Board of Trustees OKs Boost in Housing Rents
Signs $8 Million in Building Contracts

SIU students occupying University housing will pay higher rent starting next fall. The rent increases average $5.40 per month, and range from a 7% per-quarter increase for room and board in residence halls to $3 per month for two-bedroom apartments in the Southern Acres barracks area.

The increase in rental fees was approved by the Board of Trustees at its meeting in Edwardsville Thursday. The board also approved construction contracts totaling $8,426,69 for two additional buildings on the Edwardsville campus.

J. Albin Yokie, coordinator of housing, said rising labor and food costs made the rent increases necessary. Students living in residence halls, however, will receive some added services. Telephones for free local calls and receipt of long distance calls will be installed in each room, and a system of modified maid service will be instituted, with a change of bed linen each week.

Room and board at the Woody Hall and Thompson Point residence halls will be $265 per quarter. Apartment rentals will range from $40 to $80 per month, depending upon size and location.

The new rates are still well under those charged at sister institutions, Yokie said, and represent the minimum possible to meet debt obligations on the housing. All of Southern's new student housing was built with loans to be retired from rentals.

Construction contracts approved were for the University Center and the Communications Building on the Edwardsville campus. The Center is financed from the sale of revenue bonds, and contracts awarded totaled $4,929,65. The Communications Building, heavily academic use structure, is financed from Southern's share of the State Universi's Bond fund of $1,194. Contracts totalled $3,496,64.

J. Colson Contracting Co. of St. Louis was awarded the general construction contract.

Trustees Appoint Prof. Davis Foreign Languages Chairman

J. Carly Davis, professor of foreign languages, has been named acting chairman of the Foreign Languages Depart-

Board of Trustees named him to the post Thursday. Davis has been on the SIU faculty since 1931, he replaces Vera Peacock who was relieved of her duties as department chairman. In his other action dealing with the faculty, the Board named 17 new faculty members, including five full professors. It also approved 57 additional appointments to staff the full-

Competes Against 38 WSIU-TV Wins Top Award For Art Teaching Program
WSIU-TV received honors at the 28th Annual Exhibit of Educational Radio and Television Programs, the Ohio State Awards, presented last Wednesday in Columbus. The award, a first-place tie with the New York City Board of Education, was presented for a program WSIU-TV aired in October, "Textured Treasure." The program was part of a series of instructional art programs designed for use in second and third grades viewed biweekly by over 2,500 area school children.

The purpose of the awards, sponsored by the Institute for Education by Radio and Television, is to recognize meritorious achievement for educational and public service broadcasting.

The television teacher and program creator is Alice Schwartz, associate professor at SIU. The producer-director was Jack Gill of WSIU-TV. Featured on the program in a character portrayal was James Lash of WSIU-TV and much of the art work utilized on the program was done by Mike Ferris.
Jewelry Charms People

You May Insist Art Is for Birds
But Kington’s Birds Win Prizes

Those who say that modern art is for the birds will find their statement reversed in the work of Brent Kington, Southern’s nationally renowned silversmith. In the faculty art show now on exhibit in the Mitchell Gallery, there is a display of a child, nothing like a Mickey Mouse, but something in the nature of pure metal. Something that they would like to pick up and look at,” he said. “I’ve made birds into cars, bells and whistles—all elements of a child’s work.

“I’m a terrible jeweler,” he added.

Kington’s delightful and highly stylized hand-crafted birds, with the help from the Audubon Society, the 20-year-old artist has had his work exhibited in 22 major national shows and 10 regional shows of the nation’s top jewelers and craftsmen.

Photographs of his work are currently on display at the American Interiors Pavilion at the New York World’s Fair. Kington’s bird, Kingfisher, is for sale.

Kington’s work is delicate. Tiny silver and brass birds are charming, but the utmost of his work is a reality of an exquisite candlestick. He said at first his work was influenced by the Bengal weights and the animal carvings of Eskimos.

“Man has always been interested in creating figures of animals in a miniature scale. It is pleasing for me to scale and delicate.

“I try to organize the surface so that there is no need for stones or enamel,” he explained. Although he is primarily interested in bird characters, a cent for his work is still on jewelry.

I get more and more interested in these little birds and do less jewelry. I’m a terrible jeweler anyway,” he said.

It is hard to believe that a man whose jewelry has just brought him first place in a national competition of the country’s top jewelers is a “terrible jeweler.” However, one can’t blame him for his growing interest in his enchanting little birds that peer out of the drawers and corners of his work table.

Delightful in all forms to children, Kington’s birds will convince many that art is not for the birds; it’s for people.

Student Barred For Disrespect

A 21-year-old senior from East St. Louis has been placed on disciplinary probation for the remainder of this quarter and will be barred from the University for a year after his graduation.

The office of Student Affairs, which did not release the student's name because no civil offense was involved, said he had "abused with profanity and disrespect a staff member of the University, student, and other students."
WASHINGTON -- President Johnson has ordered top U.S. military and diplomatic officials to meet in Honolulu next week to review the situation in the entire Southeast Asia area.

The White House announced Thursday that Secretary of State Dean Rusk will preside at the session next Wednesday and Thursday.

The Cabot Lodge, ambassador to South Viet Nam, will fly from Saigon to Washington to participate in the conference. Others present will include Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The White House said there would be other officials from Washington and from South East Asia at the talks, but did not name them.

"The President has asked Cambodia Accepts U.N. ‘Controllers’

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. -- Cambodia declared Thursday it would accept U.N. actions "controllers" to help avoid further incidents along the de facto border friction between Cambodia and South Viet Nam.

The Cambodian Foreign Minister Huot Sambath told the U.N. Security Council, however, that Cambodia would not contribute to the financing of such a U.N. group.

He said his government will stand behind its previous position that the best way to deal with the border friction is to call a new meeting of the 14-nation Geneva conference to guarantee the neutrality and territorial integrity of Cambodia.

The issue before the council was a Cambodian charge of aggression against the United States and South Viet Nam in connection with border incidents.

If for no other reason, the staff of The Egyptian must be criticized at the face of negative opinion. With a wave of one hand, they dismiss the word "generalities" and, thrumming into the drum of the other hand, they ask, "could you do any better?" Well, frankly, yes, in my opinion. The last student body elections were a mess.

First of all, on May 6th, Nick Pasquale stated in a factual report: "There were no major issues" in the election, which was verily uttered. We were seeking election, and our supporters, did not spend our money in vain. In fact, we burnt a few dark. To review, some of the issues which came up were: 1) Should there be recreation building be built, and if so, how can the Student Government achieve it? 2) Should there be an improvement? 3) Should the administration, the students, and administration; the students, and administration; the students? The answer, Mr. NP did not consider his own views or major issues, and should the staff of The Egyptian accept as it now stands? 3) The height of the campaign, when arguments and assertions were flying from all sides, it is reported that both had done well to take a sober, calm approach, and offer some constructive criticism.

Is it a wonder why The Egyptian waited until the day after the last student body elections to publish this? Oddly enough, I am not included in the reason that would land me in Sherwood Forest. Theoretically, I am not.

Perhaps the next day morning fun session. It is not out of respect for the hard work and dedication of the students, but the height of the campaign, when arguments and assertions were flying from all sides, it is reported that both sides had done well to take a sober, calm approach, and offer some constructive criticism.

If The Egyptian did not notice that the hair cut, then hair the opinion of any particular candidate, the voting, would have cut far more to stimulate a decent vote turnout. Not only should there be a reconstruction, but so that the candidates on the specific issues would have cut far more to inform the students.

Even if The Egyptian did not notice that the hair cut, then hair the opinion of any particular candidate, the voting, would have cut far more to stimulate a decent vote turnout. Not only should there be a reconstruction, but so that the candidates on the specific issues would have cut far more to inform the students.

I'm now at the stage of any newly-elected official before getting my feet wet.

ROTC über alles

by L.E.

Southern, like most Universities, has one department that is somewhat akin to the Boy Scouts. In that no amount of skill and ingenuity can keep you from being affected by it. I am obviously speaking of the Reserve Officer Training Corps, or, as it is called, ROTC. By the name alone it goes unspoken that there would be any affect from which would land me in Leavenworth if I were to use them.

Even at the risk of being investigated by the House on UnAmerican Activities Committee, I will expound on the absolute necessity of this operation, as it stands for me, and many other students who have not had the foresight to break both legs and an associated amount of arms before coming to college is permissively mentioned. It is not a passing day morning fun session. Once a week all go out and are led around by refugees from Sherwood Forest. Theoretically, ROTC is supposed to be a passport into the immortal words of Colonel B. "The ROTC is a very effective factor in the WAR." In the immortal words of France's: "My brother, my sister!" In my own immortal words, "War.

I have spent four years trying to fulfill two years of ROTC requirements, or perhaps, try to fulfill two years of ROTC requirements. I don't know what "Help, one, two, and three," or am I the least bit interested in finding out. Perhaps I would have finished in two years like the other Spartans around campus if it hadn't been for an incident that took place my freshman year. I was out on the drill field when this overwhelmingly plump little admiral came trotting up to me and shouted, "Sailor, it's that hair cut!" I returned the compliment with a relaively pleasant voice, "Sir, go take a flying leap at Old Main." Even with all the charm and diplomacy, I still received more demerits than Lee at Appomattox. The possible effect could be the length of my hair have on the Communist movement in South Vietnam? Perhaps this nut was palling on the shelf for years with the shavings of my graying locks. Nevertheless, he would LETTER to me more Tuesday mornings than I care about following this fanatic without a cause as he exercised his attempts at arrogance. In summation, I have but one thing to say about military training in college... pff.

What, me vote?

by Donna Carol Day

The number of votes cast in the recent Student Council election, according to the presiding officer, gives me pause. May one day (May 2nd) finds me, or perhaps the better word is appall me, of having to be exactly twelve thousand, a mere 2,600 above the previous record. Sitting from steps from their habitual path to cast what is this country's the American two - party system returns upon us the platform that "There are no major issues." Given the context I have stated in the past, the interest of student on this campus stagers the imagination. And, if there is a lack of interest on this level, the interest of the rest of the nation is phenomenal. In other words, however, place the entire burden of blame on the voters; much of it must fall to the apparent lack of organization on the part of the Election Commission and the positions of the candidates.

k 3 is aspiring to be the world's greatest country, a dream deals primarily with opinion. k 3 is attempting to destroy the concept of the country, a concept formed at SIU by making students have to write articles written by the students themselves. It is truly a free enterprise system. As far as the newsletter, not a journalism publication, and not even a newsletter.

k 3 includes reviews of campus events because they are an integral part in the patient maturation process. A person without knowledge of the arts, music, and the like is considered inferior. Each week, k 3 is faced with a crisis; no one has submitted anything. The students have not responded to their opposing party, to make their views known. The first issue included a page of the newsletter, and staff and write to work for k 3. Few responded. Is it due to lack of time or intelligence? Or is it merely a case of "who cares" and "I just don't have any opinion?" k 3 belongs to the students. The right to have a voice, or they can turn it into a loud voice. If k 3 cannot print what has not been written, and so far, little has been written. The students cannot write, or perhaps they just don't have any opinion. The students have not responded to their opposing party. Perhaps the ones who have failed...failed because of the structure and the need for a voice.

Bury Goldwater

by Jerome M. Milleur

It is seldom that I urge anyone to take seriously anything said by a Republican, but there are a few Republicans currently saying things which ought to be taken seriously by everyone—especially Republicans. Recently, for example, Senate Majority Whip, Thomas Kuchel, in an obvious reference to Barry Goldwater, who was the subject of the nomination of an extremist for President, quoted his "dead shell." The California Republican was never more right on target.

The American two-party system rests upon the fact that each party presents a reasonable alternative to the other. If the Republican Party succeeds in hitching its national wagon to a candidate who is not only a loser and his band of political Neanderthals, it will have ceased to offer the American voter anything even approximating a choice.

Barry Goldwater advocates re-election of the most astonishing sort. His platform has been one of protest: what is possible, it is wholly absurd. It is another example of that "old-fashioned" batch of nonsense which fails utterly to grasp the realities of the modern world. As re­ligion, it might be taken on faith; as a fairy tale, it has no appeal. It is also a statement that "The American two-party system exists primarily to prevent the government from doing anything on a large scale. Barry, who is unquestionably the weakest of his four leading candidates, the sole cause for optimism about Republi­can chances of survival is that the need to survive is probably the strongest impulse in the human species, which presumably includes Republicans.

Goldwater's platform is stu­dious as to the likelihood of my single-handedly saving the Republican party from itself. The only person who might have an interest in the White House as he was in it, is the Right. The picture of this man of an­ounced principle waiting for the prospect of the Party of Lincoln being led by the Right White Knight from Arizona.

Bravo, Brent!

Credit for the overwhelming success of the Student Political Convention should be given to Brent Moore, who is the Party's legislative representa­tions, to Mr. Brent Moore, Mr. Moore initiated, organized and chaired a new endeavors with a competency that does not amount to ability, and when Mr. Moore realized (as all leaders do) that in order to win a pachyderm to escape his re­cent re-election process through a re­cent re-election process through a new position in the South-Central, the Grand Old Party probably deserves to become politically extinct. And, it may be more humane to put the blame on Goldwater than on pachyderm to escape his re­cent re-election process through a re­cent re-election process through a new position in the South-Central, the Grand Old Party probably deserves to become politically extinct. And, it may be more humane to put the blame on Goldwater than on a new position in the South-Central, the Grand Old Party probably deserves to become politically extinct. And, it may be more humane to put the blame on Goldwater than on an inept political strategy. Brent Moore is a man who cannot spread himself thin over an many areas of publicity, planning, registration and chairmanship, he picked night job from his right hand of co-workers. Congratulations, again, for the type of valid student endeavor that will help play-in a University.

Names Given Buildings Under Construction

Names of revered personages, both living and dead, were perpetuated Thursday as the University Board of Trustees and the General Classroom Building named new buildings.

The instructional building in the General Classroom Building group, now under construction, is named "Lawson Hall," for the late Douglas Lawson, a member of the faculty from 1935 to 1961, who served as research professor of administration and supervision and as dean of the College of Education. Individual residence halls of the University Park complex, now under construction, were named as follows: Women's residence halls: "Nolley Hall" for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nolley, deceased members of the faculty who served in the English Department.

Weinert and Nollit were placed on disciplinary probation earlier this week by the Office of Student Affairs. They were fined in Circuit $10 plus fines, each on a charge of peace disturbance at the trailer.

Sgt. James Starns said he and two other patrolmen stopped an automobile with a headlight that looked like a headlight. He took down the license number.

A merchant policeman later found that the car, a 1952 Ford V-8, was licensed to a man named William Trotter, and that Trotter, who owned the car, was wanted on assault charges.
