the events.

The patrols will be located in the Student Center and two more will be near Davies Gymnasium and Shryock Auditorium, Craig said.

The Student Programming Council will be in charge of security at the Campus Lake, Craig said.

Terry Matthias, coordinator of the Cardiovascular Boat Regatta events, said about 30 trained lifeguards from the Student Recreation Center will watch for mishaps. The lifeguards will work on shifts throughout the day.

Athletics budget trimmed $147,000

By Sharon Waldo
Staff Writer

The athletics budget for fiscal year 1989, instead of being trimmed by as much as $122,000, as first proposed, has been cut by nearly $147,000 over the original proposal.

Interim Athletics Director Charlotte West hand out the final details of the budget Wednesday, discussed it with the coaching staff.

"They're realists. The main thing with coaches is that they have an understanding," West said. "They've had a few adjustments," West said. "Some things are worse off, some are better."

Three full-time positions are expected to be eliminated because of cuts. West said one was a secretarial position. The other two positions we're eliminating will become one position.

Actually we are going to go from three to one (position)," she said.

West said she had not notified all the staff members involved in these cuts and declined further comment.

The budget is for fiscal year 1989, which starts this July 1 and ends June 30, 1990.

West said that based on post-season the sports of volleyball and field hockey were hardest hit. Volleyball dropped from $44,400 in FY 88 to $38,000. Field hockey was cut $5,000.

A lot of the cuts, West said, are based on the each sport's travel schedule. For example, she said that football travel expenses are expected to be $46,000 less than last year. Football was cut from $25,959 to an even $20,000 for FY 89. The proposed cut was to $19,000.

West said she kept looking at football's mandatory expenses, such as uniforms, laundry and cleaning the football stadium. She said she increased the original proposal because of these fixed costs.

Head football coach Rick Rhoades is "far from elated," West said. "But, I think he's used to making a quarter out of a nickel."

West said she is confident Rhoades will make do. "We See BUDGET, Page 22

Middleton to attend NBA tryout

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

This is one invitation Steve Middleton isn't going to turn down.

Middleton, the third all-time leading scorer in Saluki men's basketball history, will attend the NBA tryout camp June 5-11 on the Illinois-Chicago campus. He received a letter Wednesday from the NBA inviting him to attend the tryout camp as an alternat. Although Middleton is an alternate, he has been assured a chance to play because all of the top 60 players invited will participate.

"I'm flattered to have this opportunity to go to Chicago and play with some of the best kids around," Middleton said. "I just have to go to camp and play the way I know how to play — play hard and do the things that I've been doing for four years here. Hopefully I can open up a few eyes and show people that Steve 'D-diel' can play the game at a professional level."

Middleton was drafted by the four-time defending N. C. A. A. Basketball Champions the Illinois-Chicago team on April 29. Although the nine-team league starts May 13 and runs through the middle of July, Middleton expects the Knights to support his attendance at the NBA tryout.

Middleton was named the this year's Outstanding Male Athlete of SIUC. He averaged 25.4 points and 6.6 rebounds per game and was a first-team Missouri Valley selection.

Recruit still holding out

Terence Lewis, one of the top 100 high school basketball players in the country, has put SIUC and Temple on hold.

Lewis is now back into the picture to sign the Education Grant from Birmingham, Ala.

Lewis had narrowed his choices to SIUC and Temple. However, Preston Groce of Temple and barnes, hired last week to replace Gordon Clark, who was fired, called Lewis to let him know that Lewis, Providence initially recruited Lewis under Chieha, who resigned a month after Provience went 11-17.

McIntosh gets 2 homers in victory

By Jeff Grieser

Saluki first baseman Cliff McIntosh celebrated his birthday a day early.

McIntosh, who turns 22 today, hit two home runs and had four RBIs to give the Salukis a 11-4 victory Wednesday night at SIU-Edwardsville.

The Salukis improved to 20-14 and SIU-E, which won six straight games, dropped to 20-14.

McIntosh put the Salukis ahead to stay in the top of the first. After Rick Gage reached on an error and Joe Hall walked, McIntosh belted a three-run homer.

In the sixth, McIntosh added his fifth homer of the season with the bases empty.

The Salukis broke the game open with three runs in the fourth and four runs in the fifth.

Women's tennis eyes 3rd Gateway title

By Jeff Grieser

The women's tennis team is shooting for it's third Gateway Conference Tournament crown.

The tournament starts today in C_TC and runs through Saturday, Coach Judy Auld said her team's chances are good.

"We are capable of winning the conference. We can keep on an emotional high throughout," said Auld, who has guided the Salukis to the title twice, in 1983 and in 1985.

It's been an up and down spring for the team which started the season with five straight defeats, bounced back to win its next eight, then lost three more.

The team had to cancel four conference matches in early April because seven of its nine members were ill. However, the Salukis finished the spring with an 11-2 record, 3-1 in the conference.

"We are capable of winning the conference. We can keep on an emotional high throughout," said Auld, who has guided the Salukis to the title twice, in 1983 and in 1985.

"We're definitely not going into this thing at our all-time physical best," Auld said. "We got the seed we wanted though, now it's just a matter of doing the job. The girls have to remember is that it's going to have to be a team effort.

Auld said the top two seeds will be Western Illinois and Wichita State. She said the team has prepared Missouri, Indiana Steale and Drake will follow the Salukis in the semifinals.

"I think it will be a six-team battle," Auld said.

Salukis ready to get on with game

Members of the Saluki football team say they are not only looking forward to competing, but also to having fun in this year's Maroon and White football game, which is set for 2 p.m. Sunday at McAndrew Stadium.

"We're going to go out and have a good time," Fred Gibson, the Salukis' No. 1 quarterback, said. "It gives us a great chance to compete and it's a great way to finish up spring practice."

Shannon Berbrache, a sophomore defensive lineman, agreed.

"I think it's the day we've been looking forward to all spring," Berbrache said. "Last year the game everyone had sort of 'let's get it over with and get into summer training.', this season we're looking forward to playing the game, not getting it over with."

The team has been adapting to a new offense and defense this spring. Head Coach Rick Rhoades brought the wishbone offense and a more aggressive defense with him from Troy State, (Al)."

"When you look at it (the wishbone) on the outside, it looks hard," Berbrache said. "But when you see it worked out in such a way that the players See GAME, Page 23

AD search committee narrows field

The athletics director search committee is working to present the names of two to six candidates to President John C. Gayeux by Wednesday.

Roger E. Robinson, chairman of the 11-member committee, said that the group has cut the field of candidates to "considerably less than half.

Fourty candidates had applied by the April 22 deadline.

Robinson said the committee spent about three hours Monday night weeding the list of candidates down to this "working number."

The committee will meet next at 6 p.m. Tuesday to make the second cuts.
