Legal opinion causes trustee to quit

By Lenore Sobota

SIU Trustee Richard Haney has announced his resignation from the Board of Trustees as a result of legal opinion from Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott.

Scott issued an opinion two weeks ago stating that the state superintendent of education, Joseph Cronin, is not authorized to hold a position on any of the governing boards of the colleges and universities in the state. Haney was serving as Cronin’s representative to the board.

James Brown, general secretary of the SIU system, said the board has been aware of the possible problem with Haney since the superintendent of education became an appointive rather than an elective position last January.

Brown said Cronin had requested the Board accept Haney pending resolution of the question by the attorney general.

“We were all aware of the fact that the question had been asked and decided to let ourselves be guided by the response of the attorney general,” Brown said.

The attorney general’s opinion, issued to the Illinois Board of Higher Education, is not binding on SIU, Brown said. He said Haney resigned as a precaution in the event Scott’s opinion was upheld in court.

Even if the courts subsequently hold that Haney has not been a legal member of the board since January, it would not affect the legality of any actions taken by the board since that time, according to Brown. Haney has not participated in any of the board’s actions.

Brown said Haney’s seat will remain unoccupied until some action is taken by the legislature.

“We simply have a seat with no mechanism to fill it. The seat is provided for in the statutes that govern our operation and it will take an amendment by the legislature to eliminate it,” Brown explained.

Haney was appointed to the board in the place of representative for Michael Bakalis, who then held the elected position of superintendent of public instruction.

The governing statutes of the Board of Regents and the Board of Governors also call for the superintendent of public instruction or his delegate to be a voting member of their board. The Board of Governors’ seat is presently vacant.

The University of Illinois’ governing statutes call for the superintendent of public instruction to be an ex-officio member of its Board of Trustees but that board had held since January that the superintendent of education is not the same as the superintendent of public instruction and, therefore, not entitled to the position.

A proposal that would require two years of college education to be on the Carbondale police may discriminate against residents of the city’s predominantly black northeastside, according to a report from the personnel office.

The report was presented to the city council Monday night in response to Councilman Hans Fischer’s request that a chart be prepared listing each Carbondale police officer and the number of years of college education he has received.

He also requested that the staff of the personnel office prepare an administrative report listing the pros and cons of requiring an associate of arts degree of two years of college for eligibility to the police force.

The report stated that college-educated police officers would be better able to deal with college students. Cleveland Matthews, the city’s affirmative action officer, cited possible discrimination in the requirement.

In a memorandum to the city manager, Matthews said he was opposed to hiring eligibility requirements for Carbondale police because he felt the proposal would have an adverse effect on blacks.

Matthews said after the council meeting that it was too early to require the two years of college education for police officers. He said blacks have not yet caught up in areas in which they had previously been discriminated.

“The northeast community doesn’t have the money to compete in the education field,” Matthews said. Persons having only high school diplomas can still be good patrolmen and officers.

Matthews said five blacks are presently employed in the police force. One black has had five years of college education and two have each had one year of college education. The other two have only high school diplomas, he added.

The current education requirements for eligibility to the city’s police force is a high school diploma. Applicants must pass a written test and undergo an oral examination conducted by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners.

Councilman Joseph Dakin, former Carbondale police chief, suggested that police officers should be able to deal with college students. Matthews said five blacks are presently employed in the police force.

Matthews said that at least a two years of college education be required before a police officer could be promoted to a corporal or sergeant, and a four-year degree for ranks of lieutenant and above. He said no specific degree should be required.

Police Chief George Kennedy said that requirement would mean complete four years of college while on the force usually fails to work. Kennedy said the tuition and fees for the police officer would be federally funded.

Dakin also suggested that at least two years of college education be required before a police officer could be promoted to a corporal or sergeant, and a four-year degree for ranks of lieutenant and above. He said no specific degree should be required.

University Housing Director Samuel Rinella expects a reduction of approximately $60,000 in the $10 million housing operation budget for 1975-76 because of SIU budget cutbacks.

“As of the present time I have received no instructions regarding any cutback of funds from the funded debt enterprises account, although I expect some cuts will be forthcoming,” Rinella said Tuesday. “I would expect a 6 per cent reduction in the flow of tuition and fees into housing.”

Income from tuition and fees represents 16 per cent of the total housing budget.

Rinella also suggested that at least two years of college education be required before a police officer could be promoted to a corporal or sergeant, and a four-year degree for ranks of lieutenant and above. He said no specific degree should be required.

Housing Director Samuel Rinella said he would be “premature” to say where the cutbacks would be made. He explained that priorities must be examined in the cost of operating housing, adding that final figures for some expenses are still coming in.

Negotiations begin next week to set wages for unionized University housing employees.

Rinella said most of the reduction will be absorbed by cutting back on utilities and postponing some renovation projects and furniture replacement.

Food costs are going up but Rinella said, “There’s no way you ever try to reduce either the quality or quantity of food.”

Personal cutbacks would only be used as a “last resort,” Rinella said, and he is “sensitive” to that such measures will not have to be taken.

Despite an increase of approximately 1 cent in room and board rates for fall, the University is turning people away from the on-campus dormitories for the first time since 1969, according to Joseph Gasser, assistant director of University Housing.

All of the 4,600 spaces in the dormitories at Brush Towers, University Park and Thompson Point have been filled, according to Gasser. He added 35 to 30 contracts still have not been returned but are due this week.

Letters have been mailed to 185 freshmen and sophomores requesting them to approved off-campus housing facilities.

In explaining the increase in students seeking on-campus housing, Gasser said money is the big reason.

“With rising utility costs and food, it is much cheaper for most students to live off-campus,” he said.

Despite the freedom granted to on-campus residents, as 24-hour visitation and permission allowing to keep in the rooms, is also a factor.

Gasser said.

Auto industry shows slight spring profit

DETOUR (AP) — Despite a record loss at Chrysler Corp., a boost in earnings at General Motors apparently paced the nation's behemoths during the auto industry to a slight overall profit during the spring quarter.

GM Tuesday reported profits of $335 million for the period, or $6.65 a share, up from $260 million in the same year-ago period. Sales in the second-quarter were up 12 percent to $38.3 billion.

Still stumbling from the effects of the recession, Chrysler reported an April-June loss of $58.7 million, or 96 cents a share.

It was the fourth consecutive quarterly loss for Chrysler, which has gone $234 million into the red since the third period of 1974, most among U.S. manufacturers.

In a somewhat gloomy project for the current three-month period, Chrysler officials said "adverse pressures on earnings will continue through the quarter" because of a slow recovery in new-car sales.

GM profits were more than five times its acemic earnings of $20 million in the first quarter, the worst first-quarter performance in 29 years for the world's largest manufacturer.

Venezuela moves to possess oil holdings

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela, the United States' second largest foreign oil supplier, is expected to complete its takeover of foreign oil holdings, most of which are American, before the end of August.

Venezuela's national oil company, which is called Petroleos Venezolanos Petroven, according to government officials, will continue through the quarter.

PRIVAT Chas. is expected to be in the red since the third period of 1974, most of which are American.

National Guard pull out of Canton

CANTON, Ill. (AP) — National Guard troops pulled out of Canton, Ill., Tuesday, ending the 5th day of the Midwest's longest conflict.

The 200 National Guard and Air National Guard troops were ordered into the city Tuesday morning after a tornado swept through the city the night before, killing two persons, injuring scores more and leaving the downtown area in shambles.

The $30 million damage estimate was made by Canton Police Chief James Elam. An official of the American Insurance Association placed damage to private property at between $13 million and $15 million.

Senator forms committee to sponsor SIU split bill

By Dan Ward

Daily Student Writer

Sen. Sam Vadalabene (D-Ellwood) said he is forming a committee to sponsor a bill with Gov. Dan Walker in an attempt to convince the legislature to split SIU.

Vadalabene, sponsor of the bill, said he hopes to have the committee organized before the Walker backers return from vacation next week.

"We're trying to take a more aggressive role in getting the SIU problem on the floor," Vadalabene said Tuesday.

Vadalabene said the committee will be made up of business and labor leaders and persons involved in the creation of the SIUE.

"We're trying to get a cross-section of the U.S. Senate Metro-East area," Vadalabene said. He said committee members will be those persons who testified in favor of the bill to the General Assembly.

Vadalabene said the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) was unjust in waiting until the bill passed in the legislature before recommending that Walker veto it.

"If the Illinois Board of Higher Education is opposed to a bill, they should stand up when the legislation comes up," Vadalabene said.

He said the IBHE wanted to wait a bill until the SIU Board of Trustees Chairman Ivan Elliott Jr. and the Illinois Chamber of Commerce presented opposition to the bill.

The bill, if signed by Walker, will give virtual autonomy from the Carbondale campus. In both House and Senate debate, the bill broke party lines.

The bill drew strong support by the legislature with consistencies with communities in universities belonging to collective governing boards.

Opposition leaders said the proposed split in the bill, and the autonomy bids they predicted would follow, would cause SIU to state more money and weaken the power of the state legislature.

Attempts to add weakening amendments to the bill failed when it came before the House last month.

Vadalabene said the current problems of SIU President John S. Rendleman. Vadalabene said the senator would have no effect on the committee's meetings with

Research rip-offs

By Arthur Hoppe

"Just make yourself comfortable on the couch. There. Now you say you are the Democratic Party. What seems to be the problem?"

"I don't know, Doctor. But I've been so depressed. Sometimes I think nobody loves me, nobody cares."

"Have you always been depressed?"

"Oh, my, no. Just six months ago, I was on top of the world. I'd finally driven my arch enemy out of office, humiliated and defeated. And I hadn't been in better health for years--twice as strong as my opponents. Everybody loved and courted me. I was wildly popular. I was convinced I could accomplish great things! Wonderful things!"

"Please don't chew on the couch. We have drugs to ameliorate these manic-depressive symptoms."

"Sorry, Doctor. But when I think of what might have been. And now here I am, drifting aimlessly, unloved, unwanted..."

"Someone must want you."

"Teddy doesn't. Oh, there are dozens of others. Great men like... Well, like... You know."

"George Wallace?"

"A-ye! Excuse me, Doctor. I hope my head didn't damage your wall. But, you see, part of me loves him more than all the others, while the rest of me loathes him to the core."

"A typical love-hate relationship. It often triggers schizophrenia. Perhaps if you took more interest in the outside world, got involved in a foreign affair or two."

"Oh, I tried that. But I get badly burned. Now I just want to sit around at home. Of course, there's a small conservatire part of me that used to hate for just wanting to sit around at home that I now hate for wanting to get involved in foreign affairs. But I've always hated that part of me anyway."

"I see. Possibly, if you developed a program..."

"One program? I've got thousands of programs! Here's 234 different ones on the energy crisis alone!"

"Really, there's no need to hurt them at me. If you could just pull yourself together and get behind one program at a time."

The National Science Foundation (NSF) awards about 15,000 grants yearly for studies in the natural and social sciences. Already this year the foundation has allocated $60,000,000.

-Research to determine under what conditions humans and monkeys clench their jaws. Nearly $500,000 allocated.
-Another biography of Isaac Newton. About $9,000 allocated.
-A probe of the "Evolution of Song Learning of Passaic Finches." Nearly $36,000 allocated.

-A hitchhiking study. $15,000 allocated.
-Research to uncover the social behavior of the Alaskan brown bear. $15,000 allocated.
-An examination on prairie dogs. Nearly $5,000 allocated.
-It is time taxpayers complain about such under-takings.

In April the House of Representatives voted $12 to 199 for the "Bauman amendment." The amendment would give Congress veto power over the National Science Foundation grants.

Representative Robert E. Bauman, who sponsored the bill, said that taxpayers were "fed up with the spending for these insane and questionable purposes. There are people out of work, and this Government is facing a $10 billion deficit."

Because of the passage of the Bauman amendment, research funded primarily through federal financing may be more difficult to come by. But what can come from studies on why people say "ain't", or the Department of Agriculture's examination of the sex life of the gypsy moth or even the NSF's expensive research on "passionate love"?

It is obvious such research is a rip-off to the taxpayer and an insult to one's intelligence.

Doctors and law

Doctors across the nation have complained about the increasing cost of medical malpractice insurance--in some areas, as much as 350 per cent since 1970.

Doctors have held mass meetings and work stoppages. They have called on state governments to pass laws which would decrease the number of malpractice cases, which would cause a decrease in the insurance rates running several thousand dollars a year.

Disagreement exists about who has caused the insurance rate increases. The doctors say lawyers have caused the increases. They feel since the automobile claims have declined as a result of the no-fault insurance, some lawyers may be turning to malpractice suits to replace the loss of automobile claims.

Lawyers claim the careless handling of patients by doctors and the windfall profits of insurance companies have brought on the increases. They say the suits are a necessary protection of the public against negligent doctors and hospitals.

This disagreement, and malpractice insurance rate increases, are not matters isolated to the medical and legal professions. The public will pay, as usual. Laws have been proposed in some states limiting the amount of money which could be awarded to a plaintiff, establish a review board to screen cases and limit the time in which a claim may be filed. Action needs to be taken on these bills.

The cost of medical treatment has been outrageous for many years. Some hesitate to go to a doctor because of the expense. Because of malpractice insurance increases many may be denied medical treatment.

Legislators must pass laws decreasing the cost of malpractice insurance. It could be a matter of life or death.

Nature vs. trail bikes

To the Daily Egyptian:

Feel the rush of solitude as you turn off your trail bike. Running this steep hill required some fancy gear-shifting?but you are at the top now. Below stretches Carbondale, bathed in the fading orange sunset, and nearby is the Quad. I am the person picking blackberries, who will take home some bad feelings about that noisy hunk of pleasure you now straddle.

Those patches of clay torn loose when you shifted will wash down the hill onto the street the next time it rains. Well, that creates deep gullies that big bike wheels can challenge.

Feel the rush of power as you kick over the engine. Please take it slow going down. I have seen you get hurt going too fast. And, please do not bring the trail bike next time.

Federal regulations prevent city employees as contractors

By Kathleen Takekuma
Downtown Staff Writer
Federal regulations will not allow city employees and members of the Community Development Steering Committee to be members of contracting agencies for Community Development programs. City Attorney John Womick told the Carbondale City Council Monday that city employees or committee members who are on federally funded programs would violate a regulation set by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for community development funds.
Womick said that city employees or committee members who are on the senior citizens council also may have to resign, he said.
However, Womick said before any employees from the committee, each case will have to be examined on an individual basis. He said he will contact the HUD office in Chicago for more information about the regulations.
Talbot, chairman of the Carbondale Human Relations Committee, said he communicated with the city council that the group be made a standing committee of another city commission. He also recommended that the scope of the commission be expanded to include helping to recruit and train members as commission chairman on Aug. 18.
Talbot said that he found someone to record the minutes of meetings and then type and mail them to each commission member. He added that community groups lack concern for output from commission work and a lack of enthusiasm by commission members.
Talbot said all 16 members of the commission were asked to attend the council meeting, but only one other member showed up.
Councilman Hans Fischer suggested that past and present commission members meet informally with council members to discuss the organization's problems. Fischer said the commission needs to define clearly within what area it wants to serve.
The council reviewed a proposal for annexation of four properties located on East Walnut Street several blocks west of the Grand River Road intersection. The properties are presently surrounded by city land.
Charles Neal and Barry Bauertend, two of the property owners, said the council did not want their properties annexed to the city. They said they did not gain any benefits from the annexation but would have to pay higher city taxes. Both men are retired. Bauertend recently retired as a professor of education at SIU.
Bauertend said he and Neal have never requested city services for their properties. He said if they do not need any such sources, they would, for example, call the county sheriff instead of the Carbondale police.
Both men said that if the city were afraid they would subordinate their properties, they would not sign a petition to affirm they would not abuse the city services. Bauertend said if decided to sell his property, he would come to the council to ask for a revival of the proposal.
Council members expressed support for the proposal for an annexation of Bauertend's and Neal's properties. Councilman Joseph Dukin said it would be a waste of time taking this back to a formal council meeting.
The council will consider the annexation of the two other properties in the area when the owners are in favor of annexation.
The council reviewed a proposed development plan for the Lensa Harley-Davidson Motorcycle Shop. The plan presented by city assistant planner Kermit Robinson, calls for realignment of Glenview Avenue to connect directly to West Main Street. The Mundale Access Road, which presently connects Glenview to Main Street, would be a branch road off of Glenview.
Councilman Fischer said he was in favor of realigning Glenview Avenue, but he thought the park district, and not the city, should develop the plan for the park.
Upon a suggestion by Mayor Neal Eckert, the realignment plan will be reviewed by the City Planning and Zoning Commission and the park plan will be considered by the park district.
The council reviewed a request by the Carbondale Tennis Club to modify the club's leasing of city land to establish a semi-private club. The organization also proposed to acquire a class 'C' liquor license for selling beer and wine.
Councilman Dukin disagreed with the club's request for a liquor license. He said his experience on the police force was that "guns and liquor don't mix."
Councilman Helen Westberg said she wanted more information on the proposed activities before taking action. John McKown, gun club president, was at the meeting.

SIU economist favors free market oil

By Joe Voyles

Daily Record News Writer

The year of energy decision-making is 1975 and this week the "Great Debate" between Congress and the President over an energy policy will reach a climax," said Charles Gary Stalon, SIU economist. "However, some compromise will be reached this week because Congress is planning a month-long recess beginning Aug. 1 and because a decision must be reached before Aug. 31 when presidential authority to control gas prices ends."

If no decision is reached, Stalon said, an abrupt return to the open market in September would send gas prices soaring to an additional seven cents per gallon.

"Though Congress would simply prefer to maintain oil price controls for another four or five months, President Ford must come up with a solid energy policy this fall because of business demands," Stalon said.

"How can business decide where to invest its money if there is no energy policy?" Stalon asked.

In the last two years, Congress has not formulated an energy policy because the public is divided and "massively" ignorant of the issue and because of the inconsistent and contradictory proposals in Congress.

The real problem is not energy shortage at all, he said, but is deciding how energy will be marketed.

"Congress is divided into two hard-line positions in which there is no compromise," Stalon said. It is split into those who support a free market and those who favor gasoline rationing and price controls.

Three overlapping economic policies have gained substantial support since the OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) embargo in October, 1973, Stalon said. They are the free market, national self-sufficiency and rationing policies.

Stalon said he favors the free market approach. "The United States is in the midst of a "wall" crisis in which the economy must adjust to this new world of high-priced energy, he said. Stalon surmises that because the OPEC cartel has grown in mutual confidence over the last two years, the United States does not have the power to break it.

Stalon forecasts high energy costs will cause the restructuring of the country's demographic patterns. Suburbs will dry up and cities will be recreated. Railroads will replace trucking firms and homes will be heated by solar energy.

In short, Stalon said a strict market solution is necessary to solve the energy pinch. Even free market opponents in Congress finally have accepted the policy of reduced reliance on foreign oil and subsidies to the oil industry for developing energy sources as long as it does not show up in profits, Stalon said.

The free market approach provides the means to cut the consumption of oil, stimulate oil speculation and domestic oil production, Stalon said. In addition, the OPEC countries would decrease the price of oil from $11.65 per barrel to $10 per barrel because of the new competition, he said.

In addition, Stalon believes a six-month oil supply should be stored away and a 30-cent per gallon tax should be imposed to offset personal income taxes and provide revenue for energy-related research. He also recommended open Congressional hearings to look into oil companies' holdings of other energy sources.

Moving on to the national self-sufficiency plan or Nixon's Project Independence plan, Stalon said its ideal is to make the U.S. almost independent from foreign sources of oil.

Proponents of self-sufficiency fear that the free market approach would leave the nation dependent on foreigners and open to oil blackouts.

Self-sufficiency programs include government subsidies to coal, gas, oil, nuclear and coal gasification producers and a relaxation of environmental safeguards and a six-month storage of oil, the economist explained.

The ratiners, Stalon said, propose a 20-cent tax per gallon of gasoline and that $100 be distributed to each automobile owner each year through personal income tax adjustments. For example, in a twelve-week basis a driver could use 13.6 gallons at old prices and any amount above that would theoretically cost him the 50-cent tax, Stalon explained.

Housing official to take office minus affirmative action study

Sharon Justice will assume the position of associate director of housing for programming Aug. 1 although no appointment papers have been signed.

The importance of the appointment has been held up pending completion of the committee procedures to ensure affirmative action guidelines followed.

Although Justice will have a small office in Washington Square, Samuel Rinella, director of University Housing, said her central office will be located in one of the living areas.

"I want her down in the areas most of the time. There's a possibility her office will be in Allen Hall so she'll be close to East Campus and the program will be," he said.

Three graduate assistants have already been hired to work with Justice and two more will probably be hired according to Rinella.

Rinella said he will interview a person from SIU Wednesday to replace Justice on East Campus.

Appointments for the associate director's staff are expected by the end of the week, Rinella said.

Players regard billiards veteran as guru

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Sam Elizer, a Carbondale pool-room optimist, says he is trying to help young pool and billiard players become professionals—and not "hustlers," or gamblers.

Along with Minnesota Pats, Sam is regarded as a guru by Carbondale pool players who frequent Crazy Horse billiards, where Sam spends his evenings.

Sam was lining up a difficult shot on his favorite table at the far end of the smoke-filled Crazy Horse pool room when he told his story on a recent-evening.

He took casual aim with his two-piece, personal stick and sent the cue ball for a double ricochet and squarely into the only other ball on the table.

"Yeah, I've developed a lot of kids here," said Sam, the witorned "other" pool guru. "These kids who come in here," he said, gesturing to the occupied tables around him, "they think they're pretty good if they make five or six in a row."

"I taught a lot of kids to shoot. I used to go to the pool room in the Student Center all the time and play with the kids.

"This one time, one of the boys said he had built a Coke and I could make a difficult shot. Well, I made the shot and he got me a Coke. The next day, a bunch of kids got a petition together to get me kicked out of there for gambling," he said, laughing.

"I've developed about a dozen kids—never took money from any of them," he said.

"Yeah, I've developed some good kids.

Sam said he has played pool and billiards at the Student Center and at Crazy Horse regularly since he moved to Southern Illinois 10 years ago. He said he has worked for a lumber mill in Jonesboro most of that time, but is not working now "because of the economy."

Sam said he knew Minnesota Pats, the foremost guru of Carbondale pool players, when both played for 30 cents a game in Chicago.

"Pats happens to be a good friend of mine. He doesn't really B.S. a lot—a little bunk, that's all. We used to play all the time in '39 and '40—strictly for entertainment.

"As far as hustling is concerned," Sam said, "I never have been a hustler. Yeah, I used to play half-a-back, a dollar a game during the Depression—but I had to just to eat. You see, there was no dope (weed) then. I'd go into a pool room with a buck and a half in my pocket when I didn't win in the first game, I'd be out of a place to stay.

"I'd sometimes come away with 15 or 20 bucks, he said.

"The neighborhood pool room used to be a place of recreation," Sam said. "That was before you'd get all these guys just hanging out there—guys that would brag a lot and hustle. Pats calls them 'players,'" he said.

Suddenly Sam interrupted himself.

"Aren't you going to ask how old 1 am?" he asked.

"I'm 59, I mean next birthday," he said after getting a nod in reply.

"Aren't you going to ask where I'm from and how I got here?"

Again after a nod: "I'm from Winnipeg, Manitoba, and I came to Chicago when I got out of the Canadian army after the First World War. They only work available was "grade-breaking," he said in one breath, as though the speech were rehearsed.

"Aren't you going to ask what I do?" he asked. "I'm a contractor now in Washington," he asked. Without waiting for a nod, he launched into a criticism of federal savings and loan policies, the national debt and mortgage rates as well as a sidetrack onto the almost-dead issue of former SIU President Delphy Morris' $1 million house. "Aren't you going to ask who I think the greatest pool player that ever lived was?" he asked.

He said the greatest pool player who ever lived was Willy Mosconi. Mosconi was a world champion pool player for a number of consecutive years during the 1930s. Sam said.

"If Willy was alive and played Fats today, I'd put five to one on Willy," Sam said confidently.

"I told you," Sam said. "The game on the green cloth used to separate the men from the boys..."

Continuing education slates
beginning Spanish courses

Two beginning Spanish classes, one for children and one for adults, will be offered this fall by the Division of Continuing Education, said Trinidad Lester, who will teach the courses.

The adult course, which was taught last year, will provide students with a vocabulary which they can use in travel and in occupations which require contact with Spanish speaking persons, Lester said.

The children's course is for ages eight through 13. In addition to a textbook, games and songs will be used as instructional tools, Lester said.

The 10-week courses will have no text and no credit will be given.

Beginning Sept. 2, the adult course will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. in Pulliam Hall, Room 30. The cost is $12, which can be paid at the first class meeting or in Woody Hall, C Wing, Room 202.

The children's course will begin Sept. 6 and will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. in Pulliam Hall, Room 30. The cost is $12 and the registration procedure is the same as for the adult class.

City adds monitoring system to avert water discoloration

By Ken Temkin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The main reservoir pumps for Carbondale's water treatment system will be monitored continuously this fall in the event of brown water, which occurred last week.

James Mayhugh, superintendent of the City's Water Treatment System, said Tuesday that a water treatment system which went unnoticed for several days because it was installed in monitoring system so workers at the treatment plants will be able to immediately close pumps.

This is the first such monitoring system, which will keep close tabs on three 5,000-gallon per minute pumps, was completed Tuesday morning, according to Mayhugh.

The three pumps supply water from the Cedar Creek Reservoir to the Evergreen Reservoir, which is used as a backup if needed.

Mayhugh said the cost of the monitoring system was not available to him Tuesday, because repairs were being made by a private firm.

Last week, discoloration occurred when the pumps which supply untreated water from the Cedar Creek Reservoir failed, and at least four days elapsed before workers had determined that a failure had occurred.

Mayhugh said the pump probably failed during a power outage the weekend of July 19 and 20 but remained unnoticed until July 24.

He said the pump was repaired and placed back into operation that same day. Although water from the Evergreen Reservoir originally had brown water, it was purged of the excess chemicals used to treat the water from the Evergreen Reservoir.

Although water from the Cedar Creek Reservoir, its chemical makeup is different from that of a private firm, Rinella said.

Mayhugh explained that the water was not dangerous in any way, except to whites and linens in washing machines.

It was completely safe.

Scott charges veto unconstitutional

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott said Tuesday, Gov. Daniel Walker’s use of the line veto against legislation would be unconstitutional.

Scott said the vetoes were unconstitutional because Walker struck legislative guidelines from an appropriation bill without actually changing it.

Scott said the governor kept the total appropriation of $5.79 million for the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education but tried to veto proper legislative restrictions on how the money would be used.

The result would be that the governor’s Department of Public Education would have control of the money. It was not used by the General Assembly.

The governor had tried to veto provisions that said grants to local governments would be in the same amount as in 1974, plus one-third, where basic health programs were established.

According to Scott, Walker exercised his item veto power does not permit him to "seriously upset the General Assembly's determination as to how state funds may be used by the legislature.

The attorney general’s opinion was requested by Comptroller George Lindberg, asked if the governor had acted within his power to exercise his veto power.

Although the bill in question was for the fiscal year ending June 30, Scott said there is still some funds to be expended.

Small Group Housing to get additional parking area in fall

Park 'n lot improvements and new construction added about 130 parking places in the Small Group Housing area this fall.

Bids totaling $17,459.80 were opened Monday for the expansion of an existing gravel lot next to the pool at the Student Center.

Estimated construction time for the project is 60 days but no starting date has been set, said William Hart, assistant director of facilities planning.

The project's apparent low bidders were R.B. Stephens Construction, Carbondale, $8,140.96 for excavation and grading; and Hall Electric, Inc., Sparta, $8,299.60 for electrical work.

Many universities are suffering from a financial crisis, Rinella said, and many are running problems with finding qualified personnel to work in housing. Rinella is the director of Housing Services and was the only one with the knowledge that university housing administrators across the nation are suffering from the same difficulties in finding money and qualified personnel.

After attending the annual convention of the National Association of College and University Housing Officers in Kent, Ohio, Rinella said, "I didn’t pick up the neon lights and ideas I was seeking. I found that the same problems exist throughout the United States as far as the operation of housing is concerned.

RHC vacancies to be filled this week, seven blacks apply

By Lauren Sobota

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The remaining two vacancies for the position of resident hall coordinator (RHC) are expected to be filled later this week according to Joseph Ganser, assistant director of housing.

Seven black candidates for the vacancies were interviewed Tuesday by University Housing officials.

Questions had been raised recently regarding the lack of black personnel being hired for RHC positions. Samuel L. Rinella, director of University Housing, said he does not feel the hiring is an issue.

"I never thought there was a problem. No one ever said that the positions would be filled by anyone except the blacks," Rinella said.

A meeting was held two weeks ago to discuss black hiring between Rinella; Bruce Stubblefield, vice president for student affairs and George Jones, assistant coordinator of student discipline.

Rinella said the meeting was unnecessary and Stubblefield should have referred Jones directly to him.

While Rinella was out of town, Stubblefield met with Vernon Stubblefield of the Black Togetherness Organization to discuss the hiring of blacks.

Rinella said he has not been contacted by Stubblefield and sees no reason to meet with him, but added he is willing to talk to Stubblefield if he requests a meeting.

Daphne Johnson, hired last week as an RHC, has been assigned to East Campus for fall semester by Rinella.

Johnson, a black, worked in housing for four years at Ball State University while an undergraduate. She is now a masters candidate in SIU’s Department of Higher Education.

Ganser said he was impressed with Johnson's experience and confidence.

"I was impressed by her responsiveness to the needs of students. She demonstrated empathy with new students and has a good grasp of different types of people. She showed a desire to succeed and has four years of experience in housing," Ganser said.

Personnel office raises objections to police plan

Councilman Ham Fischer said he was not convinced that requiring two years of college would be desirable at the entry level. He said the average level of college education in the police force 'rates very high' without the requirement.

The years of college education among the Carbondale police force averages 2.7 hours per police officer.

Fischer also noted that police officers with college educations have been involved in disciplinary actions. He referred to recent disciplinary action taken against four Carbondale police officers.

Fischer said it would be worthwhile for the city to consider requiring a certain number of hours in educational training for police officers. The number of hours of training, he said, could be the same as the hours required to serve as a police officer.

Councilman Archie Jones said a person with more education may be less effective than a person with no college education who has "intuitive" to serve as a police officer.

Policemen who want training at the University should have the opportunity, he added.

Thirty-nine of the 40 police officers currently in the Carbondale police force have had one or more years of college education. Thirty-six of the 39 attended SIU.

Twenty-two of the police officers who have attended college have received bachelor degrees. Police Chief George Kennedy has both a B.S. and a master's degree in Criminal Justice Administration.

The current yearly salaries for probationary patrolmen is $10,000 per year while the salary for patrolmen with less than five years on the force is $11,296.

According to the personnel staff's report, these salaries are among the highest in Southern Illinois. The staff felt the salaries should be sufficient to attract applicants with college training in Police Science.

No male coaches helped the Fish Faces become the champions of the first women's intramural summer 16-inch softball tournament.

“We just wanted to point that out—what we could do by ourselves,” said Carol Lentz, captain of the Fish Faces. Lentz, a graduate student in administration of justice, led her team to the championship game through a string of strong performances from the pitcher's mound and good team chemistry.

The champions won seven games by scoring early 10-run leads, which signify uncontested victory under the “slaughterhouse rule.” Lentz said most of the games ended in the third or fourth inning.

No team but Metzger's could touch the Fishes throughout the duration of the month-long tournament, which attracted 118 participants. In addition, between 20 and 30 followers viewed each game.

Metzger's Team lost one, but under the “slaughterhouse rule,” it received a trophy for the tournament Wednesday, the Fishes’ champion.

The team members are photographed as the tournament scoring signified uncontested victory under the extra inning game Monday on Wham Field, breaking the Fishes’ winning streak.

“Sports is a time when you can just let yourself go, forget about everything that exists in the outside world and just let all of your worries go. That’s the definition of fun. It’s very philosophical,” Deany said.

Pinch single lifts Cubs to beat Expos

CHICAGO (AP)—John Summers' bases-loaded eighth-inning pinch single scored the winning run Tuesday and another run scored on a forceout, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Cubs loaded the bases with none out in the eighth against Expos reliever Dale Murray, 4-4, on two walks and a hit. Murray, who relieved John Summers, lifted a hit for Manny Trillo and sent his single to left, sending in Chicago's third run.

The Cubs scored two runs on a forceout, providing Darold Knowles, 4-5, with the margin of victory in the ninth inning.

Montreal managed a run in the ninth inning on singles by Pete Mackanin and Jose Morales and a sacrifice fly by Pepe Mangual.

Tim Husley's seventh-inning home run, his fifth of the season, had tied the score 2-2. The Expos had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the inning on a single by Larry Bittner, a sacrifice and an RBI double by Barry Poole.

Chicago opened the scoring in the first inning on Rick Monday's 12th homer, but Montreal tied it in the second. Mike Jorgensen was hit by a pitch and went to third on a single by Bittner.

Then Larry Parrish's looping fly to short center scored Jorgensen, although Bittner was forced at second—taking a hit away from Parrish.

Expos Manager Gene Mauch argued that the ball Poole hit for a double in the seventh had gone into the left-field basket and bounced out and should have been a home run. But third base umpire Art Williams disagreed.

The Expos had an excellent scoring chance in the fifth when Parrish led off with a double and went to third on Mackanin's groundout. Rick Reuschel fanned both Poole and pitcher Steve Renko to end the threat.

Reuschel was forced to leave the game after seven innings because of a broken blaster on his pitching finger.

Carol Lentz, captain of the Fish Faces, topples the Metzger's Team catcher in a dusty slide at homestale. Umpire Carol McElhiney called Lentz safe and the run scored in Monday's action. (Staff photos by Bob Ringham.)

The Missouri Valley Conference is coming apart at the seams, despite the recent withdrawal of two conference teams. The Missouri Valley Conference, comprised of schools from the Midwest, is facing economic challenges in college athletic department budgets, according to Doug Weiler, SIU athletic director.

Doug Weiler said the current conference is a struggling one, and football and basketball, but he is confident the conference will expand in the future. Recent expansion to include schools from the University of Missouri, the University of North Texas, and the University of Tulsa is not a possibility, according to Doug Weiler.

The MVC is still in good shape, especially in football and basketball, according to Doug Weiler.

"The Missouri Valley Conference is still in good shape, especially in football and basketball," Doug Weiler said. "But the conference is struggling, especially in the midwest, due to the economic challenges in college athletic department budgets."
